And the reason for the suppression of the evidence lies in the certainty that France, whose fears of a German military renaissance have been jeered by the great mass of uninformed, will take panicky measures to enforce article 198, section 3, of the Versailles Pact, and at the same time pin the black badge of perfidy on the United States and England.

Morally, all signatories to the treaty are obligated to enforce the article, which declares: "The armed forces of Germany must not include any military or naval air forces. Germany may, during a period not extending beyond October 1, 1919, maintain a maximum number of 100 seaplanes or flying boats, which shall be exclusively employed in searching for submarine mines."

But one part of the suppressed evidence—a secret that strained the poker faces of seven Members of the United States Senate—discloses that with the full knowledge of the United States Government, American and British firms are straining every sinew to equip a vengeful German Government with a war fleet of 2,500 fighting airplanes by the early part of spring next year.

Fantastic, almost unbelievable though it is—this outright disclosure of contracts, numbers, and program—it is nevertheless backed by documentary evidence so unimpeachable that the very vigor of the hard-cash, cold-blooded treachery it implies must inevitably force that evidence into the excitement-charged hearings of the munitions inquiry.

AIDS FOR HITLER

Because it shows that the war plans of Adolph Hitler are supported by American and British industrialists with the full knowledge of this Government!

The State Department, also the Departments of Commerce and War, have so far taken the view that it may be all well enough to expose the greed of private munitions manufacturers—all of them intensely eager to make millions out of mass killing—but that it is a decidedly different matter to expose the tacit approval of the Departments of State, War, and Commerce.

Disagreements over this view were responsible for the tense conferences behind closed doors, which occasionally preceded the open hearings of the munitions inquiry last September. Committee members were seen to emerge from these conferences in varying moods—two or three angered and set-faced; others genial, or grave, or hesitant—all in accordance with their individual outlooks. All of the Cabinet and department officials they left behind, however, were tense and ready for almost anything.

Some of the documents the Members of the Senate were induced to suppress referred to arms for the wars of China. The Members of the Senate agreed readily enough that nothing could be gained by inflaming Chinese factions to new and bitterer strife.

One important document, relating to the sale of war materials to Argentina, might result in "assassinations," it was announced at the open hearing. This suppression also was agreed to readily by the members of the committee, who—it seems fair enough to disclose this much—were shocked more than they ever admitted in public by the evidence that the graft had reached so high as the Argentine gentleman concerned with the suppressed document. The graft—and it seems reasonable that this explanation should be made—reflected against someone considerably more important than the Argentine admiral (Ismael Galindez) whose feelings were so hurt by the remarks of Senator BONE that his nervous Government made formal protest to Washington.

Oh, if Argentina only knew!

DOCUMENTS SUPPRESSED

But these documents have been suppressed, and so far as the Senate committee is concerned, they may remain suppressed. That is not the case, however, of evidence tending to show tacit Government approval of contracts to supply the Hitler government with the necessities of a war that the whole world fears. The next bracket of the inquiry, which will begin early in December, may be concerned very seriously with that situation.

There were some cryptic utterances, the import of which was startling, that were made either at the inquiry or in direct connection with the inquiry.

Jungo Geira, international spy and war provocateur for munitions makers, declared in his elaborately guarded home at Monticello, N. Y.:

"I would not dare to tell all. It would bring war to five nations, including the United States."

In the open hearings, Senator BENNETT CHAMP CLARK, hard-hitting, hard-bitten chip of the old block from Missouri, charged that the rise of Hitler (with his candid war program) had been financed by French munitions manufacturers—the same who pooled profits with the German manufacturers from the sale of death dealers during the World War to both Germany and France.

On September 14 came that part of the inquiry that caused the world to wonder what form of murder collusion was now in the air. An hour before the hearings started in the Senate caucus chamber, members of the committee gathered in the office of Senator GERALD P. NYE, wide-eyed, always amazed farm boy from Cooperstown, N. Dak., who is chairman of the committee—and is getting an earful.

There came Senator HOMER T. BONE, of Tacoma, Wash., sarcastic, wily, antagonist of the Power Trust and pillar of the Roosevelt strength in the Northwest; and stony-faced CHAMP CLARK; and careful WALTER F. GEORGE, of Georgia; and another westerner, James P. Pope, of Idaho; also ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG, of Michigan.

One by one they strolled along the long corridors of the Senate Office Building and into the office of Senator NYE. And following them came suave Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, and Daniel Calhoun Roper, Secretary of Commerce, a boy from South Carolina who made good in the Democratic Party and may now be considered the cleverest politician—not excluding Roosevelt's man Farley—in the administration.

Something of world import went on behind the door that closed behind them all. Newspaper correspondents sought the answer. All that appeared clear in the subsequent open hearing in the Senate caucus chamber was that there was an evident reticence whenever certain topics were reached. Something was being censored.

Was it the cablegrams which had passed between New York and Buenos Aires in relation to submarine sales to Argentina? Was it the testimony with regard to sales to China? Apparently not. Clearly, it had something to do with Germany and the Nazi ambitions. The hearing brought into the limelight the international war provocateur, Jungo Geira, and his relations with the du Ponts of Delaware.

SIGNIFICANT STATEMENT

Late in the day, Senator NYE attempted to make the secret conference appear innocent. He issued a statement:

"The committee desired this conference in order that it might present to them (the Secretaries of State and Commerce) certain information and facts regarding matters not yet presented in the investigation and to request the cooperation of their departments in the development of factual exhibits.

"As has been the result in the past, the departments offered their complete cooperation."

It may now be told for the first time that the subject of the conference was certain roundabout, exceedingly careful questioning of witnesses, which occurred 3 days after the conference, at the hearing on Monday, September 17, when the principal witnesses were Donald L. Brown, president of Pratt & Whitney, makers of Wasp and Hornet airplane motors (a subsidiary of the Government-subsidized United Aircraft & Transportation Corporation); Francis H. Love, president of another United Aircraft subsidiary, the United Aircraft Exports, Inc., and—

A silent witness—a secret folio of documentary evidence that lurked in the background!

GERMAN BUSINESS THRIVING

The hearing itself showed with fair clarity the fact that the United Aircraft business in Germany had increased tremendously following the Nazi accession to power. It was also disclosed that United Aircraft had licensed the Bavarian Motor Works in Germany to manufacture the American-type airplane engines.

But what of that? The Bavarian Motor Works, although one of the three largest companies of the kind in Germany, could only turn out about 250 engines a year.

And—Donald Brown, president of Pratt & Whitney, is testifying: "Our information is that they (high-speed airplane engines shipped to Germany from the United States) are for commercial purposes, and I shall add that there was not an engine shipped until it was released by the Navy Department in Washington."

Members of the Senate committee did not blink as this statement was made. But they must have experienced a strain.

Strained? Senator BONE puffed thoughtfully at his big cigar; NYE's eyes widened still further; BENNETT CHAMP CLARK's face was set in hard lines; VANDENBERG's eyes were seen to harden and narrow; and GEORGE pursed his lips.

These Members of the United States Senate had seen, only a few days before, evidence that the Department of Commerce, the Department of State, and the War Department had information that the engines were intended for war planes.

Two thousand five hundred of them by early spring of next year and a fleet big enough to sweep the skies of all Europe within 18 months.

"Has the thought been in your mind," Senator VANDENBERG asked Mr. Brown in the open hearing, "that you were aiding the rearmament of Germany?"

"NOT FOR MILITARY USE"

"Our information was that the shipments were not for military purposes," replied the president of Pratt & Whitney.

But the United States Government had other information at the time—had been in possession of it since last April. It had also been informed that the Sperry Gyroscope Co. was straining to deliver automatic pilots and the like to Germany; that manufacturing rights had been sold to the Askania Works in Germany for the production of fire-control instruments; that the American firm of Curtiss-Wright was also getting in on the business; and that representative of Vickers, Ltd., of England, and representatives of American concerns now in Berlin had come to agreements on exports to Germany and possible eastern allies.

It was so deadly clear that the link between Pratt & Whitney and Vickers was through the business both were doing through the Bavarian Motor Works!

But the evidence was withheld—for the time being. Secretary Hull had stated openly that he was opposed to the rearming of Germany, but the insurmountable truth exists that the Government had been informed that Goering, who is Hitler's air minister, is so completely in the saddle that every little bit of foreign exchange that Germany can scrape together is at Goering's disposal for the accumulation of a war fleet that will make Germany the complete mistress of the air.

If this German air fleet (power by United States—fuselage by Germany) should ever strike, Heaven help the generations of Americans and English yet unborn, who would have to meet the cost.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, will the able Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. In that connection I wish to remind the Senate that we gave Mussolini interest rates of approximately one-tenth of 1 percent, but when do Americans get money for one-tenth of 1 percent? We did that in connection with the refunding agreement. Mussolini was in charge of the Italian Government at that time. That is an illustration of what we have been doing for Europe, but just what are we willing to do for the 12,882,000 unemployed we have here in America? And if we wish to provide the comparatively small amount of $50,000,000 to employ them, to get them to work, under an emergency plan, the W. P. A., we run into much difficulty. However, we do not hesitate to appropriate nearly $2,000,000,000 for war this year. War for what? War to settle real-estate titles in Europe? Wars to settle the boundary disputes of an old and quarreling world.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. LODGE. Is it not also true that 2 years ago the Congress passed a bill making available to Germany helium gas, a resource which is only found in this country?

Mr. REYNOLDS. Yes; it is. I thank the Senator very much for his contribution.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. We made it possible for them to buy it only if the Secretary of the Interior and some others would let them have it, and they have never let them have it.

Mr. REYNOLDS. That is true.

Mr. MINTON. And that, in my recollection, was for commercial purposes only.

Mr. LODGE. It is to the credit of the Secretary of the Interior that he has not allowed that gas to be exported.

Mr. MINTON. The Senator did not say anything about the Secretary of the Interior.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The rules provide that Senators desiring to interrupt the Senator who has the floor shall first address the Chair.

Mr. LODGE and Mr. MINTON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] in that he asked me to yield first, and I understand that the Senator from Indiana desires to question the Senator from Massachusetts. I have no objection.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, of course it is true, as the newspapers have stated, that the Secretary of the Interior very correctly has not allowed any helium gas to go abroad, but it seems to me that the place where that decision should have been made was right here in Congress, and that we should not have abrogated our authority and delegated the power over so precious a resource.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. Perhaps I should not inject myself into this very interesting debate; but as I have listened one question has been turning over and over in my mind, and I believe the Senator from North Carolina can clarify the matter for me, because he is an inveterate reader of newspapers, magazines, and books, and keeps close touch with what is going on in the city of Washington.

I am sorry other Senators are laughing, because I assure the Senator that I made the remark in the best of faith.

A moment ago the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] referred to the statement made by the President of the United States when he left the State of Georgia, which was a very important statement. I should like to ask the Senator from North Carolina if he knows whether or not the President of the United States has in any way attempted to clarify or qualify the statement since it was made.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I will say to the Senator that I have heard a number of persons mention the statement of the President of the United States; and I have heard that the statement of the President of the United States has been the subject of an editorial in the columns of the Washington Post of day before yesterday. I had not read the editorial, and last evening I endeavored to obtain a copy of the Washington Post editorial, but was unsuccessful. I have been told that mention of it was made in the New York Times of yesterday. I was unsuccessful in obtaining a copy of that newspaper; so this morning for the first time I had brought to my eyes in printed form an editorial in today's Times-Herald, issue of Thursday, April 13, 1939, entitled "Mr. Roosevelt's Foreign Policy," which I should now like to read. I thank the Senator for having brought the matter to my attention, because I had intended to comment on the editorial.

This is an editorial, by the way, from the New York Daily News. I understand that the Times-Herald quite frequently uses editorials from the New York Daily News. The editorial reads as follows:

> The letter which leads today's Voice of the People column is representative of several letters we have received of late. Here is the answer—

Before reading the editorial I should bring to the attention of the Senate the letter which appeared in the New York Daily News and was reprinted in the Times-Herald. According to my recollection, the author takes to task the editor of the New York Daily News for criticizing, in a sense, the President of the United States when, in fact and in truth, as I recall, the editorial policy of the New York Daily News has heretofore been favorable to our administration.

> I take note of your editorials questioning the President's foreign policy, particularly that Tuesday one expressing uneasiness over the President's remark, "I'll be back in the fall if we don't have a war."
> What's the matter with you? Are you abandoning your long-time policy of supporting F. D. R. and the New Deal? I think you owe your readers an explanation.

The explanation follows in the paragraphs of the editorial:

> As concerns the New Deal on the home front, we continue some 95 percent loyal and sympathetic.
> We think the major New Deal reforms were overdue and that they were initiated about as efficiently and effectively as could have been expected.

I am quite in accord with that statement. I think the administration is to be congratulated.

> More than that, we think the President has educated great numbers of Americans to a new conception of social and economic problems in the modern world.

He is to be congratulated upon that, because, as the editorial stated, the New Deal reforms were overdue.

> The allegedly good old days are gone, seemingly forever—days when, for example, a newspaperman didn't mind being fired or resigning from one paper, because there were plenty of newspaper jobs, and maybe better ones, to be picked up in Denver, Fort Worth, or even across the street in New York.
> There are fewer jobs now.

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. LUNDEEN] mentioned the unemployment question a moment ago.

The editorial continues:

> Loss of a job is a serious matter to most people. Provision for old age is beyond the control of many workers. The conviction that Government must do something about these problems, which are too big for the individual, yet hit him where he lives, has been Mr. Roosevelt's greatest contribution to American thinking, we believe.
> We admire the governmental machinery Mr. Roosevelt and his supporters have set up—

Those of us who are in accord with the editorial will no doubt take this opportunity to thank Captain Patterson, the editor and publisher of the New York Daily News, for his compliment to our President and to the administration.

> We admire the governmental machinery Mr. Roosevelt and his supporters have set up to put these and other dynamic ideas into operation—Social Security Act, Wagner Act, Soil Conservation Act, T. V. A. Granting that they can be improved as time passes, we believe their cores are sound. We distrusted work relief at first, but have been converted to the Roosevelt view that it is better than the dole.
> We admire the President on various other counts—for one, his genius as an orator, coupled with his tremendous radio personality.
> It is when the President concerns himself with foreign affairs that we become perhaps timorous, perhaps wise—time should tell.

There is a subhead, The Road to War. That brings us to our subject this afternoon, which subject is today weighing more heavily upon the hearts of the mothers of this country than it has for more than 20 years. I now warn the mothers of America that if the war hysteria continues, their sons may be buried over yonder. The mothers of America are the ones who ought to be thinking about this subject.

> We have long feared that President Roosevelt had something of a Woodrow Wilson complex; that his tendency was to forget that he was elected President of the United States only, not President of the world.

At this point I wish to say that I think we ought to rid ourselves of our superiority complex, which causes us to think that we are so much better and smarter and wiser than any other people in the world, that we have a right to regulate the morals of the other peoples of the earth, and to tell them what to do, and how to regulate their territorial surveys. So far as I am concerned, I say, let us put our own house in order before sweeping out the cobwebs or the filth of other domiciles.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President——

Mr. REYNOLDS. I yield.

Mr. LUNDEEN. What was the sentence about being President of the world?

Mr. REYNOLDS. The editorial says:

We have long feared that President Roosevelt had something of a Woodrow Wilson complex, that his tendency was to forget that he was elected President of the United States only, not President of the world.

Since the memory of man runneth not back to the contrary Europe—

And everybody knows this—

Europe has been a continent where the strong customarily seized the lands, crops, cattle, homes, and frequently the women of the weak.

Let me pause to ask, Why should we become excited about what is going on in Europe? Those who are students of history know as well as I do that the very thing which is taking place over there today has been taking place over there for hundreds of years, and it will continue as long as the world lasts. So I, for one, am not going to become excited about what is going on in Europe. However, I am becoming excited about what is going on in this country. The strong will continue to seize the lands, crops, cattle, homes, and frequently the women of the weak.

The editorial continues:

As long as Europe continues an overcrowded continent (four times the population of the United States, with only 100,000 square miles more land area)—

Students of geography will remember that the 100,000 square miles more of land area includes the peninsula of Spain and the Scandinavian countries—we think the strong will continue to prey on the weak.

Whenever one of these things happens, Mr. Roosevelt says—personally or through the "official spokesman" or Sumner Welles or Secretary Hull—that it is a terrible thing, and that the United States cannot isolate itself from the criminalities of Europe's power politicians.

The editorial continues:

Mr. Roosevelt reached a climax in this course Wednesday when he adopted a Washington Post editorial as expressing his own views.

This is, in part, an answer to the inquiry of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS].

This editorial from the chronically anti New Deal Post was a typical "get in there and fight on the side of England and France" utterance. Interestingly enough, the President is getting most of the support for his lecturings of Europe from papers and persons that have damned the New Deal on the home front from the beginning.

We do not suppose Mr. Roosevelt believes he is leading the United States into another European war.

That is a good supposition, because anybody and everybody knows that Mr. Roosevelt is not intentionally doing so. No one would intentionally do so.

Neither did Wilson suppose his repeated notes to Germany would eventually land 2,000,000 American fighting men in France to battle for a cause which was none of their business.

We believe Mr. Roosevelt sincerely hopes that by sounding off in concert with England and France he can bluff the dictators out of further aggressions against small European nations. What worries us is the possibility that some day the American people may have to make good this bluff with boys, blood, and gold.

The editorial concludes:

Therefore we deplore the President's present foreign policy and dread its possible consequences. We cannot feel any other way about it.

Mr. President, I ask leave to have printed in the RECORD at this point an article from the news columns of the Washington Times-Herald of today, and a letter published in the same issue of the newspaper under the heading "Voice of the People."

There being no objection, the article and letter were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Times Herald]

COLBY PLEADS FOR "SOBRIETY" IN WAR CRISIS—EX-SECRETARY OF STATE CALLS UPON PRESIDENT TO "CONSULT PEOPLE WITH RECEPTIVE MIND"

NEW YORK, April 12.—Bainbridge Colby, who was Secretary of State in the Cabinet of Woodrow Wilson, pleaded tonight for "sobriety in our national counsels and in our national leadership" during the current European crisis.

In an address before the Sons of the American Revolution, celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of their foundation, Colby asserted that "we want the President to consult with the people and their Representatives in Congress with open and receptive mind, and to respect their judgment even if it fails to accord with his plans or prepossessions."

RESPONSIVE TO EUROPEAN SHIFTS

The United States, he said, has now "become so responsive to every shift and turn of European move and countermove that we could hardly be more so if we were a puppet state in southeastern Europe, even a member the Balkan league itself."

"Are we not content to be out of it and far from it?", he asked. "Is there any conceivable view of our national interest which compels us to jump into this cauldron or, stopping short of war, to use a phrase which has lately become familiar, even to scald our fingers in it?"

AMERICANS OPPOSED TO WAR

Despite intensive propaganda, he continued, "the thoughtful and intelligent opinion of Americans, easily seeing through the efforts of the propagandist, is still definitely opposed to our entrance into any war except one to defend our clear, unmistakable, and vital national interests and our democratic institutions."

"And one thing more," Colby added, "We do not want to make mistakes. They are unnecessary. But if they must be, we want to make new ones."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

A MESSAGE FOR ALL

Today I watched the sunlight as it illuminated a glorious nation. It is the smile of God, not only on our country but on all countries of the vast universe. That smile of sunlight does not suggest war, but peace to all people.

The countries have been confused for many years. Now to you—you who are trusted by the people to govern for them their country and your country, take it as a sacred trust. Remember within that country are human beings and homes; yes, homes which are shrines, so humble yet beautiful, for many have truly labored a lifetime to attain them. Do not shatter them by war. All nations have learned that war is a monster. God has so graciously given us life and beautiful country, good earth. Utilize it for the progress of the Nation and let us conduct ourselves as cultured people by peace and trade with all nations, not jangling like school boys—our minds are now mature.

In our last war countries were shattered, lives broken, for what? There is no answer. And after 20 years there are cries of pain from the wounded and dying.

To the presidents, dictators, and kings: the progress, safety, and happiness of your people is in your keeping. God has given you brilliant minds. Prove to the world that you are using that talent well. Your diplomats are messengers of good will and fair play. What a small yet marvelous word, concentration the word, converse concerning it. Fair play is the answer to the problems of all nations. It is never too late to observe conditions and merge in a worthy cause of peace.

I challenge you presidents, dictators, and kings—prove to your people that you are worthy of the great trust and honor of your people, that you are worthy of the great trust and honor of your subjects. The money used in financing war—is that fair play, giving money to a monster which may destroy you? No; fair play would be utilizing it in making beautiful and promoting the health and prosperity of your nation.

Written by supreme inspiration to a troubled world.

BARBARA FOSSETT.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Let us reflect for just a moment in reference to our foreign policy, and then I shall answer the question which the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] asked the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE].

When Hitler went over and took land in the way that sometimes the boys in Texas and in North Carolina used to move a fence with the aid of a shotgun, instead of doing it legally by way of the surveyor—that is all that Hitler did—what do we find about our foreign policy? When he did that, Mr. Sumner Welles issued a declaration of war and, on top of that, he put a 25-percent penalty upon every importation from Germany to this country. That is what Mr. Welles did. That is our foreign policy. What did John Bull do? Why, John Bull at that time had a trade committee in Berlin negotiating to do more trading with Hitler; and John Bull looked across the Atlantic and laughed up his sleeve, and said, "What fools they be!" We were cutting off and destroying our trade at a time when we need foreign commerce; and every time we did it John Bull's trade increased.

Now, answering the Senator from Florida, he mentioned a speech of the President of the United States.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I do.

Mr. BARKLEY. May I inquire whether the Senator from North Carolina hopes to conclude his remarks this afternoon?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I will say to the Senator that I am going to occupy about 10 minutes. I have a resolution here which I desire to have read; and then I desire, as I now give notice to the Senate, to complete my remarks on Tuesday.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, at what time will the Senator speak on Tuesday?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I shall be here at 12 o'clock.

Mr. BARKLEY. In view of that statement, am I to understand that the Senator is willing to suspend now?

Mr. REYNOLDS. As soon as I have my resolution read.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is perfectly obvious that we cannot make any headway today on the bill that is supposed to be before the Senate; and if we cannot, and the Senator from North Carolina can conclude his remarks for the day——

Mr. REYNOLDS. I could hardly conclude this afternoon. I will say to the Senator from Kentucky that I am going to conclude in about 10 minutes, because I have an appointment to meet a delegation from my State of North Carolina in my office, and I deem that rather necessary, because the Senator from North Carolina comes up for reelection 6 years from now, and I shall keep that fact in mind for the next 6 years. [Laughter.] I will further say to the Senator from Kentucky that during those 6 years the Senator from North Carolina is going to do everything he can to keep the United States out of war.

Mr. BARKLEY. What is the Senator's wish about proceeding further at this time?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I wish to consume about 10 minutes of time, and then I shall ask to be permitted to conclude on Tuesday.

Mr. KING. What about Monday?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I shall be out of the city on Monday.

Mr. BARKLEY. Then I shall make no suggestion now.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, will the Senator from North Carolina yield to me to propound a question to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. REYNOLDS. Certainly.

Mr. NEELY. Does the Senator from Kentucky intend to abandon all hope of proceeding with the deficiency bill this evening?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; and I will further say that it is my purpose to move an adjournment until Monday.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, answering the question of the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER], he referred to a statement made by the President of the United States some time ago, at which time the President employed the words "quarantine the aggressor." I desire to say to the Senator that at the time I heard that statement—I think it was some time in October, was it not?—I put this interpretation on it: I could not bring myself to believe that the President of the United States meant that we should quarantine aggressors by way of applying sanctions, because everybody knows that sanctions lead to war. That is the very reason why in 1935, when the British fleet was in the Mediterranean, and when Anthony Eden, the Foreign Minister, tried to get us to join Great Britain in the application of oil sanctions against Mussolini in Ethiopia, we refused to do it, because we knew it would lead to war. So what did I tell the people over the United States? I told them what I believed. I told them that the President meant that we were going to quarantine aggressor nations by simply staying away from them; and I illustrated that by the fact that if I lived in a block of houses, and down the street in one house was a case of typhoid fever, instead of going to my work by way of that house I would quarantine that house by going in another direction. That is the interpretation I put on the President's remarks when I spoke to the people of the United States. I found that that was the answer which the people of the United States wanted, and I gave them what they wanted.

In answer to the Senator's question to the Senator from Georgia in regard to stopping the aggressor nations, I desire to ask the Senator from Florida what he thinks we should do because Mussolini, like a great, big, eighth-grade bully, walks into the kindergarten playground and takes the marbles away from a boy in the kindergarten. What does the Senator from Florida think we should do? And so I ask, what does anybody think should have been done when Hitler went over and robbed the bank at Prague of $84,000,000 of gold that belonged to the Czechoslovakian people?

Mr. President, in conclusion for the afternoon, I desire to bring to the attention of the Senate the subject so frequently mentioned by the most beloved Member this Chamber has ever had, our departed friend, Hon. J. Hamilton Lewis. He constantly reminded the American people of the gratitude of the allied so-called democracies, the gratitude of socialistic France and imperialistic Britain. He reminded the American people of the foreign debts; and I desire to offer at this time a resolution, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the resolution will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the concurrent resolution submitted by Mr. REYNOLDS (S. Con. Res. 12), as follows:

Whereas a number of European nations owe the taxpayers of the United States a sum aggregating $13,000,000,000 in unpaid debts, arising out of the participation of this Republic in the World War; and

Whereas the national debt of this Republic now stands at the staggering total of $40,000,000,000, in comparison with a national debt of less than $2,000,000,000 immediately preceding its entry into that conflict; and

Whereas the people of the United States are now taxed beyond all reason; and

Whereas this Republic could make excellent use of the huge sum due it by those European nations now in default upon their indebtedness to the American people, who, in addition to the other enormous tax burden which they have to bear, are compelled to make good the installments that their European debtors refuse to pay as they fall due on June 15 and December 15 of each year; and

Whereas one of the controlling causes of the present deplorable condition of international affairs is the cold-blooded refusal of many nations to observe in a faithful manner the solemn international engagements entered into by them; and

Whereas each of the European countries now in default on its war debt to the United States signed a solemn compact with this Republic to pay its debt in specified form; and

Whereas the action of the United States in allowing the countries aforesaid to break their solemn compacts in this regard has unfortunately given great encouragement to international dishonesty and other forms of lawlessness; and

Whereas the forbearance of this Republic in the face of the refusal of its European debtors to pay according to the contracts solemnly entered into by them, has not purchased for it the good will of the nations in question, but on the contrary has earned for itself their contempt; and

Whereas a powerful attempt is now being made by the leaders of these defaulting nations to lure the United States into a second World War on the false issue of saving democracy, thus following the precedent by which this Republic was befooled into the first World War, out of which it gained nothing, but on the contrary lost a sum which competent authorities have set at $100,000,000,000; and

Whereas a century ago President Andrew Jackson demonstrated to all concerned that this Republic would not tolerate international defaulting, when he compelled France to pay her debt to the United States by adopting fearless American diplomacy in the face of her declining to pay; and

Whereas it has long been the practice of the Government of the United States to send abroad special envoys to handle important matters at issue between it and foreign governments; and

Whereas Mr. William Griffin, editor and publisher of the New York Enquirer, has performed an outstanding national service by his long and constant advocacy of the collection of these war debts, in his newspaper, on the public platform, and in other ways; and

Whereas Mr. Griffin has visited Europe on several occasions, and has discussed these war debts with leading men there, including Mr David Lloyd George, former Prime Minister of England; Mr. Winston Churchill, former Chancelor of the Exchequer of England; M. Albert Lebrun, President of France; Lord Robert Cecil, president of the League of Nations Union and former Minister of Blockade; and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Foreign Minister of Italy; and

Whereas Mr. Griffin, by reason of his grasp of this subject; his familiarity with the workings of European statecraft; his knowledge of European feeling (gained at first hand by conferences and talks with such outstanding figures as M. Albert Lebrun, President of France; Mr. David Lloyd George, former Prime Minister of England; M. Ignace Paderewski, former Premier of Poland; Mr. Eamon de Valera, Prime Minister of Ireland; Lord Robert Cecil, President of the League of Nations Union and former Minister of Blockade; Mr. Winston Churchill, former Chancelor of the Exchequer of England; His Holiness Pope Pius XI; Count Galeazzo Ciano, Foreign Minister of Italy; Mr. Anthony Eden, former Foreign Minister of England; and M. Georges Bonnet, Foreign Minister of France); his devotion to Jacksonian statesmanship; his service to this Republic in his long and ceaseless advocacy of the collection of these war debts; and his engaging personal qualities and varied abilities, is a man possessed of exceptional qualifications to act in the capacity of special envoy to Europe on the part of this Republic for the purpose of assuring the collection of the debts aforesaid: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That Congress would view with the utmost satisfaction the immediate appointment of Mr. William Griffin by the President of the United States as special envoy to Italy, England, Germany (for the Czechoslovakian debt), France, and the other nations now in default to this Republic, for the purpose of carrying out the all-important diplomatic mission aforesaid.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the presentation of the resolution? The Chair hears none.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I ask that the resolution be referred to the proper committee.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, to what committee does the Senator desire to have the resolution referred?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I asked that it be referred to the proper committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, all the legislation thus far enacted and all steps taken by the Congress on the subject of the European debts have originated in the House of Representatives in the Ways and Means Committee, and in the Senate in the Finance Committee, and it strikes me that the Finance Committee is the committee to which the resolution just presented should be referred.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would like to call the attention of the Senator from Kentucky to the fact that the resolving clause calls for the appointment of a special envoy. Therefore, the present occupant of the Chair was of the opinion that the resolution should go to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, there is no law which authorizes the appointment of such a bill collector as the one referred to in the resolution. It is essentially a financial matter, and not a matter of dealing with our foreign relations. Personally, I do not care to which committee the resolution may be referred, because I am a member of both the committees I have named; but, at the same time, I do think it ought to go to the Committee on Finance. I have no personal interest in the matter.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I dislike very much to disagree with the Senator from Kentucky; but, also being a member of both the committees to which he has referred, I think the resolution should go to the Committee on Foreign Relations. Clearly, whether what the resolution calls for is authorized or not—and that might be a good reason for sending it to either one of the committees named—it certainly relates to the appointment of an ambassador, and expresses concern about the appointment of Mr. Griffin.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is ready to rule on the question.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, in that connection, it must be remembered that for some time we employed an ambassador at large, Mr. Norman Davis. I am asking that at least we let the gentlemen abroad know that we have not forgotten the fact that there were due us as of January 1938, to be precise, $12,892,022,720.62. Perhaps if we are lucky, we can get the 62 cents. [Laughter.]

I wish to have embodied in the RECORD immediately following the resolution, as a part of my remarks of this afternoon, a statement issued by the Secretary of the Treasury as of January 31, 1938, in the form of a memorandum from the sheets of the books of the Secretary of the Treasury, showing the indebtedness of foreign governments to the United States as of the date of the memorandum.

Mr. President, in closing my remarks, I ask that there be published and embodied in the RECORD an editorial of Saturday, April 8, 1939, entitled "Easter and Neutrality."

In conclusion, I desire to have embodied in the RECORD a very able article which I just had opportunity to peruse while my resolution was being read at the desk, an article from the pen of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson in regard to the statement of the President of the United States when he left Warm Springs, at which time the President said, "I will be back on Thanksgiving if there is no war in Europe."

I now yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator will permit the Chair, there are several matters to be disposed of.

The Chair still believes that the resolution should be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and so refers it.

Without objection, the sundry matters which the Senator from North Carolina requested to have inserted in the RECORD will be embodied in the RECORD.

The matters referred to are as follows:

Statement showing total indebtdeness of foreign governments to the United States, Jan. 31, 1938

Since this statement was made Finland has paid on account of above $232,935.50.

Hungary has also reduced their amount $9,828.16.

The indebtedness of Germany is not shown in above statement.

Lest we forget, the above figures should be stamped on the memory of every man and woman in every one of our 48 States. Thus, making it conclusive that our great Uncle Sam will never again act as Santa Claus to any ungrateful country.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

(By Hugh S. Johnson)

RICHMOND, VA.—Months ago the President was going to "quarantine" the aggressor nations. That didn't go over so well and for a time seemed to be forgotten. Then he began to talk about measures more than mere words but less than war. That seemed to mean economic, but not military war. That didn't click. The next glimpse at possible policy was more obscure. Did "some boob" mistakenly think he heard in a confidential White House conference that "our frontier is on the Rhine"? Or did Mr. Roosevelt never say it?

It doesn't make much difference. It is clear now what the President has been planning. The Warm Springs farewell—"if we don't have a war (before Thanksgiving)"—has been interpreted by Mr. Eugene Meyer's Washington Post to be a warning to this country and the world that the President's policy is forceful intervention, if necessary, on the side of England and France and against the gangster nations. This interpretation the President has specifically endorsed as "very good, very clear, and very honest." He ordered it embalmed in amber "for posterity."

You may or may not agree with Mr. Roosevelt in this cavalier pronouncement for posterity which, while so gaily uttered, is as resonant as the bells of hell with doom and tragedy. You may not agree, but you must admit that at least it put an end to the long guessing contest or the game of missing words. It is frank and fearless—"very clear, very honest," if not "very good." It says right off the reel that if war starts in Europe the President proposes to put us in it—not merely on the business front but on the bloody front.

There are many who believe that this is a bluff. You can't bluff international relations in these days unless you are ready, able, and willing to make good your bluff. If this bluff works and "Hit" and "Muss" back down, Mr. Roosevelt will gain great kudos. If it doesn't work, we have bought a war. That is some gamble. But Mr. Roosevelt is a great gambler. He has shot craps with destiny ever since 1933—$20,000,000,000 worth of debt and experimentation for the stake of recovery and prosperity—and lost every time.

This is the greatest gamble of all—twenty, forty, sixty, God knows how many more billions—the very heart of all that has been won here in wealth and welfare by 150 years of toil and sacrifice—a possible mountain range of human wreckage so great that no one can measure it. Roll the bones and let the whole pot ride!

It puts a columnist kibitzer on a tougher spot than Mr. Ickes could fancy in his most vengeful dreams. When the responsible head of the Nation begins a gambling game with a bunch of gangsters with guns on both sides of the table, what is a man who doesn't believe it is time either to gamble or to bluff going to do? Should he support the gesture on the long chance of its working? Or should he tip off the hand by pointing out there is nothing in it?

Forcible intervention is war—and it is nothing less. Mr. Roosevelt can't take this country into war unless it wants to go. No man can take a democracy into war unless it is excited almost to the point of a frenzy to attack. We are very far from that.

Once the die is cast, once this country is engaged in modern war, no citizen, whether soldier or scribbler, has any choice, he must support the President's words and actions as though they were his own. But until that time of dictatorship to the uttermost there is no such duty on any man.

[From the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Tablet, April 8, 1939]

EASTER AND NEUTRALITY

On Wednesday the Foreign Relations Committee of the United States Senate opened hearings on added neutrality legislation. At these meetings issues are taken up which will involve the future of the American people. Already the forces dedicated to internationalism and subversive ideology are working might and main to involve the United States in Europe's troubles. The fact that open meetings were voted, over the protest of many officials, indicates that the demands of the people are making an impression.

Members of the Senate and House do well to note some of the indications of opposition to the driving of Americans unto the European slaughter fields again. In 1 week we see these healthy reactions:

1. Most Reverend John Duffy, D. D., bishop of Buffalo, told the common people of his diocese that if the United States is maneuvered into a war and has atheistic Russia as an ally, he will tell the Catholic youth not to join in any such hypocritical and destructive conflict.

2. Mr. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, addressing the Dominion House of Commons last week said:

"The idea that every 20 years, this country, which has done all it can to run itself, should feel called upon to save periodically, a continent that cannot run itself, seems to many a nightmare and sheer madness."

Note this well. Canada is part of the British Empire; it has little or no naval or army defense, yet it will not permit its sons to be sent across the sea to fight in another war. Mackenzie King has made a great contribution to peace, a contribution which completely exposes the machinations of the Washington politicians, miscalled Democrats, who even oppose American citizens voting as to whether they should or should not fight in Europe for countries to whom we owe nothing but who owe us much in money and gratitude.

3. Gregory MacDonald, one of the best informed and most astute writers of Great Britain in a superb article in the Catholic Times, of Liverpool, pointedly asks will Great Britain permit the United States to drive her into another war. Mr. MacDonald writes:

"We know very little of the strength and ferocity of the propaganda circulating from the United States around the dominions. In this business the British Empire is under attack from some very curious quarters. The American press is full of articles and cartoons insulting not only Mr. Chamberlain but also King George VI. The danger is that we shall be forced into a war during which the belligerents will have to go to New York for gold loans, thereby restoring international usury under a lending center, while politically all the belligerents will lose, leaving the revolution the universal victor."

The writer warns the Empire against Moscow and New York with their campaigns of hate, revolution, gold, and power seeking. What a revelation!

4. A corps of American writers expose bitterly forced attempts, and foreign-minded zealots, to get the United States into war. In the American Mercury for April, Dr. Charles Beard, the educator, sharply criticizes the foreign policy of the Washington administration. Believing it is leading us in the direction of war, Dr. Beard proposes that we give up any thought of acting in concert with any European or Asiatic power; that we quit "lecturing" and "hectoring" the dictator nations; that we act specifically—and alone—to preserve at all times our national American interests.

Professor Beard's conclusion is: "To entangle ourselves in the mazes and passions of European conflicts and tie our hands to British and French manipulators on the remote contingency of a German and Italian domination in the Atlantic seems to me to embrace immediate calamities when the possibility of security and peace in this hemisphere is clearly open to us."

5. In the same issue of the American Mercury, William Henry Chamberlin, a student of international events, asserts our foreign policy is not only leading us toward war in Europe but is placing us in the middle of a far eastern conflict. In "Hands Off Japan," Mr. Chamberlin asserts that if we do not get into a war with Japan it will be solely the result of an assertive American policy. The danger of war is wholly on this side of the water. Mr. Chamberlin concludes:

"Any war between Japan and America, whatever the immediate provocation, will be the result of a conscious or unconscious determination on America's part to intervene in Asia as it intervened in Europe in 1917. And the issue of any such war will be fought out in Asiatic waters."

One might continue these quotations, but it is unnecessary. The American people are telling the Foreign Relations Committee in no uncertain terms that they insist their Government bar any alliances with European powers, that they pledge the world not one American life and that no battleship be permitted to go to Europe to engage in war, that they put an end once and for all to the campaign of hate and vituperation being directed against foreign nations, who are not our enemies, by American warmongers, revolutionists, internationalists, emotionalized racialists, and money changers.

Easter time is the time of peace. The Saviour of Mankind triumphed over the forces of hate, of war, of grasping wealth. Faith defeated force. The world was shown official murder did not succeed. What better time can there be for exercising peace? What better occasion could be used to inculcate peace-mindedness?

Let us stand as one for the defense of our native land. We believe in adequate defense against invaders who fortunately are not visible at this time. We believe in setting our own house in order. The foreign ideologists are a far greater menace to the country than any distant land. The millions of unemployed, the half-starved, poorly housed, and unclothed masses are our problems. Want amidst plenty, ill-distribution of wealth, and the spread of hate are issues facing us. The United States can save democracy only by putting its own house in order. Moral rearmament, spiritual progress, unity for America and American ideals, will alone spell peace. Fight, but for peace.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS AND WAR

The PRESIDING OFFICER The Senator from North Carolina yields to the Senator from Minnesota, the Chair understands.

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, I have asked the able Senator to yield to permit me to present for the RECORD a scholarly and carefully written editorial from the New York Post of April 12, entitled "Time to Think," and very pertinent to the subject of war under discussion this afternoon. I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Post of April 12, 1939]

TIME TO THINK

Reason, as General Johnson wisely observes, will keep us out of a European war.

Emotion may drive us in.

Many Europeans say that certain leading Americans are more emotional, even hysterical, than any responsible statesmen in Europe.

That's why the Post again suggests standing off a bit from the headlines and the maps, the saber rattling, and the dire prophecies—to observe the European picture through the clear spectacles of reason rather than the flame-tinted ones of emotion.

For our own good. For Europe's good, too.

Trace back the pattern of the past 2 years of European crises. One significant fact stands out:

With all the bluster and bluff of the dictators, with all their fist-shaking in the direction of the democracies, not once have they ventured to threaten a vital link in either the British or French imperial chains.

Not once!

It seems difficult to believe that. But let's see.

In Austria? Neither Britain nor France cared when Hitler absorbed it. It was, let us not forget, a dictatorship before that.

In Czechoslovakia? Hitler marched in there with British and French acquiescence.

In Ethiopia? Britain did not impose the oil sanctions which could have stopped Il Duce.

In Spain? British and French creation of the "nonintervention policy" was direct aid to Franco.

In Memel? That overwhelmingly German city was reclaimed by Hitler with no word of protest.

Go over the list. In no case was there any threat to a vital British or French interest.

Nearest to such a threat were Mussolini's claims in Tunisia and Djibouti. But while Il Duce shouted about them, only 2 weeks ago—

When he moved, he didn't move in that direction.

He moved toward Albania, carefully clear of British spheres of influence, and a country which, for 10 years, had been under Mussolini's thumb.

Now, Prime Minister Chamberlain warns Il Duce not to seize Corfu.

In this case, there is a real menace to the British "lifeline."

If the past is any guide to the future, Mussolini won't move in on Corfu.

If he does, he will, for the first time, really be imperiling the British Empire.

And then we shall see how much determination remains behind the lion's growls.

This is not to say that Hitler and Il Duce will not some day overstep the limits, and plunge Europe into war.

They may do just that. But if we remember the care which both those dictators have shown in keeping clear of the Franco-British buzzsaw—it is fair to assume that they are not in any hurry to provoke war.

The gentlemen who see Europe in flames by next Saturday; the statesmen who keep our own Nation in jitters with their casual expression of fears; the rash souls who think Europe's age-old problems can be solved if only "we go over and clean things up"—

They only unloose their emotions to threaten the reason of all of us.

Let us remember that America is still at peace.

Let us remember, too, that the United States has not yet solved the problems of peace.

They will not be solved by war.

SECOND DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5219) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, and for other purposes.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that if, as, and when the unfinished business shall be again taken up, the committee amendments be disposed of first.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

AUTHORIZATION FOR REPORTING AND SIGNING BILLS, ETC.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent that during the recess or adjournment of the Senate following today's session, the Vice President be authorized to sign bills and resolutions; that the committees of the Senate be authorized to report bills and resolutions and nominations, and that the Secretary of the Senate be authorized to receive messages from the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LA FOLLETTE in the chair) laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, a treaty, and a convention, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORT OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nomination of Herbert I. McEndarfer, to be postmaster at North Liberty, Ind., in place of C. L. Worster, transferred, which was ordered to be placed on the Executive Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will proceed to state the nominations on the calendar.

CUSTOMS SERVICE

The Chief Clerk read the nomination, heretofore passed over, of Florence Clarke Lynch, of New York, to be appraiser of merchandise in customs collection district No. 10, with headquarters at New York, N. Y.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, heretofore I have objected to the consideration of this nomination. I shall vote against the nomination, but I shall have no objection to it being considered and acted upon now. I have made some inquiry with respect to the duties of this very important office. There are more than 800 persons skilled in the law, and particularly in the interpretation of our customs and tariff laws, who will be under the jurisdiction of the person who will fill this position. She is an estimable lady. She has had, however, no experience in this class of work. The position needs a person who is familiar with all matters connected with the customs rules, and the laws relating to imports and duties, and interpretation of our tax laws. This estimable lady, in my opinion, is not qualified for this important position.

Mr. President, the present case affords to us an illustration of patronage appointment, instead of appointment based on merit. I desire to make that statement in justification for my objection to the confirmation of the nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Florence Clarke Lynch to be appraiser of merchandise in customs collection district No. 10? (Putting the question.) The ayes have it, and the nomination is confirmed.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

The Chief Clerk read the nomination of Norman M. Littell, of Washington, to be an Assistant Attorney General.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

UNITED STATES PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the United States Public Health Service.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask unanimous consent that the nominations in the United States Public Health Service be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

POSTMASTERS

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask that the nominations of postmasters be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

COAST GUARD OF THE UNITED STATES

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Coast Guard of the United States.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask that the nominations in the Coast Guard of the United States be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations in the Coast Guard are confirmed en bloc.

IN THE NAVY

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Navy.

Mr. BARKLEY. I also ask that the nominations in the Navy be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations in the Navy are confirmed en bloc.

That completes the calendar.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY

Mr. BARKLEY. As in legislative session, I move that the Senate adjourn until Monday next.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, April 17, 1939, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, APRIL 13, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Once again, our Father in Heaven, Thou dost move us into another day. In these alternations of duty and thought, action and rest, may we realize Thy blessed providence. We pray that it may call us to our appointed tasks, filling the hours with steady, faithful service, full of interest and wise endeavor. Let us not fail to see the beauty of God in the patience, the purity and tenderness of Jesus the Christ. What strength He renders the seeking heart! filling it with contentment and hope. He will give rest in adversity; He will teach us how to feel the poetry of Nature, the sweetness of human relationships, and the satisfaction of duty. Fill our hearts with such peace that we shall be ashamed to murmur and complain. Turn our thoughts to the joy that the day holds; its opportunities, its privileges, and its triumphs. In the holy name of our Saviour. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House that on the following dates the President approved and signed bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles:

On March 28, 1939:

H. R. 3100. An act for the relief of Capt. Francis H. A. McKeon.

H. J. Res. 110. Joint resolution to authorize Commander Henry Coyle, United States Coast Guard, to accept the decoration and diploma of the Marine Medal of Class 1 (gold), conferred upon him by the Government of Greece.

H. J. Res. 163. Joint resolution providing for the participation of the United States in the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of the Panama Canal.

On March 29, 1939:

H. R. 767. An act for the relief of Benjamin Weisenberg.

H. R. 950. An act to exempt all vessels of the United States of less than 200 tons gross registered tonnage from the provisions of the Officers' Competency Certificates Convention, 1936 (being International Labor Conference Treaty, Convention No. 53, adopted by the International Labor Conference at Geneva in 1936).

H. R. 1430. An act for the relief of Hyman Ginsberg.

H. R. 1836. An act for the relief of Jack Nelson, a minor.

H. R. 2079. An act for the relief of Charles T. Wise.

H. R. 3090. An act for the relief of C. R. Henderson.

H. J. Res. 150. Joint resolution to amend the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution to provide that the United States extend to foreign governments invitations to participate in the Third International Congress for Microbiology, to be held in the United States during the calendar year 1939."

On April 1, 1939:

H. J. Res. 250. Joint resolution making an additional appropriation for the fiscal year 1939 for expenditure by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission in accordance with section 16 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939.

On April 3, 1939:

H. R. 3791. An act to provide more effectively for the national defense by carrying out the recommendations of the President in his message of January 12, 1939, to the Congress.

H. R. 4425. An act to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, and for other purposes.

On April 5, 1939:

H. R. 3801. An act to extend the time for retirement of cotton-pool participation trust certificates.

On April 12, 1939:

H. R. 3577. An act to amend the Canal Zone Code.

H. R. 3790. An act relating to the taxation of the compensation of public officers and employees.

RESIGNATION FROM COMMITTEES

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following resignation from committees:

The Clerk read as follows:

APRIL 13, 1939.

Hon. WILLIAM B. BANKHEAD,
Speaker of the House, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Please accept my resignation from the following committees, effective immediately: Census; Election of President, Vice President, and Members of Congress; Mines and Mining; Patents; Public Buildings and Grounds.

Thanking you for your consideration in this matter, I am,

Respectfully,

MIKE MONRONEY.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the resignation will be accepted.

There was no objection.

COST OF GOVERNMENT

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute and to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. The rawest deal ever handed a generation of children, our children and children yet unborn, who must pay for our wastefulness, is shown as follows. Here is a record of what we have done for the past 6 years:

1933, unemployed, 11,000,000; 1939, unemployed, 10,500,000; 1933, taxes, $2,000,000,000; 1939, taxes, $5,000,000,000; 1933, cost of government, $3,000,000,000; 1939, cost of government, $9,000,000,000; 1933, public debt, $20,000,000,000; 1939, public debt, $40,000,000,000.

Where are you going to get the money? You and we are not putting up the money for the Government spending spree itemized above; we are merely spending the money, running up bills against an empty pocketbook, and leaving the debts for our children to pay. It is babies in cradles and the girls and boys now in grade schools, in high school, and in college who will need to face the bill collector and settle up, or else be drowned by national bankruptcy. We, their parents, are spending for them a steadily mounting heritage of back-breaking debt or else heart-breaking bankruptcy. Is it not time to call a halt?

The New Deal is responsible for this terrible condition. Let us correct it here in Congress and do it at once, ere it is too late. Economize in our Government extravagance and waste.

DESECRATING THE NAME OF DEMOCRACY

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute and to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, today at Charlottesville, Va., a group of 100 persons from St. Louis will disembark from a train to make a pilgrimage to Monticello to participate in the Jefferson Day exercises there. This delegation of St. Louisans will come to Washington on Saturday and place a wreath on the site of the Jefferson Memorial now being erected beside the Tidal Basin in West Potomac Park. Among the guests of honor will be Sumner Welles, Under Secretary of State, and Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann, of St. Louis.

Mr. Speaker, I have a grave suspicion that there is something deeper than patriotism and greater than love of the principles for which Thomas Jefferson is cherished by all Americans that prompts this pilgrimage by at least part of these gentlemen from St. Louis. I have a suspicion that this pilgrimage was inspired by those interested in promoting the $30,000,000 Thomas Jefferson Memorial, which they have been trying to put over for more than 4 years in the city of St. Louis, and for which this Congress has never appropriated a thin dime. In the published list of those from St. Louis who are making the trip are 28 city officials and employees, several bank officials, a half dozen politicians, and a few attorneys. Among those who are making this trip to honor the memory of Thomas Jefferson are James A. Waechter and Joseph W. Hannauer, both former members of the board of election commissioners in St. Louis and who were removed from office by the late Governor Guy W. Parks after exposures of gross incompetency and colossal frauds in the elections in St. Louis. Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann, you will recall, is the nominal head of the Joseph F. Dickmann Real Estate Co., of St. Louis, which was recently suspended not only by the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange but also by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation for dealing through straw parties in properties owned by various defunct banks in the city of St. Louis. His brother, Otto Dickmann, vice president of the real-estate concern, is also in the party.

As I have previously remarked upon this floor, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch in an investigation made during September 1936 developed the proof that fraud had been committed in each and every one of the wards in St. Louis where a bond-issue election to support this Thomas Jefferson Memorial was held. There is no question that the ballot boxes were liberally stuffed to return a victory at the polls for the promoters.

In the last few weeks the entire Nation has been amazed at the crime, graft, corruption, and law evasions which have been exposed in the baliwicks of Boss Tom Pendergast, of Kansas City.

A courageous Federal judge started the ball rolling there, about 3 years ago, when he ordered the Federal grand jury to move on the criminals and grafters. The work of the Federal courts was supplemented later by courageous action on the part of lower courts, but it remained for Elmer Irey and his Intelligence Division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue to bring Boss Tom to the bar of justice.

Kansas City is a den of vice and iniquity; but what about St. Louis? When the lid is blown off in St. Louis the echo will be heard across the length and breadth of the continent. And some pretty big shots will get caught.

In order that we may have a permanent record of those who are reported to be making this journey to Washington and the grave of Thomas Jefferson at Monticello, in the name of democracy, I submit for the RECORD the list as published in a St. Louis newspaper.

LIST OF ST. LOUISANS WHO WILL MAKE PATRIOTIC PILGRIMAGE TO MONTICELLO

More than 100 St. Louisans will leave St. Louis by special train at 4 p. m. Wednesday on a patriotic pilgrimage to Monticello, near Charlottesville, Va., home of Thomas Jefferson. Those who have informed Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann they will make the trip include:

May the Lord God of Hosts deliver us from the kind of democracy represented by Bernard F. Dickmann, James A. Waechter, and Joseph Hannauer.

KEEPING OUT OF EUROPEAN AFFAIRS

Mr. LORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LORD. Mr. Speaker, I have before me a newspaper clipping that gives parts of a speech delivered by Mr. Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State under President Wilson in 1920. In this speech he chides our Government and our officials and advises them to be careful about what they say about foreign countries and telling the people of those countries how to maintain their governments. Only a few days ago Italy informed us that it was our part to mind our own business and keep out of these affairs of Europe. They also informed us that they may possibly come over here for a little visit if we do not mind our own affairs. Germany has likewise in no uncertain terms in their press expressed their displeasure of our meddling.

We were warned by that great statesman, George Washington, to keep out of foreign affairs and entangling alliances. It would seem to me if we are to enforce the Monroe Doctrine it is up to us to keep out of European affairs. [Applause.]

I ask unanimous consent to insert the article to which I have referred in the RECORD and to extend my own remarks.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

BAINBRIDGE COLBY CALLS FOR SOBRIETY IN UNITED STATES LEADERSHIP

NEW YORK, April 12.—Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State in President Wilson's Cabinet in 1920, declared tonight that "much has been said that ought not to have been said and for which there is no excuse" in connection with European events. He called for "sobriety in our national counsels and in our national leadership."

"From what we hear today," he said in an address prepared for the fiftieth-anniversary dinner of the New York branch of the Sons of the American Revolution, "it seems that we have come a great way from our historical position that our interests are distinct from those of Europe and peculiarly our own. * * *

"What we want is * * * the sobriety which holds leadership steady on the high plane of pure motives and high moral courage. We want the President to consult the people and their Representatives in Congress with open and receptive mind, and to respect their judgment even if it fails to accord with his plans or prepossessions. * * *

"I think it may be said that the country views with deep disapproval every brag that has been uttered, every idle challenge that has been spoken, every word that has been said with the obvious purpose to irritate or affront, no matter whom."

COOPERATION WITH AMERICAN REPUBLICS (H. DOC. NO. 251)

The Speaker laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read, and with the accompanying papers referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ordered printed:

To the Congress of the United States of America:

I commend to the favorable consideration of the Congress the enclosed report from the Secretary of State and the accompanying draft of proposed legislation designed to authorize cooperation with any of the other American republics in accordance with treaties, resolutions, declarations, and recommendations signed by all of the 21 American republics at the Inter-American Conference for the Maintenance of Peace held at Buenos Aires, Argentina, in 1936, and at the Eighth International Conference of American States held at Lima, Peru, in 1938.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a short article on the Philippine supply of chromium.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to insert a short editorial.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RUTHERFORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a letter from a Philadelphia manufacturer on reciprocal-trade agreements.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

NATIONAL ECONOMIC COMMITTEE

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 159.

House Resolution 159

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 90, a joint resolution to amend the joint resolution approved June 16, 1938, entitled "Joint resolution to create a Temporary National Economic Committee." That after general debate, which shall be confined to the joint resolution and shall continue not to exceed 1½ hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary, the joint resolution shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the joint resolution for amendment the Committee shall rise and report same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the joint resolution and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, does the gentleman from Michigan desire any time on the rule?

Mr. MAPES. I do.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES].

Mr. Speaker, this resolution makes in order Senate Joint Resolution 90. It provides for 1½ hours of general debate and then the resolution is to be considered under the 5-minute rule of the House. The resolution extends the time of the Economic Committee that was created in the last Congress. It provides for an additional $600,000 to enable that committee to proceed with its important work.

The chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS], and the minority member of that committee appeared before the Committee on Rules and testified, urging consideration of this resolution to make possible the adoption of the Senate joint resolution, which extends the life of this committee and makes funds available for its work. I have never been impressed to such an extent as I have been with the presentation made in connection with this committee's work.

Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen, I know you are desirous of hearing direct from the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, who is also a member of the Economic Committee. Consequently I will not take any more of your time, reserving the balance of my time, however, if need be, to answer the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman speaks about the good work this Economic Committee has accomplished. Will the gentleman tell us of some of the things that have been accomplished by this committee under the expenditure of funds which they want to increase from $500,000 to $1,500,000?

Mr. SABATH. To the gentleman from Pennsylvania, I can only say that he must not have heard me when I said that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS], chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, and a member of the Economic Committee, who so ably presented the case before the Rules Committee, can explain more fully and more thoroughly what has been accomplished by this committee than I can, because the gentleman from Texas is an active member of that committee.

As to spending money, knowing the gentleman from Texas as I do, I have the utmost confidence that any committee of which he is a member will not be permitted to expend a single dollar unless it is absolutely necessary and for the best interest of our country.

Mr. RICH. I thank the gentleman. We will be glad to get that information. We hope that when they are going to spend $600,000 additional that we will get something, and we will put this country back into good economic condition, because it is in terrible condition now.

Mr. SABATH. I will say to the gentleman that the Republican member of the committee, who is now present, appeared before the Rules Committee favoring the extension of time and the appropriation of the additional money.

I disagree with the gentleman from Pennsylvania that conditions in our country are so terrible. Only a few days ago I read a report, I believe it was in the Wall Street Journal—not that I am a subscriber to that paper, although I presume the gentleman looks upon it as a Republican Bible—which reports that for the years 1937 and 1938, 2,200 corporations in the United States averaged a profit of 8½ percent, 2 percent greater than even in the banner years of '27 and '28 under Republican administration. Those gentleman during those days were permitted to do things to the country—not for the country—which made it necessary that we appropriate large sums of money to feed the unemployed. His party is responsible for the unemployment today. If inflation had not taken place in 1927, '28 and '29 these tremendous expenditures on our part, about which the gentleman from Pennsylvania complains every day, would not have been necessary, and his party, or those who control his party, have been responsible for the conditions we seek to correct.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. SABATH. I yield.

Mr. RICH. We had 12,000,000 unemployed 6 years ago. You have got 12,000,000 unemployed now. You have spent twice the amount of our income. You have increased our national debt 100 percent—from $20,000,000,000 to $40,000,000,000. If you can get any satisfaction out of a condition of that kind, then for goodness' sake take us back to the good old Republican days with the full dinner pail, where we had happiness and contentment and joy in America, where we will continue under the Stars and Stripes and not under any more New Deal administration. [Applause.]

Mr. SABATH. I will say this: The gentleman from Pennsylvania is the only Republican I know of who wants to go back to the happy Republican days of 1929 to 1933. I always enjoy the 1-minute speeches of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, and I know it is with a grain of humor that he propounds with monotonous regularity the questions, "Where is the money coming from?" and "When are we going to cut the national debt?" He knows the answers as well as I; but for political reasons, he cannot acknowledge them. Because we all love and admire the gentleman from Pennsylvania, we have not taken notice of his potshots at the administration; but, now that there is a little time to spare, I would like to make a short reply.

Mr. Speaker, first of all, there is the cry that the Nation staggers under a $45,000,000,000 national debt, and that the country is headed for ruin. I wonder if the gentleman can reconcile that charge, flung far and wide through Republican newspapers, with the fact that the credit of the United States is better than that of any nation in the world. How does it happen, if these charges are anything more than deliberately inspired scares, that the Government today pays a lower interest on its bond issues than ever before in history?

Here on one hand we have banks bulging with money, gold and silver stocks of the Government at a record high of over $15,000,000,000, national credit as good as any nation's has ever been; and yet, on the other hand, we are confronted with the concerted efforts of the Republican Party, Wall Street, and the controlled newspapers, all trying to hammer the conviction home to the masses that we face economic chaos. So far, crying "Wolf!" has been the extent to which the Republican Party has cooperated with us in our honest endeavors to restore confidence and bring back prosperity.

If criticism is to be the weapon, it is easy to turn it against the Republican Party. There are questions the gentleman from Pennsylvania would be hard put to answer. I might ask whether his memory harkens back to the criminal inflation of 1927, 1928, and 1929, and for his justification of Wall Street's mulcting of millions from investors during that period, with the Republican Party acting the part of an indulgent parent.

Does he remember how the banks, insurance companies, benevolent associations, trust companies, and building and loan associations were systematically loaded with worthless stocks? There are men and women today who look for aid from this administration because the Republican Party allowed its Wall Street boys to steal from them their lifetime savings. Can the gentleman forget a Republican President, Herbert Hoover, who brought to our people the greatest depression the world has ever known? Does he remember, as I remember, the idle factories and plants, the breadlines and civil disorders?

In August 1929 I was ridiculed when I warned President Hoover and the then president of the Stock Exchange, Mr. Whitney, that danger lies ahead. How can the Republican Party ever forget what followed? With the richest Nation in the world, a nation of fabulous wealth and produce sufficient to support the world's peoples, the Republican Party ended up by plunging that Nation into a catastrophe so great that we still struggle to escape its consequences. That crash is responsible, and solely responsible, for today's national debt. The Democratic Party fell heir to the worst mess any party has ever thrown the country into. We might have done as the Republicans did, and let the hungry go unfed, but that isn't the Democratic way. We preferred to see the national wealth used for the benefit of the people rather than wasted by Wall Street. You Republicans bemoan the expenditure of a billion dollars for the relief of the unemployed. Would you prefer to see the national wealth dissipated, as it was in 1929, with losses of billions of dollars a day?

At least we have something to show for the money we have spent. To a great extent we have relieved unemployment, with millions now working who had lost hope under the Republicans. We have taken the hungry, fed them, given them employment, afforded them with ample national defense (at the cost of billions which otherwise would not have been spent), and introduced into American politics for the first time in history a broad program of social betterment.

Answering the gentleman's question as to where we shall get the money, let me say again that conditions are improving, that manufacturers are making more money today than they made even in 1927 or 1928, as reported in the Wall Street Journal and other papers. If the gentlemen on the left would cooperate with the administration, if you would prevail upon these big industries to cooperate, if you were sufficiently interested in the welfare of America to work with the administration, an administration that is honestly and sincerely desirous of aiding the legitimate business and the country and put it again on a solid basis, prosperity would be brought back to the Nation much more speedily.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. In addition to mentioning the reduction of unemployment, I am sure the gentleman will be glad to add to those figures the 600,000 young people who each year are added to the number of people who need jobs. Without, therefore, the program of the New Deal there would be that much additional unemployment during each year of this period. Further, the thing that has been attempted in the last few years, to bring about a balance between the consuming power of the people of this country and the power to produce is the very thing that has been opposed and blocked at every stage it could be blocked on the other side of the aisle.

Mr. SABATH. I thank the gentleman from California for answering these gentlemen on the left. I know he is an earnest student of conditions, and I always welcome his support in explaining conditions, knowing that it should be of some benefit to our Republican friends. They do not, unfortunately, desire to be benefited. All they desire is to play politics at the expense of the country. If they would try to help us instead of blocking our efforts they would be doing something for the country.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield.

Mr. BENDER. Will the gentleman explain his statement that conditions are improving, that business is improving? If this be so, why has the President asked for $1,500,000,000 for the W. P. A. begining on July 1 of this year?

Mr. SABATH. He asked for this additional appropriation because he is interested in the masses, he is interested in the unemployed, people who suffer unemployment through conditions brought about by the Republican Administration. President Roosevelt will not permit people to go hungry in this country. He is doing everything in his power to bring about a condition whereby after this $1,500,000,000 is utilized there will be no need for additional appropriations along this line.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield.

Mr. CARTER. As I understand it this Committee on National Economics has been in existence for some time.

Mr. SABATH. It is a joint committee; yes.

Mr. CARTER. It was appointed a number of months ago.

Mr. SABATH. Yes.

Mr. CARTER. Have they made any progress report, or what can the gentleman give in justification of a continuation of this committee?

Mr. SABATH. I may say to the gentleman from California that the chairman of the committee is here and ready to enlighten the House. If the gentleman will listen to him as I did when he appeared before our committee I know the gentleman will be immensely pleased with the work the joint committee has already done. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Texas such time as he may desire.

COMMITTEE ON LABOR

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Labor may have the privilege of sitting during the sessions of the House today and tomorrow.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, can the majority leader advise us whether the House Committee on Labor is going to hold any hearings on the Wagner Act and the National Labor Relations Board?

Mr. RAYBURN. They are trying to hurry through the measure that contains amendments to the Wage-Hour Act in order that they may reach hearings on the controversy with reference to the National Labor Relations Act.

Mr. RICH. Then we may expect that the House Committee will hold hearings on the N. L. R. A.?

Mr. RAYBURN. They have already voted unanimously to hold hearings on amendments to the National Labor Relations Act.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

NATIONAL ECONOMIC COMMITTEE

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER].

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, I am not going to follow the course of those who preceded me and talk politics. The gentleman from Chicago, Judge SABATH, chairman of the Rules Committee, had a very difficult time trying to apologize for what has happened to the country under the present administration during the last 6 years. For the sake of the argument, I shall accept his apology. The resolution before the House is a matter that should not be viewed in a political way.

Last year the President demanded that an executive committee be set up to do the work which this Economic Committee is doing. Due to the position taken by some good, common-sense, Jeffersonian Democrats in the House and in the Senate with the cooperation of the minority, the President was not permitted to accomplish that which he demanded. As a compromise there was created a joint committee, part of whose membership was taken from executive departments as designated by the President, three Members from the Senate and three Members from the House. There was much fear at that time as to whether or not this committee, which was called the Economic Committee, or monopoly committee, would become a witch-hunting agency and upset business still further—put more fear into business, if possible, than existed at the time. I, too, had that fear and so expressed myself on the floor of the House, but I am happy to say that under the leadership of Senator O'MAHONEY and his colleagues from the Senate, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS] and his colleagues from the House, the investigation has been conducted in a much better way than anyone anticipated it would be.

The bill creating this Economic Committee provided that the life of the committee should expire with this Congress; so, on January 3, 1941, this committee dies a natural death unless it is continued. But you can take it from me that an effort will be made to continue it.

The question has been asked whether or not this Economic Committee has made any official report of its doings. The answer is that it has not. It is true that there is some kind of report in the making, and that with this additional $600,000 the country is buying a "pig in a poke." We are told that the studies of the committee are midway between beginning and end and that without this money any constructive efforts on the part of the committee will be thwarted. In short, we are asked to come up with a $600,000 ante in order that we may see the Economic Committee's hand.

Let me impress the fact that this is no minor investigating committee, because it has a full-time staff of 268 persons and a part-time staff of 160 persons, making a grand total of 428. Under existing law, the President controls four-fifths of the money appropriated for this work, and if this resolution is forced through without the amendment I have suggested he will still have like control.

The resolution that is before us today authorizes the appropriation of an additional $600,000, $100,000 more than we appropriated a year ago to do the complete job. I am sure every Member of this body trusts the committee. I would trust the gentleman from Texas, Judge SUMNERS, at any time anywhere to spend this money properly. I, therefore, go further and insist that the committee members from the House and Senate have something to say about it. This committee does not need any wet nurse.

Mr. WALTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHENER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WALTER. Does not the gentleman recall it was represented to our committee that commitments had been made by the committee for the expenditure of the amount sought in this resolution?

Mr. MICHENER. Yes; I was getting to that. As I stated, I am ready to trust the committee. This bill was introduced first by Judge SUMNERS and in the Senate by Senator O'MAHONEY.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHENER. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Do I understand this Economic Committee made commitments to spend the money before it was appropriated, allowed, or authorized?

Mr. MICHENER. I think this committee, acting as many committees, bureaus, and commissions do, especially when they are proceeding under Executive authority, assumed that when it came to Congress and made a demand it would get the money. That is a habit these agencies have.

Mr. REES of Kansas. That is quite an assumption.

Mr. MICHENER. That is the only answer I can make.

Mr. Speaker, the resolution pending before the House provides that the figures mentioned in the original law shall be stricken out and there shall be substituted in lieu thereof figures carrying an additional $600,000, making a total appropriation of $1,100,000 for the committee. When this resolution was introduced, and before hearings were had by the Judiciary Committee, it asked for $2,000,000, not $600,000. Senator O'MAHONEY, five or six professors, the heads of various executive departments, and economists from the departments, who are conducting this investigation, appeared before the Judiciary Committee, and by questioning we developed the fact that they could not use more than $600,000 during the life of the committee, which expires on January 3, 1941.

Whether or not commitments have been made for all of this money I do not know, but we were advised that $600,000 would be sufficient to permit the committee to complete the work now outlined and make its final report in keeping with the terms of its authority. I do not favor additional appropriation without the Congress controlling the expenditure of the money.

I yield to no man in this body in my belief in economy. I have voted for every measure that has been brought in here during the last few years, without exception I believe, where the question of common-sense economy was involved. We have set up this committee which has been conducting these studies. It has not made a lot of fuss. It has not disturbed business. The committee tells us it is going to make a report that is worth while if we give it sufficient money to finish the report. For my part I do not want to oppose any course that will not permit the committee to make its report and wind up its activities. I did oppose the $2,000,000, and the Judiciary Committee opposed it. As a result it was stricken from the resolution and a redrafted resolution providing the $600,000 was presented and is before us today. Understand clearly, this Economic Committee asked for $2,000,000, but the majority of the Judiciary Committee has approved but $600,000.

Mr. Speaker, when the resolution is read for amendment I am going to offer an amendment, and I wish the Members would pay close attention to it. In the first place, the resolution is drafted differently from any resolution that has ever come from the Judiciary Committee. We did not draft it that way. The only excuse anyone will give for the way this resolution is drafted is that it was done that way in the Senate and sent over here. Some of our members were reticent about disturbing Senate language, regardless of how awkward it is. The amendment which I shall offer will be found in the minority report which has been filed. I ask all of the Members to get a copy of the minority report and read this amendment which I shall offer.

First, the amendment improves the draftsmanship and makes the resolution intelligible, without going through the mechanical process of striking out and inserting. In short, the law can be understood without recurring to the original enactment. Second, it provides that an additional $600,000 be appropriated and that said sum shall be immediately available for expenditure by the committee in carrying out its functions. In other words, because a supine Congress in the last session yielded to the whip and the lash of the administration and surrendered to the President the right to dictate to this investigating committee as to its activities is no reason why the present Congress should not reassert its independence and again recognize its confidence in its own committee. The country has reacted most favorably to every independent act of the present Congress. The fact that we made a mistake a year ago is no justification for a repetition of the same error.

I take it that inasmuch as the administration wants this authority, there will not be sufficient votes to defeat the resolution. However, it seems unthinkable that this House should authorize the spending of an additional $600,000 of the taxpayers' money and specifically provide that the poor, subservient committee might be trusted with $120,000 of the amount and the President be allotted $480,000. I think it outrageous that this committee, headed by Senator O'MAHONEY and Representative SUMNERS of Texas, should be compelled to go to the White House with hats in hand and get permission from the President to carry on this investigation. If this had not been done a year ago, it would be shouted out of this House today. The only reason that the proposition is before us is because the administration does not want to yield this prestige.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHENER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. I should like to ask the gentleman two questions: First, what has been done with the $500,000 that has already been given to the committee?

Mr. MICHENER. The report made to the committee by Senator O'MAHONEY, and those who appeared with him, was that they have used this money in making certain investigations which they have not yet perfected. I am quite sure the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS], who is on the Economics Committee, and the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. REECE], who is also on that committee, will be able to explain fully the work done.

Mr. RICH. The second question is this: Is not the $600,000 additional we are asked to give this committee an enormous sum when we consider the amounts we have given other investigating committees of the House; for instance, to investigate W. P. A., $75,000? To a lot of the investigating committees we have given only $25,000. It seems to me this $600,000 is an enormous sum.

Mr. MICHENER. There is no question that it is a large amount; but I may say to the gentleman that the Judiciary Committee was opposing $2,000,000, and, as one member of the committee, I was much gratified to be able to cut the amount down to $600,000. I may say further that I am wondering what the W. P. A. workers and those demanding relief are going to think of an additional appropriation of $600,000 to pay the salaries of these investigators, economists, and what have you, especially when a half million dollars has already been used up without so much as any kind of beneficial report resulting. Experience tells us that there is very little chance of any constructive legislation ever resulting from these investigations.

I regret that my time has expired, and may I close with this question: Is this Congress justified under all the circumstances in authorizing this additional expenditure, and again affirming its belief that it can better trust the President as to the work in hand rather than its own committee? [Applause.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE].

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, during the remarks of the gentleman from Illinois, the chairman of the Committee on Rules, a question arose as to the present state of the country in comparison with what it was a few years ago. For your consideration I bring you some pertinent comment on that point made on March 17, 1939, in the hearings of the Committee on Appropriations on the supplemental W. P. A. appropriation bill:

> Mr. LUDLOW. Colonel, how was it before there was any Federal relief?
> Colonel HARRINGTON. I only know in a general way. * * *
> Mr. CANNON. Of course, at that time the need was not so great. We have now the greatest destitution in the history of the United States.
> Colonel HARRINGTON. That is correct.

I may add the observation that the chairman of the Committee on Rules later supported the position of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON] in the debate on the bill. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. VOORHIS].

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to address myself in connection with this bill for a couple of minutes to a question that was asked awhile ago by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BENDER] with regard to why the President is requesting funds for the W. P. A. for next year.

The reason he is doing this is the same reason the continuance of this committee is of great importance.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] gave figures on the earnings of the corporations of America during the last couple of years, which figures cannot be successfully challenged. Our difficulty has not been basically with the earnings of industry, it has been with the purchasing power of the masses of the people of this Nation. The reason the President will ask for this money is twofold: First, because he is concerned about the welfare of the great mass of people in this Nation, many of whom have been literally pushed beyond the periphery of our modern industrial economic system by forces over which they have no control themselves.

Mr. THOMAS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. In a minute I will be glad to yield.

Our principal job is so to adjust their buying power and those economic forces as to bring them back into the circle of that economic system.

The second reason the President will ask for additional funds is that it has been found by the experience of all industrial nations over a period of time that except where a net increase in the buying power of people is being brought about, either through governmental action or otherwise, industry itself is unable to distribute sufficient purchasing power to the people of any nation to enable them to take off the shelves the very goods industry produces. I could give reasons for this, and one of these days I hope to have an opportunity to do so, but I do not have time now. All I wish to say at the present time is that if this committee can be instrumental in showing how that can be done without increasing the public debt—and it ought to be able to be done without increasing the public debt—they will have contributed the most valuable single piece of information, perhaps, that has ever been contributed in the history of this country.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. In just a minute I shall be pleased to yield.

Another reason the President will have to ask for this additional sum is that the distribution of income in this country is so unequal that the very people who own industry find that this unequal distribution of income is such that the people to whom they must sell do not have the buying power that they need to absorb these goods. This is the main problem. It has to do with the tax structure and has to do with the existence of monopoly. One main reason agriculture cannot get a decent income from its products is that monopoly industry takes too large a percentage of the fluid buying power of the country. If you want to get rid of W. P. A., and if you want to get rid of unemployment, you have to have a means of preventing too much of the total buying power of this country going into the hands of this group, in order that more of that buying power may go into the hands of agriculture, small business, labor, and our older people. One of the things we ought to do without fail before this session ends is to provide an effective, direct, general Federal pension law for our older people.

These are the reasons the President asked for this committee and these are the reasons we need a continuation of the work of the committee. They are also the reasons why it is our duty to provide for useful employment for our unemployed people in the next year.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I yield.

Mr. BENDER. The gentleman has spoken of the President's policies and I would like to ask the gentleman this question. Has any President ever had more power for a longer period of time than this President to demonstrate the value of his ideas and his ideals and his doctrines?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I believe so, but I would not get into any argument about that and in answering the gentleman I will say this much: I believe in 1937 we made a great mistake. I am not laying any blame on any particular person or any group of people, but I think that a tremendous blunder was made in 1937 when we failed to sustain continuously the buying power of these people and tried to curtail too quickly. I think if that had not been done we might well have balanced the Budget before this.

Mr. BENDER. Is it not a fact that bread lines are getting longer and the percentage of poor people is growing; in fact, as demonstrated by the Gallup poll, where 52 percent of our people are within 6 months of the bread line and 19 percent of them are already in the bread lines?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Let me answer the gentleman's question.

Mr. BENDER. Yes.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Inevitably, until you correct these difficulties in the economic system which I have pointed out, first, the necessity of an increase in the total volume of money in this country to correspond with the increase of productive capacity—and that increase must be brought about through some monetary adjustment—and until you adjust the distribution of income in this country so that you have an economic system with freedom to your businessmen to produce and then have customers to take these goods off the shelves, you are going to continue to have this same situation.

The President of the United States, had he really been supported vigorously all through this time, would have accomplished far more than he has, and I say this without necessarily implying that I agree with him about everything.

Mr. BENDER. Has not Congress supported him vigorously?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 3 additional minutes.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. BENDER. Has not Congress cooperated with him vigorously right along?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. The gentleman knows very well that in the last few years that has not been the case; and, furthermore, may I say that America is face to face with a very difficult and serious problem. She is face to face with the coming to fruition of the developments of machine industry, of technological improvements that proceed so rapidly that it is very difficult for bodies like this one to keep up with them.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. In a moment.

The problem of the President was not, and is not today, only the problem of congressional support. Our problem, yours and mine, and the President's, and everybody else's, is the problem of attempting to understand this problem and of getting the people of America to understand it; and in order to solve it, we are going to need the patriotic support of every group of people in this country—every single one. We are going to have to have business groups that sincerely want to be appeased and are interested in national welfare; we are going to have to have labor groups that want very much to solve their difficulties and differences and are interested in national welfare; and we are going to require a Congress which will earnestly consider these big problems and not bicker about small ones.

I now yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. In speaking of industry taking on employment, before the recently enacted laws it required about 40 percent of the operation of an industry to enable industry to break even in its overhead. With the labor laws that we have passed in the last 4 or 5 years, they require industry to operate at the point of 60 percent in order that they may break even before the stockholders get any return on their investment; and we are in the situation, so far as our manufacturers are concerned, that there is today no opportunity for them to get ahead; no incentive to do business or invest capital. Business is going in the red. It cannot make any money; when it does, taxes eat it up. How do you expect business to improve and be able to take on these people when the laws that we have enacted, such as the National Labor Relations Act, or the Wagner Act, social security, are putting such a damper on business that they cannot even make a start, and men with money will not go into business? They are afraid to go into any business, especially when you persecute them and call them all kinds of names, most of it unwarranted.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I want to answer the gentleman's question. The difficulty, in my opinion, is not with the laws, although I do not think they are perfect, and I think some of them should be improved, but the difficulty basically is that if business was given complete freedom today they have enough idle plant capacity right now that would require a considerable increase in consumer purchasing power to use up the present capacity; and therefore I come back once again to the statement that the problem basically is a problem of adjusting the buying power of the American people on the one hand and their power to produce on the other. [Applause.]

Mr. RICH. Let me ask the gentleman this question: Has the gentleman ever run a business concern; has the gentleman ever been in business and met a pay roll?

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I stated prior to the remarks of the gentleman from California [Mr. VOORHIS] that I had no further requests for time, but his talk has provoked requests, and with the permission of the chairman of the Committee on Rules I would like to yield my colleague from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN] 5 minutes.

Mr. SABATH. That is quite satisfactory.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOFFMAN].

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include an editorial from a Pennsylvania newspaper and excerpts from a letter from the Michigan Federation of Labor received this morning.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from California [Mr. VOORHIS] is always talking about purchasing power. I suppose the gentleman will concede that the man who works in the factory and draws wages has purchasing power.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. That is correct.

Mr. HOFFMAN. And I suppose the gentleman will also concede that someone must operate that business.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. That is correct.

Mr. HOFFMAN. And at the same time that person must get at least enough from those who buy the manufactured products to meet the pay roll and pay for the material.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Evidently.

Mr. HOFFMAN. That much—pay for materials, money for the pay roll, for taxes—the employer must have, even though there is none left for dividends.

The gentleman's party has been in power for the last 6 years. It has had practically all the money for which it has asked. It has had more by billions of dollars than the taxpayers have been able to pay into the Treasury of the United States. You have borrowed more than $21,000,000,000 and have distributed that money the way you wanted to.

For more than 6 years you have not only, through taxation—and I refer now to the Social Security Act—taken from the employer but the wage earner as well billions of dollars which you promised to hold for him for old age and unemployment benefits, and have squandered it on current running expenses, but you have almost doubled the national debt by borrowing additional sums, which you have wasted and squandered; and the net result is, as you are forced to admit, a complete failure to better the condition either of the individual or of the Nation.

Now, what has been wrong with your plan? As the gentleman in substance said a moment ago, the greatest need of this country is a better understanding on the part of the President of our country's problems. After all of these experiments, after all of these expenditures, does the President not know the remedy? Has he forgotten that he told us we must live within our means? That we must economize? That excessive taxation and Government regulation would mean the end of constitutional liberty, the end of economic prosperity?

Is there no one on the gentleman's side who can tell the President a few of the self-evident, fundamental facts of life? That wind and hot air will not create either employment or purchasing power? That a ceaseless, restless moving about on vacations from one place to another and a hatching of crackpot schemes, the application of exploded theories, and an utter lack of the application of common sense will never restore us to the position of a normal, prosperous nation?

We have had 6 years of it. Will it take another 6 years of the same kind of foolishness, or will it take 60 years more, for the gentleman's party to learn what is the trouble with our country, to understand the remedy which in the end must be applied?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. Yes.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. The fact that some of this money is not raised by taxes is important, because that means that that amount of money has been had beyond the contribution to the customers of American business, which has not been raised by taxes.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Very well. If you do not raise it by taxes, where do you get it?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. It was borrowed, and the point I make is that I do not believe it should be borrowed.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Then the gentleman would tax them more?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. No.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Where would you get the money if you would not borrow it? Where would you get it—print it?

Mr. VOORHIS of California. I believe it is important in any modern industrial nation for the government of that nation to exercise its prerogatives and bring into circulation enough money to compensate for the increased productive capacity.

Mr. HOFFMAN. The gentleman's party, the majority in the Congress, has put on the books three laws, the Social Security Act, the Wagner Act, and the Wage and Hour Act, and the unemployment today is as great as it was before they were enacted; each has tended to increase unemployment, and the purchasing power, according to the gentleman's own statement, is lower, and according to the statement just read by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE], and according to Mr. Harrington, who is head of W. P. A., the people are now in the greatest state of destitution in the history of our country.

Let me read that testimony from page 189 of the hearings before the Subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations of the Seventy-sixth Congress, first session. Colonel Harrington was asked as to how the unemployed and the unemployables were fed in certain sections and he was then asked by Mr. LUDLOW how it was before there was any Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation or before there was any Federal relief. He replied:

> I only know in a general way. * * * They were fed by the Salvation Army, and in some cases by municipal soup kitchens.
> Mr. CANNON (Democrat of Missouri and a member of the Subcommittee on Appropriations). Of course, at that time, the need was not so great. We have now the greatest destitution in the history of the United States.
> Colonel HARRINGTON. That is correct.

In connection with the President's statement made not so long ago that a third of our Nation was ill-housed, ill-clothed, and ill-fed, is not that a wonderful record for the gentleman's party to point to? After the expenditure of all those billions of dollars and 6 years of arbitrary, unlimited power, are you not proud of that record?

You are not only "getting nowhere fast," but you have put the skids under us as a people and as a nation and you greased them well, so that our destination, which is increased unemployment, greater destitution, economic chaos, waste, and extravagance, is approaching at an ever-accelerated pace.

Listen to this statement from the Michigan Federation of Labor, received this morning:

> The Unemployment Compensation Commission of Michigan is faced with a crisis due to lack of funds in the Social Security Board to meet the administration expenses. According to information I have, the State administration may have to close down early in May for lack of funds unless the Social Security Board receives an additional appropriation.
> Several major industries expect to lay off some of their employees within the next 2 weeks and it will increase the load of the Unemployment Compensation Commission.

Another one of the results of your administration of quack remedies by quack doctors.

As a result of the legislation which you have enacted and the almost criminal manner in which the taxpayers' money has been used; as a result of the restrictions placed upon industry which, in the end, must pay the taxes, an ever-increasing number of individuals and corporations are forced to cut down the number of jobs which they can give.

And why cannot industry longer employ these men? Go out and talk, as I have, with the men who formerly successfully operated the smaller factories who are now fighting for their existence. Go into the towns, into the small cities, and you will learn the facts, which you never can learn by sitting here.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOFFMAN. I decline to yield. What do you find? You find that the Wage and Hour, the Social Security, and the Wagner Acts, and your John Lewis and your C. I. O. and sit-down strikes have ruined the men who heretofore have given employment, and still you refuse to lessen the pressure on these men, who, if given a fair, square deal, an even break, always have and would today lift us out of this depression. I notice in this morning's paper that John L. Lewis intends to call a general strike in the soft-coal industry if the wages he demands are not paid, and the hours and working conditions that he demands are not acceded to. Everyone knows that the coal miners need money, everyone knows that they cannot draw a cent of wages unless the operators can at least break even. Everyone knows that as you shove the price of coal up you lose your market and that is what you have done, and so today, down in West Virginia they are asking for public funds to support the miners, who are forced out of work by the legislation that you have passed the Guffey Coal Act.

I do not know of my own knowledge whether the operators of these coal mines are making an unjust profit nor whether the men who work therein are underpaid. But I do know that, unless the operators can mine and sell the coal at a price high enough to pay the wages demanded, no one will work in that particular industry; and I do know that if the wages for mining the coal, added to the other costs, are so high that it is cheaper to purchase coal in some other place or use some other fuel, then again those miners will be idle, the mines will be closed.

True, the laboring man should have a living wage, but the man who owns and operates a mine, a factory or a mill, he, too, must have a living wage.

Let me quote this editorial from the Somerset (Pa.) Daily American of April 12, 1939, which reached my desk this morning and which discloses not what may happen but what has happened, and which points out in no uncertain manner what all must do to aid in solving the trouble:

> It must have been quite a shock to United Mine Workers' leaders to receive the news from Governor Holt, of West Virginia, that there were no funds available out of which to pay relief to miners idle through the inability of the union and the operators to agree upon wages and working conditions to govern them during the ensuing 2 years, and that if there were available funds, "it would be socially and economically unsound to provide at public expense financial assistance to those who voluntarily refrain from working."

The words of Governor Holt remind of the attitude of Governor Coolidge, of Massachusetts, who later became President, when he was dealing with the Boston policemen's strike.

They also call to mind the words of Grover Cleveland when he said that it is not the duty of the Government to support its citizens, but it is the duty of its citizens to support the Government.

The idleness of the coal mines of West Virginia, and the same is true of Somerset County and all other mining sections, is due to the voluntary action of the mine workers.

Their preference to gratify the vanity and promote the political ambitions of John L. Lewis is the chief reason why bituminous miners are idle.

Were the employees of any mine to sit around the council table with their employers, they could probably go to work within a few days and make more money than they have seen in their pay envelopes since the depression began.

That is what happened after the Jacksonville agreement.

The miners forgot Mr. Lewis and his bargain, agreed with the men who knew the terms on which coal could be marketed, and went to work.

After all, the first devotion of every American is to his country, to his fellow citizens. The highest duty of each of us is to make such contribution as we are able to the general welfare. Any wage agreement that promotes idleness among workers in any craft is detrimental to the common good.

Labor leaders who ignore the highest duties of Americans are not fit to lead Americans.

When there are more than 11,000,000 idle workers in the United States for reasons beyond their control, it behooves each of us to do his part toward accepting proffered employment and providing employment.

Industry multiplies industry; like always breeds like.

The consumer who produces an equivalent for that which he consumes provides for the needs of other consumers and thus contributes to the general welfare.

The idler who adds to the number of idle workers not only contributes to the miseries of his fellows but menaces the civilization under which he enjoys all his material blessings.

When any group sets up conditions of labor that are detrimental to the general welfare it absolves from allegiance all patriotic citizens.

The results of coercion and intimidation in Russia, Italy, and Germany are the results that will follow similar practices in America.

The attempted coercion of mine operators into acceptance of uneconomic agreements for the operation of their mines belongs in the same category as Fascist, Nazi, and Communist coercion in Europe.

Governor Holt has exhibited a fine sense of justice in refusing to lay upon industrious citizens of his State the support of those citizens who regard their obligations to John L. Lewis superior to their obligations to America.

John L. Lewis and his C. I. O. would not only "kill the goose that lays the golden egg" but they would kill every kind of a goose that lays any kind of an egg, and in doing that they are playing into the hands of the Communists, whose theory is that no man should own anything nor make a profit, no matter how industrious, how saving he may be. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GIFFORD].

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I think I should have a critical eye on these increased expenditures. I have read the explanation of the bill. It seems to be the old story of an attempt to bolster up the old idea of the commodity dollar. I wish to ask the chairman of the Rules Committee to explain this language:

And to hear and receive evidence thereon, with a view to determining, but without limitation.

What is meant by "to determine, but without limitation"?

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman possesses enough intelligence——

Mr. GIFFORD. No; I do not have sufficient intelligence to understand that.

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman possesses enough intelligence that it is unnecessary for me to explain the meaning of that verbiage. I think it speaks for itself. The gentlemen knows what the word "limitation" means. Of course, it does not always apply to him, but as a rule we know the word, and the meaning is generally recognized.

Mr. GIFFORD. I will read it to the gentleman. I knew he could not explain it. Of course, he could not—

With a view to determining, but without limitation, the causes of such concentration and control.

I yield for some bright Member to tell me what that means as applied to this particular portion of the act.

Of course, there will be no limit to the sums that will be required to keep this Commission going if it is without limitation in the scope of its inquiry. I ask the House to consider the last expressed instruction "to adjust the purchasing power of the dollar." It is the old rubber dollar plan that is to be further investigated. We have had nothing but that for some time. I do not like to see this money possibly wasted on such an unparalleled authority granted to search for that impossible solution "that government can prove itself greater than natural economic laws."

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, as there is no opposition to the rule, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 90), to amend the joint resolution approved June 16, 1938, entitled "Joint resolution to create a Temporary National Economic Committee."

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 90), with Mr. LEAVY in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate joint resolution.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection the first reading of the joint resolution will be dispensed with.

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS] is recognized for 45 minutes.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 30 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, this proposed authorization has to do with an important work that the Temporary Economic Committee is undertaking. I suppose everybody will agree that in this country we are more or less at the crossroads and must determine very soon which direction we shall go. There are a large number of people in this country who believe that the desirability, feasibility, or possibility of controlling our economic activities by competition is ended. The total of those holding these views are many. They think that method is out of date. There are other people who do not agree with them. Regardless of the views which we have, we all appreciate the importance, the necessity of making that decision soon.

It has already been mentioned in the discussion of this bill that in the last Congress the President sent a message to the Congress asking that there be established a committee composed of agents of the executive branch of the Government to make certain investigation. As a final development Senator O'MAHONEY and myself and representatives of the executive branch of the Government had a number of conferences. As a result of those conferences the bill, which it is proposed here to amend, was agreed upon and finally became law, providing for the creation of this committee, fixing its duties, and so forth. That committee was composed of six members from the executive agencies and six members from the legislative branches of the Government.

You are all familiar with the scope of the responsibility which was given to that joint committee. If it had been a matter which I could have controlled in the first instance, it would probably have been conducted entirely by the legislative branches of the Government. At least the joint committee, if I may so designate it, should have been given control of the expenditure of the funds. But we are not dealing with this matter as in the first instance. Besides

I am by no means certain that the arrangement which we may not agree with in theory is not proving to have been fortunate in our peculiar circumstances at this time. I am certain in my judgment that however that may be we should not change it now after we have organized and proceeded thus far under the law which the Congress enacted. My good friend from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER], for whom I have great respect and friendship, is going to offer an amendment to provide that this additional authorization shall be expended entirely by the committee. For the reasons which I have indicated I hope that amendment will not be agreed to. The Congress, in passing the original legislation, provided that four-fifths of the $500,000 should be expended under allocations made by the President to the executive agencies charged with the responsibility of making the investigation in the first instance, and $100,000 to be expended by the committee as a whole.

Under that act, passed by the Congress, that money has been largely expended. There are two reasons why the amendment proposed by my good friend from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER] should not be adopted. In the first place, whatever may be the theory, there is pretty general satisfaction in the country as to how the business of this committee has been carried on. That is quite important. In the second place, the adoption of this amendment would mean scrapping a great deal of the organization and a great deal of the work already done, because under our legislation these departments charged with making the investigation have organized their forces and have spent most of a half a million dollars carrying out the commission of the Congress. Do not forget that. Whatever may be said, these executive agencies are acting under the authority and the mandate of the Congress. I would like to have that understood. I will repeat it. I want you to remember this when you come to vote on the amendment which will be offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER] that the activities which have taken place have taken place under the authorization and direction of the Congress of the United States.

It is our money that has been spent while they have been working at a job which the Congress directed them to perform. It is not urged here that they have not done the job well. These agencies have organized their staffs as we have authorized and spent this money as we intended. The work is not finished. As a practical proposition I submit to each of you individually if you had the responsibility of conducting this investment and were proceeding through an organization which you had set up, would you stop in the middle of the investigation, having spent a half million dollars, tear up your original organization and make it necessary to create a new organization and start anew, losing time, wasting money, and probably lessening efficiency? You would not do it.

The next thing I bring to your consideration is the composition of the committee. As I have indicated, I think it has been very fortunate in our present circumstances that the committee was constituted as it was; in other words, I think it is a good thing that there have been six members from the legislative branch and an equal number from the executive branch sitting side by side and working together in this particular investigation. I will tell you why I think so, and it was to me a very interesting thing, the departments of the Government are beginning to untangle themselves and to move toward a resumption of their normal functioning. In the beginning of this administration the people of the country, recognizing that we confronted a great emergency, by common consent concentrated emergency power in the Executive to deal with the emergency situation. In my judgment, that would have happened regardless of who was President, regardless of what party was in control of the House or the Senate. It is a sort of instinctive thing that takes place among our people under our system of government which makes it possible for us to escape the necessity of having to have a dictator when conditions require a quicker set-up and stronger power than our institutions normally afford. This is a very interesting fact. There is another which is equally interesting. I think unquestionably that anybody who has kept his senses recognizes that the time must come—in fact it is here—when we must begin the resumption of normal functioning of our institutions. These distinct but coordinate branches of the Government are not accidents, they are the vital organs through which our system of government functions.

The legislative branch of the Government during these last 6 years has not been functioning normally, and when I say this it is not in criticism of anybody. Everybody who understands the fact knows this is true, and if he understands anything about the nature of our system of government and the natural laws which govern it he knows also that we have got to go back to normal functioning or lose the power normally to function. It is rather fortunate, in my opinion, as I have indicated, that in the transition period, this period of readjustment, it has come about that three Members of the House and three Members of the Senate are sitting together with representatives of six executive agencies of the Federal Government doing a particular job through which we get a better understanding of each other, a better appreciation of each other, establish a sort of interchange of mutual understanding and respect, a better chance to do teamwork dealing with the big problems of government. I am happy to say that the thing has worked out differently from what I feared it would, due as much to the spirit and cooperation of the Executive as to the legislative personnel.

I am very much interested in this situation, in this hopeful demonstration of what happens to the attitude and efficiency of people when they pool their intelligence, their experience, their judgment, and their effort in a common cause. We have got to have a lot of that if we run through without a smash. Whether we be Democrats or Republicans, I do not believe anybody who has got practical sense fails to recognize the fact that the job ahead of us is going to require all that the Democrats and all that the Republicans of all the departments can do to solve it. [Applause.] We fight out our political battles here and in the country. That is to be expected.

It is a good thing to have somebody in opposition. It is a sort of check and balance. Not only is that true here but it is true with reference to the work of the executive branch of the Government and the legislative branch of the Government; and the executive branch of the Government had just as well understand—I mean if there is anybody who does not understand it—they had just as well understand that the Congress is going to begin to perform its normal constitutional functions as the legislative branch. It must do it. It has to do it or lose its power to function, because power will not remain where it is not used. This is not said in criticism of everybody. I tried to make it clear that this condition generally out of which we are moving would have developed whether the Republicans had had the Presidency or whether the Democrats had had the Presidency, because it had to happen to deal with our situation. But it is necessary now that the legislative branch of the Government come into its full responsibility, because the President himself is going to need all that an independent, patriotic, cooperating legislative branch of Government can do; and we are going to need all that we can do plus all the Executive can do, and plus all that the people can do. For this reason I believe it is rather fortunate that this particular committee right at this more or less pivotal point when there is too much misunderstanding has been made up of these six men from the executive branch and six men from the legislative branch.

I think the whole country owes a great deal to Senator O'MAHONEY for his activity with regard to this matter; and let me say now that the spirit of the executive agencies of the Government connected with these matters has been as fine as anybody could expect. I am glad to say that they conceded that the legislative branch of the Government ought to have equal representation—I mean the men who were designated to do this work. We have gotten along all right over there in the work of the committee.

They did bring in the suggestion that about $2,000,000 be authorized. Neither Senator O'MAHONEY nor myself nor my colleagues, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WILLIAMS] or the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. REECE], favored that amount. We all talked it over, and we did not do it in any combative, fussy sort of way. We and our colleagues of the executive branch of the Government talked it over and came to an agreement that we would not ask for more than $600,000. We agreed in the Judiciary Committee of the House, the Democrats and the Republicans on that committee—and we have the finest committee in the world, bar none—we agreed, Democrats and Republicans agreed, that we would just ask for this $600,000.

As to the work we have done: I assume that most of you know in a general way from the newspapers the character of the investigation that has been conducted, and you know from the newspapers the character of the investigation that it is contemplated will continue to be conducted. Whether this committee will do this work properly only the future can determine, but the fact is that this committee is charged with the most important responsibility perhaps, considering the economic condition of the country and the decisions the committee will have to make—of any similar group of people working in the Government today.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield.

Mr. WALTER. The gentleman is far too modest. He gives the credit to Senator O'MAHONEY. The credit should go to the gentleman himself.

I think we all realize that our distinguished chairman, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS] is the man to whom this House owes the credit for having the situation exist as it does today. May I ask the gentleman whether or not it is in the contemplation of the committee to look into the manner by which the American Can Co. is driving out of business every small manufacturer of containers in America today through the distribution of machinery that costs from $5,000 to $7,000 for the sealing of cans? Obviously, a small manufacturer cannot compete with the American Can Co. Today the American Can Co. is able to go to every purchaser of containers, with the offer of the use and the free servicing of this very expensive machinery and it is able to secure the cream of this business.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I appreciate very much the compliment of the gentleman.

With regard to that particular investigation, I would not like to speak with any authority because I am not authorized; but I may say to the gentleman it is contemplated that the whole field of practice in trade and industry will be investigated, so that when we come to deal with it we will have a complete picture of the economic life and the functions of its machinery in this country so far as business is concerned.

Mr. HEALEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. HEALEY. I think some of the Members are anxious to learn what time this committee will make a report of its activities. I mean approximately.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I may say to the gentleman it is contemplated that very soon a sort of preliminary report will be made with reference to what the committee has done and possibly some suggestions made as to remedial legislation; but the final report will be deferred until the conclusion of the investigation. May I say further, I believe the business interests of the country feel rather gratified that this sober, serious work is being done now so that when we enter upon a program we will do it deliberately, with the facts fully understood, and what has to be done will be accomplished with a surgical instrument as distinguished from a meat ax.

Mr. MICHENER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. MICHENER. I agree with what the gentleman stated so far as the business interests of the country are concerned. May I add further that the fact the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS] is a member of the committee is one of the contributing factors to that feeling.

May I ask the gentleman this question: The committee asked for $2,000,000 in the original resolution. Then it was developed it could not use this $2,000,000 during the life of the committee as now authorized. Is it the gentleman's judgment that in the next Congress or before that time the committee will come back and ask for a continuation of life with an additional appropriation?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I cannot answer as to what the committee will do, but I do not hesitate to answer the gentleman's question so far as my own attitude is concerned. My own attitude is to crowd this investigation as rapidly as it can be made thoroughly. I do not now see any reason why at the conclusion of the expenditure of this money we should not have been able to make sufficient investigation to give the country a picture of the conditions as we find them and to make such recommendations with regard to legislation as the facts indicate.

Mr. MICHENER. That being the situation, does the gentleman have any serious objection to going back to the usual form and giving the committee discretion in the spending of this additional money, the same as every other investigating committee in all history has had?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. As an original proposition, I would not, as I tried to explain; but I suggest to the gentleman from Michigan, who is a good businessman as well as a good lawyer, that when you have an investigation in progress, and that investigation, whatever your theory may be, seems to be going along well under a law and an authority which the Congress has given I would not change. There is good teamwork; we have spent a half a million dollars getting the thing started, building up our organization in the departments. The work is far progressed. In my opinion, in such a situation it would not be good judgment, it would not be good legislation to change in the middle of the investigation. This investigation is being conducted under the authority, the direction, and as fashioned by the Congress. Nothing which the executive agencies which we told to do this work have done would justify this change. It would not help the development of the proper interdepartmental feeling of copartnership in a common responsibility which is ours or a proper teamwork if we are to win through. We have spent a half million dollars. These executive agencies have their organizations at work. They are doing a good job. We ought not to change the situation.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. May I ask the gentleman if Senator O'MAHONEY did not say to our committee that in his belief the $600,000 would be sufficient, and that a final report would be made, say, at the beginning of the next Congress?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I believe Senator O'MAHONEY did say that. I am sure that Senator O'MAHONEY entertains the hope that will take place and I believe he thinks it can be done. In my opinion, Senator O'MAHONEY will do what he can to bring about that result.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MAY. I understand this investigation is perhaps not meeting with strenuous opposition from business and industry, at least legitimate business, and that probably it will result in a report which will ultimately bring about legislation correcting a good many evils in the way of trust conditions. There is another angle to it, however. May I ask the gentleman from Texas whether or not his committee has made any study of this particular feature. We have in the Department of Justice what is called an antitrust department, or branch of that service. Certain public officials at the head of that department or connected with that department have recently been starting prosecutions against large industries that are supposed to be in an unlawful trust or combination, or engaging in some vicious practice. As a result of these criminal prosecutions that have been instituted, they have been procuring judgments by which these practices can be regulated. Does the gentleman think he should look into that situation to see whether or not the criminal statutes should be resorted to in order to coerce business into submitting to certain decrees?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I do not know the scope of this investigation. However, it really does not contemplate in the first instance an investigation of departmental practices discharging their particular constitutional responsibilities.

I want to make this additional statement: Under the present arrangement these executive agencies are able to utilize a great deal of their accumulated information and a considerable part of the time of members of their staff.

In the absence of any further questions, I believe I shall reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Montana.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I fully agree with the gentleman's statement that we are at the crossroads and must pursue one course or the other, and try to have Congress assume its functions in this country, without dictation from bureaucrats. The thought has come to me that we have too much government by the departments, too much bureaucratic government, so to speak. In other words, if you submit a bill to a committee the first thing the chairman usually asks is, "What report is there from the department concerning this bill?" Ordinarily, if the report from the department is adverse that ends the bill. The same thing is practically true if we are seeking an appropriation for something in our district about the necessity for which we know a great deal more than anyone here in Washington. If the Bureau of the Budget states it is not in accordance with the plans of the President, as a rule the application is denied.

The thought occurs to me that Congress is not exercising its function when it permits a department of the Government to dictate what laws shall be passed or shall not be passed.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. May I say to the gentleman that sometime, with the indulgence of the House, I will be glad to present for your consideration some ideas I have on that subject? I agree we have too much governmental responsibility concentrated in Washington. As long as we have more governmental responsibility in Washington than we can take care of through our ordinary machinery functioning as it was contemplated it should function, I do not see any other way to take care of the overhead than to create these departments and bureaus and turn over to them powers we wish they did not have. I do not want to get into that subject now, however.

Mr. HARE. In view of the gentleman's statement there——

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Not that one. I do not want to pursue it further.

Mr. HARE. I will ask this question then, changing it around: I understand the legislative members are sitting in with the executive members of the committee now under consideration. I should like to know for my personal information, because of the high regard I have for the ability of the legislative members of the committee, Are the legislative members actually or theoretically sitting in with the other members of the committee?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Does the gentleman mean in making the investigation in the first instance?

Mr. HARE. Yes.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. No; not making the investigation in the first instance; but I do not want to stop there because that would give the wrong impression. It is the responsibility of the executive agencies to make the exploration in the field under their set-up and then to bring the witnesses and the facts and submit them to the full committee. Certainly at that point and at that time and in that capacity the legislative members take full responsibility with their colleagues from the executive branch, and we get along very well, too, I may say to the gentleman.

Mr. HARE. May I ask whether or not the legislative members have some voice in determining the field of exploration by the committee?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes. [Applause.]

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to my colleague the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. REES].

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I realize that in following the distinguished gentleman from Texas, the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, I am facing a rather difficult task. I, as well as other Members of the House, have implicit faith in the chairman of that committee, as well as its membership.

I am not here this afternoon to oppose the work of this investigating committee. I believe such an investigation is justified, and assume they are doing a good piece of work. However, I do not think it should be necessary to spend a million dollars to secure the information this committee seeks. If the departments of our Government would properly function, the work of the committee would not be such a stupendous task. I am firmly convinced that it is not right for us to place most of this appropriation in the hands of a Chief Executive for the direction of its expenditure.

This bill provides for the authorization of $600,000 for a Temporary National Economic Committee to continue its investigation, started about a year ago. This Congress authorized the expenditure of a half million dollars for this purpose at that time. The committee said it would be enough. It should have been. Now, they tell us it will take $600,000 more to continue the investigation. As a matter of fact the first resolution introduced on this subject asked for $2,000,000. It seems to me that the situation is almost an indictment upon Congress itself—when, in view of all the departments and expensive bureaus we have created—it now becomes necessary to spend more than a million dollars to make investigations as to whether or not there have been certain infractions of the law, whether or not regulations have been violated, and to what extent, and then determine what legislation, if any, should be passed. I know the investigation is an important one—but a million dollars is a lot of money.

We are told it is necessary to go outside the departments of our Government and employ some 460 investigators to help determine these questions. One of our distinguished Members told us just a few moments ago that there had been violations of the law by a certain great monopoly. Then he asked whether or not this committee expected to investigate the case. Why not file a complaint with the Department of Justice and have that particular concern subjected to an immediate investigation?

In passing, let me call your attention to another thing—the committee has spent $500,000. We have no report of that expenditure. Nothing to tell us what has or has not been done. They say "We do not have a report ready, but you have read the newspapers and know we are conducting an investigation that is worth while." They also tell us that they have not only spent the $500,000, but have also promised to spend the additional $600,000 which we are considering today. The distinguished chairman says he hopes the additional $600,000 will be sufficient—but mind you, if we are here next year, you will find that another expenditure will be required in order to continue the work of this committee.

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. REES of Kansas. So, in one hour and a half this afternoon, you are going to spend $600,000 or a little more than half a million to continue one more investigation. I do not know how many investigations this Congress seems to need, but I would like to say again that it seems wholly unnecessary that Congress should have to go outside of its departments and spend so much money to secure this information.

A few days ago we agreed to spend several thousand dollars to investigate the manner in which employees of our own Government are administering the fund provided for the relief workers of this country. Every few weeks we appropriate money to make investigations of various kinds, most of them being warranted, but extremely expensive.

We have another situation with reference to the expenditure of this fund. The act provides that four-fifths of it shall be spent by the Chief Executive. In other words, Congress provides for the investigation. Congress provides for the appointment of the committee and then places $480,000 of this money in the hands of the Chief Executive so that he may direct the use of it where he chooses.

I am interested in what the gentleman from Texas had to say, and I want to agree with him in one of his statements——

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I yield for a question.

Mr. DONDERO. What reason is given for the committee itself not expending the money provided for in this resolution?

Mr. REES of Kansas. Oh, the only reason given for the committee not expending it is because they are doing just like we have done in other cases—appropriated money and then handed it over to the Chief Executive. We have done it over and over again. I believe if Congress appropriates the money, it ought to provide for the expenditure of it. This resolution gives four-fifths of the fund to the Chief Executive and says in substance "You are better qualified to handle this money than even the members of the committee or of Congress itself." I do not know of any other reason. As a matter of fact, it is only an excuse as I view it.

I agree with the chairman of the committee when he said a while ago that the time has come—I believe it is long past—when Congress ought to assert itself and do a little legislating of its own. It can then be responsible for some of the things that are done. Congress has depended upon someone else to tell it what it should or should not do, rather than use its own judgment. Certainly, we are not proud of our present situation. Let us for once get back on our feet and reassert ourselves and assume the responsibilities as Members of Congress.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES of Kansas. Yes; for a question.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Commenting on the use of the money that has been appropriated by the Congress heretofore, the gentlemen certainly understood the chairman of the committee when he stated that the Executive had more than pleased the legislative branch of this committee in the division of these funds. There is no criticism about that, is there?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I do not know about that. I do not know how well pleased this committee has been, but I am saying to you that if Congress is going to appropriate the money for this investigation and provide a committee for that purpose—it ought to direct the expenditure of it, and not place it in the hands of anyone else. I think the gentleman will agree with me on that principle. He cannot give me any particular reason why $480,000 should be handed to the Chief Executive and say to him, "Mr. President, we are handing this to you because you are better qualified, in our judgment, to handle the money, rather than have the Representatives of the Congress of the United States, who, after all, are going to be responsible for the investigation that is made, handle the money."

Mr. MASSINGALE. If the gentleman directed that to me as a question——

Mr. REES of Kansas. No; I did not. I said I think the gentleman would agree with me on that question.

We are going ahead and spend the $600,000 just like we have spent money right along. Hardly anyone has spoken against it. This Congress has been increasing appropriations and authorizations rather than reducing them. We are going to treat this measure in the same way. We will probably spend more money for the same purpose, but somewhere sometime we are going to have to begin cutting our expenditures. Members of Congress, this is a good place to trim an authorization a little. At least let us adopt the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan, providing that Congress for once shall spend the money it authorizes, and not let it go into the hands of anyone else.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Kansas has expired.

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAWFORD].

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, after making one or two observations I desire to submit a question to the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS]. In recent months I have been very much impressed with certain facts setting forth past performance which have appeared in print. For instance, the appalling absence of new capital going into our industrial system, or, as some prefer to call it, our capitalistic system, and which I think gives us a yardstick for measuring the blood stream of this system, which has built our country to what it is today. I think that this investment of new capital directly relates to unemployment and our relief problem. It deals with the question of savings in our banks and our whole banking and monetary system. I refer all who are interested to the amazing statement of the Federal Reserve Board issued April 8, 1939, and in the form of an appeal addressed to the the chairmen of the House and Senate Banking and Currency Committees. According to the annual reports of the Securities and Exchange Commission, we, in the year ending June 30, 1935, put into our capital structure new capital amounting to only $205,000,000; in 1936, $327,500,000; in 1937, $890,000,000; and in 1938, only $457,000,000. So far this year we are putting in an insignificant amount. For 2 or 3 years prior to those I have quoted, we put into our capital structure practically nothing in the way of new capital—for plant expansion and working funds—dropping as low as $161,000,000 in one year. I am here referring to the investment of new capital largely used for expanding plant and equipment and increasing working capital—old and new operations.

We find from the Alexander Hamilton Institute and the American Federation of Labor, on pages 4091 and 4092 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, the appalling, staggering figures, with reference to unemployment, running from 1930 down to February 1939. On pages 4129 and 4133 of the RECORD we find that our people have in excess of $50,000,000,000 in savings.

I get the distinct impression that we are in this country folding up and moving out of the capitalistic system upon which we have depended in prior years. Government ownership, insurance, subsidy, and management are moving in. I am not saying that the book is being closed and locked, but I am saying that it is folding up, and the question I wish to ask the geneleman from Texas is this, if it is within the ethics of the committee to divulge such information at the present time? Have the gentleman and his committee, so far as they have gone in this investigation, uncovered or discovered elements which he feels will in due course, after Congress acts or fails to act, straighten out this situation and put us in a more hopeful day than the last decade indicates? I make this inquiry in the light of the April 8, 1939, release of the Federal Reserve Board and with its sincerity and all of its implications.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I would not take the responsibility of indicating now that the committee will be successful in discovering the solution of the situation to which my distinguished friend has called attention. I do believe that each member of the committee fully appreciates the tremendous importance of the fact the gentleman has referred to. Personally I consider that the exploration of that field or the possibility of making discovery in that field would aid considerably in the solution of the problems confronting the committee, as it appeals to me. That is as far as I can venture in my reply.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, I wish to thank the gentleman for his frankness and his answer. Again referring to the statement of the Board of Governors, I must, after reading its observations, along with previous statements by it made under date of March 11, 1939, and in recent Federal Reserve bulletins, come to the conclusion that the Board feels there is need for a sweeping inquiry into matters not being covered by the gentleman's committee.

The Board in its last release is very emphatic and goes so far as to say that it would welcome a reexamination of its own conclusions and a study of the factors that obstruct the flow of money through the channels of investment, production, and distribution. If the Banking and Currency Committees of the House and the Senate fail to respond to the urgent and repeated requests of the Board of Governors, it might be quite in order for the gentleman's committee to act promptly and aggressively and thus endeavor to lend such assistance to the Board as it deems vital and important to all the people. If we do face a situation wherein Congress will not respond to the urgent requests of the Board, then certainly we have no right to further criticize the Board for such disastrous happenings as may occur. The Board has given us fair and ample warnings and has appealed to us for assistance and consideration. We should act and do it now.

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield now to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. MUNDT].

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Chairman and my colleagues, there are two vital problems confronting this Congress which are so vast in their significance and so important in their scope that they overshadow all other business before us. These problems are so serious that we could well devote a part of every day to discussing them and it is unnecessary to go beyond the sixth letter in the alphabet to come to either one of them. I refer to the foreign policy of the United States and to the farm program of this country. Until and unless we arrive at a sound and sensible understanding of these two problems and openly advise our constituents what our continuing policies will be concerning them, this country cannot go forward to the economic prosperity and domestic tranquillity which we all seek.

Our most important challenge, of course, is that demanding that each of us does his part to keep America out of war, to keep this Congress immune to the propaganda of warmongers and internationalists with whom this country is again seething, and to work out an open, honest, and stable foreign policy which will avoid all forms of entangling alliances and protect us against a repetition of the hideous experiences of 1917. We must seriously and soberly dedicate ourselves to a reaffirmation of America's traditional policy of nonintervention and we must stubbornly resist the scare cries of alarmists and excitable exhibitionists who are trying to coax us into an inflammable state of mind and to inject us into the war-making controversies of other continents.

And next to the problem of protecting our peace comes the problem of developing a sound and sensible farm program for this country which will give equality of opportunity to the farmers of America. By giving equality to the farmers of this Nation we shall have restored an honest purchasing power to one-third of the population of America, and by restoring agricultural prosperity we shall have developed a national-defense program which will aid us not only in guarding against enemies from abroad but which will protect us against the invasions of inimical ideas from within this great country of ours.

This Congress is vitally interested in this number one domestic problem of the United States. I am sure that it recognizes that the time has come when suitable farm legislation must be written into law and that all of us are eager to solve the farm problem since it remains as the first step which must be taken in any program to successfully recover from our 9-year-old depression.

Consequently, I am inserting in the RECORD this afternoon in connection with this talk an interesting letter which I have recently received from an actual dirt farmer in South Dakota whose comments and conclusions merit the study of every Member of this House.

I am one of the co-authors of the cost-of-production farm bill introduced in this session of Congress and which, in my opinion, will give American agriculture the first honest break it has had since 1926. Many of you agree with me; some of you honestly disagree. Regardless of your position at this time, my colleagues, I think you will find it thought-provoking to read Mr. Hansen's analysis as you will find it attached to these remarks and, after that, I hope you will join in signing the petition now on the Speaker's desk bringing the cost-of-production bill before this House for consideration and debate.

This Congress must not adjourn with the agricultural problem remaining unsolved—by getting the cost-of-production bill before us for action and amendment we will be taking a definite step toward the solution of the number one problem of America.

Today's disastrous farm prices bear their own testimony that the present-day farm policies of curtailed production at home, combined with enlarged imports of farm products from abroad have not given the farmers a fair break. Since economic prosperity cannot come to labor and industry until the producers of new wealth—our farmers—are given a decent and fair income so they can buy the products of labor and industry, it is high time after 9 years of stalling that we start back on the road to prosperity by destroying this depression at its roots through a sensible solution to the farm problem. To this end, I am sure you will be interested in the following letter which was written to me by Peter V. Hansen, of Salem, S. Dak., who is neither a professional farm organizer nor an agricultural theorist, but who is an actual farmer with a sound mind and a strong back, and he exercises both of these assets in the interests of self-improvement by both working his own farm and studying the economic situation into which the products of his labors must be sent after he completes each harvest:

COST OF PRODUCTION CLUB,
SALEM, S. DAK., March 29, 1939.

Hon. KARL MUNDT,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. MUNDT: I have had numerous requests for copies of H. R. 2377, known as the cost-of-production bill, which was introduced by you in the House of Representatives in the early part of the present session, and I would be very pleased if you would send me a few copies, so that I can fill those requests.

It is very interesting to read the statement made by Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace, that the cost-of-production plan would cost the consumers $1,000,000,000 a year. Does that statement convey the message to the Members of the United States Congress that the farmers of this country are feeding the people in the United States at an annual loss to the farmers of $1,000,000,000, and if it does, how long does the Congress intend to let a condition like that prevail?

It is not my intention in this letter to unduly criticize what has been done or tried in the past. I am merely stating the true facts and conditions as they are in the hope that it may help correct the fallacious agricultural theories which are—and have been for 6 years—advocated by bureaucrats and importers of foreign agricultural products.

I have always believed that as a nation we should keep an inventory of what we have on hand of various products needed to sustain the Nation; consequently I am one of the many who each month furnish the Government with a report on crops, prices paid to the farmers, and conditions relating to and affecting crops. Each month I receive in return from the Department of Agriculture a summarized report covering the State of South Dakota and also the whole United States.

I am sending to you a little edition—covering the month of February—which I also receive each month, and I ask you to give it your most careful study. In this little edition you will find three tablets giving various figures, and you will notice that the period used as a base for the first two is that of 1909 and 1910 to 1914, while the base period used in the tablet on page 8 is that of 1924 to 1929.

On page 2, under the heading "Prices down," I ask you to read the third paragraph, which says: "The index of grain prices was unchanged during the month, but at 66 percent of pre-war it was 23 percent, or points lower than on February 15, 1938." I want you to bear this in mind for a moment and then take a look at the table at the top of page 3. (See exhibit I.) This table has the pre-war base period of 1910–14 as 100. Then we find at the bottom of the column marked "Prices received," the figure 92 for the month of February 1939. We have just read the statement on page 2 that grain prices during the same month were only 66 percent of pre-war prices; to bring the figure up to 92, it would be necessary that some farm products brought prices well above 100; this, however, has not been the case, as we will discover by reading the table at the bottom of page 3, under the heading "Prices of farm products." (See exhibit II.) In column 2, under the heading "February average, 1910–14," we find the prices paid during that period, and in column 5, under the heading "February 1939," we find the prices paid during that period, but the figures given in this last column are considerably above the prices paid to the farmers in South Dakota; in fact, most of these figures are identically the same as the market quotations in Minneapolis and Chicago. Now let us compare the figures given in the last column under "Parity prices, February 1939," and we will see how hopelessly far from being a help to the farmers the new A. A. A. is. I should like to have you observe on page 3, under "Employment," that on February 1, 8,914,000 people were employed on the farms in this country. Three million more would be added to this figure if the farmers were paid a price equal to cost of production. I have work for two men the year round, but I cannot afford to hire one. I should also like to have you observe the table appearing on page 8. (See exhibit III.) This table has for a base period the years of 1924–29 used as 100. Note carefully the title of the items listed in this table; note that the national income for 1939 is given as 90.3 percent of that of the base period; that nonagricultural income is given as 92.3 percent of that of the base period; that the purchasing power of nonagricultural income per capita for food is given as 100.2 percent of that of the base period; and please also note that the cost of food (the farmers' product) is given as 74.6 percent of that of the base period. Under the heading of "Wheat" we get the information (see exhibit IV) that the prospects are that we will have a carry-over of 285,000,000 bushels of wheat by the 1st of July; this will no doubt be called a surplus; but is it? It amounts to a little more than 2 bushels of bread grain for each person in the United States. This is not even a reasonable reserve for a nation as big as ours; without an adequate supply of food our national defense will weaken quickly in case of actual combat, for even today, under our New Deal, a soldier fights on his stomach. Suppose we should have a year like 1936, and at the same time a major war should materialize, and we had only a carry-over of 285,000,000 bushels of wheat, why, we would curse the day we ever took an acre of wheat out of production. In reading this little edition this thought comes to my mind: "Who is trying to fool who?" All the bureaucrats and all the so-called agricultural experts in Washington, D. C., cannot fool the farmer; when he looks at his records and his pocketbook he knows where he is at. He is dealing with actual facts, not theories. Let me submit a few of the practices that are being carried out under the new Farm Act.

In 1937 one of the soil-conservation committeemen in this (McCook) County discovered that he could make a good thing out of the benefit payments if he worked it right, so he persuaded a number of his friends and relatives to sign up on the new farm program and had them take the soil-conserving acres out on his farm, and when the check came they signed it over to him, he had his whole farm laying idle, he had no farming expense and collected about $1,000 in benefit payments. How did that system conserve the soil on the farms of his friends and relatives?

The same year a young man in Hanson County rented eight farms with a total of 1,200 acres, and this is what he said, "I will just spread my seed out thin so it will reach and then run over it light with the tractor, if I get a half a crop fine and dandy, but at any rate I will get $800 from the Government."

This year one of our neighbors has rented a total of 800 acres and he is making exactly the same statement as the young fellow in Hanson County did except he will get about $1,000 from the Government, he does not intend to try to do a good job, he intends to do his work as cheaply and lightly as he can, just to qualify for the benefit payment. Nothing is more damaging to the soil than that kind of farming. There used to be a keen competition among the farmer-tenants as to who could do the best job farming, because the best farmer could generally rent the best farm, and that was a healthy condition, but now under this prolonged home-made depression and the new farm program, that healthy condition has almost completely disappeared. In 1932 we were promised prices in excess of cost of production, and since then we have been promised parity prices, but instead of getting either one, we have been getting advice from a bunch of bureaucrats and so-called experts, who want to tell the farmers how to farm, the farmer who has a lifetime of practical experience to his credit, the farmer who has the benefit of his father's and his father's father's experience before him, still these bureaucrats, who no doubt would starve to death if they had to live and make their living on a farm under the same conditions (financially and otherwise) as the average farmer has to do, still these gentlemen want to tell the farmers how the farming should be done, and what is the reason farming does not pay out. In this little table below I will show just why farming does not pay its way.

Product	Acres	Normal crop in bushels	Parity price per bushel	Market price paid to producer in the fall
			Cents	Cents
Rye	20	300	90	31
Oats	65	1,625	50	12
Barley	135	4,050	67	24
Corn	85	1,445	80	32

HOW IT PAYS OUT

Product	Total crop	Total parity value	Total marketing receipt	Farmers' loss
	Bushels
Rye	300	$270.00	$93.00	$177.00
Oats	1,625	812.50	195.00	617.50
Barley	4,050	2,713.50	817.20	1,496.30
Corn	1,445	1,156.00	505.75	650.25
Total		4,952.00	1,600.95	3,341.05

In the above I have given a true illustration of what happened to me in 1938, and what is true in my case is equally true in regards to every other farmer in this community. We farmers do not care about what political-minded farm leaders tell Congress; we do not care what all the bureaucrats and so-called farmer experts tell Congress; we are dealing with actual facts. Henry Wallace stated that the cost-of-production bill would cost the consumers of the country $1,000,000,000 a year. May I submit to you that the present farm program is costing the consumers (the taxpayers) that much or more in direct taxes and many times that amount indirectly in various manners, and the program does not bring the results which it was claimed by its sponsors it would. We farmers have patiently carried out the program advocated by Henry Wallace for 6 years, and it is a proven failure as far as we common farmers are concerned; if Henry Wallace does not have the good grace to admit that the new A. A. A. has utterly failed to place agriculture on a self-sustaining basis, is the United States Congress going to continue to sacrifice the American farmers just to save someone's face? The economic truth is that the price of everything sold except agricultural products is based on the cost of production; business can function in no other manner; it is the economic law of business; and the same economic law applies to agriculture. There is no substitute for cost of production; the so-called parity price is a myth if it is not equal to at least cost of production, because out of his parity price the farmer would have to pay some 20 to 25 hidden taxes that have been handed down to him in the price he pays for what he buys, and after he has paid these hidden taxes he does not have a parity price; on the other hand, if a cost-of-production price is guaranteed to the farmer by law these hidden taxes would be included in the cost of production and in this manner be carried all the way through the cycle to be absorbed by the general public, and the farmer would be paying only his just share.

I could write on this subject the rest of my life, but let me conclude by saying this: We farmers want Congress to pass a cost-of-production bill that can stand on its own merits without being bolstered up on huge annual appropriations of the taxpayers' money, and if Congress will do that, within a short time we farmers will take at least 1,500,000 unemployed out of the breadlines. Compare that with the W. P. A. appropriations and the appropriations needed under the present farm program. We will do our duty to our country if we are given an opportunity, but we do not want subsidies, and we do not want what the Honorable Miss SUMNER from Illinois the other day so aptly called "a substitute for justice." It is no longer satisfactory to state that the present condition is due to causes over which we have no control, that it is caused by international strife. The present prolonged depression is a home-made product, and it is within the power of Congress to put an end to it if it sees fit.

Squarely on the shoulders of the present Congress rests the responsibility of the continuance of this depression, for the continuation of a condition which compels the bread producers of this Nation to stand in the bread lines, a condition which compels healthy men and women to humiliate themselves and bow their heads in shame while they are asking for a little surplus or relief, a condition under which thousands of healthy men are eating their hearts out when they look at their hungry children, who are hungry only because their father is denied a job. The question is, Will the Seventy-sixth Congress do its own legislating, or will they let themselves be dictated to by bureaus and executive offices? All that is needed—and it was so aptly and plainly shown by Senator THOMAS of Oklahoma on the floor of the Senate on January 27, this session—is for Congress to give to the people of the United States an honest dollar that is worth 100 cents regardless of whose pocket it is in, and give the farmers a minimum price by passing the cost-of-production bill and the depression will be permanently over inside of 6 months.

Will the Congress do this? We hope so, but we are fearful that it will again let itself be influenced by selfish bureaucrats. Then let it be known to the members of the majority party that with them lays the responsibility of the outcome of this session—that they cannot borrow or tax this country back to prosperity, and that no party can continue to play politics with the misery of the masses and survive and stay in power. Pope, from Idaho, and McGill, from Kansas, played politics with the farmers' freedom, and Pope and McGill were retired by the farmers.

Respectfully and sincerely yours,

PETER V. HANSEN,
Secretary, Cost of Production Club.

The following exhibits are taken from the booklet entitled "Agriculture Situation," for March 1939, published by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, and referred to in the letter from Peter V. Hansen, State secretary of the South Dakota Cost of Production Club. Figures and comments from this March booklet cover the agriculture situation for the month of February 1939.

EXHIBIT IV

WHEAT: STOCKS

Wheat stocks in the United States totaled 656,000,000 bushels on January 1. This was 123,000,000 more than at the beginning of 1938, and 284,000,000 more than on January 1, 1937. Stocks of all classes of wheat except soft red winter were larger this January than last, and much larger than the small stocks on January 1, 1937.

The January 1 figures indicate domestic wheat disappearance for the July–December 1938 period totaled 382,000,000 bushels, as compared with 386,000,000 during the same months of 1937. Exports were 45,000,000 bushels, compared with 41,000,000 in the like period of 1937. Assuming total disappearance for the full year at 700,000,000 bushels plus exports of 100,000,000, the United States carry-over of wheat on July 1 next will be about 285,000,000 bushels. This would compare with 153,000,000 bushels carry-over on July 1, 1938. It would be the largest carry-over since 1933.

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. REECE], a member of the committee.

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, in view of the comprehensive statement made by the gentleman from Texas, the distinguished Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary [Mr. SUMNERS] and a member of the temporary National Economic Committee, I feel it is not necessary for myself or any other member of the committee to consume any considerable amount of time. The gentleman from Texas has explained the organization of the committee and the manner in which it is undertaking to perform the duties which Congress has imposed upon it.

Regardless of what may have been our views with reference to the manner in which the money should have been allocated when the original resolution was before the Congress, I feel that it would now be a mistake for us to undertake to effect a change. The committee has adopted its agenda. It has set into being the organization through which the work of the committee is being performed. This work is well advanced. It has been done acceptably, I think, to the country and to the business interests with which the study has come in contact. The committee is in entire harmony with reference to the manner in which the executive departments of the Government represented on the committee have functioned. For us now to undertake to change the organization after the work is so well advanced would not be in the interest of efficiency, and, in my judgment, would greatly handicap the committee. If the entire amount involved in this resolution should be given to the committee, I feel the committee would undertake to go ahead with the work and with the organization as it is now constituted. So I feel that the resolution as reported by the Committee on the Judiciary should be passed.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. I yield.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I think it would be interesting to the Members of the House to know who these representatives of the departments are and what departments they represent.

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. The personnel of the committee as constituted is printed in the Congressional Directory. In addition to the congressional representatives on the committee, the Department of Justice is represented by Mr. Thurman W. Arnold; the Securities and Exchange Commission, by Mr. William O. Douglas; the Federal Trade Commission, by its former chairman, Mr. Garland S. Ferguson; the Department of Labor, by Dr. Isador Lubin; the Treasury Department, by Mr. J. J. O'Connell; and the Department of Commerce, by Mr. Richard C. Patterson, Jr. I believe those gentlemen and their alternates constitute the representatives of the executive departments.

I wish to emphasize, as the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS] stated in his presentation, the committee has found the representatives of the executive departments conscientious and desirous of working in harmony with the committee as a whole. There has been no friction between the representatives of the executive departments and the legislative representatives on the committee. As one member representing the legislative branch, I am gratified with the course that this important study has taken. While it is impossible and improper for the committee to undertake to make a full report of its study and its findings to the Congress until the study has been completed, I for one feel that the Congress itself will be satisfied with the work of the committee when the work has been completed and its report has been made to Congress.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. I yield.

Mr. REES of Kansas. I wish the gentleman would tell the House in just what respect there would be great disruption by reason of the adoption of the amendment which will be offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER]. In what respect will it disrupt the work of the committee?

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. The first function of the committee was to decide upon a program and set into motion an organization to accomplish that program. The committee did this. Its program is well advanced. If the amendment should be adopted, it might be necessary for us to change the organization which is conducting the studies for the committee. There is only one way by which that difficulty might be circumvented in case the amendment which is going to be offered by the gentleman from Michigan should be adopted, and that would be for the committee to allocate the money in the same manner in which it has been allocated in the first half of the study.

Mr. REES of Kansas. But is that not a question that is in the hands of the committee?

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. But the resolution having been adopted in the form in which it was originally, a certain responsibility was placed upon the executive departments which would not have been placed upon them and which would not now devolve upon them if the amendment should now be adopted, and by reason of the authority contained in the original resolution the committee has been able to avail itself of personnel and services of the executive departments which it would have been unable to do had the authority and responsibility contained in the original resolution not been placed upon the executive departments by the resolution itself.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. I yield.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Well, you have got a set-up to make the investigation, and they have proceeded to make the investigation and are in the middle of the investigation. Now, if the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan should be adopted, that investigation would have to start de novo, or the new committee would have to accept the organization that is now functioning, would it not?

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. The gentleman is entirely correct. The team which is making the study is already in the harness and is performing satisfactorily. Now, why change the resolution so as to make it necessary to unharness this team and hook up a new one? It would not be in the interest of efficiency, and I should regret very much to see the proposed amendment adopted by the House. I do not think it would be in the interest of the study which the committee is so earnestly trying to make in the manner desired by Congress and by the country.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. I yield.

Mr. CRAWFORD. Can the gentleman advise us when the hearings will be printed so we can begin to study what has been done?

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. The hearings are now in the process of being printed and are expected to be available in a very short time. The preliminary report of the committee is in process of formulation and it is the hope of the committee that it may be presented within 1 or 2 weeks' time.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. I yield.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Concerning this investigation generally, is not the committee pursuing the course of investigation, paralleling the investigations, that are being made by the Federal Trade Commission with reference to monopolies, and so forth?

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. The committee has been able to obtain a great deal of beneficial information from the files and the experiences of the Federal Trade Commission, but I may say, having in mind particularly the statement of the gentleman from Kansas, this committee is not undertaking to run down violators of the law, or to ascertain if the departments of the Government are doing their duty, or to investigate particular businesses. We are undertaking to make a study of the whole economic situation, and the economic influences which are shaping our economic and industrial system with the view of our findings serving as a basis for legislation in the future.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Is not this statement true: That under the law, it is the duty of the Federal Trade Commission to investigate all monopolistic practices of all concerns, and to prosecute in the name of the United States all violators of all unfair practices in business?

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. Only in a general way. It may not be the duty of the Federal Trade Commission to make the comprehensive investigations of monopoly in general which the gentleman has in mind. [Applause.]

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. MURDOCK].

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Mr. Chairman, I recall the discussion on this measure in the last Congress when the study was first ordered. Although some at that time expressed the hope that this effort would not throw more fear into business than already existed, it was pretty generally agreed that monopolistic practices are prevailing today and we would be derelict in our duty if we did not study the situation with the view of finding a remedy. Of course, I shall vote for this bill in order to continue the investigation in the same safe manner in which it has been thus far conducted.

While I am discussing the bill I want to reveal some of my own thoughts in regard to the present-day question of Government regulation of business and the probable uneasiness which, it is claimed, may result. I have listened this afternoon to remarks made here on this bill, and also to remarks made practically every day in this chamber, concerning the relation of government and business. Surely a man from Mars, listening in on these proceedings, would get the idea that the present administration is deliberately persecuting, bedeviling, and destroying business, and that the sole purpose of such a study, as this bill would continue, is to disturb the minds of businessmen, thus hampering them in their daily business and further wrecking the prosperity of the country. Would not such a visitor, who reads the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD or listens to the proceedings in the House, get such an impression? What I would like to know is, Is it really the purpose of the party in power in the Government at this moment to fight business, cripple business, and destroy prosperity? Do the gentlemen who have implied as much really believe it?

There are some things I would like to know. First, has there been any business prosperity in this country within the last 6 years? I have heard it said that business earnings have been great, and I have also heard it said on the floor of this House that profits have been nil. Which is true? Is it possible that both statements are true? If so—and I believe it is the case—it must be that certain businessmen have made earnings, large earnings, and other businessmen have made little or no earnings. Is that not the real truth of the matter?

I have an impression which may be right or wrong, and I should like to be corrected if I am wrong, that a certain few big businesses have been prosperous, and many small businesses have made no profits. If such is a fact, what should this Government do? I believe that we should ascertain the truth and attempt to change that situation. We ought to find why the small-business man has made no profits, and why the few big business concerns have made undue profits. That, I take it, is the very purpose of this commission. I believe that monopoly prevails to such an extent that a few big businesses are making enormous profits, and that is partly at the expense of the small-business man; although I do believe that monopoly profits are at the expense of the American people generally.

We have not been very effective in legislating against monopoly. A great Democrat once said, "Private monopoly is intolerable and indefensible." That attitude might be said to be the Democratic Party attitude, but a study of Republican platforms will reveal that that party has also repeatedly declared opposition to private monopoly. Irrespective of parties, the great mass of American citizens hate private monopoly. However, all of my lifetime, in spite of antimonopoly laws, the American people have been victimized by private monopoly. I sincerely hope that the investigation which this bill continues will open the way for some sort of remedy.

Let me make it clear that I am not opposed to reasonable business profits. My personal theory favors the free play of private enterprise and individual initiative in American economic life. It is a question of degree with regard to profits. Judging by experience, monopoly profits invariably become exorbitant profits, and powerful monopolies finally control the Government, making necessary a choice by the people between private control and public control of our industrial society. I believe and hope it is possible to continue our so-called capitalistic system and free enterprise with only enough of governmental regulation to safeguard the public interest. To do that we must guard against two extremes, namely too much power by private monopoly or too much power by governmental bureaucracy. I agree with Thomas Jefferson, in part, when he said "That government is best which governs least," only I would have said "That government is best which governs the least that is necessary."

What businessmen are so disturbed by the investigation which this bill makes possible? Perhaps a part, if not all, of the fear is caused by a guilty conscience. Unless our commission is made up of tyrants using their power because of the lust for power—which is certainly not true of those I know on the committee—no public-spirited, socially minded businessman has any reason to be disturbed by this act of government. If there be antisocial businessmen who only stay sufficiently within the law to avoid going to jail, and who carry on legalized plunder of the American people, I maintain that such businessmen ought to have the fear of government, the "fear of the Lord," or the fear of the wrath of the American people thrown into them.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WILLIAMS].

Mr. WILLIAMS of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, after what has already been stated by the distinguished chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary and a member of the Economic Committee, and my colleague, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. REECE], who is also a member of the Economic Committee, it is not necessary, in my opinion, to discuss the matter further.

As has been stated here, if it were an original proposition there might be some question about the amendment that has been proposed by the gentleman from Michigan, but we have already passed the act setting up the committee and authorizing the investigation. That resolution contains a positive provision of law requiring certain departments of the Government, naming them, to appear before the committee or its designee and present evidence by examination of witnesses, and so forth; and the law provides further that the evidence presented by each of these agencies shall cover the subject matter of this inquiry which is within its administrative jurisdiction under existing law or which may be assigned to such agencies by the committee. The fact is and the fact remains that the committee has assigned the work of the investigation to the executive departments of the Government. This being true it seems to me there should be no objection to the executive department allocating the money to carry on this work, and the appropriation simply provides that this be done. That is all there is in it. The act provides that they shall do certain things. In addition to that, this committee has already set up the machinery, and as provided under the original act itself, has directed the various executive departments to make the investigation and to make reports to the committee. They are the ones that are doing the work.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Missouri. I yield.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Can the committee tell the House why this committee could not use this money for the same purposes, directed through the same channels and in the same direction it is being used now, if it sees fit to? I fail to understand why or how there should be any disrupting of the committee or its work if it used the money for the same purposes and in the same direction it is being used now. Why could it not be done under the proposed amendment?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Missouri. That is what I am trying to tell the committee. Because the original act set out certain duties that were to be performed by the executive departments of the Government. I see no reason why that plan should be changed. The committee has been set up, has been organized, and the work is going on in accordance with that plan. To my mind this is the only way in which it can efficiently, economically, and properly function. I think the gentleman himself must realize that the Members of Congress on that committee have not the time while Congress is in session to make these investigations themselves, that this work must be delegated to somebody; and the act itself as well as the committee has delegated it to the executive departments of the Government, naming them: Four departments of the Government and two commissions. They are carrying on that work, and I can see no objection in view of that arrangement of having the money provided by which the executive departments are paid through the Executive.

Mr. REES of Kansas. One more question if the gentleman will permit.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Missouri. Certainly.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Then the mistake was made in the first instance in the passage of that act?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Missouri. I am not going to say that in view of the act itself. If the gentleman wants to contend that a mistake was made by providing that the executive branch of the Government should cooperate with the Congress I cannot, of course, agree with that; I do not agree with that at all.

Mr. REES of Kansas. That is not the question. The question is the putting of money into the hands of the Executive to spend; that is the question.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Missouri. I do not concede that any mistake was made in the first place in the act we passed, and in view of the way in which the Economic Committee has functioned. I do not concede that.

Mr. GUYER of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. THORKELSON].

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Chairman, I believe it is about time to discard our "good neighbor" policy for one of aggressiveness so that we may regain our self-respect and the respect of our neighbors.

The Treaty of Versailles should be the most convincing evidence of failure of English, French, and American statesmanship, for, in spite of it, and whether we like it or not, it is clearly evident that central European powers are about to determine their own boundaries, as they have always done in the past. I am sure that many realize this now, and no doubt it will soon be recognized by the State Department. The Secretary of State, the Executive, and others should, therefore, stop sending notes of protest and criticism to other nations, for it is not only useless but it may also be offensive and a cause for war.

It is clearly evident that the President and the Secretary of State are not trying to maintain peace, but are instead intent upon joining forces with Great Britain in its opposition to Germany. Their hatred for Hitler is so great that it will require the utmost effort of Congress to maintain peace. What is behind this vindictive attitude? No protest was made to Russia when hundreds were facing the firing squad. No protest was made to Japan in the murder of innocent and defenseless Chinese, including people in our own missions. Little protest was made when they sank the Panay and killed American citizens. No protest was made to Mexico when American property was confiscated. No protest was made to Italy when Ethiopia was invaded.

Little has been said in our newspaper about the recent invasion of Albania, and the State Department has conveniently forgotten to send a strong protest to Mussolini. So why all this hatred toward Hitler? The answer is very simple. The money changers have been driven out of Germany, and it is a cause for war to the money changers in America and England. It is the same gang that forced us into the World War, and they are now willing to sacrifice more American lives to save their gold and their contemptible principles. They are willing to leave our west coast open to attack from Japan in order to revenge the purge in Germany. It is time for Congress to take charge and guide the destiny of our Nation for the common defense and the general welfare of our people. Congress should insist that the Executive, the Secretary of State, and others refrain from shaking their fists at nations on the other side of the Atlantic. We have not been deprived of property. We have not been insulted. As a matter of fact, our people have been treated courteously by all European nations except Russia.

Let us use common sense. We are merchants, and depend upon the sale of merchandise for our livelihood, so why place punitive restrictions or embargoes upon exports to some particular nation as an indication of our displeasure? Let us sell to anyone that can pay cash on delivery and carry it from our ports in their own ships. The best way to stay out of war is to keep our own ships and our people out of war zones and our Government in Washington.

I believe our mania for introducing neutrality, peace, and take-the-profit-out-of-war legislation is not only useless but affords no assurance of peace, and may on the contrary bring about war.

I am opposed to all wars, and particularly to those wars in which we pull someone else's chestnuts out of the fire. I realize that transportation of troops today may be very costly as compared to 21 years ago. Modern warfare from the air and from submarines will no doubt send many transports and their cargoes to unmarked watery graves. We must not, therefore, get excited or be influenced by misleading propaganda. It is better to turn to the editorial page and read the owner's and publisher's names. After having done so, you may be in a better position to determine the value of the news.

Let us not be deceived. The international bankers forced the United States into the World War by misleading and pernicious propaganda published in newspapers controlled by their money, and repetition of 1914 will be attempted today if general war breaks out in Europe. This propaganda has already begun. I quote from a column in a Washington paper:

> When the Lusitania was torpedoed Mr. Baker (Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War during the Wilson administration) said, "The shock of this disaster * * * literally overwhelmed America and public opinion never recovered from it."
> And Mr. Baker concluded with a warning for the future—future at the time Mr. Baker wrote, but now the present: "The lessons of history indicate that in any future situation it will be similarly difficult to induce our people to keep from seeking such relief when they begin to suffer too cruelly as the result of wars in which they have no part."

Let us look back 20 years. If we had kept out of the war zone, and if our people had remained at home, nothing could have happened to arouse public sentiment for war, because none of our people's lives would have been jeopardized. It is a certainty that if we persist in walking into the line of fire, some of us may get killed, and that is literally what happened to passengers who insisted on crossing the Atlantic in ships owned by nations at war.

There is one point we must remember. The requirement for molding public opinion so that it will be receptive to war is preparation of the right kind of propaganda. This was started in 1914, by the international money barons, and disseminated in news mediums owned and controlled by themselves. So the statement of Mr. Baker is not based wholly upon facts, because the sinking of the Lusitania was not the cause for our declaring war—it was instead the successful ending of a well-prepared campaign, which definitely lined us up with the Entente when we declared war on Germany.

We, like many other nations, have reached a period when we must decide for ourselves the course to take and the position to occupy in the international family of nations. We have much at stake at home and should, therefore, not be concerned with Europe and its changing boundaries. We should instead look forward to a day when we may be compelled for our own safety to consolidate North America, including all islands, from the Panama Canal north, for the greater protection of the United States and of the Panama Canal.

Our most dangerous enemies are those who advocate socialism and communism, and it would be much more sensible on our part if we closed our borders to them. These people and their philosophy will in time destroy us as they have destroyed nations in Europe. The time is coming when all of us must be 100 percent American instead of half this and half that. Our enemies are here, and evidence of their presence may be found in stagnant industry, closed business, and unemployment. The power of this enemy is evident in federally owned corporations which are now destroying private industries. It is further evident in privileged ownership and control of the Nation's gold, and our worthless domestic managed currency system.

Further evidence that we tolerate communism may be found in our attitude toward Mexico, which deliberately, without fear or consideration, confiscated American property. We do not find fascism or nazi-ism in Mexico, but we do find communism there, and the home of Leon Trotsky. Can it be possible that this is the reason for our "good neighbor" attitude toward Mexico, for which we sacrificed national prestige in failure to protect our own and a friendly nation's investments?

It is certainly high time for Congress to set the Federal Government right, and for its Members to act as statesmen instead of "rubber stamps." The State Department should be corrected in respect to its foreign policy, and be required to cancel trade pacts and restore our home markets to domestic producers, and that includes our farmers, both North and South. Other Federal departments should be required to cooperate with business so as to allow industry to resume operation in a normal manner. Congress should appoint a board of its own Members to aid in this work, because it is quite evident that the bureaucrats have failed and can no longer be trusted. Our present chaotic condition should be sufficient evidence of failure, even to the most ardent supporter of the administration's vacillating policies.

Congress cannot escape responsibility. This should be clearly evident to my colleagues if they will recall the philosophy of those who appear before our committees. I have often heard witnesses say: "We leave this to you Members of Congress. You enact the legislation and you must appropriate the money if you want us to do this work. We cannot do it without authority from Congress. It is your responsibility, not ours." As a matter of fact, they infer, "It is your baby."

In view of this opinion, is it not much more sensible for us to resume our rightful position in the Government and direct the destiny of our Nation, instead of hiring stooges to act for us? As it is now, Congress has shifted responsibility of the Government upon the Executive and his appointees. These gentlemen inform us that they are not responsible, but Congress is. A deplorable state, indeed, for Congress, by unconstitutional legislation, has shifted a great part of its power to the executive and Government departments, but commonly these congressional appointees do not have the constitutional authority, and neither are they willing to assume responsibility for the power foisted upon them. It all ends in a muddle—no one responsible, not even Congress itself. The ship of state, therefore, will be sailing about aimlessly until Congress is willing to accept its duty or is forced by the people to take command.

I dislike the role of a critic, yet even at the expense of appearing as one, I am constrained to call my colleagues' attention to past and present propaganda, which is for no other purpose than to prepare the United States for participation in the next European conflict. The President and others within the administration do not only favor, but seem to welcome such participation on our part. I refer first to an editorial in the Washington Post, April 11, which everyone should read, and I then quote from the same paper of April 12:

"I'll be back in the fall, if we don't have a war."

These words, spoken by President Roosevelt to the group assembled at Warm Springs to see him off for Washington, were seemingly wholly unpremeditated.* * * And no President was ever more skillful than Mr. Roosevelt in making the most of every opportunity to give a positive direction to public thinking on important issues. * * *

In using the collective "we" the President told Hitler and Mussolini, far more impressively than he told Warm Springs, that the tremendous force of the United States must be a factor in their current thinking. He told the axis powers that the administration is far from indifferent to their plottings. He made it plain that a war forced by them would from the outset involve the destinies of a Nation which, as they fully realize, is potentially far stronger than Germany and Italy united * * *.

April 12: President Roosevelt stamped with his hearty approval yesterday a newspaper editorial calling for a "preponderant show of force" by democratic nations to halt the dictators and prevent war. * * *

The President ordered the editorial inserted in the minutes of his press conference, saying it was very good, very clear, and very honest. He said it had not been inspired by him but that he had almost fallen out of bed when he read it yesterday morning.

I can readily understand the source from which the editorial in the Post originated, and the motive for such propaganda, but there is not one sound reason why we should display a "preponderant show of force." It is absurd to threaten, and the adage, "Don't pull your gun unless you're going to shoot," is always true. Further, a nation with a national debt of over $40,000,000,000 is not in a position to engage in war and carry it to a successful conclusion.

In public intercourse I have found only certain minorities interested in Europe and bent upon revenge. In Congress there is little or no sentiment for war, with the possible exception of a few who intermittently shake the swastika to distract attention. As a matter of fact, the President and a few of his sympathizers are the only gentlemen I have found to be suffering from a war complex. We have nothing of interest in Europe over which we should feel concerned. On the contrary, we have much at home to give us concern; so let us attend to our own business. If the President, if the Washington Post, or any other war-minded newspaper has something at stake in Europe, let them explain this to us and stop beating the war drums. Congress alone has the power to declare war. Our Nation should not be stampeded into war, as it was 22 years ago, to save the international Shylocks, for we still remember the loss of life and property.

It is well for Congress to bear in mind that there is a group of people who are very much interested in congressional activities. They are very much interested in war and peace, and they have good reason for it because they pay the bill. This group has been derided by the present administration. It has been neglected by Congress. War has been waged upon it by the Federal Government and its departments. Every day I hear someone accuse business of being dishonest, crooked—accused of everything under the sun. It is now time for this to stop, because it is just plain damn foolishness. It is time that the President, that Congress, that the Supreme Court, and all other Federal departments be reminded that they have always been nourished by and are now depending upon industries for their maintenance.

It is well for the Government to bear in mind that when industries are destroyed the Government is also destroyed. To accuse our business people of being dishonest, crooked, and not square with the Government is ludicrous. No one dares to deny that these people, who include about nine-tenths of our population, certainly have a right to keep a part of their earnings. There is not one reason in the world why the Federal Government should act like pirates and take the last cent away from them. But that is what the Federal Government is doing. It is high time that business quits or the Federal Government quits. It must be one or the other. It is up to the people themselves to decide if they want to continue a republican form of government, with free operation of industries, or whether they want to change and adopt a dictator, a communistic government, and federally owned and operated business. We cannot have both, so it must be either private ownership of business under our own Government, or it will be Federal ownership of business under centralized government. That is obvious.

I want to give business a break so that our idle people may become employed in private industries. For the past 7 years there has been no encouragement to business, and this in itself should be sufficient evidence to Congress that we are a Nation without a responsible leader, and it is also my reason for suggesting that Congress resume its rightful position and take charge of the Nation's destiny.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate Joint Resolution 90

Resolved, etc., That subsection (a) of section 6 of the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution to create a Temporary National Economic Committee," approved June 16, 1938, is amended by striking out "$500,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$1,100,000."

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MICHENER: Page 1, strike out all of section 1 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"That section 6 of the joint resolution entitled 'joint resolution to create a Temporary National Economic Committee,' approved June 16, 1938, is amended by adding a new subsection to read as follows:

"'(c) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the additional sum of $600,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to carry out the provisions of this resolution. That said sum shall be immediately available for expenditure by the committee in carrying out its functions.'"

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, this amendment has been pretty thoroughly discussed during general debate; however, there is a misapprehension on the part of some of those who have discussed it, notably the gentleman who just preceded me, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. WILLIAMS]. He is evidently confused as to what the Executive has to do with this matter. He is evidently confusing some language in the resolution originally passed, which is law today, but which has no bearing whatever upon the expenditure of money.

The expenditure of money is allocated in a specific section of the original resolution. In other words, $500,000 was appropriated to be spent by a joint congressional committee. The sum of $400,000 of that amount is reserved to the President and $100,000 of that was to be spent by the committee. The specific purpose of that language was to prevent this committee from doing anything the President of the United States did not want done in this investigation.

It has been argued by my good friend from Tennessee [Mr. REECE] that the committee is set up and that my amendment will disorganize things. Mr. Chairman, this amendment cannot disorganize anything. I am quite sure the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS] will not insist the amendment which I have offered will in any way disorganize the work of the committee, unless the President wants something done that this committee does not want to do, or vice versa. In that case, and in that case only, can this amendment disorganize. In short, the committee will control rather than to delegate the control of the committee to the President.

If this resolution passes they will continue to work, and this $600,000 is only presumed to pay them for the rest of this Congress. If the amendment which I have offered is agreed to, the only change it will make is that the committee will control the spending of the money rather than the President. I ask anyone who debates this amendment in reply to what I say to challenge that statement, if it is not true. No, Mr. Chairman; the truth is the continuance of the innovation in policy is a matter of expediency. An obedient Congress yielded a year ago. We are asked to reaffirm this surrender of power.

Mr. HOOK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHENER. If the gentleman has some information that will add to the controversy, we shall be very glad to have it.

Mr. HOOK. If the gentleman is convinced that his proposition is right, now, why did he not advance it at the time of the passage of the original act?

Mr. MICHENER. If the gentleman had been on the floor of the Congress, if he had known anything about it, if he had read the speeches or heard the debate, he would know that the matter was thoroughly discussed at that time. I took the same position then as I take now. Had he read the report on this resolution, both minority and majority, he would not ask such a question. Is there anything else the gentleman would like to ask?

Mr. HOOK. That has been decided by this Congress.

Mr. MICHENER. The gentleman from Michigan has a habit of coming in here and talking about things he knows very little about. If he will advise himself before he comes on to the floor, he will not take the time of the House discussing irrelevant matters.

Mr. HOOK. For the information of the gentleman, may I say I do not need any advice from the gentleman from Michigan, because I could not get anything from that source, anyway.

Mr. MICHENER. I am sure I could not give any advice to the gentleman from northern Michigan.

Mr. HOOK. That is mutual.

Mr. MICHENER. Because it is very difficult for anyone to understand his viewpoint. But let us get back to the matter under discussion.

This amendment accomplishes exactly what the resolution as reported by the committee accomplishes, plus the last sentence in the amendment, which would make the $600,000 available to be spent under the direction of the investigating committee rather than under the dictation of the President.

If the House should desire to lodge in the President the right to determine how this money is to be spent by this committee, then if the last sentence in the above amendment is stricken out that purpose will be accomplished and violence will not be done to good draftsmanship in the preparation of legislation. I think that this is the first time that the Committee on the Judiciary has ever reported out legislation drafted in the form that Senate Joint Resolution 90 is drafted. The only excuse the committee gives is that the Senate used this form. No member of the Judiciary Committee of the House has approved this form as a matter of draftsmanship.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER].

Mr. Chairman, I very much hope the amendment offered by the gentleman will not be agreed to. May I make an observation which ought to be persuasive. There are present in this chamber now the three Representatives of the House of Representatives on this committee, Mr. WILLIAMS, of Missouri, Mr. REES of Kansas, and myself, and upon our responsibility as your agents and as members of this committee, we ask you not to agree to the amendment offered by the distinguished gentleman from Michigan. We have been assigned a job which we think is a pretty important job and we are acting as your agents, we do not want the proposed amendment.

Under the present arrangement we are getting along all right with the executive agents of the Government. We feel that to pass the Michener amendment would disturb the organization and interfere with the harmony and efficiency and the work of that committee. We put the responsibility on you, if you pass the amendment.

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to my distinguished friend.

Mr. REECE of Tennessee. Since the work of the committee is done under and by the direction of the committee, the money which is expended must of necessity be spent in carrying out the program the committee itself has adopted, and therefore, in the last analysis, the committee has full control of the subject.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. We are getting along pretty well on the job you asked us to do. That is the point I make. I do not think we ought to do, on either side of the House, anything in this serious matter that would look like playing politics.

Mr. HOLMES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. HOLMES. How much of this increased appropriation will be used to carry on the probe this monopoly committee is going to make of the oil business?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I may say to the gentleman that I believe it is the next thing on the agenda, but I cannot answer his question.

Mr. HOLMES. I understand from the chairman of the committee, according to the Associated Press, that you have a new procedure by which you are going to investigate this particular monopoly, and if the procedure proves successful, it will be extended to investigations of other industries.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I may say to the gentleman briefly that it is contemplated, I believe, that we will bring into the picture earlier in the proceedings statements from those who are being investigated. I mean, we put into the record along with the testimony being developed by the executive agencies the testimony which persons who are being investigated want to submit. That is contemplated, I understand.

I tell you now, in all seriousness, we must not play politics with this thing.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. MICHENER. Does the gentleman indicate that I am playing politics?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. No; I do not indicate that. I would not be so sure about it, but I will not indicate it. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOLMES. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes.

Mr. HOLMES. I hope the gentleman will not have the thought that I am trying to play politics.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. No; none of you; no, you are not playing politics.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Montana.

Mr. THORKELSON. Is this committee to investigate monopolies in industry, private business?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. To find out all about the situation, if possible.

Mr. THORKELSON. Are you also going to investigate government monopolies in this country?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Well, I do not know; but I do not believe it is contemplated.

Mr. THORKELSON. I think it is a serious question.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I am going to vote for this resolution appropriating $600,000 more for the antimonopoly investigation, but I am going to do it with a reservation of a doubt as to what the investigation will accomplish or what will be accomplished by the legislation, if any, that grows out of it.

I have been watching the development with which this antimonopoly committee is dealing for, say, 50 years, maybe a little better than 50 years. If any antimonopoly law was ever worth the paper it was written on, I am not able to call to mind just now what it was. The fact of the matter is that under these antimonopoly laws monopoly has flourished like a green bay tree. When the first antimonopoly law, the Sherman antitrust law, was passed 50 years ago, monopoly was an infant in its swaddling clothes. Now it doth bestride this narrow world like Colossus, and little business peeps about under its huge legs to find itself a dishonorable grave.

When the Sherman antitrust law was passed, 50 years ago, the $100,000,000 corporation, measured against its background, was a skyscraper. It loomed up over the commercial and industrial field of the country like the Empire State Building. Now we have the $5,000,000,000 corporation, under 50 years of antitrust laws and of antitrust-law enforcement. Now we have about 200 interlocking supercorporations in this country that own and control the wealth of the country.

I had the privilege of sitting in the old Supreme Court room nearly 30 years ago when the Supreme Court dissolved the Tobacco Trust and dissolved the Oil Trust, and I believe it dissolved the Steel Trust—dissolved them into bigger and better trusts than we had before. Since these laws were first passed we have developed business systems in this country that are absolutely destroying independent business. We did not have the chain-store system 50 years ago, we did not have the manufacturer-distributing system 50 years ago, and we did not have a lot of things 50 years ago that we have now. When I look back over that 50 years, I cannot help feeling right down in the bottom of my heart that no great people on earth ever lost so much ground in the same space of time.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. I do not have time to yield.

One chain-store system in this country operating 18,000 stores means that 18,000 independent businessmen have been swept into the gutter. The great manufacturing systems are destroying all their own retailers over this country through having their own distributing system. All this has grown up under antimonopoly laws. What would you do about it?

I sat as chairman of a subcommittee holding hearings on a bill to prevent unfair competition by manufacturers against their retailers. The evidence did not show merely unfair competition: it showed that the manufacturers were absolutely destroying their retailers in the United States. The committee turned the bill down, saying, "This bill will disturb business. This is not an opportune time to pass this kind of legislation." It makes a man wonder where you would get if you brought in any legislation here to deal with an economic system that is practically all monopolized, as it unquestionably is in this country.

A gentleman over on the other side of the aisle said this committee would probably want to have its life extended in 1941; that after 2 more years it would want another extension; and this brings up another flaw in our system of dealing with these situations. There would be nothing unusual in that. It takes a couple of years to make one of these big investigations; then it takes 2 or 3 years more to pass the legislation; then the courts must have 2 or 3 years; and by the time the law gets in operation the technique of the system has changed and moved out from under the law. The patient is dead by the time the doctors agree.

The gentleman from Texas says that we are at the crossroads regarding this matter of monopoly. It seems to me we have been at the crossroads ever since I can remember. On the basis of past performance, we will still be at the crossroads when the dust of years has accumulated on the results of this investigation.

During the hearing I referred to, on the bill to prohibit unfair manufacturer-dealer competition, a witness before the committee against the legislation was arguing the saving to consumers effected by the manufacturer-owned distributing system as against retailer handling. I interrupted him to say that I was not solely concerned with the matter of saving dimes or even dollars to consumers; that what concerned me most was the final results in citizenship and in social conditions in this country of these systems; what might happen in a great national economic crisis when the people in all these towns and cities wake up some day and say, "We don't own anything in this town."

The witness proceeded with his prepared statement, but the witness succeeding him referred to my statement and said that in his opinion I had raised the real issue in these national chain and manufacturer systems. Of course, he went on to show that the pending bill would not work.

Every main street in the country is becoming a mere link in a national chain hooked up to a handful of skyscrapers in a few big cities. The main streets in every town now look alike. The same familiar names on the signs. An independent manufacturer in my home city, employing several hundred men, said that the big fellows in his line have been trying to buy him out or break him for years.

We have the big three in the meat-packing industry; we have the big three in the automobile industry; we have the big four in the tire industry. Is there a monopoly in steel? If not, how does it come that 59 different steel companies made an identical bid, down to a cent, to the Navy? Identical grades of oil are the same price at every filling station in the United States, and there is never any war. I have paid exactly the same price for the same grade of oil, wherever I bought it, for 25 years. There is no competition anywhere except for business. There is no competition in prices.

At bottom, I am an individualist. I believe in individual initiative and independent business. But where is independent business? There is no independent business in the United States. Even the so-called independents are at the mercy of the manufacturer, the chains, the great mail-order systems, and banks. They exist on sufferance.

Hearings before the Interstate Commerce Committee showed that the automobile dealers in the United States, the tire dealers, and the oil and gas dealers, are regimented; that they have no control over their business whatever. They simply operate under revocable licenses and are ruined by the thousands annually. The great wholesale field in all lines of merchandise has been wiped out. The community builder in all towns and cities of the United States has passed out of the picture. He has been succeeded by the hired man of the great national commercial and industrial systems. As these systems have originated and grown, Government, National and State, has attempted to regulate and control them. I have gone along with this. There is no individualism left and I have governed myself accordingly.

Governor Landon, in the first speech he made some months after the campaign of 1936, made a statement which has been in my mind a good deal. He said, in substance, that if we are confronted with a choice between private control of the economic life of the country and public control, we would, of course, take public control, but that neither system makes for democracy. I can agree with that statement in toto, without it solving my problem. He could have left the "if" off. We are confronted with a choice, and so I find myself voting for public control and leaving it to the man who comes after me to decide whether it makes for democracy, and what to do about it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER].

The question was taken; and the Chair being in doubt, the Committee divided, and there were—ayes 53, noes 82.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I want to comment briefly on this large expenditure of money, which will not last very long because of the large number of employees to be paid. We will have to keep appropriating for this same purpose.

I was greatly interested in the reassuring statement of the committee made at the beginning. I want to compliment the chairman of the committee, because the public was informed that it would not be a committee that would seek startling publicity, but would be a really serious committee that would not create any further fear or panic in business. I presume the President felt that the country was really breaking away from its moorings, and desired to find some new law to hold it to its former stable position.

The little boy asked his father, "Father, if the earth is round, how is it that people do not fall off it?" "Oh," he said, "that is because of the law of gravitation." "Well, daddy," he said, "how did they stick on the earth before they passed that law?" [Laughter.]

I suppose you feel now that you must have some such law as that because we are, indeed, falling off. You have put on this committee a lot of new dealers who have been the cause of the falling off. It has not only a majority of the congressional Members, but you have added many from the present departments of this Government, still imbued with the doctrines of the Tugwellian era. Of course, these enthusiasts were first called to present their views to this commission. I remember reading of the first witness who came before you with such an array of astounding figures.

I recall that he told this monopoly committee that if you made $500,000 this year and you only made $100,000 the next year you actually had a loss of $400,000. The man who promulgated that amazing doctrine is to be the next new member of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Such views are certainly of doubtful reassurance. However, what bothers me is that it is desired to investigate monopoly, and certain conditions are imposed, but these words are added, "without limitation." Evidently this committee can take up anything the President may suggest, and he can take it off the scent at any time, since these department members will have control. If the findings seem to be going against the administration measures, you know what he will do. This Commission will probably be forced to follow only the trails outlined by new dealers.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. I would like to ask the gentleman if he does not consider the bureaucratic trust we have in Washington as the biggest and most vulgar monopoly in the country?

Mr. GIFFORD. It is the greatest monopoly of control ever seen in this Nation. They will bring in recommendations for more laws which will require more bureaus to harass business. It is perfectly evident that this is a further endeavor of Government to change natural economic laws. I repeat what I have often said before—economic laws are greater than any laws of government or of men. This administration has been trying to change these economic laws now for the last 6 years with most unfortunate results. The committee up to date has conducted itself in a careful, considerate manner for these days. They assured us that they were not seeking culprits and would not do something that would disturb confidence. But it is all too plain that if the trail does lead in the wrong direction the committee's work will be diverted to new fields of investigation.

The pro forma amendment was withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 2. Subsection (b) of such section is amended by striking out "$100,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$220,000"; and by striking out "$400,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$880,000."

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule the Committee will rise.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. LEAVY, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee had had under consideration Senate Joint Resolution 90, and, pursuant to House Resolution 139, he reported the joint resolution back to the House.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule the previous question is ordered. The question is on the third reading of the Senate joint resolution.

The Senate joint resolution was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. IZAC. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a speech delivered by Carl Gardner, national commander of the Regular Veterans' Association, on Army Day.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KELLY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include therein an article from the New York Tribune referring to a bill that I have introduced.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

NEUTRALITY

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for half a minute and to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HAWKS. Mr. Speaker, in view of the tremendous interest manifested in the subject of neutrality, I desire to incorporate in these remarks a statement made by my colleague the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. KEEFE] this morning to the House Committee on Foreign Affairs on the subject of neutrality.

The question of neutrality occupies a dominant place in the present concerns of the men and women of America, and I think it is safe to say that the position which this present Congress will adopt on this important question, and the answer which we give concerning it to the people of America, will be of tremendous importance to the future welfare of our country and our people.

Because of the extreme concern manifested by large numbers of my constituents on this question I am thankful that the committee has permitted me to present some reflections on this subject, which I know represent the thought and purpose of a great majority of the people of America.

The whole question of neutrality and its maintenance in time of international stress is one involved with sharp conflict of opinion, and yet, in its fundamentals, the neutrality policy of this Nation was definitely and thoroughly established when under our Constitution we became a sovereign nation.

Without the necessity of legislative declaration of that policy I find it best defined in the Farewell Address of Washington, which address, I believe, should be read and reread by citizens throughout the length and breadth of this land.

The advice given to the people of America in that address is as important and as true today as it was at the time of its utterance, and clearly enunciates, in my humble judgment, the foundation upon which any neutrality act must be grounded. It will be recalled that Washington advised:

Justice toward all nations—avoidance of inveterate antipathies against particular nations, and passionate attachments for other nations.

He further advised against the insidious wiles of foreign influence and clearly pointed out the "ingratitude of nations." He definitely indicated to the American people the utter lack of common interest with the affairs of European nations and directed attention to their "primary interests, which to us have none, or a very remote relation." He asked then the very question which is so pertinent now:

Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation; why quit our own to stand on foreign ground; why by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor, or caprice?

His advice, then, to avoid entangling alliances is doubly true today in the face of present European and Asiatic disturbances. He knew, as all of us know, with our larger measure of experience, the results of war, and he charted a course for this Nation to follow intended, if adhered to, to keep us out of war and to stimulate and promote the art and objects of peace.

I am convinced that the people of America, whom we represent, almost unanimously hate and despise war, and when the decision of the people of America can be made as a result of calm and dispassionate judgment the decision would unquestionably be against any acts that might even remotely involve us in a war.

I am convinced that the people of this Nation will vigorously resist any attempt or effort to so define our position as to open the way to lead us into a European or Asiatic war.

The people of this Nation look to this Congress to take all steps necessary to prevent our involvement in either a European or Asiatic war.

Almost my entire mail is confined to the demands of fathers and mothers and anxious citizens everywhere demanding that in our answer to this troublesome question of neutrality, if we are to write a neutrality law at all, that it be one that will plug every loophole against our involvement in European or Asiatic affairs.

The definite answer to this plea, however, is not free from difficulty as I see it, and consideration of the question has given rise to a multiplicity of conflicting ideas.

I desire to express and interpret what I conceive to be the almost unanimous will of the people whom I represent, as follows:

First. I am definitely opposed to extending to the President of the United States, whoever he may be, the right to publicly proclaim and announce the aggressor in any European or Asiatic conflict. This is a power so fraught with possible involvement in foreign entanglements that I, as one Member of Congress, refuse to delegate that authority into the hands of any one man.

Second. Under the present Neutrality Act the President is vested with the power delegated to him by Congress to declare by public proclamation the existence of a state of war between nations, or a state of civil war within a nation, and upon the issuance of this proclamation it is his solemn duty to prescribe and lay down an embargo, within the limitations of the act. I even seriously question the wisdom or propriety of a continuation of this delegated authority, because it is apparent, in view of the situation that has existed since the enactment of this legislation that while the President declared the existence of a state of civil war in Spain, he has not, so far as I am advised, up to the present time recognized that a state of war exists between Japan and China, although we are all well aware of the fact, and we are continuing to stimulate our foreign trade by the continued shipment of arms and munitions to those two belligerents.

I believe it should be mandatory on the part of the delegated authority, whoever it might be, to declare the existence of a state of war when such state actually exists as a matter of common knowledge and that our attitude in the matter of relations to such belligerents should be the same in all cases and should represent a definite and sustained national policy of equal application to all nations.

The question as to whether or not, in the event of the existence of a state of civil war within a nation, or a state of war between nations, an embargo should be mandatory is one of the highly controversial questions involved in this whole subject.

There are those who declare that we must maintain our commerce regardless of international warfare or civil war within a nation and that our position should be that any nation can buy from us provided it is done on a cash-and-carry basis. Such a provision in the present act will expire on May 1 and the proponents of such a contention insist that the cash-and-carry provisions of the present act be continued and extended. There are others who feel that in view of the fact that economic and trade relations growing out of our shipment of arms, munitions or supplies, or goods of any character to one belligerent nation when another may be precluded from availing itself of the same privilege constitutes an involvement in the situation with international hatreds aroused that would ultimately lead us to war, and the proponents of this theory contend that in the event of a declaration of war such as I have heretofore indicated the President should be required to lay down an embargo prohibiting any shipments of any kind or character to any of the nations so involved.

While it is indeed patriotic to insist upon the protection of our merchant ships upon the high seas, and their convoy, if necessary, by the Navy into ports of belligerent nations, yet I am convinced that if by chance one of those ships were sunk, causing loss of life to American seamen, that the same passions which propagandists are constantly seeking to arouse would be aroused, and the incident might be the means of involving us again in war.

I have, therefore, concluded that if the premise is correct, as most people seem to conclude—namely, that the domestic and internal affairs of foreign governments are no concern of ours, and that therefore we should not extend our interests so far as to become involved in their domestic disputes or international disputes—then the only way we can maintain a strictly neutral position in event of the finding of the existence of a state of war is to enforce an immediate and strict embargo against travel by American citizens within the zones involved and prevent the shipment of arms and munitions to either belligerent, and permit the shipment of generally accepted nonmilitary supplies on a strictly cash-and-carry basis in ships other than those carrying American seamen and flying the American flag.

Such a position would be one of strict neutrality, and while in its operation the effect might favor the nation in control of the sea, yet that should be no concern of ours; because I do not conceive it to be our duty to take sides, and it is the taking of sides, due to the whipped-up passions of people, inspired by foreign propaganda, that ultimately involves us in foreign war.

Such a policy of neutrality should carry with it a distinct and ominous assurance to all foreign nations that we are not taking sides but that we propose to defend the Monroe Doctrine and our territorial integrity with the whole force of our tremendous resources.

It ought to be perfectly clear from our experience in the last World War what Washington had in mind when he referred to the "ingratitude of nations," and in the record of history we can never be sure but that the friends of today may become the enemies of tomorrow, and in my humble judgment it would be an unwise and foolhardy policy to adopt to attempt to protect the extremely small percentage of our volume of trade that is involved in foreign relations if in such protection we would be compelled to expend through participation in war sums that could never be recouped in foreign trade, to say nothing of the lives of our citizens.

I desire to say in closing that I fully realize the tremendous difficulty that is involved in writing legislation to declare a policy based upon conditions as they exist today, which conditions a week from today may be entirely changed due to the apparent utter lack of regard on the part of certain nations for the sacredness of international treaties, and yet I am sure that the Congress of the United States has within it the capacity and the power to meet such changing conditions in the event the necessity arises.

WAR-PROFITS BILL

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House and to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, the Portland Oregonian is one of the great newspapers of the Northwest. In the past its policy has been more conservative than liberal. It never has been radical. It always has been American.

Therefore it is gratifying that such a sound, substantial organ of public opinion has endorsed editorially the principle of the new bill designed to take the profits out of war, and expressed the hope that the measure, "in considerably modified form," will be enacted by Congress.

As one of the sponsors of this bill in the House, I make no claim for the perfection of its details, but I insist that it is sound in principle. If the principle of any measure is sound, the details can be perfected in committee. That can and should be done without undue delay in the case of this bill, which is designed to promote peace, and, if war comes, place the greatest financial burden on those who profit most from the war, which will entail the supreme sacrifice for some and misery to most Americans.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this fine editorial from the Sunday Oregonian of April 2, 1939, be printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

PASS A WAR-PROFITS BILL

A bill to tax war profits virtually out of existence was introduced in the United States Senate a few days ago by Senator HOMER T. BONE, of Washington. It carries the names of 49 other Senators, and so has an excellent chance of at least getting through the upper House. However, similar bills were smothered in committee in 1935 and 1938, and powerful interests are lying in wait for this one.

This page hopes that it will go through, but in a considerably modified form. Every other plan which has been proposed in Congress for delaying or preventing war has within itself the factors for its own defeat. Thus the neutrality bill, already on the books, is more of a danger than an aid. It encourages foreign powers to kick us around; it ties the hands of the President; it puts us on the side of the strong, to the detriment of the weak. Nor is there any way it can be amended that will make it better. And the war-referendum measures advanced by some of the more desperate Members of Congress are even worse. They also would encourage foreign powers to boot us, and in case of an actual vote the Nation would be divided into bitter factionalism that would make the conduct of a war difficult if not disastrous.

A war-profits bill, on the other hand, should cool down the passions of millions of Americans who, as matters stand now, are in position to reap a rich harvest if the Nation does go to war.

We do not accuse these people of consciously nudging America toward war. We only say they would be more than human if they were able to keep their financial outlook from having any effect whatever upon their view of the international developments. It might make a tremendous difference in American mass opinion if warning were served in advance, through such a war-profits measure, that during the next conflict civilians would have to sacrifice along with the men in the trenches—not their lives, but what to many people is almost as important.

There is, of course, just one argument against such a bill—the argument that industry and the individual American would not work hard enough in wartime, under such restrictions, to provide the Armies and the Navy with the supplies necessary for victory. It is a threatened sit down. The most effective statement of this view ever made was that of Bernard M. Baruch, head of the late War Industries Board. Mr. Baruch, who favors sharply graduated wartime taxation, nevertheless warned the Senate Munitions Committee during hearings in 1935:

"In eliminating profits we must not eliminate munitions. We must not stop production. There is such a thing as taking the profits out of war at the cost of losing the war."

Thus the issue is drawn: The most effective legislation as yet proposed for the purpose of giving a pacific tone to American public opinion is this bill presented by Senator BONE and 49 of his fellow Senators. And the tax returns from such a measure would go a long way toward making our next war, if one does come, self-supporting. But there remains the question of whether the bill as it stands is so confiscatory as to destroy incentive. It probably is. That is something for the taxation committees of Congress and their advisers to work out. Offhand it would seem that some modification could be made without serious impairment of the bill's effect. In any case, the principle is right.

There is too wide a gap between the soldier, training himself for death at $30 a month, and the industry, which hints that it will not work unless it gets excessive profits.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CARLSON] be permitted to extend his remarks in the RECORD by printing a speech delivered by the President of Puerto Rico.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend the remarks I made today by including a letter from a constituent of mine and four short paragraphs from a Government bulletin.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD, and to include therein a letter from Oliver Mattison.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. McDOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD, and to include an editorial from the Pittsburgh Post Gazette.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

CONSTRUCTION OF CERTAIN PUBLIC WORKS

Mr. COX. By direction of the Committee on Rules, I call House Resolution 137, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That immediately upon adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of H. R. 2878, a bill to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with the construction of certain public works, and for other purposes. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Naval Affairs, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. TAYLOR], to be in turn yielded by him as he sees fit.

Mr. Speaker, this is a resolution which makes in order the consideration of the bill H. R. 2878. This is a bill brought in by the Committee on Naval Affairs which proposes to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with the construction of certain public-works projects, which are set out in the bill.

I do not think the House wishes to consume a great deal of time in the consideration of this rule. For the present I shall ask the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. TAYLOR] to use such time as he wishes.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I know of no opposition on this side of the Chamber to the rule or to the bill which it makes in order. I have had no requests for time. I have no desire myself to discuss the rule.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2878) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with the construction of certain public works, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 2878, with Mr. MCLAUGHLIN in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the first reading of the bill be dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 25 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. DREWRY].

Mr. DREWRY. Mr. Chairman, this bill provides for the public works of the Naval Establishment. There are 86 items in this bill, most of them comparatively small. Of a total of $38,524,000 for the construction of the 86 items mentioned, $16,609,000 goes to Hawaii, $1,970,000 goes to the Mare Island Navy Yard, $3,000,000 goes to Puget Sound Navy Yard at Bremerton. The other large items are one at Hawthorne, Nev., $1,260,000; one at the Naval Training Station at Norfolk, $1,365,000; one at the Coco Solo fleet air base, $1,736,000. The only other large items are Parris Island, which is a marine base, $3,018,500; and at Philadelphia for the storage of supplies, $1,300,000. Then at Hawaii another $1,710,000.

So that although there are 86 items and a total of $38,000,000, the majority of those items are small, and, of course, I do not suppose the committee has any desire that I make any detailed treatment of those items. I will try to classify them under certain heads.

The largest amount is taken up with meeting the drydocking requirements. The situation confronting the Navy with reference to drydocking facilities is very serious. The facilities we now have on the west coast and in Hawaii are not adequate to meet the needs of the existing fleet in time of peace, and certainly would not be able to meet them in time of war. The Navy Department has made a very exhaustive study of the drydocking situation, and this bill is brought in with reference to the authorization for appropriations that should be made in order to get drydocking facilities that will be able to take care of the Navy not only in time of peace but in time of war.

Then the fleet maintenance facilities: One of the great troubles we have at present with the Naval Establishment is that a great many people seem to think that all that is necessary is to have a fleet. They do not stop to consider that the fleet must have bases in order to maintain that fleet in a proper condition. So in our desire to build up our fleet we have neglected to build up the shore stations to take care of the needs of that fleet. The result has been that in the years since the World War those buildings of a semipermanent nature at that time, some of them even beyond that, have deteriorated, and they are totally unfit for the use of the Navy. It has been a very poor fiscal policy to let our shore stations deteriorate as they have, but that is what has happened. Now, we must meet that situation by improving those facilities so that the fleet itself will have proper facilities with which to conduct its operations.

Other sections of the bill are aeronautical experiments, and the necessary development and expansion of shore facilities required for the operation of fleet aircraft. The same thing applies to that proposition as applied to the maintenance of the shore stations.

Then ordnance depots. The ordnance depots are in such condition that they are a danger to life, due to the lack of attention that has been given to those ordnance storage activities.

The same thing applies to supply facilities. Three of the items for which authorization is requested in this bill for supply storage are at Pearl Harbor. I call your attention, as I did in the beginning, to the fact that the greater part of this bill, over one-half of it, is for the development of the naval facilities at Hawaii.

In addition to that, the hospital facilities at these places are totally inadequate to take care of the health of the personnel, and for proper care of the sick and injured.

Then there is another provision that has come in with reference to the radio-finder stations. Those stations are of great strategic importance and are usually in isolated sections. The result has been that the buildings have deteriorated and something has to be done to take care of those radio-finder stations.

The only other subhead, as I have the subjects divided, is with reference to training, education, welfare, and housing. The effort here is to authorize sufficient money to enable the naval personnel at these stations to be properly housed and taken care of.

These are the general provisions of the bill. I do not know that it is necessary for me to take any more of the Committee's time, or that there is need to go into each item, for every Member will have full opportunity to ask any questions he may care to when the bill is read for amendment.

I conclude by saying that these eight subheads which I have mentioned account for a total of $38,524,500, almost half of it being required for the upkeep of the establishment in Hawaii.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia yields back 15 minutes.

Mr. MAAS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, the items in this bill were carefully considered by the committee. They constitute part of the regular program, and each one is absolutely essential to the proper maintenance and expansion of the fleet. The committee held extensive hearings and the bill was reported unanimously.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia has used 1 minute.

There being no further requests for time, the Clerk will read the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized to proceed with the construction of the following public works projects at a cost not to exceed the amount stated after each item enumerated:

Navy Yard, Pearl Harbor, Hawaii: Graving drydock for large vessels, services, and accessories, $8,485,000; personnel buildings and accessories, $4,214,000; recreation facilities, including buildings and accessories, $125,000; pipe and copper shop building and accessories, $150,000; electric shop building and accessories, $465,000; galvanizing shop building and accessories, $85,000; graving drydock for small vessels, services, and accessories, $2,000,000; public works shop and storage building, $170,000; ordnance shop building and accessories, $165,000; storehouse building and accessories, $750,000.

Navy Yard, Mare Island, Calif.: Graving drydock, services, and accessories, $1,750,000; utility and transportation buildings and accessories, $100,000; laboratory building and accessories, $120,000.

Navy Yard, Portsmouth, N. H.: Submarine barracks and mess hall, $270,000.

Navy Yard, Puget Sound, Wash.: Graving drydock, services, and accessories, $3,000,000.

Naval Station, Guam: Officers' quarters and accessories, $75,000.

Naval Station, Tutuila, Samoa: Chief petty officers' quarters and accessories, $66,000; officers' quarters and accessories, $45,000; recreation building and accessories, $70,000.

Naval Station Guantanamo, Cuba: Enlisted men's quarters and accessories, $50,000.

Naval Torpedo Station, Newport, R. I.: Explosive-manufacturing building and accessories, $250,000.

Naval Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Va.: Magazine building and accessories, $35,000; dispensary building and accessories, $40,000; locomotive and crane shed and accessories, $20,000; garage building and accessories, $20,000; carpenter shop building and accessories, $25,000.

Naval Powder Factory, Indianhead, Md.: Barracks building and accessories, $125,000.

Naval Ammunition Depot, Hawthorne, Nev.: Additional magazine buildings and accessories, $1,260,000.

Naval Ammunition Depot, Oahu, Hawaii: Additional magazine buildings and accessories, $223,500.

Naval Ammunition Depot, St. Juliens Creek, Va.: Explosive-loading plant and accessories for TNT and black powder, $165,000.

Naval Ammunition Depot, Iona Island, N. Y.: Replacement of filling house No. 307 and accessories, $30,000.

Naval Ammunition Depot, Fort Mifflin, Pa.: Projectile loading plant building and accessories, $45,000.

Naval Training Station, San Diego, Calif.: Trade school and auditorium buildings and accessories, $525,000.

Naval Training Station, Norfolk, Va.: Dispensary building and accessories, $190,000; receiving station mess hall and galley building and accessories, $375,000; receiving station barracks buildings and accessories, $800,000.

Destroyer Base, San Diego, Calif.: Power plant building and accessories, $50,000; torpedo storehouse and accessories, $90,000; dispensary building and accessories, $40,000; bachelor officers' quarters and accessories, $70,000.

Submarine Base, Pearl Harbor, Hawaii: Individual storehouse and accessories, $20,000.

Naval Aircraft Factory, Philadelphia, Pa.: Aeronautical engine and materials laboratory buildings, $1,800,000.

Naval Air Station, San Diego, Calif.: Purchase and improvement of auxiliary landing fields, $321,000.

Naval Air Station, Norfolk, Va.: Purchase of auxiliary landing fields, $300,000.

Naval Air Station, Seattle, Wash.: Radio direction-finder house and accessories, $5,000.

Fleet Air Base and Submarine Base, Coco Solo, Canal Zone: Personnel buildings and accessories, $1,736,000.

Fleet Air Base, Coco Solo, Canal Zone: Aircraft storehouse and accessories, $285,000.

Marine Aviation facilities, Charlotte Amalie, V. I.: Quarters for naval personnel, including services and accessories, $259,000; dispensary building and accessories, $30,000.

Marine Corps Flying Field, Quantico, Va.: Aircraft and engine overhaul building and accessories, $250,000; motor-test-stand building and accessories, $80,000.

Marine Barracks, San Diego, Calif.; Development of rifle range at La Jolla, Calif., $305,000.

Marine Barracks, Quantico, Va.: Contagious ward and accessories, $65,000; barracks building and accessories, $60,000; shop building and accessories, $172,000; nurses' quarters and accessories, $56,000.

Marine Corps Depot of Supplies, Philadelphia, Pa.: Storage buildings and accessories, $1,300,000.

Naval Research Laboratory, Bellevue, D. C.: Barracks, mess hall, and instruction building, and accessories, $230,000.

Naval Supply Depot, Pearl Harbor, T. H.: Provision storage building and accessories, $250,000.

Naval Hospital, Mare Island, Calif.: Administration and subsistence building and accessories, $475,000.

Naval Hospital, San Diego, Calif.: Sick officers' quarters and out-patients' clinic and accessories, $175,000.

Naval Hospital, Norfolk, Va.: Barracks building and accessories, $200,000.

Naval Hospital, Guam: Isolation and tuberculosis wards and accessories, $47,000.

Naval Hospital, Pearl Harbor, T. H.: Barracks building and accessories, $105,000.

Naval Radio Station, Gatun, C. Z.: Quarters and accessories, $40,000.

Naval Radio Station, Eureka, Calif.: Quarters and accessories, $15,000.

Naval Radio Station, Point Loma, Calif.: Quarters and accessories, $22,000.

Naval Radio Station, Dutch Harbor, Alaska: Recreation building and accessories, $12,000.

Naval Direction Finder Station, Point St. George, Calif.: Purchase of land, $2,500.

Naval Direction Finder Station, Point Arguello, Calif.: Powerhouse, garage, dormitory building, and accessories, $27,000; quarters and accessories, $6,000.

Naval Direction Finder Station, Poyners Hill, N. C.: Barracks, compass house quarters, and accessories, $52,000.

Naval Direction Finder Station, Jupiter, Fla.: Barracks, compass house, quarters, and accessories, $50,000.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: On page 2, after the period in line 10, add the following sentence:

"The Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized and directed to appoint a board consisting of not less than five officers to investigate and report upon the need for purposes of national defense for acquisition by the Secretary of the Navy of two graving drydocks situated on San Francisco Bay and known as the Hunters Point drydocks, such report to include a statement of costs and fair values and to be made prior to April 18, 1939."

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I ask that this amendment be voted down for the reason that the Navy Department has submitted to the committee a report dealing with the acquisition of Hunters Point drydocks, which this language in the bill calls for.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 4, strike out lines 13, 14, and 15.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 5, after line 7, insert a new paragraph as follows:

"Marine Barracks, Parris Island, S. C.: Buildings and accessories, $3,018,500."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Page 5, line 15, after the figure "$56,000;" insert "school building and accessories, $250,000."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. IZAC. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise at this point to call attention to something that should be attended to at our earliest possible convenience. You will notice that we are authorizing the construction of a certain number of graving drydocks for the express purpose of taking care of the needs of the Navy. As long as there is another fleet in the Pacific in addition to ours we must retain our fleet in the Pacific, and the retention of the fleet in the Pacific necessitates shore bases.

I draw attention to the fact that from the Panama Canal for 1,800 miles there are no facilities for repairing and overhauling the ships of the fleet. At one time we rented or leased Magdalena Bay in Lower California. We have given that up. The nearest point to the Panama Canal on the west coast is San Diego, a natural harbor, used almost to the fullest extent by the Navy at the present time; but I draw your attention to the fact that there is no dock of sufficient size in San Diego to take care of any ship larger than a destroyer. Likewise, there are no drydock facilities in southern California waters, and we have to go 500 miles away, to San Francisco Bay, before we find any graving dock of sufficient size to care for the needs of the Navy. There are only two on the west coast at the present time—Puget Sound and Mare Island. I have no fault to find with the committee, because, of course, the Navy feels they cannot ask too much authorization at one time, and they are asking for as much as they think the Congress will give them now.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. IZAC. I yield.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. In connection with the serious lack of docking facilities on the west coast I may state to the gentleman from California that the Navy Department today sent a recommendation to the committee for the acquisition of Hunters Drydocks; and just as soon as the committee has opportunity to consider the matter, in all probability a bill to acquire the drydock in San Francisco Bay will be brought before the House for consideration.

Mr. IZAC. I am glad to hear the gentleman state that because, regardless of whether it is in my district or not, I believe the fleet needs more facilities for its maintenance.

I draw the committee's attention to the fact that every time it is necessary for a complete overhaul of even so small a ship as a destroyer it is necessary to expend several thousand dollars in fuel costs for the sending of the ship to Puget Sound and Mare Island because we do not have a drydock of ample facilities anywhere in southern California.

May I ask the committee at this time to consider in the near future the advisability of acquiring space and requesting authorization for the building of additional drydock facilities in southern California.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HAVENNER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, the recommendation that the Navy should acquire the Hunters Point drydocks as an essential part of its program for national defense originated in the Navy Department.

The Chief of Naval Operations, in a report submitted to the Committee on Naval Affairs on March 9, 1939, made the following statement:

The situation confronting the Navy with respect to adequate drydocking facilities is of serious concern to the national defense. Docking facilities on the west coast and in Hawaii are now inadequate to meet the needs of the existing fleet in time of peace. Even with the completion of the drydocks now under construction at the navy yards, Mare Island and Puget Sound, the peacetime situation will become steadily worse unless further relief is afforded, as vessels now under construction or authorized are added to the fleet.

The question of docking facilities has been the subject of exhaustive study and analysis in the Navy Department over a great many years. Shortages exist in all sizes of docks to meet peacetime and wartime requirements. As a result of these studies, the Department has outlined a program of additional docking facilities considered essential for the proper support of the fleet in the Pacific.

In my opinion the Navy should acquire the Hunters Point drydocks and should provide weight-handling facilities, power connections, galley, latrines, storehouse, and an assembly plant to permit the overhaul of our largest vessels in conjunction with the Mare Island Navy Yard.

The Committee on Naval Affairs, after an extensive examination of ranking officials of the Navy Department concerning the necessity for acquiring the Hunters Point drydocks, incorporated a provision in the bill now under consideration reading as follows:

The Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized and directed to appoint a board consisting of not less than five officers to investigate and report upon the need for purposes of national defense for acquisition by the Secretary of the Navy of two graving drydocks situated on San Francisco Bay and known as the Hunters Point drydocks, such report to include a statement of costs and fair values and to be made prior to April 18, 1939.

The report of that special board to the Secretary of the Navy has been transmitted to the Committee on Naval Affairs. After a very lengthy and thorough study of the property and its proposed uses the board unequivocally recommends that the Government acquire the Hunters Point drydocks, including all present equipment, at a cost not to exceed $3,500,000, and that an additional $2,500,000 be expended on the property to permit its utilization as an annex to the United States Navy Yard at Mare Island.

The property to be acquired consists of two graving drydocks with land and necessary appurtenances and equipment, owned by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co., and located in the city and county of San Francisco at Hunters Point. One of the drydocks is about 700 feet long, capable of docking heavy cruisers. The other is 1,000 feet long, capable of docking 45,000-ton battleships and aircraft carriers.

The Secretary of the Navy reports that the land at Hunters Point is composed of a serpentine-rock formation, impervious to water, easily excavated, and particularly favorable for the construction of graving drydocks.

His report states that the site also has the following advantages of location:

It adjoins permanent deep water, affording adequate approaches to the drydocks by large vessels. It adjoins the largest and best anchorage ground in San Francisco Bay. It is conveniently situated with reference to San Francisco and to water and motor transportation facilities.

The report points out that the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. has not used this property as a shipbuilding plant, but only for drydocking vessels. It lacks essential facilities for repair work, even of a minor character, on a ship in dock.

The essential facilities which are lacking, and which are proposed to be provided if this authorization is approved by Congress, are as follows: (a) Adequate power supply so that the ship's generating equipment can be shut down while in the dock, also service connections, including air, salt water, fresh water, and steam; (b) weight-handling equipment, so that heavy parts can be removed from and reinstalled in the ship; (c) a galley ashore, so that the ship's galley can be shut down for repairs; (d) suitable latrine facilities for the crew while the ship is in dock; (e) a small storehouse, so that routine repair materials may be immediately available; (f) an assembly building, to permit the assembling of parts fabricated and manufactured elsewhere for installation in the vessel in dock, and to provide space in which to keep tools and equipment necessary to accomplish drydock work and other necessary repairs; (g) an adequate quay wall at which ships can be berthed prior to and after docking.

The drydock at Hunters Point is the only dock on the west coast, except that at the Bremerton Navy Yard, 1,815 miles to the north, which can accommodate a man-of-war or other large naval or merchant ships. In the past the Navy has paid the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. approximately $45,000 a year, and frequently more, for a preferential use of the Hunters Point drydocks. As the report of the special naval board clearly emphasizes, a continuation of this arrangement is not considered to be in accord with the best interests of national defense.

I shall now include in the RECORD the report of the special navy board:

1. The board appointed by the Secretary of the Navy by letter of March 25, 1939, has made a careful study of all matters covered by the precept, and respectfully submits its report herewith.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PROPERTY

2. The property under investigation consists of two graving drydocks and the appurtenances and equipment necessary to their operation, owned by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, located on the San Francisco side of San Francisco Bay at Point Avisadero (U. S. C. and G. S. Chart No. 5535), and commonly referred to as the "Hunters Point Drydocks." One of these drydocks is about 700 feet long, capable of docking heavy cruisers. The other is 1,000 feet long, capable of docking 45,000-ton battleships and aircraft carriers. The smaller of these drydocks is commonly designated as "No. 2 dock," and the larger is "No. 3 dock." These designations might tend to indicate to one unfamiliar with the property that there are three drydocks there, but, as stated above, there are actually only two.

3. (a) The parcel of land on which these two drydocks are located contains about 48.6 acres, divided approximately as follows:

	Acres
Original area of dry land	15
Area reclaimed by fill	10
Present submerged area	23.6

The description of this land by metes and bounds is as follows:

"Beginning at a point on the northeasterly line of Evans Avenue, distant thereon 450 feet southeasterly from the southeasterly line of Boalt Street, as shown on the 'map of the property of the South San Francisco Homestead and Railroad Association,' filed April 15, 1867, in book 2, 'A' and 'B' of maps, page 39, in the county recorder's office of the city and county of San Francisco; and running thence northeasterly on a line drawn parallel with said southeasterly line of Boalt Street 1,179.16 feet to a circular curve with a radius of 1,800 feet, whose center is a point on the northeasterly line of Galvez Avenue, distant thereon 250 feet southeasterly from the southeasterly line of Alvord Street; thence southeasterly, southerly, and southwesterly along said curve with a radius of 1,800 feet, a distance of 2,727.28 feet to the northeasterly line of Evans Avenue, extended; thence northwesterly along said line of Evans Avenue and the extension thereof 2,174.67 feet to the point of beginning."

It is noted that the above-described tract of land contains, within the 23.6 acres of submerged area, approximately 8.9 acres, which lie outside of the established Federal Bulkhead Line, and, consequently, the absolute title to this 8.9-acre portion of the tract possibly does not vest in the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation.

(b) This land is composed essentially of a serpentine rock formation, which is impervious to water, easily excavated, and hence particularly favorable for the construction of graving drydocks. The site also has the following advantages of location:

(a) It adjoins permanent deep water affording adequate approaches to the drydocks by large vessels.

(b) It adjoins the largest and best anchorage ground in San Francisco Bay.

(c) It is conveniently situated with reference to San Francisco and to water- and motor-transportation facilities.

4. This property has not been used by the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation as a shipbuilding plant but only for the drydocking of vessels. It is not equipped with the facilities which have been found to be essential if any repair work, even of a minor character, is performed on a ship in dock. The essential facilities which are lacking are:

(a) Adequate power supply so that the ship's generating equipment can be shut down while in the dock; also service connections, including air, salt water, fresh water, and steam.

(b) Weight-handling equipment so that heavy parts can be removed from and reinstalled in the ship.

(c) A galley ashore so that the ship's galley can be shut down for repairs.

(d) Suitable latrine facilities for the crew while the ship is in dock.

(e) A small storehouse so that routine repair materials may be immediately available.

(f) An assembly building to permit the assembly of parts fabricated and manufactured elsewhere for installation in the vessel in dock, and to provide space in which to keep tools and equipment necessary to accomplish drydock work and other necessary repairs.

(g) An adequate quay wall at which ships can be berthed prior to and after docking.

The lack of these facilities produces a situation where two drydocks admirably suited for the accommodation of naval vessels cannot be utilized to anywhere near their full capacity. In fact, practically the only work which can be satisfactorily accomplished on Navy vessels in these docks in their present condition is the routine cleaning and painting of underwater surfaces.

HISTORY OF THE PROPERTY

5. Construction of the smaller of the two Hunters Point drydocks was started in 1901 and completed in 1903 by the San Francisco Dry Dock Co. The records of the Navy Department show that in 1912 the Union Iron Works Dry Dock Co., of San Francisco, which at that time owned the property, started negotiations with the Navy Department with a view of constructing a larger drydock adjacent to the one referred to above, and capable of accommodating the largest vessel which could transit the Panama Canal, then nearing completion. It appears from the record of the negotiations that the company sought to obtain a subsidy from the Government for the construction of this large dock in the form of a 10-year contract for the docking of naval vessels in San Francisco, which would guarantee payment by the Government for this service of at least $50,000 per year. These negotiations led to a provision in the act of Congress approved June 30, 1914 (38 Stat. L., p. 406), which authorized the Secretary of the Navy to enter into contract for the use of the Hunters Point drydocks for a period of 6 years from the completion of the drydock capable of docking the largest vessel which could be passed through the locks of the Panama Canal. This statute further provided that, while the rate of charge for docking naval vessels stipulated in such contract should not be in excess of the commercial rate, the compensation to be paid for this docking service would be at least $50,000 per year. It also provided that if, during the contract period of 6 years, the necessities of the fleet required the docking of vessels which would necessitate a charge greater than $50,000 per year, the Secretary of the Navy was authorized to have such vessels docked at rates not in excess of commercial rates.

6. On February 24, 1916, the Secretary of the Navy entered into a contract with the Union Iron Works Dry Dock Co., as authorized by the above-mentioned statute, and the company started constructing the large dock in that year. The date of its completion was the subject of dispute between the company and the Navy Department, because of the failure of the company to install a 50-ton crane at the dock as provided for in the plans and specifications, approved by the Navy Department and incorporated in the contract. This dispute was not settled until December 28, 1921, when a supplementary contract was entered into by the Secretary of the Navy and the company, in which the original specifications relative to weight-lifting facilities were modified, and the completion of the large drydock for the purposes of the original contract of February 24, 1916, was declared to be August 20, 1921. This drydock was, however, actually used by naval vessels prior to August 20, 1921, in 1919 and 1920, and it has been used in every year since that date to the present time.

7. In tracing the history of these two drydocks, the board has made every effort to determine the actual cost of their construction, as directed in paragraph 3 of the precept, enclosure (A). However, in view of the age of the smaller of these drydocks built in 1901–03, and the fact that it was built by a private company whose records were not available to the board, the question of the cost of its construction was not readily susceptible of factual determination. The only information bearing on this subject was found in the preliminary report of the Navy Yard Commission (Helm Commission) of 1916 (H. R. Doc. No. 1946, pt. 2, pp. 150–153), in the form of a statement by Mr. Howard C. Holmes, consulting engineer of the Union Iron Works Dry Dock Co., in which he acknowledged that he designed and built this drydock, and that its cost was "less than half a million dollars." With reference to the larger drydock constructed in 1916–19, the facts are clearer. As indicated in paragraph 6 above, this drydock was constructed under plans and specifications approved by the Navy Department before incorporation in the contract with the Union Iron Works Dry Dock Co. of February 24, 1916. Furthermore, as provided in this contract, this drydock was periodically inspected during the course of its construction by Navy Department representatives who made pertinent reports upon the progress of the work. Under date of June 3, 1920, the public-works officer of the navy yard, Mare Island, Calif., submitted an itemized statement showing the total cost of construction of this drydock to be $1,083,702. The board, after careful consideration of the above facts, believes that the sum of $1,500,000 constitutes at least a very close approximation of the original cost of construction of both of these drydocks, exclusive of all land and appurtenances.

USE OF HUNTERS POINT DRYDOCKS BY NAVAL VESSELS

8. The use of the Hunters Point drydocks by naval vessels has been regulated by contracts entered into by the Secretary of the Navy with the Union Iron Works Dry Dock Co., from February 24, 1916, until August 19, 1927, and with the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation since the latter date to the present time. The original contract of February 24, 1916, provided for a term of 6 years from the completion of the large dock as determined by the Secretary of the Navy. The beginning of this 6-year contract period was officially declared to be August 20, 1921, by the supplementary contract of December 28, 1921. Since the large drydock had been used for five battleship dockings in 1919 and 1920, this supplementary contract provided that the company should be paid in full satisfaction of its claim for this service the sum of $37,317.28, which was arrived at by applying the same docking rate agreed upon in the original contract (6½ cents per displacement ton for each day or fraction thereof that the vessel remained in dock).

9. The original 6-year contract expired on August 19, 1927. During the period of its continuance, the use of the drydocks by naval vessels, and the charges therefor, are shown in the following table:

Year	Ships docked	Docking charges	Guarantee	Total
1922	9	$64,398.39		$64,398.39
1923	6	30,835.20	$19,164.80	50,000.00
1924	5	38,880.48	11,119.52	50,000.00
1925	5	34,348.87	15,651.13	50,000.00
1926	9	50,418.91		50,418.91
1927	8	46,223.51	3,776.49	50,000.00
Total	42	265,105.36	49,711.94	314,817.30

10. Since August 19, 1927, the expiration date of the 6-year contract, under which the Government acquired no permanent or continuing right, the Secretary of the Navy has entered into annual contracts with the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation for the drydocking of naval vessels at the Hunters Point drydocks. The following statistical table is applicable to this period from August 19, 1937, to date:

Year	Ships docked	Docking charges
1928	2	$8,771.62
1929	6	93,813.48
1930	3	22,792.00
1931	4	45,032.40
1932	6	49,716.80
1933	5	39,066.48
1934	3	56,130.24
1935	6	37,790.64
1936	7	50,904.86
1937	5	32,622.00
1938	8	61,107.92
1939	5	39,745.84
Total	60	537,494.28

11. A recapitulation of the information contained in paragraphs 8, 9, and 10 above shows that the Hunters Point drydocks have been used 107 times by naval vessels since 1919, and that the Government has paid the sum of $889,628.86 for this service.

12. The present annual contract with the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation provides for services required from July 1, 1938, to June 30, 1939, for docking and undocking 450,000 displacement tons, more or less, at San Francisco, Calif., at the following rates:

Capital ships, 8 cents per displacement ton for each lay day or fraction thereof that such vessels occupy the drydock.

Aircraft carriers (Ranger, Yorktown, Enterprise, and Wasp), 20 cents per displacement ton for the haul day; 15 cents per displacement ton for each lay day or fraction thereof that such vessels occupy the dock.

Aircraft carriers (Lexington and Saratoga), 8 cents per displacement ton for the haul day and for each lay day that such vessels occupy the dock.

Light and heavy cruisers, 20 cents per displacement ton for the haul day and 15 cents per displacement ton for each lay day or fraction thereof that such vessels occupy the dock.

No charge is made for the use of the drydocks on Saturdays, Sundays, or holidays, except when work which specifically required docking is actually prosecuted on these days, and except when docked or undocked on these days. When no work can be done on a vessel in drydock on account of inclement weather, only one-half of the normal charge is made for the occupation of the dock.

PRESENT MATERIAL CONDITION OF THE PROPERTY AND FAIR VALUE THEREOF

13. In addition to the two drydocks, each of which has its individual pumping plant, the Hunters Point drydocks property includes the following structures, equipment, and improvements, all of which affect the present fair value of the property:

Brick warehouse; brick powerhouse and stack; brick sluice-gate house; storage building, corrugated iron on wood frame; brick pump and transformer house; two timber wharves, one at entrance to each drydock; equipment in powerhouse consisting of two 300-horsepower steam boilers, two 1,200 C. F. M. steam-driven compressors, and one high-pressure steam-driven pump. Miscellaneous equipment and improvements, such as tracks, paving, pumps, motors, brows, staging, lines, and so forth.

14. The present material condition of the drydocks and of the machinery and equipment necessary to their operation is described as follows in the report, submitted in March 1939 by an eminent drydock engineer, Mr. F. B. Smith, who was employed to inspect and appraise this property:

"The drydock side walls are badly cracked but still intact. There are no leaks; however, there is a small amount of seepage. The cracks are irregular and due to expansion and contraction, there being no contraction joints in the walls. There are no signs of displacement or settlement in either structure. The wooden floors of the docks are in good condition. Keel blocks are in good condition. The keel-block fittings and operating mechanisms, usually in Navy docks, were not installed. They use manila ropes and 'strong arms' to move the bilge blocks.

"The pump-well machinery for No. 3 dock is in as good condition as when installed. The steam-operated pumping machinery in the pump well of No. 2 dock was changed to electrical operation a few years ago.

"The three Corliss engines with rope drive operating the pumps have been replaced by three 400-horsepower electric motors, all in good condition. The caisson of both docks looks to be in good condition. The timber wharfs at the entrance of both docks are in poor condition and to be valued at 50 percent of replacement costs.

"The surface operating plant of No. 2 dock is inadequate and in poor condition, consisting of an electric winch at the head of the dock and two steam capstans at the entrance. There are a number of hand capstans on each side; some of the steel bollards are missing and have been replaced by wooden bollards."

15. In order to arrive at a reliable present-day fair value of the entire Hunters Point property, the board, through the commandant of the Twelfth Naval District, secured the services of Mr. J. J.

Phillips and Mr. N. K. Crane, expert real-estate appraisers, to determine the value of the land, and of Mr. F. B. Smith, an eminent drydock engineer, for appraisal of the docks themselves and the appurtenances thereto. Their reports show the following valuations:

Land value	$487,000
Replacement cost of dock No. 3	1,678,126
Replacement cost of dock No. 2	701,735
Other property	240,266
Total	3,107,127

16. The figures furnished by the appraisers for the land were based on the property having a total acreage of 48.6. As was pointed out in paragraph 3 (a), the title to approximately 8.9 acres of the "submerged area," the appraised value of which is $19,384, appears not to vest in the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation. As a consequence, the figures given by the appraisers as to the value of the land should probably be decreased in that amount.

17. In order to afford a check of Mr. Smith's appraisal of the drydocks and their appurtenances, the naval authorities of the Twelfth Naval District prepared separate estimates of the value of this property, and these estimates indicate that Mr. Smith's appraisal is not out of line. It will be noted that, so far as the drydocks proper are concerned, Mr. Smith's estimates are based on replacement costs and make no allowance for depreciation, his reason for this procedure being that in his estimation the expenditures made toward maintenance of the docks offset any depreciation. The board is of the opinion that while Mr. Smith's figures are basically sound, his contention with regard to allowance for depreciation is not correct, and that a minimum reduction in the appraised values of the docks proper of at least 10 percent, or $237,986, should be made.

18. The figures quoted in paragraph 15 are for what might be termed "fixed property" only. In addition thereto, there is owned and used by the company much portable equipment, such as lines, floats, brows, staging, portable leads and connections, etc., necessary for the docking of vessels. If the Hunters Point property be acquired by the Government, this portable equipment should be obtained at the same time. Information furnished to the board by the commandant of the Twelfth Naval District indicates the value of this portable equipment to be $52,000.

19. In view of the foregoing, the board is of the opinion that the total fair value, exclusive of any allowance for goodwill or going concern, for the entire Hunters Point drydock property is as follows:

Land	$467,616
Dock No. 3	1,510,313
Dock No. 2	631,562
Other property	240,266
Portable equipment	52,000
Total	2,901,757

DRYDOCK SITUATION ON THE WEST COAST

20. On March 9, 1939, in hearings before the Committee on Naval Affairs, the Chief of Naval Operations made the following statement with regard to the need of naval docking facilities:

"The situation confronting the Navy with respect to adequate drydocking facilities is of serious concern to the national defense. Docking facilities on the west coast and in Hawaii are now inadequate to meet the needs of the existing fleet in time of peace. Even with the completion of the drydocks now under construction at the navy yards, Mare Island and Puget Sound, the peacetime situation will become steadily worse unless further relief is afforded as vessels now under construction or authorized are added to the fleet.

"The question of docking facilities has been the subject of exhaustive study and analysis in the Navy Department over a great many years. Shortages exist in all sizes of docks to meet peacetime and wartime requirements. As a result of these studies the Department has outlined a program of aditional docking facilities considered essential for the proper support of the fleet in the Pacific."

21. The results of the studies mentioned in the second paragraph of the above quotation indicate the absolute need for 13 additional drydocks on the west coast and in Hawaii if the overhaul requirements of the Navy now in being, under construction, or authorized are to be met. As regards sizes of these additional docks, these are as follows:

Battleship and carrier	2
Cruiser	2
Destroyer and destroyer leader	[1]9

[1] 4 of these docks are 2-unit docks. The actual number of docks is 5.

22. These studies are based upon the requirements of the peacetime fleet and, in general, make no allowance for the following:

(a) National emergency requirements.

(b) The probability that over-age ships will be retained in full commission even after replacement construction authorized by the Vinson Act has taken place.

(c) The probability that many of the decommissioned destroyers, etc., may be placed in a commissioned status at times other than at the beginning of a national emergency.

Should any or all of the above conditions obtain the need of additional facilities would be materially increased.

23. Of the additional docks listed above the following are in the present proposed Public Works authorization bill:

Battleship and carrier	1
Cruiser	1
Destroyer and destroyer leader	[1]5

[1] 2 of these docks are 2-unit docks. The actual number of docks is 3.

This leaves six docks, distributed as to size as follows, not at present proposed for authorization:

Battleship and carrier	1
Cruiser	1
Destroyer and destroyer leader	[1]4

[1] These are both 2-unit docks. The actual number of docks is 2.

24. Studies of shipbuilding and drydock facilities, both naval and commercial, show that on the Pacific coast there are at the present time only one existing naval drydock and another under construction which will accommodate battleships and aircraft carriers. (Dock No. 3 at Hunters Point, which is a commercial dock, is not taken into consideration for reasons which will be made apparent in the next paragraph.) Both of these docks are located at the Puget Sound Navy Yard, Bremerton, Wash. In other words, in a coast line some 1,260 miles long, naval facilities for docking our capital ships exist at only one point, namely, the northern terminus of our coast line. Except during the summer months operations of the fleet are carried on at least 1,000 or more miles to the southward of this point. This means, in effect, that for the greater part of the year any of our major ships requiring regular or emergency docking in naval docks must steam on the order of 2,000 or more miles. With excellent facilities available in the San Francisco Bay area such a procedure is economically unsound. Furthermore, it is illogical to presuppose that, in the event of a national emergency, concentration of all of our major ships would take place at only one point, and that point the most northern one of our Pacific frontier. Thus both from economic and strategic viewpoints, the establishment of a naval drydock capable of taking care of our capital ships in the San Francisco Bay area is fully warranted.

25. In the preceding paragraph no consideration has been given to utilization of the commercial drydocks at Hunters Point to care for at least a part of the docking needs of our major naval vessels. The reasons for not considering this and all other commercial docks are as follows:

(1) Security: Many of the intricate mechanisms which require repair and overhaul while a naval vessel is in drydock are of a secret or confidential nature and should not be open to general inspection by other than regular naval civil employees. This condition can very well be handled at a navy yard or station where all civilian employees have been inducted into the service under strict civil-service procedures and all activities are under rigid control. At a commercial plant such control would be an exceedingly difficult, if not an impossible, matter;

(2) Lack of specially trained workmen: The workmen employed at a commercial yard are normally fully familiar with routine overhaul work. However, the intricate and highly technical military equipment on a man-of-war requires specially trained personnel.

(3) Lack of adequate facilities: The power-length ratios of naval vessels are many times greater than those of commercial vessels and, as a consequence, the normal commercial yard does not have the shop capacity nor the weight-handling equipment which are essential for proper overhaul of naval vessels. As was pointed out in paragraph 4, the Hunters Point dock is lacking in even the minimum essential facilities for minor overhaul and the present owners have failed to provide these facilities on the ground that the income from their plant does not warrant the necessary expenditure.

(4) Lack of availability: Even though the use of a commercial dock is contracted for by the Government there is no assurance that it will be fully available for naval vessels if necessity demands. Experience has indicated that in many instances commercial docking facilities have not been maintained in a condition suitable for instant use by naval vessels.

26. The board has also given consideration to the practicability of equipping the Hunters Point drydocks with necessary facilities for work on naval vessels, the docks to remain in private ownership and to be operated as commercial facilities. The board considers such an arrangement to be undesirable and impracticable if the Hunters Point docks are to be utilized for overhauls as well as for interim dockings. In the foregoing paragraph reference is made to the need for security and the lack of specially trained workmen at commercial plants. In addition, if the fullest use is to be made of the Hunters Point docks, they should be operated as an annex to the Mare Island Navy Yard in order that the splendid shop facilities of that yard may be fully available. The coordination of the navy yard's work with activities of a commercial plant of the kind under consideration would be a difficult, time-consuming, and costly procedure. Furthermore, a very important consideration is the fact that under present conditions, it has been impracticable to keep naval vessels in commercial docks for periods sufficient to permit proper drying-out and painting because of the large docking charges. The Board of Inspection and Survey has repeatedly called attention to the insufficiency of the times spent in drydock and the resulting deterioration. If the docks are Government owned, the vessels will undoubtedly be left in dock for longer periods with little additional cost.

27. The selection of a site for the construction of a naval drydock in the San Francisco Bay area will be governed, among others, by the following considerations:

(a) The size of the ship for which the facility is needed, particularly the draft.

(b) The dock's proximity to the present fully equipped naval establishment at Mare Island.

(c) Real-estate values at or near the site under discussion.

(d) Foundation conditions, particularly as regards their effect upon the cost of construction of a graving dock.

(e) As a corollary to (a) the depth and the width of the channel leading to the specific site.

28. In the entire San Francisco Bay area only three locations will satisfy the foregoing considerations to the extent that serious consideration should be given them for drydock construction, namely, Mare Island, Oakland-Alameda, and South San Francisco-Hunters Point.

29. The channel leading to Mare Island has a controlling depth of 30 feet and to increase and maintain an increased depth would prove inordinately expensive.

30. As regards a choice between the two remaining sites, both have, or can be made to have, sufficient depth of water to permit access to them by battleships. The Hunters Point site, however, is more favorably situated in this respect, since deep water is had immediately offshore. Both sites are approximately the same distance from Mare Island. Real-estate values run about the same at both places. The main point of difference between the two sites lies in the drydock foundation conditions. These conditions are all in favor of the Hunters Point site and have made for much smaller drydock construction costs at that location. This one fact makes the element of total cost, including the purchase of existing facilities and the provision of such others as are necessary, for the establishment of naval docks in favor of Hunters Point and indicates its selection.

31. Information obtained by the Board from the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation indicates that during the period from January 1, 1937, to January 1, 1939, 76 commercial ships used these facilities, occupying them for an average of 176 dock-days per year. Of all the vessels utilizing the docks only six are of such dimensions that they cannot utilize other docking facilities in the San Francisco Bay area for their necessary overhaul. These six ships actually used the Hunters Point docks during the period mentioned above for an average of 20 days per year. Were these docks Navy-owned, provision could be made to permit their use for the routine docking and overhaul of the six commercial ships mentioned above.

AVAILABILITY OF DOCKS FOR PURCHASE

32. Acting under instructions from the Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks the commandant of the twelfth naval district, on March 14, 1939, requested the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation to submit an offering price for the Hunters Point property. In reply to this request Mr. A. S. Gunn, general manager, West Coast Yards, shipbuilding division. Bethlehem Steel Co., San Francisco, Calif., replied, under date of March 16, 1939, as follows:

"Supplementing our letter of acknowledgment under date of March 15 in reference to your letter dated March 14 enclosing blueprints of the Hunters Point district in San Francisco and requesting a tentative estimated private-sale selling price of the portion bounded on these prints by lines A–B, A–C, and the waters of the San Francisco Bay:

"Having been in communication with our home office officials in regard to this subject I am requested by them to inform you that the property owned by our company within the above boundaries on the drawing submitted by you is not for sale; and at no time in the past has it ever been for sale:

"As you state the information is desired by the Navy Department we would appreciate your forwarding this reply."

CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

33. After due consideration of all the information and evidence, which was obtained, relative to the subject matter of the investigation, the Board has reached the following conclusions:

1. That, for the purposes of the national defense, there is need for and the Navy should acquire the Hunters Point drydocks property as soon as possible, and thereafter prosecute a program of improvements and additions thereto, as indicated hereafter in paragraph 34 of this report, which will render these drydocks capable of being utilized to their full capacity as an annex to the United States Navy Yard, Mare Island, Calif.

2. That, considering the appraised valuation contained in the report of the Board's appraisers and making allowance for possible increases therein which might be sustained in condemnation proceedings as well as an allowance for "going-concern" value, $3,500,000 constitutes the maximum sum of money which should be expended by the Government for the acquisition of this property.

34. Accordingly, the Board respectfully submits its recommendations as follows:

1. That the Government acquire the Hunters Point drydocks, including their appurtenances and accessories, machinery and equipment, and the structures appertaining thereto, which are located on the tract of land described by metes and bounds in paragraph 3 (a) of this report.

2. That a sum of money not in excess of $3,500,000 be expended for the acquisition of this property by the Government.

3. That after acquisition of this property by the Government, not less than the following minimum facilities, at the estimated costs shown, be provided to permit utilization of the property as an annex to the United States Navy Yard, Mare Island, Calif.:

Grading and filling (400,000 cubic yards at 60 cents per cubic yard)	$240,000
Quay wall with necessary dredging (2,000 linear feet at $400 per linear foot)	800,000
Assembly building office, and guardhouse (320 feet by 200 feet by 60 feet high—3,800,000 cubic feet at 14 cents per cubic foot, plus cranes ($68,000)	600,000
Storehouse (320 feet by 120 feet, 2 stories; 1,150,000 cubic feet at 25 cents per cubic foot, plus bins and fixed equipment) ($12,500)	300,000
Latrine and wash house (100 feet by 50 feet; 75,000 cubic feet at 40 cents per cubic foot)	30,000
Galley (100 feet by 50 feet by 15 feet high; 75,000 cubic feet at 30 cents per cubic foot, plus galley equipment) ($17,500)	40,000
50-ton drydock crane	150,000
Power supply and roads, walks, and service lines	175,000
Crane tracks around drydocks (2,200 linear feet at $75 per linear foot)	165,000
Total	2,500,000

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 2. The act entitled "An act to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with the construction of certain public works, and for other purposes", approved April 15, 1935 (49 Stat. 155), is hereby amended by deleting the words and figures "floating drydock, type D, including mooring facilities and accessories, $750,000" from the paragraph headed "Navy Yard, Pearl Harbor, Hawaii:", and by adding to the act of April 15, 1935, the following paragraph:

"Floating drydock, type D, including mooring facilities and accessories, $1,710,000."

Mr. SUTPHIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment offered by Mr. SUTPHIN: Page 7, after line 15, add a new section as follows:

"SEC. 3 (a) The Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized to accept or acquire title in fee simple at a cost of not more than $300,000 to all that area of land, including tide and submerged lands, filled and unfilled, situate, lying, and being in the middle harbor area of the city of Oakland, county of Alameda, State of California, now owned in part by the said city of Oakland and in part by the Southern Pacific Co., and described on a so-called Map and Description of Naval Supply Depot Site, dated September 17, 1936, as parcels A, B, C, D–1, D–2, D–3, and E, containing in all 402 acres, more or less, for use as a site for a naval supply depot: Provided, That such land shall be used only as a naval supply depot and for no other purpose, shall be a part of the Navy Yard, Mare Island, and shall be so administered by the commandant of that yard: Provided further, That the activities of said depot shall not overlap or encroach upon the storage of supplies, materials, and equipment required in connection with the industrial activities of the Navy Yard, Mare Island, Calif.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized to proceed with the construction of fleet supply facilities, including buildings and accessories, on the land of which title has been accepted and acquired under authority of section 1 of this act, at a cost of not more than $6,500,000.

SEC. 3. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, such sums not to exceed $6,500,000 as may be necessary to effectuate the purposes of this act.

Mr. SUTPHIN. Mr. Chairman, this amendment, if agreed to, would provide for the establishment of a supply base at Oakland, Calif., which has been under consideration by the House of Representatives for some time. We can build the most powerful and fastest ships in the world, but they are of little or no value unless we provide adequate facilities for supplying and equipping them.

This amendment has been unanimously approved by the House Committee on Naval Affairs, and I hope it may be added to the pending bill because it is urgently needed at the present time.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUTPHIN. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Is it not a fact that the Budget recommended this and we held hearings on a separate bill? What we are doing now is merely incorporating this item in the present Public Works bill?

Mr. SUTPHIN. That is true. It has been unanimously approved by the committee and by the Budget.

Mr. HOLMES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUTPHIN. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. HOLMES. This is an item of $300,000 to acquire land?

Mr. SUTPHIN. To acquire land; yes. The city of Oakland is contributing 392 acres of land. There are approximately 10 acres owned by a railroad company in the tract involved here.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. In other words, it is an easement and some railroad land?

Mr. SUTPHIN. Yes; where they have two docks erected at the present time.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUTPHIN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Can the gentleman inform us whether or not the Naval Affairs Committee of the House has made any report to the House on this matter?

Mr. SUTPHIN. It has. It is available right here.

Mr. WADSWORTH. It is pretty late.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. It has been on the calendar for at least a month. It was unanimously reported. The gentleman from New Jersey introduced it as a separate bill and reported it as such. It was thought advisable to include it in this Public Works bill, and I suggested that the subject matter of that particular bill be incorporated in this bill.

Mr. WADSWORTH. This is a $6,000,000 project.

Mr. SUTPHIN. Yes; $6,500,000.

Mr. TOLAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to state for the information of the Congress that the site offered for the establishment of the Navy supply depot contemplated in the amendment now pending is the most outstanding location in the United States for such a development.

The amendment is identical to H. R. 4897, by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. VINSON], and now pending on the House Calendar, having received a favorable report from the House Naval Affairs Committee on March 23, 1939. The provisions are also identical to S. 1241, by Senator WALSH, reported favorably by the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, and now pending on the Senate Calendar.

The commandant of the Mare Island Navy Yard; the commandant of the twelfth naval district; the commander in chief of the United States Fleet; the Chief of Naval Operations; the Assistant Secretary of the Navy; the Secretary of the Navy; the Bureau of the Budget; Chairman WALSH, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee; Chairman VINSON, of the House Naval Affairs Committee; all without exception state that the Oakland naval supply depot is a necessity in time of peace, a necessity in time of war, and a necessity now. I would not be inclined to respect any layman's opinion in opposition to such authority, nor, in my belief, would the Congress.

The Oakland Naval Supply Depot was originally sponsored as a Navy Department bill in the second session of the Seventy-fourth Congress. Chairman VINSON introduced this bill on June 15, 1936 (H. R. 12969), and it merely provided for the establishment of a supply depot on San Francisco Bay. No site was mentioned. Since that time this item, naming Oakland as the location, has been before the Congress in seven different bills. I have sponsored such legislation in both the Seventy-fifth and Seventy-sixth Congresses.

In the summer of 1936 the Navy Department approached the Oakland port commissioners and asked that a site be offered by the city to the Navy Department. They requested tender of the site which we have before us today. It is designated as Middle Harbor, a section of our water front which was set aside for immediate development by the Oakland Port Commission. A conservative estimate of the value of the Middle Harbor site could be set at between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. The appraisals made for the twelfth naval district would set the figure at $1,000,000; but the Interstate Commerce Commission has set a value on adjoining railroad property at over $21,000 an acre, and on that basis the Middle Harbor area could be valued at $5,300,000.

However, I want to place these figures in the RECORD to demonstrate to the committee that Oakland has something to offer in return for this supply depot, and that the value of this site cannot be set at less than $1,000,000 today. As Assistant Secretary Edison wrote to Chairman VINSON April 13, 1938:

> It has occurred to me that sound business judgment would dictate that the Navy Department should acquire this site for future development while it is still available under the present terms and conditions.

In September 1936, following the introduction of the Vinson bill, the city council of Oakland proposed charter amendments which would authorize the grant of the site. These amendments were voted by the people, 87,275 to 9,688, in the November 1936 general election.

My own bill—H. R. 966—in the present Congress also provides for this same authorization, but it is my belief that this Oakland Naval Supply Depot item properly belongs, and should be included in this bill, the omnibus public works authorization bill of the Navy Department. It was included in the Department's omnibus public-works bill in the last Congress, but action on the Oakland development was postponed to permit Chairman WALSH of the Senate committee to make a trip to California and make an independent investigation of the site.

On January 23, 1939, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy addressed a letter to the Speaker of the House of Representatives in which he said that supply facilities in lower San Francisco Bay are absolutely necessary to correct the conditions existing at Mare Island—stocks held 30 miles from the anchorage, materials in scattered locations in the yard, and must be lightered or handled by supply ships, which involves expensive transportation, handling, damage, waste, and considerable length of time. After enumerating the above conditions he continued:

> These facilities are a necessity in the event of a national emergency.

On January 26, 1939, the House Naval Affairs Committee received a report from a special investigating subcommittee, signed by five members thereof who inspected the sites in the San Francisco Bay area last fall. They concluded, after recitation of all the facts:

> The Middle Harbor site at Oakland has been selected by the Navy Department as definitely the best location of all sites investigated over a period of many years. It has an area of 402 acres. It meets all the fundamental requirements. * * *
> The subcommittee heartily concurs in the Navy Department's selection of the Oakland site. It considers that it has such geographical and natural advantages as to be ideally suited to the purpose. It is adjacent to the fleet anchorage; has ideal railroad facilities; and is possible of development at a very reasonable cost. Its size is such that with careful planning it will meet present needs and have sufficient area for development to meet supply needs which can now be foreseen as necessary in the not distant future to care for the expansion necessary if the Navy be increased afloat and in the air to adequately provide for national defense needs.

After his investigation of the various sites in the San Francisco Bay area, Chairman WALSH, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, wrote Chairman VINSON, of the House committee, January 19, 1938, urging House action on the Oakland supply depot. After citing the reasons upon which the Navy's request was founded, he concluded:

> In view of the above I hope the committee of which you are chairman will restore the Oakland item when action is taken on the Navy Public Works bill.

And last month, in Senate hearings on this item, Senator WALSH stated directly to the members of his committee:

> Gentlemen, there is no doubt about it, Oakland is immeasurably the best site for a naval supply depot, and the city of Oakland has been most generous in its offer to the Navy.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Edison, in a written opinion to Chairman VINSON which I formerly mentioned, declared:

> During my inspection trip last summer I was very favorably impressed with the so-called Oakland site. This site already provides adequate rail facilities as it is the terminus of two transcontinental lines, and also provides a natural land-locked harbor with easy access to the bay and the open sea. * * *
> In addition to the two foregoing reasons and due to prior commitments made by the Navy Department in good faith, I do recognize some moral obligation to the city of Oakland. This municipality, based on the Navy Department's expressed interest in the location, has gone to considerable expense in conducting an election to make this site available to the Government. * * *
> It is my considered judgment that proper planning for the effective and efficient use of the fleet, in the Pacific area, would dictate that favorable consideration should be given to acquisition of the so-called Oakland site for the development of a naval supply base this year.

Adjacent to the site offered by the city, the port of Oakland has available and developed over 13,113 linear feet of berthing space and 793,580 square feet of covered storage space. The Oakland site is in the heart of a highly developed industrial area, and in the center of one of the greatest agricultural areas in the world. The great central valleys of California converge on Oakland, the great variety of fruit, vegetables, and staple food commodities produced in this area supply choicest varieties to every State in the Nation.

The Oakland site lies adjacent to the main oil pipe lines of the refineries of practically every major oil company on the Pacific coast. There has never been any real opposition to my bill, except for other communities seeking this project.

With the additional increase in the size of the fleet it is just plain common sense to prepare for even more crowded conditions than those which face us at the present time.

I hope that the House will adopt the pending amendment and authorize this very necessary development on the Pacific Coast, necessary from the point of view of national defense, the protection of the Pacific Coast, and for the further development of the San Francisco Bay area. [Applause.]

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New Jersey has just offered an amendment to the bill under consideration here in the House which would authorize the establishment of a naval-supply depot at Oakland, Calif. I want to ask a favorable consideration of this amendment of each and every Member of the House. Permit me to say that the Navy Department, over a period of several years, has made five or six separate investigations having for their object the locating of the most desirable site on the Pacific coast for the establishment of a naval-supply depot. Each and every one of these committees has reached the conclusion that the site at Oakland is the most desirable.

The proposal to locate a naval-supply depot at Oakland came in the first instance from the Navy Department. The various committees, with one exception, making the investigations have consisted of naval experts; they have rendered their decisions entirely upon the facts, taking into consideration the best interests of our country from a national-defense point of view. A few months ago a subcommittee of the Naval Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives made a personal inspection of the proposed sites on the Pacific coast, and unanimously reported in favor of the Oakland site. The Members of the House constituting this subcommittee were GEORGE J. BATES, of Massachusetts; W. STERLING COLE, New York; MELVIN J. MAAS, Minnesota; JAMES W. MOTT, Oregon; and WARREN G. MAGNUSON, Washington.

I am sure that we all have faith in the judgment of our colleagues who made this personal investigation and that we are ready to follow their unanimous recommendation. The proposed site in Oakland, which consists of 402 acres, has many advantages; it is adjacent to the fleet anchorage; it is unusually accessible to transcontinental rail transportation. In addition to the fleet, convoys could be supplied, loaded, and discharged in case of a national emergency. The area north of the site across the Southern Pacific tracks is a highly developed municipal and water-front territory, which would be available in time of national emergency for extending the naval supply depot facilities. It has many other splendid qualities which are set out in the report of the special investigating subcommittee consisting of our colleagues. The greater part of this area, through the generosity of the citizens of Oakland, is offered without cost to the Federal Government. We have instances every day here in this House where someone is asking something of the Federal Government. Today we are witnessing the rare procedure of having a municipality offer a piece of valuable land that is much needed by the Navy Department for a supply depot. The city officials, the port officials, and the entire citizenship of Oakland are to be congratulated on the generous cooperation that they have given in regard to this matter.

While this supply depot is not in my congressional district, it is immediately adjacent to my congressional district. I am thoroughly familiar with its location and the physical aspects surrounding it, and I am firmly convinced that it is well suited for the purpose for which the Navy desires to use it. Therefore I am asking you to adopt the amendment that is now pending because in so doing you are giving to the Navy a long-sought and much-needed facility for the Pacific coast which forges a very helpful and necessary link in our national defense.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. MCLAUGHLIN, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that the Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 2878) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with the construction of certain public works, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 137, he reported the same back to the House with sundry amendments adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment? If not, the Chair will put them in gross.

The amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The bill was passed; and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HAVENNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend in the RECORD the remarks I made on the bill which has just been passed and to include therein a report of the special naval board.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIMOND. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a short editorial with respect to national defense as it affects Alaska.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the Delegate from Alaska?

There was no objection.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a brief statement prepared by M. F. Williams of the Eastern Dark Fired Tobacco Association.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein brief excerpts from editorials and a letter from a constituent.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

ALTERATIONS AND REPAIRS TO CERTAIN NAVAL VESSELS

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 829) to authorize alterations and repairs to certain naval vessels, and for other purposes, for which a rule has been granted, and further ask unanimous consent that the bill may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That for the purpose of modernizing the U. S. S. Argonaut, Narwhal, and Nautilus, alterations and repairs to such vessels are hereby authorized, and expenditures therefor shall not be limited by the provisions of the act approved July 18, 1935 (49 Stat. 482; 5 U. S. C. 468a): Provided, That the total cost of such alterations and repairs shall not exceed $5,000,000.

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, the object and purpose of this bill is to enable the Navy Department to recondition three submarines. This will cost approximately $5,000,000. It is necessary to do this on account of the fact that the engines in one of the submarines have become so deteriorated that there have been some explosions, and this is also true in the case of another submarine. This is merely a bill to authorize the reconditioning of three submarines. By this expenditure the military life of the ships will be lengthened anywhere from 5 to 15 years.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

House Resolution 136 was laid on the table.

AUXILIARY VESSELS FOR THE NAVY

Mr. VINSON of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 828) to permit the President to acquire and convert, as well as to construct, certain auxiliary vessels for the Navy, and I further ask unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 1 of the act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of certain auxiliary vessels for the Navy," approved July 30, 1937 (50 Stat. 544), is hereby amended by inserting after the word "authorized," in the fifth line thereof, the words "to acquire and convert or," so that the said section as amended will read as follows:

"That for the purpose of furnishing or replacing auxiliary vessels urgently necessary for the proper maintenance and operation of the Navy, the President of the United States is hereby authorized to acquire and convert or to undertake the construction of about 36,050 tons (light displacement tonnage) of such auxiliary vessels as follows, at a total cost for all vessels of not more than $50,000,000;

"(a) One seaplane tender of about 8,300 tons;
"(b) One destroyer tender of about 9,000 tons;
"(c) One mine sweeper of about 600 tons;
"(d) One submarine tender of about 9,000 tons;
"(e) One fleet tug of about 1,150 tons; and
"(f) One oil tanker of about 8,000 tons."

SEC. 2. Sums heretofore or hereafter appropriated or made available for the commencement or for the construction and machinery, and armor, armament, and ammunition of auxiliary vessels for the Navy shall be held and considered to be available either for the acquisition and conversion or for the construction of such vessels.

SEC. 3. The act entitled "An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, and for other purposes" (50 Stat. 755), is hereby amended by deleting therefrom, at page 769, the words "and the cost of either shall not exceed the estimated cost thereof set forth on pages 524 and 525 of the hearings of the House Committee on Appropriations on the third deficiency appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1937": Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed as increasing the limit of the total cost of $50,000,000 imposed by the act of July 30, 1937, on the auxiliary vessels authorized therein.

Mr. DARDEN. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this bill is to authorize the purchase of a tanker by the Navy through the Maritime Commission from the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, without any profit to the company. Pursuant to the act of 1936, 12 tankers were let to contract by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. There was an increase in the cost of each one of $880,000, by reason of additions approved by the Secretary of the Navy in the interest of national defense, and the added cost is being borne by the Government.

In 1937 we authorized the President to proceed with the construction of a tanker, and a later bill carried the necessary funds. In the Navy bill of May 17, 1938, we authorized him to purchase, convert, or construct four tankers. Since that time, by the act of June 25, 1938, money has been made available for the purchase of two of the tankers authorized in 1938. The one tanker authorized for construction in 1937 the Navy now desires, if possible, to purchase. In order to purchase it there must be an amendment to the Authorization Act of 1937. I understand that this will save the Navy upward of $2,000,000, because it will have the advantage of the savings made by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey in letting the contract for 12 vessels at one time. If this amendment is agreed to, it will enable the Navy now to use funds available for the purchase of the remaining tanker desired by the Navy from the 12 now being constructed under the authority of the Maritime Commission by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DARDEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. Are these tankers to be used in any way to bring oil from foreign countries to the American shores, thus increasing our importation of oil?

Mr. DARDEN. No; I do not believe there is any such point involved there. These are simply oil supply ships for the Navy. They are high-speed tankers to be used with the fleet. They are not to be used for importing oil to this country.

Mr. RICH. Will we use all American oil in these tankers?

Mr. DARDEN. That I do not know. The tankers will be used for the transportation of oil purchased under open contract by the Navy.

Mr. RICH. Does the gentleman know that we have been importing 65,000,000 barrels of oil? It seems to me we ought to use oil we secure from our own oil reserves.

Mr. DARDEN. I believe the gentleman's objection goes to the use of the oil and not to the means of transportation.

Mr. RICH.. Yes; that is the point I am trying to make. I am trying to find out if for any reason at all we will permit the Navy to use these tankers to secure oil from foreign countries. My hope is that we will use only American oil.

Mr. DARDEN. The tankers will not be used for the purpose of importing oil into this country. They will be used for the supply of the fleet.

Mr. RICH. I appreciate the fact that the vessels are going to be used to supply the fleet with oil, but I think, if possible, they ought to limit it to the transportation of oil that we secure from our own oil reserves.

Mr. DARDEN. The chairman of the committee informs me that American oil is used so no difficulty will be encountered on that score.

Before concluding my remarks I want to call to the attention of the House the value of the improvements in the Hampton Roads area which have been authorized by the bill considered but a few minutes ago.

One of the most important naval bases of the United States is located in the Hampton Roads area.

The navy yard located there was in existence in colonial days. It has grown as the country has grown and today represents one of the great industrial establishments owned by the Government engaged in the construction and repair of naval vessels and in the manufacture of naval equipment.

The naval operating base on Hampton Roads came into being by virtue of the tremendous demands of the fleet during the World War. Many of its facilities are still temporary buildings, badly in need of replacement, inefficient and expensive to maintain. We have, I am glad to say, in recent years made excellent progress toward the development of this station.

The bill just disposed of carries an authorization of $190,000 for a dispensary building and accessories; $375,000 for receiving station mess hall, galley building and accessories, and $800,000 for receiving station barracks and accessories.

These items constitute needed improvements. They will by no means complete the work necessary to put the station in first-class order, but they do constitute a decided addition to the present establishment.

I hope that it may be the pleasure of the Congress within a short time to furnish the funds necessary to carry this work to a successful completion.

There is also carried in the bill an authorization of $300,000 for auxiliary landing fields. The air-station facilities at the operating base were found by the Hepburn Board, in their investigation of last fall, to be inadequate for the use of the fleet, even in times of peace. As a matter of fact, the facilities are not adequate to serve even a small part of our present naval air force, and incredible as it may sound, this station is today our only naval air station on the Atlantic coast.

In recent years we have made excellent progress, so far as our fleet is concerned. We have made some progress in developing the necessary bases for our aircraft, but we have by no means the facilities necessary for the efficient operation of this great arm of national defense.

The naval bill which passed the House some time ago and which passed the Senate only a few days ago, includes an item for material expansion of the naval air station at Hampton Roads. This development is badly needed and it is my purpose to ask that the necessary funds be appropriated this year in order that the property may immediately be acquired and work started on its development.

The Navy has in recent years rented a number of auxiliary fields in the vicinity of the naval operating base at Hampton Roads for the use of naval aircraft. It is not possible to develop these fields on a leased basis, and with the authorization of $300,000 here requested, it is the purpose to purchase a certain number of outlying fields as auxiliary bases to be used in conjunction with the naval operating base.

The bill also carries an item of $200,000 for additions to the Naval Hospital at Norfolk, Va. The present hospital is not of sufficient capacity to take care of its part of the needs of the fleet operating in the Atlantic.

The expenditure proposed today is for the purpose of building barracks to properly house part of the hospital personnel. This addition does not represent by any means all the work that should be done there, and I hope that it may be possible for the Congress at some later time to authorize and appropriate funds necessary to bring the facilities there up to the demands of the fleet.

There is also an item of $165,000 included in the bill for the naval ammunition depot at St. Julians Creek, Va. This sum is needed for the erection of an explosive loading plant and accessories. The naval ammunition depot is a valuable adjunct of the fleet base. It provides storage facilities and also means whereby ammunition can be constantly watched and reconditioned as the occasion requires.

I wish that it were possible to authorize the construction of other needed improvements in this area, but I realize, as do other Members of the House who have studied the problem, that it is not possible for the Navy, with the funds at its disposal, to equip all of its stations simultaneously. Improvements must constantly be made and these improvements must of necessity be divided among the various shore stations in order to make them available and responsible so far as possible to the needs of the fleet, for we must bear in mind that naval bases are constructed for the fleet, and the real test of their usefulness lies in their capacity to serve the naval forces.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

House Resolution 135 was laid on the table.

ADJOURNMENT OVER

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today, it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent leave of absence was granted, as follows:

To Mr. ALLEN of Pennsylvania for 2 days, on account of personal business.

To Mr. PETERSON of Georgia for several days, on account of official business.

To Mr. LELAND M. FORD, for 1 week, on account of illness.

To Mr. DINGELL (at the request of Mr. RABAUT), indefinitely, on account of the death of his father.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON COINAGE, WEIGHTS, AND MEASURES

Mr. SOMERS of New York. Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures asks unanimous consent to file its report on the bill it has had under consideration before midnight tonight.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman incorporate in his request that the minority Members may also have the same opportunity to file minority views?

Mr. SOMERS of New York. It is understood that the minority report and the minority views are to be filed together. Pardon me for not stating that in my original request.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing a statement of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and include therein an article written by the Honorable John T. Woodruff, of Springfield, Mo., in which a very interesting and graphic history is given of the topography of the White River, and also the history of the discovery of its potential value for power-development purposes and flood control.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by including therein a resolution from the Council of the City of Minneapolis, memorializing Congress to defeat any legislation designed to tax public securities either by levying a tax on the income thereof or otherwise.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Under the previous order of the House, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. LUDLOW] is entitled to recognition for 20 minutes.

WHY I AM A JEFFERSONIAN DEMOCRAT

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, this is the one hundred and ninety-sixth anniversary of the birth in nearby Virginia of a man who, in my estimation, was the greatest humanitarian since Jesus of Nazareth.

With the lightning flashes and thunders of war threatening the peace of the world, with our national debt piling up mountain high, and millions of our citizens tramping the streets looking in vain for work to earn their daily bread, it is altogether meet and proper that on this anniversary day we should reconsecrate ourselves at the feet of Jefferson and seek to derive from his life and example a guide to better days.

To my way of thinking, the finest word in the English language is the word "friend." I like to think of Jefferson as the friend of man, for that is what he was in all that the meaningful word "friend" connotes. His long life was replete with acts of friendship, in infinite and endless variety, impartially bestowed upon high and low alike, for to him "a man's a man, for a' that," and prince and pauper shared alike in the leveling processes of his affection. He was no mere "fair weather" friend. He was the kind of man who is a friend, not only when the birds sing and the flowers bloom and soft winds caress one's brow most soothingly but who is a friend also, and even more, in storm and stress and in the darkness of the night.

He had a passion for peace and he believed the way to keep America permanently at peace with the world is to cultivate friendly relations with all nations and entangling alliances with none. If he were alive today, what a great service he could perform in dispelling the ugly specter of world hate! To him it would be a sad and disappointing spectacle to see Cabinet ministers and Senators in charge of foreign affairs disturbing the equilibrium of international relations by fulminating bitter diatribes against rulers of foreign countries. He abhorred debt and was a devoted champion of economy for nations as well as for individuals.

He believed that national prosperity and happiness are to be achieved by observing the same simple rules of economy and prudence in governmental affairs that make an individual prosperous and happy, and he was continually striving during his two administrations of the Presidency to reduce the expense of government. His watchfulness over expenditures set an example that lasted far beyond his span of life and for a hundred years economy was the watchword of our statesmen. He was a foe of governmental interference and regimentation and was unyielding in his oft-expressed opinion that "that government is best which governs the least."

His faith in the people and the righteousness of their ultimate decisions was sublime, and he spent his entire life enlarging the frontiers of democracy. Jefferson did more than any other statesman who ever lived to free the human spirit. [Applause.] It is for us to continue his good work by enlarging the commonwealth of democracy. We can do this by making it possible for the people to exercise greater authority in solving the problems that affect them most nearly and vitally, and especially the most important and vital of all problems the imagination can conceive—the one relating to throwing our manhood into the holocaust of foreign wars.

The weakness of our American system is that our democracy stops at the water's edge. Our democracy is so circumscribed and limited that it does not apply to our foreign relations but only to our relatively unimportant domestic concerns. In its foreign relations our Government is not a democracy at all but a pure autocracy. Our people may vote for constable or dog catcher, but they cannot vote on a declaration that would sweep their sons into the indescribable hell of a foreign war. It seems to me it is a ridiculous limitation on the powers of democracy to say that the citizen may vote on the location of a sewer or a pesthouse but cannot vote on a proposal that may involve the death of his loved ones, the severing of family ties, an insufferable burden of grief and debt, and very possibly an ultimate change in our form of government which would rob him and posterity of the priceless franchise of freedom. We need to enlarge our democratic frontiers by extending our democracy to our foreign relations, thus adding the capsheaf to the Jeffersonian Bill of Rights.

I hope that in God's good time some modern Jefferson will succeed in getting this amendment for a referendum on foreign wars written into the American system. If he does, his name, like the name of Jefferson, will be blessed by the children of men forever.

Recently, for the first time, I paid my respects at the tomb of Jefferson. When I stood on that Virginia mountainside, a few miles from Charlottesville, the rays of early morning were gilding the shaft where rest the remains of the most outstanding humanitarian that nineteen centuries have produced since the great human God trod the hills of Nazareth. It is possible that reverence for Jefferson, inculcated in me by a long train of Democratic ancestors, may have swept me off my moorings on that occasion, but I cannot even faintly convey to any human understanding the feelings that welled in my breast. I was impressed beyond my feeble powers of language to describe by the inscription which he himself wrote for his tombstone and commanded to be placed there.

"Here," it reads, "was buried Thomas Jefferson, author of the Declaration of American Independence, of the statute of Virginia for religious freedom, and father of the University of Virginia."

That inscription, it seemed to me, is more eloquent for what it does not say than for what it says. There is not one word in it to show that he had been a Member of the Congress of the United States, Minister to France, and Secretary of State, and that he had held the highest office in the gift of his countrymen—the Presidency of the United States. He wanted to be known not for the positions of distinction he had held but for the service he had rendered to humanity. [Applause.] That was Jefferson, one of the most incomparably grand characters in the world's history; and I believe that if the man who hurled into the teeth of tyrants the defiant doctrine that "all men are created equal" were living today, under modern conditions of rapid communication and the general diffusion of intelligence, he would be supporting the proposal for a referendum on foreign wars, which would make all men equal when it comes to the greatest and most tragic of all decisions—the decision that means peace or war. That, I believe, would be his twentieth century contribution to democracy.

If I were gifted with descriptive powers equal to the task, I would like today, on the anniversary of this great man, to paint a picture of the two divergent political philosophies that run like two threads through our national existence from the beginning of American life down to this very hour—the School of Take and the School of Give.

The Hamiltonian philosophy teaches in substance and in essence that government should maintain and support an upper class, composed of the rich and powerful, and should trust the rich to take care of the poor. The theory is that government favor and largess extended to the rich and powerful would percolate down through the intervening human strata and some of the drippings would reach the poor and the weak. Under such an order the poor and the weak would remain underprivileged, underpaid, undernourished, with a future as black as midnight. The flowering of this system would mean that the benefits of government would be taken away from the poor and the weak and monopolized by the rich and the powerful—the School of Take.

It is surprising how many selfish people there are in the world—how many people who, to use a common expression, "covet the earth with a fence around it." When I encounter a grasping individual of that type, I think what an awful punishment would be visited upon him if the Father of us all would just give him a world all by himself and would say to him:

"Here you have the ambrosia of the gods and the wealth of the Indies. All of this is yours to enjoy—alone."

O God, how poor he would be! With no one to love, and no one to love him, he would be the saddest and most pathetic human wreck the imagination could conceive. Oh, when can we ever learn, as Jefferson learned it, the lesson that society is interdependent and that the only way to be happy is to make others happy? [Applause.]

Just the opposite of the Hamiltonian philosophy was the idea of Jefferson, who wrote into the great Declaration the precious doctrine that "all men are created equal." He never for one moment forget the common people. Instead of despoiling them of their natural rights through privileged enactments and monopolistic practices his burning passion was to give them the more abundant life. He was the founder of the School of Give.

The beauty of the Jeffersonian philosophy is that it fosters comradeship. It makes brothers of you and me and all of us. It binds men one to another with hoops of steel. It recognizes the eternal truth that a hickory shirt or a calico dress may cover a heart as pure and true as any that beats beneath purple and fine linen; that virtue dwells as often in humble cottages and byways as in palaces. Unlike a government dominated by bureaucrats and catering to special privilege, it is no closed corporation. At its table is always spread a feast of love, and whosoever will may come. It teaches that we should manifest an interest in people, not for the purpose of exploiting them, but for the purpose of assisting them to higher and happier levels of living; that we should love our fellow men for what we can do for them and not, as the exponents of special privilege would have it, for what we can squeeze out of them. The concern of this Nation should be to see that the average citizen prospers; that however hard and drab may be the surroundings of boys and girls, in whose breast a righteous ambition burns, they shall have their chance to grow into the larger life; that their God-given right to reach the full stature of useful manhood and womanhood and to enjoy the fruits of honest toil shall not be barred or abridged by privileged statutes and practices that rob them of their birthright before they have fairly started on life's journey.

What America needs most of all in this twentieth century is a recrudescence of Jeffersonianism; a rebirth of the American spirit, dedicated to peace and harmony and neighborliness in the family of nations; a determination that ours shall not be a government of the few and for the few but a government of the people and for the people. Though Thomas Jefferson has been dead for 113 years, he still lives. From out of the background of history he points the way through the wilderness of world complications, economic distress, class hatreds, bureaucracy, and special privilege to a glorious fulfillment of our national destiny if we have the vision to see and the courage to do.

Times change, and in the eternal sweep of years governments take on many varied and fleeting forms, but I like to believe and I do believe—I will put it that way—that the great humanitarian principles of Jefferson, radiating love and comradeship and friendliness and helpfulness, were born up yonder in heaven, close to God and the angels, and will never die, but will go on and on, doing good forever, and that, Mr. Speaker, is why I am a Jeffersonian Democrat. [Applause.]

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LUDLOW. Yes.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker, I trust that a copy of this very wonderful address, just delivered by the gentleman from Indiana, may fall into the hands of every schoolboy and every schoolgirl in America, and that they may learn it and be able to repeat it for the remainder of their lives. It is a very wonderful address. [Applause.]

Mr. LUDLOW. I thank the gentleman from the bottom of my heart.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an address delivered by our colleague from Missouri [Mr. CANNON] and another address by President Edward A. O'Neal, of the American Farm Bureau Federation, over N. B. C.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. ZIMMERMANN). Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under previous order of the House the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FADDIS] for 15 minutes.

REPEAL THE NEUTRALITY ACT

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Speaker, President Hoover once said, "International trade is the lifeblood of civilization," and the history of the world attests the truth of this statement. The rise of mankind from the stage of savagery began, when he began to exchange those of his commodities, which he could the most easily procure and of which he naturally possessed a surplus, for commodities of which some other tribe possessed a surplus. Tribe traded with tribe and nation with nation. Trade routes developed and as new resources of the earth became more generally available, the standard of living of those people engaging in commerce, steadily improved. Those nations, which by reason of geographical or other barriers, remained outside the trade orbit, did not advance. Nations which did not engage in trade became hermit nations, and their people did not develop as rapidly politically, intellectually, morally, or materially as did the people of the other nations. Nations, as well as people, require an exchange of ideas and commodities in order to develop progressively. Whatever interferes with this exchange works to the detriment of the people denied access to that trade. Men can find ample employment only when trade is operating unrestrictedly.

It is an axiom accepted by most students of world affairs that the more readily available the resources of the earth are to the nations of the earth, the more secure the peace of the world. This means that the trade lanes and markets of the world must not be restricted to any one nation or to any group of nations.

We, in this Nation today, are faced with the question of taking action to repeal or amend our present neutrality law. A group of professional isolationists endeavoring to defend this law maintain that to keep out of war we must maintain a policy of strict neutrality toward all belligerent nations—regardless of whether the cause of a nation is right, equitable, or just, as soon as it becomes involved in hostilities we must sever all commercial relations with that nation. The fact that certain powers, strategically located, are engaging in a program designed to restrict trade—and that in open violation of international law and their treaty pledges—seems to mean nothing to these isolationists. They prefer to ignore the fact that these nations, if victorious, will be in a position to cut the lines of communication anywhere in the world and paralyze the commerce of any or all nations at will. They seem to have forgotten the lessons of history, regarding the inevitable warfare resulting from closing any section of the world to trade. The results of an embargo policy in our own history are alike unheeded. They urge upon us the policy of the ostrich as insurance against war.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FADDIS. Yes.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Would the gentleman be in favor of legislating to President Roosevelt the power to name an aggressor?

Mr. FADDIS. No, indeed. The power to make war is lodged by the Constitution in the Congress of the United States, and, to my mind, the power to name an aggressor would be almost equivalent to the power to declare war. I see no reason why we should lodge in the hands of any agency in this Nation the power to name an aggressor under any circumstances.

There has long existed an emotional, sentimental school of thought which believes we can place human nature in a strait jacket and establish the millenium by statute. To those who belong to this school of thought neutrality may seem to be a feasible proposition. On the other hand, there are many who, remembering the disastrous results of the "noble experiment," doubt the practicability of such utopian dreams.

A nation is a body of individuals acting collectively and therefore is subject to the composite psychological reaction of the mass of its individuals. This, in the final analysis, cannot be very different from the fundamental reaction of the normal individual. Now, the natural inclination of every normal individual is to be just and to desire that justice be done to all. It is natural for every normal human being to believe in one side or the other of every issue. According to the viewpoint of the individual, one side is right and one side is wrong. By far the larger percent will adjudge the aggressor to be in the wrong. If the issue is free of racial or religious prejudice, as is the Chinese-Japanese trouble, the verdict will be almost unanimously against the aggressor. The economic side of the question is ignored in favor of the moral side. It would be unnatural for a people not to wish to be right; but they cannot be right and be impartial. To end any condition which is unlawful or immoral you must pass judgment, and in doing so you cannot be neutral. If we are to exert any influence for good in the world, we cannot do so by announcing in advance to those who contemplate murder, rape, robbery, and arson on a world-wide scale that they may wreak their will, however evil, on the world and we will not interfere.

We, as individuals, could not afford to announce such a policy in regard to our domestic affairs, lest we suffer the inevitable consequences of being dominated by domestic gangsters. Neither can we apply such a principle to the conduct of our international affairs. Without justice, peace or tranquillity cannot prevail either in a nation or in the world at large. We might perhaps, by guarding our own shores very vigilantly, keep the marauders off our own territory, but at a great deal of expense, inconvenience, and loss of international trade, with the consequent retrogression in our standard of living. If we are ready to revert to an economic system in which every family spun its own thread, wove its own cloth, tailored its own clothes, tanned its own leather, and made its own shoes, manufactured its own furniture, brewed its own beer, raised its own foodstuffs, and lived mainly to itself, a policy of isolation and nonintercourse will bring about this reversion. The activities of the totalitarian states are directed toward the control of trade lanes and raw materials as much or more than they are to the acquisition of territory. The Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis will most certainly operate in the restraint of world trade. If it becomes a permanent and threatening factor, it will most certainly seriously curtail our markets and especially those for our surplus farm products. Are we willing to be forced to become a satellite to the sun of totalitarianism in order to be allowed commercial intercourse with the world?

If a world war comes and we are able to remain out of it and the democratic nations are victorious, we will have to stand our share of the loss. We may profit temporarily but will eventually pay our share of the bill. If the totalitarian nations are victorious, the fact that we have treated both sides with equal consideration will avail us nothing, since our political philosophy and theirs is different. When we adopt a policy of neutrality we are surrendering our traditional policy of the freedom of the seas as far as trade with the belligerents is concerned. Just how much will we be able to recover of this in peacetime? May nations not say we will not trade with those who refused to trade with us in time of need?

A strict system of neutrality will refuse food, clothing, and medicine to women and children as well as lethal weapons to the fighting forces. Wheat is a necessity for the soldier just as it is for the civilian. Cotton makes bandages for the wounded just the same as it makes high explosives to wound, clothes for women and children just as it makes clothes for soldiers. The supply and maintenance of the civilian population is as necessary as is that of the army. Everything today is a munition of war—steel, wheat, wool, rubber, cotton, oil, guns, trucks, airplanes. Victory will come to the nation which can marshal the greatest industrial army in support of its fighting forces. If we are to be neutral we must be so in word, in act, and in all material assistance. Prohibitions as to lethal weapons alone will not prevent war, keep us out of war, or take us into war. The need for other than lethal weapons may be the most pressing. We must recognize that any economic discrimination or prohibition is bound to be harmful to some of the belligerents and is sure to result in hard feelings. The only way in which we can be genuinely neutral is in the matter of credits. Here we can treat all alike and be subject to no repercussions. When we refuse credit we are unquestionably within our rights and in doing so are remaining as neutral as anyone could ask us to be. Refusal to extend credit is the only policy of neutrality which can keep us out of war.

Certainly during the past 4 years we have examples where our policy of neutrality was of distinct assistance to the aggressor. We have been a party to aggression perpetrated against a peaceful nation, innocent of all wrongdoing, by an aggressor wishing to enslave this nation for the purpose of using its resources in further conquests. China is fighting the fight of the democracies of the world and we are assisting the Japanese. We were in the same position in regard to the Spanish civil war, and the rape of Ethiopia by Italy. If we can be neutral and be right, let us be neutral. If the price of our neutrality means enslavement and exploitation of friendly innocent people by nations bent on world conquest, then the price is too great. The advance of the philosophy that might makes right is a threat to our security.

In passing a neutrality act we are committing our Nation to a course of action in a world crisis before we know what threat that crisis may hold in store for us. We are tying the hands of our Chief Executive at the very time we should be giving him all the discretion possible. We are extending an invitation to the forces of evil to become more evil still. We are announcing to the world that in case of war we are going to refuse help even in a humanitarian sense.

Today no one can guarantee what will develop in other parts of the world or what contingencies we may face tomorrow. The trigger men of the world are on a ruthless rampage. Their strokes are swift and are becoming swifter all the time. At such times as this we should impose wide discretionary powers in the head of our Nation, who is also the Commander in Chief of our armed forces. An army can have only one head in time of battle. It could not function with two or three heads, each working on a different plan. It could not function in a campaign where its movements are all fixed and advertised in advance. Neither can a nation function properly in its foreign affairs if hampered in this manner. If we fasten the rudder of the ship of state in a permanent position and forbid the captain to touch it, we are sure to come a wreck on a rock in the present turbulent sea of foreign affairs. Many men of this Nation, who have had years of experience in adjusting its relations with foreign nations, are advising that it is at this time a dangerous move to hamper our Chief Executive with the hard and fast policy of neutrality. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under previous order of the House the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BOLLES] for 25 minutes.

Mr. BOLLES. Mr. Speaker, I find among the fugitive papers of a newspaper editor this statement so apropos of our time and our troubles:

> The most inspiring spectacle presented by American history is the rise of millions of poor men to well-being and comfort—the creation of a vast, prosperous, and intelligent middle class. We are, and have always been, essentially a bourgeois nation. Europe for three centuries poured her millions upon our shores, the destitute, the unfortunate, the oppressed; and America turned them into prosperous farmers, tradesmen, artisans, doctors, lawyers. It is this, more than all our laws; more even than our Constitution with its Bill of Rights which makes us a democratic people. In certain countries there has been a conscious attempt to level society down to the lower class; in the United States the process has been reversed and the leveling has been upward. The distinguishing feature of our society is the high value we put upon the individual.

And I add to this that since the days when Malthus predicted a starved and famine-stricken world, in this very moment of our existence we have, through individual initiative, moved fast and far. We have food for a world which if equally distributed, will abolish famine universally.

We have erected structures which make the pyramids and the Tower of Babel, the Hanging Gardens of Babylon, and the Colossus of Rhodes, and all the seven wonders of the world—fantastic dreams of the ancients; we have more than 12,000 patents on building material and accessories, and nothing that can be conceived by man to be made by steel and cement and brick and stone and substitutes is impossible. That is the realm of architecture.

We have delved into the hidden mysteries of life, found new plants, vaulted the universe to arrange a new cosmos, tamed elements, put a harness and a yoke no nature's untranslatable moods and visible and invisible exhibitions, made from chemical processes cellular tissue that seemed once to be possible only under the direct hand of a Creator and given mankind marvels for playthings and for annihilation of time, distance, and death itself. That has come from science.

We have vaulted the deepest chasms, dug waterways in impossible places, tunneled like moles through miles of rock, carried water and oil and gas for hundreds of miles, burned holes in impregnable mountains, built motors that have no sense of speed, constructed machines that imitate humanity and better his judgment. That is engineering.

There is no secret about the human anatomy, no germ so infinitesimal that he may not be hunted to his lair, and by diet and prevention we have prolonged human life. That is in the realm of medicine.

But a Congress of 435 Representatives of the people and 96 Senators in the world's traditionally most dignified body, with Cabinet officers, and a President marvelous in agile versatility, we have been unable to solve the problem of the owner of the dairy cow.

Mr. Speaker, I raise my voice once more in the House in behalf of the dairy cow—25,000,000 of her kind.

The Vice President of the United States, the great former Speaker of this House, JOHN GARNER, is reported with no denial that when accused of voting for a tariff schedule, he said:

> When it is raining doughnuts a man is foolish if he does not hold out his hat.

So while it is raining doughnuts I want my hat out as a proxy for the cows.

There has always been an agrarian problem in this world. The tiller of the soil, the food producer, the man who filled the bellies of the armies, has been the victim of power. The eternal conflict in this world has been the battle between liberty and power.

The problem of this world has been food.

It has been the problem of the salvation from famine. Away back in the days of Jeremiah the prophet, he understood it—

> They that be slain by the sword are better than they that be slain with hunger; for these pine away stricken through for want of the fruits of the field.

There has not been ever—is not now—the problem of too much, but too little.

So long as a child needs more milk we need more milk.

So long as there is a hungry person we need more food protection.

Eli Whitney, a Yankee school teacher, went down to Georgia and invented the cotton gin. He created an empire. He enthroned cotton. He made great fortunes for others. He instigated commerce that started a flow of gold to the United States from every European country.

Cotton built great industrial cities in America and England. Lancashire became the spinning center of the world. New England prospered. Looms sang a song to the jangling chorus of a stream of gold.

When the Civil War closed, when ragged and saddened soldiers in gray made a weary journey back to broken homes, it was the one mule and the 30-acre-cotton patch that brought the South back to some economic prosperity. From the close of the Civil War to 1930 the wealth produced by cotton—from the sale of baled cotton—was greater than all the gold and silver mined in the United States. We had the world production. We were alarmed for a time about Sudan cotton but we went on and the looms of the world used American cotton. The world cotton market was the market for American cotton.

Where is it?

Who destroyed it?

Who is the Cock Robin that killed it?

It was killed by the incompetency of leadership of Wallace, Tugwell, and theatrical agrarian dreamers of a new utopia. It resolved itself into the problem of a snake swallowing its own tail. The tragedy of cotton is inscribed in its own handwriting.

There was a veterinary surgeon who was called upon to look over a human patient in an emergency. No general physician was available.

The "vet" said: "I don't know what is the matter, but I have some medicine here that will throw him into fits, and I'm hell on fits."

The Cotton States are suffering from fits. There is no veterinary surgeon to help them out. Every step taken puts them further and further out in economic safety. The only method devised so far is to go into the dairy business, and where cotton fields are no longer bright with the cotton bolls, there is hope that pastures will be filled with cows in competition with the dairy business of the Northern States. The President of the United States has indicated his approval of this method of transferring the business from the North to the South. In such a statement made by him a few days ago at Warm Springs he indicates that he is not the friend of the dairy cow up North.

On the floor of this House there is the same reflection. It is also reflected from the Agricultural Department. The Secretary of Agriculture was raised in a corn-hog country. From the time he became Secretary and head of this great Agricultural Department, Mr. Wallace has never appeared to realize that the dairy industry of the United States produces more farm revenue than either wheat, corn, rice, or tobacco. Next to the dairy is cotton. As I have said, the cotton market and the cotton industry has been practically destroyed by our agricultural program, supported and led by Mr. Wallace, and now he proposes to destroy the dairy market by its disintegration. What will happen to wheat and corn in the future is necessarily problematical. If we determine that dairying shall be transplanted and the acreage put out of business by the cotton program, we are certainly in great danger.

I have no intention of comparing Wisconsin with Missouri. That State received so many millions of dollars more than Wisconsin that it would be embarrassing to the Representatives of the Mule State to have them told. The Government has paid the State of Missouri for rental and benefits and soil conservation in the last 6 years close to $90,000,000. But Missouri is also going into the dairy business, and I say this as an example indicative of what a Southern State may do in order to transfer one form of agriculture to another. In 1932 the amount of cheese made in Missouri was 3,551,000 pounds; in 1937 it was 9,637,000 pounds, nearly three times as much as in 1932. The same relationship follows down through in evaporated milk and many other dairy products. Mississippi and other States have also stimulated dairy production. We have several Wisconsin farmers who have gone down into Mississippi and have herds from which are produced fluid milk for city markets, butter, and cheese. I do not have time to go into all these figures or to tabulate them, but the mere trend is sufficient to indicate.

Now, this result has come about from the program of the Agricultural Department, in its removal of crops from the market which was typical of the areas South, and substituted for them new kinds of crops, notably dairying. Other States have looked with jealous eye upon Wisconsin, Minnesota, and neighboring States which have a great dairying business. To some of those who look upon these farm plants with their cattle, their silos, their cream separating machinery, and all those accessories which make up the perfect milk factory on the farm, they believe that this can be transplanted almost by magic into a new world unaccustomed to the continuous toil and the great care which must be put into a dairy.

Oh, no, my friends, it cannot be done that way. There is more about dairying than appears on the surface. Nothing in this world has ever been created except by the labor of man. Every dollar of wealth we have in this world came from toil. Every dollar in the banks, every dollar the Government borrows, every penny that belongs to the wealthy or the well to do, has come from the toil of themselves or from some man somewhere down the line. None of this was done by magic. Even the gold taken from the earth from which great fortunes have been built had to come to him through the pick and shovel, and the operations of separating the ore from the good metal is of labor. So it is with the dairy business. Its first name is toil and labor and continued application.

When the pioneer came into Wisconsin with his few belongings, in his covered wagon, he made for himself a home. He borrowed no man's ax, received no legislative subsidy, nor any assistance from a government to erect a home, clear away the trees from the fields, or to plow his ground. For 40 years that part of Wisconsin in which he first settled was the great bread basket of this Nation. Millions of bushels of grain—wheat—were harvested. At first he carried his crop by slow ox-team process to mills or shipping ports on the lake, and then came the mills built along the rivers with water power in his own home location. This was true also of Illinois, of Iowa, of eastern Minnesota first settled, of Michigan, and of Ohio and Indiana. This was the great wheat area of the world. It brought into being our flour-mill industry. It employed thousands of people. It made a prosperous new country.

But in all these older States, especially in Wisconsin, and its southern part particularly, soil depletion, the chinch bug, the Hessian fly, and other pests cut down the production of wheat and greatly reduced its acreage. For some 10 years there was a great emigration from this part of Wisconsin to western Minnesota, Nebraska, and the Dakotas. There were the virgin fields of prairie and the wheat production of the United States passed away from the Western Central States to those beyond the Mississippi. Something had to take the place of wheat, and the farmers of Wisconsin, as well as in many other States, turned to dairying.

Leading in this movement was the late Gov. William D. Hoard, who was the evangelist for the new era for the farm. Then came Dr. Babcock with his test of milk and the desire to have herds of cattle which would live up to and be able to meet that test of butterfat in milk. So it was that year after year, over a period now of some five decades, Wisconsin has gradually taken her place as the leader in dairying. Today she stands foremost in the United States in the number of dairy cattle, in the sanitary conditions under which milk is produced, in the number of cheese factories and creameries, and, together with her neighboring State of Minnesota, produces the largest percentage of butter in these United States. Wisconsin produces 72 percent of all the foreign-type cheese made in the United States. In a very small and restricted area there was produced 10,600,000 pounds of Swiss cheese. Besides that are the types of Limburger, Munster, brick, and other cheeses.

Eighty-five years ago a number of Swiss from Glarus, in Switzerland, came to the United States. They settled in the hilly country in Green County; they built a village and called it New Glarus. It is the Swiss capital of America today. These people knew how to make Swiss cheese; they did it in their homes or small community effort, and from that has come the Swiss-cheese production of which I have told you. They are among our finest citizens, Americans all, these people of the cheese capital of America.

All of these experiments concerning milk, how to make the most of it, how to build up herds of thoroughbred and graded cattle, how to solve the problems of bovine tuberculosis and Bang's disease, how to make the proper kind of cheese, how to make the best butter—all of these have had their beginnings in two great universities, that of Wisconsin and Minnesota, both have contributed to these necessary economic understandings, so that our products would be of the highest standard measured by any yardstick anywhere in the world.

Now it is proposed by the President of the United States and is a part of the policy of the Secretary of Agriculture that all this value which has gone into research and understanding in the plan of marketing and cooperative efforts shall be taken away and transferred to some place where in his egregious theoretic error he has destroyed another crop in order to bring economic prosperity to the very people whose livelihood he has taken away. How idiotic.

I do not believe any Member of this House should approach this subject in a mean spirit. I have been amazed at the vitriolic exhibition of mental astigmatism evidenced in attacks on my colleagues from Wisconsin who had the temerity to speak for the dairy. My surprise was great when I heard the erudite logician of this House—one so skilled in parliamentary procedure as the Member from Missouri—in the debate on this agricultural bill, charge a member of the Wisconsin delegation, Mr. KEEFE, with deliberate misstatements. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CANNON] then proceeded to submit an array of figures so out of tune with the real facts that he was condemned by his own lips and voice.

I should like to take that gentleman by the hand and lead him into the dark land of the dairy farmer of Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, Iowa, and other dairy States—the cow land of the United States. For years everyone has been familiar with the three degrees of lies: First, there are lies; then damned lies; and third, the ultima thule of all lies—statistics. The Missouri gentleman is skilled in statistics.

Statistics a year, 2 years, 3 years old, do not tell the truth and the distinguished gentleman from around Pike County, whose greatest product was Champ Clark of blessed memory, cheated out of the presidency by a trick of oratory, would find his statistics utterly valueless if he could see an auction of Wisconsin cows—$100 cows selling from $50 to $60 because the dairy business under the beneficent paternalism of our Government has gone to that place described by John Milton where Lucifer, sliding on ice, cried after a ride that took him—

> Three times that lengthened day and night • • •
> Which way I fly is hell; myself am hell.

So I shall leave the gentleman from Missouri sliding on the Hadean ice as I turn to another distinguished, hard-seasoned logician, the gentleman from Illinois, the outstanding publicity leader, chairman of the Rules Committees, Mr. ADOLPH SABATH. In the RECORD of a few days ago the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] got into print this most marvelous piece of ponderous and platitudinous oratory:

> I am not going to claim that I brought about this great increase in appropriations for the farmers just because I have been their friend. No; but it is the Democratic administration which has demonstrated its friendship to the farmers; and I regret very much that these three Wisconsin milking men or milkmen have the nerve to claim that nothing has been done for the farmers or for the dairy industry, when I have shown we are appropriating for the dairy industry more this year than we appropriated for agriculture in general 30 years ago. I do not blame you Wisconsin Republicans trying to make political capital out of this in the hope that it might help you to come back from Wisconsin. You cannot do it. You fooled the people last year, but you cannot fool them again. They are commencing to realize that they are misled.

There was a justice of the peace in my little village where I was born up in Pennsylvania. He was also the town cobbler. A shyster lawyer who had lost a case berated this cobbler-justice. The Law was sitting on his shoemaker's bench, drivings pegs into a sole.

"I fine you," said he to the lawyer, "$5 for contempt of court."

"Why, you idiot, you cannot do that; you are not holding court, you are only a cobbler."

"Well," said Justice Kimmell, "I tell you this court is an object of contempt at all times."

I leave the gentleman from Illinois here, except to add that his district, with its slums and its rickety wood-framed houses, its poverty and its squalor, needs more Wisconsin milk to create a better citizenship that will vote intelligently, as Wisconsin's electorate did in 1938.

Now we move back to Missouri again. I hesitate here after reading the biography of the gentleman in the Congressional Directory. I should be something of a soul sitting at the feet of Gamaliel. But this gentleman from Missouri [Mr. NELSON] added his raucous note to the contemptuous refrain concerning Wisconsin. I have a profound respect for the gentleman. Compared to my own superficial knowledge of farm problems, he shines like the great Arcturus in a vastly sown azure field of lesser stars. The gentleman overwhelmed the Wisconsin delegation—all Wisconsin people—with the typical expression of Missouri hospitality. I noted one oversight. He did not say, as he should, concerning the present greatest Missourian of the time, that Tom Pendergast, with whatever remnant of his entourage is still out of the penitentiary for election frauds which kept his State in the New Deal column, would be the chairman of the reception committee when we led our black and white cows down to feed upon the luscious bluegrass of Missouri. I take pleasure therefore in revising and correcting the satiric words of the gentleman from Missouri. I remember my first trip into his State, when as a youth I was traveling to St. Joe to take a job in a newspaper. I heard a great noise as we stood at a station. The circumambient air was torn by a terrific blare. I looked at my companion in the seat of a crowded day coach.

"Don't worry," he said, "that is the whistle on a mule factory—our biggest industry."

It was a jackass braying.

So reluctant as I am, I leave my distinguished colleague [Mr. NELSON] to his mules.

Forms of farming are regional. The tobacco of Virginia and North Carolina cannot be grown in Minnesota and Wisconsin. Cotton is of the South—so is sugar. The peanut is a southern article—even gumbo is not so good north of the Ohio River. The semitropic fruits have their habitat. This has been true over the whole period of our American existence. You can raise better mules in Tennessee and Missouri than in Wisconsin. Not every hillside will produce good apples. You cannot raise the Albemarle pippin in Wisconsin. We raise potatoes but we make no pretensions of seeking the market from Maine or Idaho.

Our first great problem is distribution. There is not a written word in any agricultural bill from 1933 to now that gives so much as a laughing consideration to this phase. Those people who think a bowl of grease from hogs' backbones is a spread for corn pone rather than butter could not be interested. We need more education in eating dairy products.

If they start dairying down South they will have to open schools in the use of butter as a spread for bread.

We want clothes made from southern cotton. We want the yellow yams and sweetpotatoes. We want the early spring vegetables, the onions, lettuce, beans, strawberries raised in the great truck garden of the South. We cannot produce them in their season. We disagree with the unskilled and uninformed idea of the President of the United States about being so completely one in all. I quote here from the speech of my colleague, AUGUST H. ANDRESEN, as already printed in the RECORD of April 5, quoting the President in an interview when he said:

That milk and cream for Florida came from Wisconsin and Minnesota and Iowa and Illinois. * * *

You and I know * * * the (Southern) States can produce perfectly good milk and cream.

I went * * * to buy some apples. * * * The only ones I could find came from Washington and Oregon.

I went to buy meat. * * * The only meat I could buy came via Omaha and Kansas City and Chicago.

I wanted * * * a pair of shoes. * * * The only shoes I could buy had been made in Boston or Binghamton, N. Y., or St. Louis.

I don't believe that the South is so broke that it cannot put its own capital into the establishment of its own enterprises.

The President's lack of knowledge of the regional distribution of production is pitiful—nothing less.

Now, Mr. Speaker, may I sum up the dairy condition of today:

An industry differing entirely from all others in agriculture.

An enormous investment in plant and machinery.

A market restricted by monopoly in great consuming centers.

An industry given the least attention by the Agricultural Department but taken as a matter of course. "You have got to milk the cows."

We resent the attitude. We want definite attention. We are tired of contemptuous phrases and absurd statistics. We are rebellious and vocal. We want the balloonic-minded Agricultural Department to get down to terra firma.

We want the butter- and cheese-buying program to be renewed. We want the people on relief to get butter on their bread. We want this Government to stop its reciprocal-trade program that has destroyed our own market. There is but one great market for American products—that is the American market. All else, like the old hymn, is "shifting sand."

I put a resolution into this House 3 months ago. It asked that the Agricultural Committee investigate the effect on agricultural markets. This is the resolution, No. 47:

Whereas there is substantial disagreement throughout the country concerning the effect of reciprocal-trade agreements upon agriculture; and

Whereas it is desirable that full information concerning the effect of such agreements be before the Congress in order that Congress may determine its policy with respect to agriculture and foreign trade: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Committee on Agriculture is authorized and directed, as a whole or by subcommittee, to investigate the effect of trade agreements made under section 350 of the Tariff Act of 1930 upon the markets for and prices of agricultural commodities, including livestock and dairy products.

The committee shall report to the House as soon as practicable during the present Congress the results of its investigations, together with such recommendations as it deems desirable.

For the purposes of this resolution the committee, or any subcommittee thereof, is authorized to sit and act during the present Congress at such times and places within the United States, whether or not the House is sitting, has recessed, or has adjourned, to hold such hearings, to require the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, and to take such testimony as it deems necessary. Subpenas shall be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee or any member designated by him, and shall be served by any person designated by such chairman or member. The chairman of the committee or any member thereof may administer oaths to witnesses.

It went to the Rules Committee. Do you suppose it will ever get out of that cemetery, whose superintendent of graves is ADOLPH SABATH? No; never. He does not dare do it. He would be scared to death if he did at what might be found. I challenge him to put it to a hearing. Let him get up here and tell about it.

Mr. Speaker, we are in dire straits as the Nation's greatest industry. Somehow in this place I remember the Alamo. Since my childhood days that place in Texan history has clung to my soul. There Americans, battling for a great cause, the cause of liberty, fought to their death. And when the dead were counted no man was there who did not have his face to the foe. There was the soul of America, to face its enemies, to lose but win, to die but live—to live in eternity of remembrance.

We must not have an Alamo for American agriculture. I plead with you. You men of cotton, of sugar, of corn, of wheat, remember your obligations to the man who milks the cow, to the industry that feeds 5,000,000 children every day, now in the depth of its depression.

In the matter of farm foreclosures, I introduce this letter from the Farm Credit Administration to show what is happening not only all over the country, but in the State of Wisconsin:

Farm-mortgage foreclosures, about which you inquired in your letter of April 8, are estimated by the Farm Credit Administration at 17,304 in the entire United States during the last 6 months of 1938, or about 7.4 foreclosures per thousand farms under mortgage on January 1, 1935. This estimate, which includes foreclosures by all types of lenders, is based on reports received by the Farm Credit Administration from counties including from 22 to 30 percent of the farms in the United States. The data are for actual foreclosure sales only, excluding properties deeded voluntarily to the mortgagee.

During the period from July through December 1938, the Federal land banks have completed foreclosures (excluding voluntary deeds) on 2,832 Federal land-bank loans, of which 262 were in the State of Wisconsin. The Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation has completed foreclosures on 2,493 land-bank-commissioner loans during the same period, of which 168 were in the State of Wisconsin.

I summon Mr. Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace to the bar of public opinion.

Why, with all your millions spent on bracing a cotton market, did May cotton sell at 7.99 and spot Middling at 8.74, Monday, April 10?

Why, Mr. Wallace, did wheat sell at an average of 69 cents Monday? You have spent millions of taxpayers' money bolstering wheat.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that the table of grain prices be incorporated in my remarks.

If one reads this market report, he will find conclusive evidence of what an utter failure Mr. Wallace has been and how completely the farm program has failed. It has been a slow suicide or murder, like feeding ground glass to the victim.

It was once said that the world's barometer of business was regulated by the price of wheat in Liverpool. All other commodities rose and fell in sympathy with wheat. That is no longer true. It may have been so in the days of William Jennings Bryan, who thought and spoke for a wheat bushel of the value of one silver dollar. The standard now, the barometer now, is steel, its output and its price. As steel goes so goes business. If steel is prosperous, this Nation prospers; we can sell wheat, corn, hogs, cotton, butter, and cheese. Steel-mill prosperity means a thousand other mills are operating. But here is this morning's story of steel:

CLEVELAND, April 10.—Twenty-two leading steel companies, representing 92.5 percent of the Nation's total ingot capacity, incurred a $10,936,841 deficit after all charges but before dividends in 1938, the magazine Steel's annual financial survey showed today. In 1937 the same producers had $211,479,861 net profit.

Total income before deducting bond interest was $22,061,470, compared with $241,938,183 in 1937. The year's income, insufficient to meet funded-debt interest, indicated a 0.57-percent return on total capitalization, the lowest since 1934.

Taxes paid by 21 of the 22 companies, Steel said, totaled $94,514,280 in 1938 against $159,992,152 in 1937.

For 18 of the reporting firms operations averaged 39.3 percent of ingot capacity in 1938 against 71.5 percent in 1937. Net sales of 19 companies totaled $1,015,773,603, a 39.2-percent decrease from the 1937 figure of $1,670,958,840. The leading producer did not report net sales, however, the publication said.

Of the 17 largest producers, only 2 showed earnings on common stock, National Steel Corporation, with $3.05, and Inland Steel Co., with $3.11.

Mr. Speaker, we can solve every agricultural problem by taking the poisoned hand of Government off industry. We need freedom of action. Six years of strangulation and guinea-pig experiments by bulging brain theorists have failed. We are going on gayly on this broad and flowery highway of failure so long as we keep this administration in office. There is a remedy. It cannot be applied until 1940.

Mr. Speaker, we are going to change this administration in 1940. We are going to change the emblem of the Republican Party from an elephant to a cow. We shall decorate her with cotton bouquets.

My one deep regret is that in that result in 1940 by the inexorable operation of politics we shall have to elect a new Speaker of this House. I may say that out of my own party it will be a task, indeed, to find one so fair, so competent, so universally loved and respected as the present Speaker of the House.

In testimony thereof for myself I shall send down to Alabama one perfect specimen of the black-and-white cow of Wisconsin, that upon her product he may have long life and good health and in anticipation vote for her preservation and the industry she represents. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. KELLER], may have permission to extend his own remarks and include therein a speech delivered by our former colleague, Mr. Binderup.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and to include therein an address delivered by Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, of Missouri, at Chicago last week before the Convention on Interstate Trade Barriers.

SENATE

MONDAY, APRIL 17, 1939

The Chaplain, Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God and Heavenly Father, who dwellest in all things, who art the Soul of the universe and the Light of the mind of man: We thank Thee that Thou hast so formed the world and made the human heart that we cannot escape Thee, for, even though we fail to discern Thy coming, Thou dost always find some secret way within, and the silence of the soul announceth Thou art there. Interpret, then, to us, we pray Thee, the law of spirit, of being, by which star to star vibrates light and soul to soul shines through a finer element of its own, that in nature's revelation we may find the vibrant note of joy and beauty, and in contact with the Person of the Risen Christ we may find His sublime and gracious presence to be deeper than all thought, stronger than all argument, to bring us back to Thee, in whom we live and move and have our being. May this living faith, O Father, be the inspiration of today and of all the days that are to come. We ask it in the Saviour's name. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Thursday, April 13, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

CENTRAL STATISTICAL COMMITTEE AND CENTRAL STATISTICAL BOARD

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Chairman of the Central Statistical Board, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to extend the life of the Central Statistical Committee and the Central Statistical Board pending further consideration by Congress of the Board's special report to the President on the Returns Made by the Public to the Federal Government, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

DISPOSITION OF EXECUTIVE PAPERS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate 11 letters from the Archivist of the United States, transmitting, pursuant to law, lists of papers and documents on the files of the Departments of the Treasury, the Interior, and Agriculture, the Federal Reserve System, the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Works Progress Administration, and The National Archives (5), which are not needed in the conduct of business and have no permanent value or historical interest, and requesting action looking to their disposition, which, with the accompanying papers, were referred to a Joint Select Committee on the Disposition of Papers in the Executive Departments.

The VICE PRESIDENT appointed Mr. BARKLEY and Mr. GIBSON members of the committee on the part of the Senate.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following joint memorial of the Legislature of Oregon, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce:

House Joint Memorial 3

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

We, the memorialists, the Fortieth Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, convened in regular session, respectfully represent that:

Whereas the State of Oregon (in common with other Western States) has acquired and exercised jurisdiction and control over the nonnavigable waters of the State and over navigable waters of the State, excepting insofar as the Federal Government has exercised jurisdiction and control over such navigable streams for navigation purposes; and

Whereas titles to the waters within the State have been acquired, adjudicated, and determined in this State under the Oregon system of water titles and very large, extensive, and complicated property values have been built up in reliance upon such titles and the continuance of such system of titles for the protection of both perfected and inchoate rights; and

Whereas any suspension of such system of water titles or interference with its continued operation or the inauguration of a new system for future acquired rights or the completion of existing inchoate rights will result in chaotic conditions, loss of property values, instability of titles, and retardation of the development of our water resources: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Oregon (the senate jointly concurring therein), That the State of Oregon asserts the principle of State ownership and control of both navigable and nonnavigable waters of the State, subject only to such control by the United States as may be necessary in the actual preservation of the navigability of navigable streams, and hereby requests our Representatives in Congress to oppose any action upon the part of the Federal Government tending to deprive this State of such rights.

Resolved, That a certified copy of this joint memorial be sent forthwith to the President of the United States and the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to each of the members of the congressional delegation from the State of Oregon.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a joint resolution of the Legislature of New Hampshire urging the Congress to take immediate action designed to solve the problem of old-age security, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

(See resolution printed in full when presented today by Mr. BRIDGES.)

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a resolution of Local Union No. 5937, United Mine Workers of America, of Florence, Colo., protesting against amendment of the National Labor Relations Act, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the Massachusetts State Board of Housing, Boston, Mass., favoring the enactment of the bill (S. 591) to amend the United States Housing Act of 1937, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted at Albany, N. Y., by the Convention of the New York State Hairdressers & Cosmetologists Association, Inc., favoring amendments to the Social Security Act providing for modification of rates for all service industries and particularly the beauty-shop industry, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution of the City Council of Minneapolis, Minn., protesting against the enactment of legislation to tax public securities of municipalities, and so forth, either by levying a tax on the income thereof, or otherwise, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also laid before the Senate a telegram in the nature of a petition from Mabelle Houghton Plumb, of New York City, N. Y., praying that the United States may keep out of war, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by Local No. 600, National Federation of Federal Employees, of New Orleans, La., protesting against the enactment of legislation to terminate, discontinue, or dissolve the Inland Waterways Corporation, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also laid before the Senate petitions of sundry citizens of the States of Alabama, Indiana, New York, and West Virginia, praying for the enactment of the so-called Wagner-Van Nuys-Capper antilynching bill, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah presented the petition of the Maryland Committee for Concerted Peace Efforts, Baltimore, Md. (transmitted by Jessie L. Snow, executive secretary), and also the petitions of various organizations and sundry citizens, all in the State of Maryland, praying for the enactment of the so-called Thomas (of Utah) resolution, being the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 67) to amend the Neutrality Act, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. FRAZIER presented the petitions of sundry citizens of the State of North Dakota praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. CAPPER presented a resolution of Ash Valley Grange, No. 1436, of Larned, Kans., favoring the enactment of legislation to protect producers, manufacturers, distributors, and consumers from the unrevealed presence of substitutes in manufactured wool products, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. TAFT presented a petition of sundry citizens (ministers and laymen) of the State of Ohio, praying that in the present state of international affairs a day be set aside for prayer and worship of the God of the Nations, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. MEAD presented a resolution of the Council of the City of Schenectady, N. Y., protesting against the enactment of legislation to authorize the taxation of municipal bonds, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Jackson Heights, Long Island, N. Y., praying for the enactment of the so-called Ludlow resolution providing a referendum on war, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

RESOLUTION OF NEW HAMPSHIRE LEGISLATURE—OLD-AGE SECURITY

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I present to the Senate a joint resolution passed by the New Hampshire Legislature memorializing the Congress of the United States to make provision during the present session of Congress for ample old-age security. The resolution is signed by the speaker of the house, the president of the senate, the Governor of the State, and attested by the secretary of state. I ask that the joint resolution be printed in the body of the RECORD as a part of my remarks, and referred to the appropriate committee.

There being no objection, the resolution was referred to the Committee on Finance, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to provide ample old-age security and to insure complete and impartial consideration of the General Welfare Act of 1939

Whereas the principle of old-age security is now fully recognized throughout this Nation; and

Whereas it is becoming increasingly imperative that ample comfort and freedom from economic stress be provided for the aged; and

Whereas thousands of the citizens of New Hampshire believe that the enactment into law of the General Welfare Act of 1939 (Townsend national recovery plan) would accomplish the above purposes and also be of immense benefit to business in general: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Senate and House of Representatices of the State of New Hampshire in general court convened, do hereby urge the Congress of the United States to take immediate action designed to solve the problem of old-age security; and to continue and expeditiously to complete full and impartial hearings on the General Welfare Act of 1939; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the President of the United States and to the presiding officers of the legislative branches of the Federal Government; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the United States Senator STYLES BRIDGES, United States Senator CHARLES W. TOBEY, Congressman ARTHUR B. JENKS, and Congressman FOSTER STEARNS, requesting them to do all in their power to expedite the purposes of this resolution.

ANSEL N. SANBORN,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
ROBERT O. BLOOD,
President of the Senate.

Passed April 12, 1939.

FRANCIS P. MURPHY,
Governor.

Attest:

ENOCH D. FULLER,
Secretary of State.

ATTITUDE OF UNITED STATES TOWARD WORLD CONDITIONS

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, as indicated on Thursday last, I desire to take this occasion to express some views which I entertain as to what I conceive should be our attitude toward present world conditions.

Mr. President, the international situation is so tense, surrounded as it is by an atmosphere of belligerent talk and action, that it seems almost too fragile to warrant discussion. Some urge timorousness and restraint from even mentioning the subject of our relations with foreign nations. These predicate their delicacy, without doubt, on the thought that whatever we as Americans might say, whether conciliatory, pacific, or in good will and friendship, may be interpreted by the new crop of European and Oriental war lords in such ways as to beget their hostility, impair international friendships, and threaten peace. There is another group of American jingoists who at slightest provocation wave the flag and indulge in self-adulation, ultranationalistic utterances, and sometimes even veiled threats which lead to serious misunderstanding among other nations and peoples. Neither of these attitudes finds support in my philosophy of government. I believe that among nations, as among men as individual beings, possessed of ideals and souls, no friendship is worth while or indeed can be lasting unless it is based upon mutual good will, understanding, and capable of frank discussion of common problems.

I deem it is the sworn duty of every American statesman, especially those in the United States Senate, to whose custody and judgment the Constitution fixes responsibility in part for sharing with the executive department of the Government the determination of foreign policy, to speak out frankly and boldly when the occasion demands it to safeguard the interests of the American people and protect our country against the threatening ravages of war.

Now, if ever, is the time for plain talk—talk for the benefit of war mongers the world over, so they may know where we stand, what we will undertake to further world peace, and, more specifically, to renounce those obligations sought to be imposed upon us by selfish powers abroad which we unqualifiedly must refuse to assume—talk to reassure the American people that we intend to preserve peace by all honorable means in our power.

I speak not in any bellicose spirit, certainly not with an intent to threaten, coerce, or intimidate any foreign power. My sole interest is to lend whatever influence my voice and vote may have to promote peace here on our American Continent—above all, here in our own United States.

It is unnecessary to recite the saber-rattling, the aggrandizement, the ruthless spirit which has prevailed throughout the entire international scene in the past few years. Neither political, judicial, or spiritual devices set up for the purpose of maintaining peace have been able to stay or mitigate the brutal lust for power, territory, subjugation of innocent peoples entitled to be free, that have animated certain nations in recent times. The League of Nations has floundered, supine and helpless, before these apostles of force. The World Court has been ineffectual, indeed wholly unsought, as the juristic arbiter it was intended to be by the nations creating it. The expressions and prayers of organized religion have been received with contempt in some quarters and have proved utterly futile in endeavors to bring aggressionist nations to fuller realization of the principles of the Prince of Peace. No power on earth, nor apparently in Heaven, has been potent enough to dissuade these nations from their premeditated course of confiscation, bloodshed, and rapine.

Leaders of some nations have led their people into war; others may want war; certainly some are at present extending it warm invitation. But one thing is certain: one force, inarticulate though it be, almost inexpressible, so deep and abiding that it must be apprehended and felt rather than be heard, begs these leaders for peace. That force is the public opinion of the world. The hopes, the aspirations, the fervent desires of the common peoples everywhere are undeniably for peace.

What does this mean to us as Americans? It means just one thing—that our people, like peoples everywhere, want peace, not war. They want friendship with other nations, not entangling alliances and diplomatic commitments. They want to preserve our country inviolate from any enemy. They want to protect to the fullest measure possible our shores, our homes, our resources, and our youth. They want to avoid meddling and interfering in the affairs of Europe, whose deep-seated jealousies and antagonisms run back into the centuries and are a part of the national psychology in many countries. They insist upon strictest neutrality in word and deed toward belligerents abroad, whether in Europe or Asia.

Mr. President, any official or group of officials which follows a contrary course and undertakes to pledge this Nation to a policy of favoring or supporting any bloc or group of nations on the threshold of war, in my opinion, is flagrantly disregarding the overwhelming and emphatic will of the American people.

Are we once more, as 20 years ago, to be subjected to the poison gas of propaganda? Of what concern to us are the war plans of Germany and Italy, or of France and Great Britain? Is it not the simple truth that in Europe we have nothing but a clash of two forms of imperialism, and with that clash we have no concern, save to keep ourselves free of it?

History is repeating itself. Between 1914 and 1917, while war was raging in Europe, to which we were not a party, this country was flooded with every type of foreign propaganda. We were told that our blood cousins across the sea from whom we inherited many of our democratic and legal institutions and a common language were on the verge of annihilation, and we should rally to their assistance. We were threatened with the loss of billions of dollars our international bankers had loaned the Allies unless we joined hands to defeat the Central Powers. There was held before our eyes the terrible consequences of an autocratic, Prussian-dominated world, wherein democracy would be throttled.

Our press was deliberately loaded with stories since proved without truthful foundation of German atrocities which violated all the canons of civilized peoples. Every method known to the skilled, seasoned propagandist was employed during these years to engender hatred for the German people and prepare the minds and hearts of the American people for entrance into the war on the side of the Allies. Did our own people wish to go to war? Most emphatically not. No one in this country dared to assert on the day we entered the war that we would send soldiers to fight on European soil. In the election of 1916, despite the persistence of every type of vicious warlike propaganda, they reelected as President the candidate whose slogan was, "He kept us out of war." But, alas! not for long were we to enjoy the priceless fruits of peace. Ere many months, the power of this propaganda, the influence of the international bankers, and the stupidity of the diplomats of the Central Powers combined to catapult this Nation into a frightful international slaughter which cost us the lives of 52,000 of our young manhood, hundreds of thousands more of the best of America's youth maimed, blinded, crippled, diseased, or driven stark mad, and a total cost of more than $30,000,000,000. This money came from the pockets of the American people and much of it was loaned to our allies, who have not only failed most dishonorably to pay us back but have scoffed when we asked them to do so, all the while quite proudly boasting of their balanced budgets as compared to our unbalanced one, and feverishly spending huge sums to rearm for another sacrificial offering to the gods of war.

We have replaced the money lost in that fateful adventure even though the burdens and sacrifices required to do it have weighed heavily on our people. But we can never replace or restore to grieving American mothers the country over the fine American boys who were butchered defending foreign soil, nor can we restore sight, limbs, health, or reason to the wounded and afflicted of the great World War.

We were told by these same propagandists that our battle was to "save the world for democracy," and we were sung hymns of hate against the "unspeakable Hun" in order to arouse our fury and insure our bitterest enmity. How pitiable and ironical such slogans must seem today to the heroes of 1917–18 who gave their all toward the realization of these alleged ideals—ideals which, while ardently expressed at that time, have proved by subsequent history to be founded in insincerity, duplicity, and deceit.

Today in similar fashion propaganda is frantically and brazenly spread in order to embroil us in present European disputes—disputes which are no concern of ours and which appear certain to lead to another devastating war. The motif is identical, but the methods and arguments vary slightly. New shibboleths have been created to lure us away from our accustomed and desired pursuits of peace.

This time not only is democracy threatened with extinction, according to the propagandists, but the whole economic system is under attack and facing imminent destruction. This forbidding picture is portrayed: On one side are arrayed the so-called totalitarian states; on the other the democracies. The former are pictured as Frankenstein monsters intent on decimating every vestige of democracy, capitalism, and human freedom; the latter as white-plumed knights in armor heroically waging war to the finish against the evil forces that would destroy civilization and liberty. In the press and over the radio we are fairly overwhelmed with these arguments—reasons why we should take our place on the side of the so-called altruistic democracies in the alleged death struggle going on with the so-called destructive totalitarian states.

The briefest sort of reflection is sufficient to convince any thinking person of the falsity and speciousness of the issue thus presented. Which are the enemies of democracy and which are the democracies seeking to thwart them? Are we as a government ready to set ourselves up as a judge between the simon-pure democracy assumed by some nations which are and have been for centuries notorious imperialists and other nations obsessed by grandiose complexes and devoted to newer authoritarian theories and totalitarian systems? Is it any legitimate concern of ours for purposes of friendly commercial intercourse, or for any other purpose, what form of government a foreign people embrace or how they happen to embrace it, unless of course it should be fundamentally obnoxious to standards of morals, decency, and justice that ordinarily have obtained in the past between civilized peoples and which would disturb our own security? Is it the spirit of any sound American foreign policy, not to mention the traditional policy established by Washington and long revered, cherished, and pursued, of minding our own business, for our State Department to try to determine the right and wrong of every international dispute and to select and duly stigmatize the aggressionist nation? I think the answer in the light of common sense, past experience, and enlightened self-interest must plainly be in the negative.

Mr. President, the American people emphatically desire and expect the representatives of their own Government to refrain from taking sides or expressing favor or disfavor in foreign arguments and disputes. It is utterly unthinkable that we should at this time, or any other time, or for any reason except our own self-protection, join with any foreign group or bloc of nations in a pledge or understanding designed to check by moral coercion or the threat or implication of physical force the proposed action of any other nation.

To lend the weight of our great influence or express a direct or implied pledge of support to any one side of an international controversy is to invite hostility likely to result in our involvement in war. Such a policy is offensive to that broad spirit of neutrality which the American people insist that their Government preserve in all circumstances.

International law as such no longer has force. Nations once declared war, now they wage it without formal declaration. Once, noncombatants, innocent women and children, the aged and infirm, were accorded a modicum of protection by belligerents; today, bombs and explosives are rained down upon them, without warning, like hail. Time was when territorial demands were referred to arbitration for juridical adjudication; now, territories are seized and entire peoples vassalized by a quick "land grab" at the point of a gun.

Mr. President, in a world where no respect is given age-old principles of justice and humanity, in a world which has in substantial parts renounced Christian ideals and substituted the pagan gods in their stead, or, indeed, no gods at all; in a world infiltrated with intolerance and hate, bristling with warlike feeling and gestures, there are only two safe courses for our Nation to pursue—first, absolute, unequivocal, unconditional, and determined neutrality; and, second, the speedy extension of our system of national defense so that we will be ready and able to protect this Nation against any eventuality.

A neutrality law which gives latitude to the executive department acting alone to deviate from the policy of strictest neutrality between belligerents is pregnant with danger. To allow the Executive, granting great ability and unquestioned patriotism in that person, the right to declare the existence or nonexistence of a state of war between other nations, determine the aggressor, and thus enable or disable one party or the other from obtaining materials and supplies in this country is likewise a dangerous and unwise prerogative. Much has been said about cash and carry purchases as furnishing a solution within the bounds of neutrality. But this provision presents insuperable difficulties and objections. The stronger powers—that is, those with large, effective navies—can avail themselves of cash-and-carry privileges; the weaker nations cannot. Such a provision of law would serve to permit England, France, and their allies on the Atlantic side of continental United States and Japan alone on the Pacific side of our Nation to purchase and carry away munitions and other supplies necessary for waging war. Does anyone doubt that this fact would germinate decidedly bitter and resentful feelings on the part of those nations prevented from obtaining much-needed munitions and foodstuffs to carry on a war? Our experience in 1917 furnishes ready proof of this fact.

I would like to see a law enacted as speedily as careful deliberation will permit which would suspend any and all trade with belligerents immediately upon the outbreak of hostilities, either de jure or de facto—that is, whether the hostilities have been given the dignity of a declaration of war or not. Such a law could, in my judgment, put into practical operation the sort of neutrality strongly desired and hoped for by an overwhelming majority of the American people. It would prevent, to as great an extent as any man-made law can, the development of that kind of situation in respect of our trade relations with other belligerent nations which led directly to our involvement in the last war.

I am not unmindful of the fact that a strong and unmistakable attitude of neutrality at the present time would be disappointing to nations who entertain the belief that their safety and security is a primary necessity for the safety and security of our own Nation. From these internationalists who persistently seek our alliance in support of their selfish national objectives we may continue to expect such declarations as recently appeared in the London Weekly Review. I quote:

> The United States is playing its usual game of egging on European countries to strife in the name of some nebulous political ideal while carefully avoiding any tangling alliances.

I fear this is a somewhat general opinion entertained toward us by some of the statesmen of other countries. In my opinion, this is an additional reason for a policy of strict neutrality, and particularly the avoidance "of egging on" other countries to strife with the implication that we would or might give support to those "egged on."

Mr. President, it is superfluous to speak of neutrality as affecting the world today without referring to the national defense. The "war to end wars" has indisputably begotten an entirely new crop of fast growing and fast developing potential conflicts. Europe today is sitting literally on the top of a volcano. The present instability of the European governmental system, economically, ethnically, ideologically, and politically, is fairly appalling. In such circumstances war when it does come will be horrifying in the extreme and may well again involve most of the world. It is our duty to keep out of it. We must strive mightily to insure that we avoid it. But we likewise must be fully prepared for its culmination and consequences.

It is the province and function of any well-conceived system of self-defense to include and consider every possible diplomatic and military eventuality which may affect the national safety. We can no longer adequately defend a two-ocean Nation with a one-ocean Navy. In the light of present conditions we cannot afford to rely on the indulgence of the pretended friendship of any nation on earth. A system of national defense which has to depend on friendly cooperation by the navies and aircraft of any other nation, no matter how well-disposed that nation may be at present, is faulty and insufficient adequately to serve our needs. The destruction of the Panama Canal, for instance, might throw our present one-ocean Navy system of national defense entirely out of joint.

Consequently it is self-evident that we must build our Navy and air force to meet every contingency that can possibly arise out of present world conditions. Our Navy and air force must be sufficient to combat any possible combination of foreign powers, which, by any rule of probability, may be arrayed against us.

This will be expensive and, sad to relate, an additional burden on our tax-paying citizens at a time when they are already heavily loaded with staggering debts. It will complicate the difficulty of solving our most perplexing and long-continuing domestic problems. But self-protection—guarding the lives of our people, our institutions, and our resources against possible avaricious enemies from without is cheap at any price.

Mr. President, if we provide for and scrupulously maintain absolute neutrality and a well-balanced and efficient navy that potential enemies will fear and respect us, we can secure the blessings of peace and freedom for this and generations to follow, and we will then be able to turn our attention and energy without diversion from any outside source to the very urgent problems confronting us here at home. Let us resolve to preserve America for Americans, to shun foreign wars, to close our minds resolutely against foreign propaganda, to be officially absolutely neutral, and to seek humbly but insistently the cherished ways of peace.

Mr. BARBOUR obtained the floor.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LA FOLLETTE in the chair). Does the Senator from New Jersey yield to the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. BARBOUR. I am very glad to yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. ASHURST. I thank the Senator from New Jersey for yielding to me.

Mr. President, I listened, as we always do, with great interest to the speech of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH]. That Senator has performed various services of great value to his country, but he has never spoken more patriotically or more timely than he did today. And he did not fail to suggest to us a remedy. If we follow his suggestion, we shall not become involved in a war. I quote his remarks:

> If we provide for and scrupulously maintain absolute neutrality and a well-balanced and efficiency navy that potential enemies will fear and respect us, we can secure the blessings of peace and freedom for this and generations to follow.

Mr. President, war is the natural state of Europe, excluding three or four of the small countries, and when the young men of Europe learn that there is going to be a war they become starry-eyed and hope that war may come. How strange a commentary on human nature. Those persons in America who believe that America can make any contribution toward solving the problems of Europe will look, search, and hope in vain.

Take for example Great Britain. She was put to the test and she failed. Her Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Sir John Simon, was guilty of one of the most lamentable break-downs in statesmanship in the annals of the human race. When Japan violated her treaties our then Secretary of State, Henry L. Stimson, urged Sir John Simon to join with him, Stimson, in calling the attention of Japan to this aggression and violation, which Sir John Simon declined to do. If Sir John Simon had joined with our then Secretary of State and protested, Japan would not have entered Manchuria or invaded China. It was only when Great Britain, through Sir John Simon, gave a green light to Japan by failing to protest that Japan overran China.

Mr. President, in event of war the foreign countries expect the United States to do the dying and the paying. The governments in Europe will not pay their debts. It is contrary to their principles to pay their debts; and he must indeed be a wayfaring man who believes that, with the possible exception of two or three of the smaller European countries, they will pay their debts.

Trespassing further upon the courtesy of the Senator from New Jersey, who has kindly yielded to me, let me say that if Mussolini—Il Duce—and Hitler—the Fuehrer—were today to depart this life, it would not make the slightest difference with the so-called axis of central Europe. Those nations are afflicted with what we call lycanthropy; they imagine they are werewolves, and they go raging and foaming, seeking whom they would destroy.

It was, I should say, 2 months ago that the able Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] called attention to the fact that it is not forms of government with respect to which Europe is quarreling; it is harbors, material advantages, lands, trade, and markets over which they are quarreling; and he is indeed deluded who thinks for a moment that the belligerent European countries care about forms of government, if by a particular form of action they may secure that land or market which belongs to someone else.

Mr. President, I am reminded of an allegory written, as I remember, by Joseph Addison. I believe it was Addison in the Tatler who told the tale of the upholsterer in London. The upholsterer had a good business. He kept a family coach. He had family plate. He was the best upholsterer in London. He paid his bills. But all of a sudden he began to become interested in how France, how Belgium, how the Netherlands, and other foreign nations were conducting their internal affairs. He began to neglect his business. He would ask daily when the Dutch mail would arrive. "When do we hear from France? When do we hear from Italy? When do we hear from Venice? When do we hear from Constantinople?" he would constantly inquire. He went about the streets accosting his neighbors and his customers, stopping them to discuss foreign affairs, neglecting his own upholstering business. He became busy upholstering foreign countries. Finally his business declined; his family plate and his family coach were sold. He was reduced to beggary and went about the streets—the finest upholsterer in London—begging for subsistence for his family, because he insisted upon upholstering foreign countries instead of attending to his own business.

So, Mr. President, if we in any way attempt to upholster foreign countries, we will be reduced to beggary, blood, tears, and ashes.

I congratulate the able Senator from Massachusetts on what I believe to be the apex of statesmanship in his speech this morning.

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, it seems quite obvious to me that, while individual opinions and convictions undoubtedly vary in many respects and in different degrees, there can be but two general schools of thought in respect to what our foreign policy should be. It seems quite obvious, too, that, despite our many and grave domestic problems, the question of the foreign situation and what our own position should be in respect to it eclipses all else at this particular time. If this is so, those back home in the several States are probably looking to their representatives in the Congress to state as definitely as possible their views and recommendations. I wish to make my own position, as I now see it, as clear as the present admittedly confused situation permits. Though I realize, of course, that I can speak only for myself as one of the 531 Members of the Congress of the United States, I wish to say that I hope others in increasing numbers, in both the Senate and the House, will also go on record as positively as possible as to their individual convictions.

I say this because I feel very strongly that the more quickly we, as a nation, make known our true intentions as fully and definitely as possible, the better it will be, not only for this country but for all the nations which seem to have varying opinions as to what the United States will eventually do, and varying hopes and fears as to what our ultimate action will be when and if there is another war in Europe.

As I have said, it seems to me there can be but two general schools of thought as to what the United States should do in the unhappy circumstance of another great war in Europe. The first is that for many and obvious reasons this country should, in one way or another, help and aid the democracies, Great Britain and France, if possible, without ourselves becoming embroiled in the conflict. As I see it, the first objective of this school of thought is to render such assistance even if we should, in the final analysis, in doing so be ourselves drawn into the war. Later I shall briefly mention some of the arguments that can be and are being advanced in support of this philosophy as to what our foreign policy should be—a foreign policy which, however, it must be remembered, once we are launched upon it, permits of no turning back, no escape, no second thought or further studied reflection.

The second general school of thought holds that, while our sympathies quite naturally and sincerely are with the democracies, our first objective—yes, far stronger than that—our fixed and definite and final determination, our sacred pledge to the American people is that, come what may, regardless of what may happen in Europe or what nations may become involved, or the final outcome, we, the United States of America, will definitely keep out of a war in Europe. When we have made our final decision absolutely clear to the whole world, our decision being forcefully declared and definitely understood and recognized by everyone at home and abroad, then and only then should we approach the problem of what kind of help we can render the democracies, which, I think we all agree, have our deep interest and well wishes. What aid we can render under those circumstances, I admit frankly is a great problem. However, even if it be a great problem, as I see it, it is nonetheless a true picture of our neutrality problem.

I myself cannot escape the conviction that the more quickly we make public the true situation so far as this country is concerned the less will become the confusion here and abroad as to what our real intentions are, and the more likely we are to work out some possible plan, short of war, which can really and truly help the democracies.

Personally, I admit frankly that so far as I am concerned, as yet no neutrality plan has been suggested which really meets these specifications. One reason for this is that I find that I too have been hampered by confusion in my own mind, and by fears, to put it candidly, that the foreign policy of this country is not in reality clearly understood, especially as to the situation in which we might ultimately find ourselves. How much is being said for effect, or for what might be called diplomatic expediency, or to divert our thoughts from our own domestic problems? Does short of war really mean short of war? Back of it all, I am constantly wondering who the next forgotten man is to be. Is he to be the son of the man who now lies buried in Flanders field?

There are those who point out—I know with conviction and sincerity—that in the final analysis we ourselves cannot escape getting into the war; that we cannot take the chance of the ultimate defeat of Great Britain, France, and such other nations as may join them; that our turn would be next, and then we would have to go it alone. My answer to that argument is simply that whoever engages in another European war, no matter the outcome, cannot possibly gain anything, regardless of which side wins. As I see it, there will be nothing but economic, political, and civic ruin for all, even including those who are on what might be called by some the winning side. Even if I am wrong in this position, speaking of our own Nation's position, certainly the vanquished, if one more than another is vanquished when the end finally comes, could not attack us. The so-called victors will be so wasted, on the one hand, and so harassed on the other with the multitude of problems which will confront them for many years that we who have heeded the lesson of the past war and made full preparation for our own impregnable defense and put our own disturbed economic house in order, need have no fear of any successful invasion of our shores from any quarter. Such invasion certainly would then be impossible, if it is not now impossible. On the other hand, if we again allow ourselves to be drawn into carrying arms in another European war, whether or not we are eventually on the so-called winning side, our plight will be pretty much the same as that of all the rest. We shall then share their economic and national ruin.

Obviously certain nations may not be able to avoid resort to force of arms. Unhappily for them, they may have to fight in their own self-defense, whether or not they want to do so. We all know that we, by the grace of God, do not have to fight in Europe unless we choose to do so. Nothing on earth can draw us into a European war except propaganda, emotional hysteria, or misguided thinking and leadership. We all know, too, that we now have plenty of serious troubles of our own right here in this country. Economic troubles, unemployment, and mounting debts all make for a far from normal and satisfactory state of affairs. We must also remember that troubles in one degree or another beset our own hemisphere. We now have responsibilities in the Pacific which we cannot escape. Those responsibilities are imposed upon us by the Monroe Doctrine, which, I believe, we all recognize as a purely domestic problem of our national defense.

Yes, we have plenty and to spare to attend to without raising false hopes abroad or creating false illusions at home, which surely will return to plague us if allowed to spread and grow.

In conclusion, let us make it absolutely clear as soon as possible that under no circumstances will the United States of America again become embroiled in a European war. When that decision has been made absolutely clear, then, without fooling anyone anywhere about anything, we can try to work out as best we can under those definite limitations what risks we will take, what our foreign policy will be with respect to neutrality and our relationship with other nations, and what help we can safely give those we want to help. Then, and then only, shall we see eye to eye with our fellow man at home and abroad, our conscience, minds, and aims clear, and our admitted duty and traditional position both justified and understood.

WISCONSIN CHEESE AND DAIRY INDUSTRY

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, I had intended today to speak on a domestic subject. I have listened with a great deal of interest to the remarks delivered by the able Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] and my colleague from New Jersey [Mr. BARBOUR] in relation to the great national subject of neutrality. I am satisfied of the correctness of the statement made by the Senator from Massachusetts that the people of the United States do not want war. I am also satisfied that there is in progress a tremendous campaign of propaganda. I believe that the best evidence of that is that on every Senator's desk, coming in his mail, are booklets and books and letters on the subject. Yet if I were to say one word on that subject to the people of this country it would be that there will be no war in which America will be engaged unless and until the common people of the United States themselves lose their mental perspective.

We heard here in the Senate last week, after a debate of considerable length, the challenging question: Where is the Senator who wants war? The answer was clear—not one. We are the representatives of the people. We do not want war. We think and believe and hope and pray that America will never get into war, and I say she will not get into war if the people back home think straight, act straight, and do not become creatures of hysteria or creatures of fear. Those are the twin enemies of mankind, because under the influence of either one cannot think straight.

However, Mr. President, I do not care to continue this discussion any further. I wish to talk today on a subject of great import which has to do with the very humble subject of cheese.

Having had recently, through the courtesy of the distinguished Senator from Florida, a repast of grapefruit, and having, through the courtesy of my distinguished colleague from California to my left [Mr. DOWNEY], enjoyed the celebrated American dish of ham and eggs, I am thinking that no meal can really be complete without a bit of Wisconsin cheese. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, there is something about cheese that is productive of good. It does not create gas on the brain, and, without gas on the brain, this country will not go to war. [Laughter.]

Cheese will not cause one to make a wild statement. It will not make one hate the Germans, the English, the French, the Italians, or anyone else; but it will make one love his own country; and, Mr. President, a little more thought about America and a little less sandbagging of European ideologies would not be so bad. I mean that. I think if some of us in the Senate would be a little more thoughtful and reasonable in our statements the people back home would get a clearer picture of what is going on here. So I advise the Members of the Senate to eat some cheese to keep them a little more rational and reasonable. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, for months now I have sat listening to the deliberations of this the greatest deliberative body in the world, and I have come to the conclusion that what the Senators need and what the country needs is Wisconsin cheese. [Laughter.] I am sure that from every angle cheese is the remedy. Had my friends, the distinguished leader of the majority and the distinguished Senator from South Carolina, partaken of Wisconsin cheese before they entered into the debate recently on the merits or demerits of W. P. A., I am sure the atmosphere would have been less charged.

I am creditably informed that the reason so many persons are "on the nerve"—and I presume everyone knows that "on the nerve" means "flies off the handle"—is because, as I learn from good medical authority, they are deficient in certain food elements in their bloodstream. What is the remedy when one's blood is deficient? It is Wisconsin cheese. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, there are several kinds of cheese that come from Wisconsin, and all of them are good. No matter what one's ailment may be, cheese is the remedy. The science of food chemistry tells us that there would be less need for rouge if cheese and butter were eaten. There would be fewer divorces, because cheese and butter tend to harmony and rationality. There would be more contentment. Mr. President, you never saw a cheese eater or a butter eater who did not radiate joy. Why? Because these foods are the nearest to Nature's perfect food. Why? Well, in the summer season, out of the juicy grasses, out of the sweet-scented clover, out of the luscious alfalfa and cool spring water the greatest chemist in the world—the milk cow—makes this food; and in the wintertime, out of the silage from the nut-brown corn, out of ground wheat and oats, and out of hay and alfalfa she turns out the same product.

Mr. President, in these troublous times, when we are thinking so much in terms of economy and in terms of international relationships, it might be well to turn our minds back to the countryside, back to the great State of Wisconsin. I am going to tell you, Mr. President, something about cheese. I am going to tell you a little of the history of cheese.

Hundreds of years ago—yes, thousands of years ago—a sheep herder, with staff in hand, sauntered along the hillsides of Palestine, tending his flock. He carried a day's ration of milk in a skin pouch slung over his shoulder from a leather thong. Toward the end of that hot afternoon he sought a shady spot and sat down to refresh himself—to drink his day's ration of milk. When he opened the pouch he found, however, a thickened substance instead of milk. A coagulating enzyme called rennet, still active in the pouch which had been made of calf's stomach, had curdled the milk—and mankind had its first cheese.

When American pioneers pushed westward they drove cattle from the Northeast to the Middle West. The sturdy, industrious, and frugal Scandinavian, German, Swiss, Dutch, English, Irish, and other immigrants from the Old World contributed to that splendid body of pioneers who laid the firm foundations for the 185,000 dairy farms, the 2,000 cheese factories, and other dairy plants which make up the colossal present-day dairy industry of Wisconsin. Those great pioneers selected Wisconsin because of its many natural advantages, including its temperate climate, fertile grass-producing soil, and cool crystal-clear spring water.

Seventy-five years ago this month the foundation was laid for the flourishing cheese industry in Wisconsin by Mr. Chester Hazen, who built Wisconsin's first cheese factory at Ladoga, near Ripon, Wis., which is famous as the birthplace of the Republican Party 85 years ago the 20th of last month.

The beginnings of cheesemaking in Wisconsin had been individualistic and empirical, and in the pioneer stage until about 1872. Prior to Mr. Hazen's factory the places where cheese was made had been the pioneer farms. The personalities had been the pioneer farm woman and her husband. The cow had been the ordinary native, the dairy barn the straw-strack, the feed straw and marsh hay in winter and wild grasses in summer. The cheese factory itself had been the pioneer farm kitchen, well, and cellar. The cheesemaker had been the pioneer farmer's wife, with her children her helpers. Her dairy implements had been tin milk pans and other crude equipment.

The cheese market in those early days had been the grocery store, and that often far away and glutted, providing marketing problems which persist today. The transportation had been by foot or by ox team. The cows, freshened in March or April, ran at large during the summer, and were dried off in November and December. There was no winter dairying.

WISCONSIN CHEESEMAKING TODAY

Ideal soil conditions, wonderful supplies of cool, refreshing water, and favorable weather, along with scientific manufacture and constantly improving equipment, have transformed the pioneer stage of cheesemaking to a flourishing industry today, with 2,000 cheese factories in the State of Wisconsin supplying half the Nation's cheese.

The modern Wisconsin cheese factory is a far fling from the plants used back in the days when factory cheesemaking was in its infancy. In keeping with modern trends, the Wisconsin cheese industry has expanded and has improved its buildings and its methods of manufacture.

For those who have never seen Wisconsin cheese made they can be assured of an interesting couple of hours if they will stop at one of the hundreds of factories which dot the State of Wisconsin.

Wisconsin is proud of the fact that she not only produces the most cheese but also the finest cheese.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. WILEY. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. As I understand the remarks of the Senator from Wisconsin, he is in favor of continuing the cheese factories of Wisconsin?

Mr. WILEY. I am in favor, if the Senator please, of continuing the cheese factories in any place in the United States where men can produce food of health and vigor-giving qualities, so that we can go to town and rescue ourselves from the economic slough into which some of my Democratic brethren have put us.

Mr. LUCAS. Will the Senator yield further?

Mr. WILEY. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. Am I to understand the Senator from Wisconsin feels that cheese alone will do that?

Mr. WILEY. If the Senator from Illinois, whose judgment I respect, will sit and listen a while I will demonstrate there is a remedy to be found in cheese. I have already said cheese was good for the health, for the complexion, good for keen vision. I will also demonstrate it is good even for folk from Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. It would be necessary to have a little Republican watered milk along with it to take us out of the depression, would it not?

Mr. WILEY. I would not be surprised if we would have to have a lot of watered "products," especially if some of the Democratic doctrines continue. But I will go along with cheese and Wisconsin dairy products, which are not watered.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BONE in the chair). Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield further to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. WILEY. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. I was discussing Republican watered milk.

Mr. WILEY. The Senator can have the floor to discuss any kind of milk he wants, especially as he comes from Illinois.

WISCONSIN CHEESE HEALTHFUL, HIGH IN FOOD VALUE, LOW IN COST

The American people have begun to discover the ancient fact that cheese is one of the most important items for the daily diet; that it is an ever-present and readily adaptable food to be included in each week's budget. Europeans consume three or four times the amount of cheese eaten by Americans. Citizens of Norway have cheese quite regularly, even for breakfast. If we consumed as much cheese per capita as do the people of Holland, the dairy problem of this country would be solved, and that is what I am leading up to.

A pound of Wisconsin whole-milk cheese represents 4 quarts of clean pure milk. Wisconsin cheese is a health food; Wisconsin cheese provides high food value at low cost. Wisconsin natural cheeses retain their surprisingly high food value in proteins, in fats, in phosphorus, iron, and calcium, all so essential in the building of bones, flesh, and muscles, and in regulating the functions of the body; but, best of all, Wisconsin cheese contains vitamin A, making Wisconsin cheese a concentrated body-building and growth-stimulating food of high value. And Wisconsin cheese is economical compared with other foods. It is always ready for human consumption.

While I realize that many of my brother Senators are at lunch, I desire to say that I have seen many of them taking A B C vitamin tablets for nourishment. I suggest that they use Wisconsin cheese, and see how much better they will get along. [Laughter.]

Wisconsin cheese, as one of Nature's most perfect foods, contains, in addition to proteins, fats, phosphorus, iron, and calcium, an abundance of vitamins.

Cheese is easy of digestion, and is fully absorbed by the body. Over 95 percent of the protein and 95 percent of the fat in Wisconsin cheese have been found to be used by the human body. No unfavorable or abnormal consequences follow eating large quantities of Wisconsin cheese as a part of a well-balanced meal. Cheese lends itself excellently to the enrichment of all the foods made from cereals. Corn, wheat, barley, and rice are all made more nearly perfect foods by being combined or served with cheese. The American Medical Association recommends cheese. Physicians prescribe cheese for children to cure nervousness. The family doctor even prescribes cheese for infants.

Let me repeat: Wisconsin cheese is digestible. Exhaustive studies have been made, and have revealed the truth that anyone who wishes to do so may use cheese for his own best good. This verdict sets at rest all qualms concerning the digestibility of cheese eaten in sufficient quantities to be the principal source of protein. These scientific tests reveal that cheese is from 90 to 99 percent digestible.

The consumption of Wisconsin cheese twice a day, or even three times a day, would tremendously improve our American food habits and general health. By acquiring the Wisconsin cheese habit—a good habit which means high food value at low cost—the Members of the Senate can maintain the suppleness, vitality, and stamina of youth.

WISCONSIN CHEESE IS STAMPED AND DATED

It is not generally known that under a State law, every cheese made in Wisconsin must carry the date on which it was made. The date stamp is placed on the cheese at the factory, and remains on the cheese when it is put into storage for curing. This date, stamped on the cheese, enables anyone to get the kind of cheese he likes. All it is necessary to do is to look for the date on the cheese when it is bought at the grocery store.

When buying cheese, look for the grade stamp which includes the words "State Brand," outlined by the map of the State of Wisconsin. "State Brand" denotes high-grade Wisconsin cheese.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILEY. I yield to the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. DAVIS. Was it not James G. Blaine who first made the request that we have Wisconsin cheese in the Senate restaurant?

Mr. WILEY. I am very glad to get that information, and that Wisconsin cheese is now served in the Senate restaurant. I hope in a few days to have one of our Wisconsin cheeses for all the Members of the Senate, and I expect to see resulting smiles on their faces and much improved health.

Mr. DAVIS. Can a real good Welsh rarebit be made out of Wisconsin cheese?

Mr. WILEY. Speaking to a good Welshman, I realize that the best Welsh rarebit in the world can be made from it, Mr. President. [Laughter.]

Remember, my good friends of the Senate, Wisconsin cheese is valuable in the diet because it is a body builder, because it supplies energy, because it promotes health, and because it adds flavor and variety to the diet. Cheese is valuable for the nutrition of young and old, of sick and well, of inactive and hard-working persons.

Wisconsin cheese is the only food that can be served in any part of the meal, from salad to dessert, and at any time, anywhere. Do your body good by acquiring the Wisconsin cheese habit. Eat Wisconsin cheese regularly for its food value, for its economy, for its taste appeal. Wisconsin cheese is good for every American. It is good for you.

For 8 long years now we have been trying to remedy our economic situation in this country by a lot of un-American methods. Now I am telling Senators how, to the benefit of the Nation, they can solve one of the major problems of the country without asking the Government for a cent, merely by reverting to good American doctrine, and in so doing they can improve the health and the business of the entire Nation.

The method is so simple that, of course, the "wiseacres" of the present overlook it. Let me tell it to you. Let the people of the country who need good, rich, invigorating food buy Wisconsin cheese and butter. Let them eat to the fill of dairy products. What will be the result? The dairy problem will be solved. If we consumed as much cheese and butter per capita in this country as are consumed in Holland, we would not have enough butter and cheese of our own. We would have better health.

Mr. President, the use of cod-liver oil is somtimes recommended for the benefit of weak-chested or consumptive folks. No one ever saw a person who ate a large amount of butter and cheese who had consumption. No one ever saw a woman who ate enough butter and cheese, and exercised sufficiently, who needed rouge. [Laughter.]

Recently I have listened to the humanitarian sentiments of the distinguished Senator from Indiana [Mr. MINTON], who told us how he wanted to help the underprivileged persons who have no jobs. I respect him for those sentiments, though I think he and his confederates have not thought constructively in terms of the whole problem but see only a segment thereof. I ask the distinguished Senator to revert to simplicity of method. What do I mean? I think it was Savonarola who said, "Give light, and the people will find the way." If the people of America will buy the cheese and dairy products of Wisconsin and thus help themselves on the highway toward health and finer living, they will solve the W. P. A. problem in Wisconsin, and they will create in Wisconsin a buying market for cotton, and in turn will solve the cotton problem, the wheat problem, and other problems. The demand for cotton manufactured goods in this country is here now and is of such proportions that, if coupled with buying power, it would help clean up the storage cottons; but the people have not the wherewithal to buy.

It might be interesting here to make a comparison, from figures that have been given to me by the Government, of cotton and dairy farms as to cash income, value of property, direct labor, number of farms, and number of persons on the farms.

I ask unanimous consent at this time to insert in the RECORD, without reading it, an exhibit making such a comparison.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

Cotton and dairy farms—cash income, value of property, direct labor, number of farms, and number of persons on these farms

	Year	Cotton farms	Dairy farms
Gross cash income from sale of cotton and cottonseed and dairy products	1934	$863,000,000	$1,133,000,000
	1935	712,000,000	1,289,000,000
	1936	905,000,000	1,459,000,000
	1937	884,000,000	1,530,000,000
	1938	667,000,000	1,430,000,000
Value of land and buildings	1930	4,854,000,000	5,967,000,000
Value of implements and machinery	1930	279,000,000	576,000,000
Total, land and buildings, implements and machinery		5,133,000,000	6,543,000,000
Man-hours of direct labor on cotton and on dairy cattle[1]	1928–32	3,446,000,000	3,700,000,000
	1927–36	3,052,000,000	[2]
	1938	2,281,000,000	3,901,000,000
Number of farms	1930	1,640,000	605,000
Number of persons on farms[3]	1930	8,200,000	2,900,000

[1] Includes only an estimate of labor directly employed on cotton and on dairy cattle; does not include labor employed in other work on these farms.
[2] Not computed.
[3] This is an estimate arrived at by multiplying the average number of persons per farm in 1930 in the principal cotton and dairy States by the number of cotton and dairy farms, respectively.

Mr. WILEY. In 1937 the Government figures show that the total cash from farm incomes, from all crops and livestock and livestock products, amounted to $8,208,000,000. In that period cotton and cottonseed products amounted to $884,000,000, and dairy products to $530,000,000.

The cotton cash income is 10.77 percent of the total farm income in 1937. The dairy cash income is 18.6 percent of the total farm income in 1937.

In 1937 the total dairy production in the United States in terms of "pounds of milk" was 103,132,000,000. The total number of pounds of butterfat in the United States for that year was 4,063,000,000. Wisconsin's total dairy production was 11,378,000,000 pounds of milk and 415,000,000 pounds of butterfat.

I desire again to call the attention of this distinguished body and the attention of the Nation to the fact that the week of April 24 will be known as Wisconsin cheese week. An advertisement will appear in the Saturday Evening Post with respect to Wisconsin's celebrating the seventy-fifth anniversary of the birth of the cheese industry in Wisconsin.

I am informed that the District of Columbia and several States will join in the celebration of Wisconsin cheese week, and that the papers here in our National Capital will carry full-page features and advertisements describing the value of Wisconsin cheese. As a matter of fact, thousands of pounds of Wisconsin cheese have been purchased by wide-awake and ever-growing concerns here, and included in the purchase is a cheese in one piece weighing 2,200 pounds.

My earnest hope, Mr. President, is that from now on the Congress of the United States and the people of the District of Columbia will set a shining example to the Nation in the consumption of this valuable national and Wisconsin product, and that all our citizens may realize not only the great food value of this product but the imperative need of reaching out in a brotherly spirit and helping their brothers who produce this remarkable food. In so doing they will be simply helping themselves.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. ADAMS obtained the floor.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield so that I may suggest the absence of a quorum?

Mr. ADAMS. Certainly.

Mr. DAVIS. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Danaher	Johnson, Colo.	Pittman
Andrews	Davis	King	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Donahey	La Follette	Reed
Austin	Downey	Lee	Russell
Bailey	Ellender	Lodge	Schwartz

Caraway	Hill	Nye	Walsh
Clark, Mo.	Holman	Overton	White
Connally	Johnson, Calif.	Pepper	Wiley

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-four Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

SECOND DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the call of the calendar be dispensed with and that the Senate resume the consideration of House bill 5219, the unfinished business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5219) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the first amendment of the committee, which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 2, line 3, to insert the following:

SENATE

For miscellaneous items, exclusive of labor, fiscal year 1939, $75,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 2, after line 5, to insert:

The unobligated balance of the appropriation for miscellaneous items, exclusive of labor, contingent fund of the Senate, for the fiscal year 1939, is reappropriated and made available for the fiscal year 1940.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 2, after line 9, to insert:

The unobligated balance of the appropriation for expenses of inquiries and investigations ordered by the Senate, contingent fund of the Senate, for the fiscal year 1939, is reappropriated and made available for the fiscal year 1940.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 2, after line 13, to insert:

For repairs, improvements, equipment, and supplies for Senate kitchens and restaurants, Capitol Building and Senate Office Building, including personal and other services, to be expended from the contingent fund of the Senate, under supervision of the Committee on Rules, United States Senate, fiscal year 1939, $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 3, line 23, after the numerals "1939", to strike out "$1,086,195" and insert "$1,600,000", so as to read:

CIVIL AERONAUTICS AUTHORITY

Civil Aeronautics Authority fund, 1939: For carrying out the provisions of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938, in addition to the amount provided for that purpose by section 203 (b) of said act, fiscal year 1939, $1,600,000, of which $144,750 shall be available exclusively for the procurement of airplanes for the use of the Air Safety Board.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 5, to strike out:

UNITED STATES EMPLOYEES' COMPENSATION COMMISSION

United States Employees' Compensation Commission: For an additional amount for expenditure in accordance with the provisions of section 16 of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1938, fiscal year 1939, $2,000,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, line 9, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$1,100,000" and insert "$1,600,000", so as to read:

FEDERAL HOUSING ADMINISTRATION

Salaries and expenses, Federal Housing Administration: In addition to the funds made available to the Federal Housing Administration for administrative expenses by the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1939, and Public Resolution No. 3 of the Seventy-sixth Congress, approved March 4, 1939, not to exceed $1,600,000 of the mutual mortgage insurance fund and not to exceed $900,000 of the funds advanced to the Administration by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation are hereby made available for administrative expenses of such Administration for the fiscal year 1939, including the same objects specified under this head in such act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 7, after line 16, to insert:

TEMPORARY NATIONAL ECONOMIC COMMITTEE

For an additional amount for each and every purpose requisite and incident to carrying out the provisions of the joint resolution of the Seventy-fifth Congress entitled "Joint resolution to create a Temporary National Economic Committee," approved June 16, 1938, to be immediately available and to remain available until expended, including rent and personal services in the District of Columbia and elsewhere by contract or otherwise; contract stenographic reporting services; books of reference; traveling expenses; employment of messenger service by contract or otherwise, and all other necessary expenses, $600,000, of which amount not to exceed $120,000 shall be available for expenditure by the Temporary National Economic Committee, and not to exceed $480,000 shall be available for allocation by the President to the departments and agencies represented on the committee to enable them to carry out their functions under the joint resolution: Provided, That section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U. S. C. 5) shall not be construed to apply to any purchase or service rendered hereunder when the aggregate amount involved does not exceed the sum of $100: Provided further, That no part of this sum shall be available for expenditure unless and until such expenditure is authorized by law and a Budget estimate covering such amount has been submitted by the President in pursuance thereof: Provided further, That the committee shall file reports as required by the said resolution prior to March 1, 1940.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "District of Columbia," on page 10, line 12, after the numerals "1938", to strike out "$11,682.25" and insert "$11,812.95", so as to read:

Fees of jurors and witnesses: For an additional amount for fees of jurors and witnesses, District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, including the same objects specified under this head in the District of Columbia Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1938, $11,812.95.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 11, after line 9, to insert:

Department of vehicles and traffic, inspection of motor vehicles, highway fund, District of Columbia: For an additional amount for carrying out the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide for the annual inspection of all motor vehicles in the District of Columbia," approved February 18, 1938, including the same objects and under the same conditions and limitations applicable to the appropriation for this purpose in the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1938, approved June 25, 1938, $22,330.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Department of Agriculture," on page 12, after line 13, to insert:

BUREAU OF ENTOMOLOGY AND PLANT QUARANTINE

Dutch elm disease eradication: For an additional amount for Dutch elm disease eradication, including the same objects and conditions specified under this heading in the Agricultural Appropriation Act for the fiscal year 1939, $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 13, after line 8, to insert:

THE SUGAR ACT OF 1937

Administration of the Sugar Act of 1937: For an additional amount to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to carry into effect the provisions, other than those specifically relating to the Philippine Islands, of the Sugar Act of 1937, approved September 1, 1937 (7 U. S. C. 1100–1183), fiscal year 1939, including the same objects specified under this head in the Department of Agriculture Appropriation Act, 1939, $5,000,000, together with $1,500,000 of the unobligated balance of the appropriation provided under this head by the joint resolution approved February 4, 1938 (52 Stat. 27); in all, not to exceed $6,500,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Department of the Interior," at the top of page 17, to insert:

BUREAU OF RECLAMATION, GENERAL FUND, CONSTRUCTION

Parker Dam power project, Arizona: For continuation of construction of the Parker power plant, transmission lines, substations, and appurtenant works, fiscal years 1939 and 1940, $4,000,000, from the general fund of the Treasury, to be repaid from net revenues received under contracts made pursuant to the authority of the act of August 30, 1935 (49 Stat. 1039).

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, after line 2, to insert:

ST. ELIZABETHS HOSPITAL

Continuous-treatment buildings: For an additional amount for construction and equipment of two continuous-treatment buildings, including preparation of plans and specifications, advertising, and supervision, fiscal year 1939, to remain available until June 30, 1940, $70,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Department of Justice," on page 19, line 23, after the numerals "1939", to strike out "$300,000" and insert "$600,000", so as to read:

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

Salaries and expenses: For an additional amount for salaries and expenses, Federal Bureau of Investigation, fiscal year 1939, including the same objects specified under this head in the Department of Justice Appropriation Act, 1939, $600,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Department of Labor," on page 25, line 1, after the word "available", to strike out "exclusively for printing and binding", so as to read:

BUREAU OF LABOR STATISTICS

Not to exceed $2,000 of the unexpended balance of the appropriation "Investigation of labor conditions in Hawaii, Bureau of Labor Statistics, 1939," contained in the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1938, is hereby continued available until June 30, 1940.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 25, after line 2, to strike out:

CHILDREN'S BUREAU

Salaries and expenses, Conference on Children in a Democracy: For expenses of holding a conference on children in a democracy and conducting the necessary research and consultation work preparatory thereto; personal services, including employment of experts and temporary assistants without regard to the civil-service laws and regulations; purchase of reports and material for reports; travel, including attendance at meetings when authorized by the Secretary of Labor and including traveling expenses and subsistence of consultants and of members of conference committees; and other necessary expenses, fiscal year 1939, to continue available until June 30, 1940, $18,000.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I hope this amendment will not be agreed to. It proposes to strike out an appropriation of $18,000 to provide for salaries and expenses in connection with the Conference on Children in a Democracy. It seems to me this is a very worthy appropriation, and it is not excessive. Its purpose is to provide for the holding of conferences, under the jurisdiction of the Children's Bureau in the Department of Labor, in order that the question of the care of children may be discussed and considered, and that the expenses of those who attend the conferences may be paid from this appropriation of $18,000, which I consider a very modest one.

While I have no personal interest in the matter one way or the other it seems to me this is a worthy objective, and one which ought to appeal to the Members of the Senate as being possible of great good to the childhood of this country.

We are all acquainted with the fine work being done by Miss Lenroot as head of the Children's Bureau. It is constructive; it has a long-time objective, and it seems to me that this very modest sum should be appropriated in the pending bill in order to make it possible to hold these conferences where the welfare of the children of our country can be discussed and determined.

I hope the Senator from Colorado will not insist upon the amendment.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I wish to explain the position of the committee. I have no right to withdraw the amendment.

The members of the committee have no less interest in the subject, they have no less regard for the commendable purposes involved than has the Senator from Kentucky. There was involved a matter of legislative procedure in connection with appropriations.

The provision has to do with a conference having a good purpose. Literally hundreds of other conferences are held. This amendment provides for the payment of the expenses of delegates who are not connected with the Government, who are private citizens, coming to a conference. A conference is being held in Washington today to discuss and consider probation, which is a very commendable object.

The committee felt that if we start in paying the expenses of private citizens who attend conferences, no matter how commendable the purposes may be, there will be no end to it. If we allow the expenditure called for here, we will have no answer in the case of any one of the hundreds of thousands of other conferences which are called for good purposes.

I have the figures of the amount now at the disposal of the Children's Bureau. The amount is $8,683,000. So, the children are not being neglected. The proposal is merely for expenditure of money so that some persons may come to Washington to discuss the subject. The committee was rather of the opinion that there are in the United States every day not less than 10,000,000 conferences being held on the subject of children. There is not a household in America which does not have a conference every day on the subject of children. We cannot pay the expenses of every conference to be held to discuss the subject of Children in a Democracy. I know it is true in my house that not a day goes by during which we do not have a discussion and conference on the subject of children. I am merely giving to the leader the suggestion that was in the committee's mind. The committee has no lack of sympathy for the purpose for which it is desired to use the money, but we question the propriety of making appropriations to pay the expenses of delegates selected from civilian life to attend conferences which are not in any way public in character.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit, I will say that of course we all have great confidence in the Committtee on Appropriations.

Mr. ADAMS. I may say that the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] made a similar statement recently. He said he had great confidence in the Committee on Appropriations when he agreed with it.

Mr. BARKLEY. What I was about to say was that we feel that not only the Committee on Appropriations but the Senate as a whole can discriminate between the various types of conferences that may be held in this country with some public-welfare objective in view. If there is any sort of conference held in the United States which ought to enlist the sympathy and cooperation of the legislative body, it is a conference with respect to the welfare of our children in the future; and if there is a bureau of any kind under the Government of the United States which has done a constructive and worthy work in connection with any of the activities of the Government, it seems to me it is the Children's Bureau.

Mr. ADAMS. I call attention to the fact that there have been two conferences held on this subject, and no appropriation was made by Congress for either of them. This is a new departure.

Mr. BARKLEY. The appropriation is not simply for the payment of expenses of the delegates to that conference. The language of the appropriation itself, which has been stricken out by the committee, shows that. It says:

> Salaries and expenses, Conference on Children in a Democracy: For expenses of holding a conference on children in a democracy and conducting the necessary research and consultation work preparatory thereto—

> personal services, including employment of experts and temporary assistants without regard to the civil-service laws and regulations; purchase of reports and material for reports; travel, including attendance at meetings when authorized by the Secretary of Labor and including traveling expenses and subsistence of consultants and of members of conference committees; and other necessary expenses, fiscal year 1939, to continue available until June 30, 1940, $18,000.

So the provision is more comprehensive than merely to pay traveling expenses for delegates to such a conference.

If an enormous amount of money were involved to be used for the purpose named, I would not raise any question about it; but it seems to me that the amount involved is inconsequential compared to the good that may be done by such a conference.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. As the Senator from Colorado says, this request represents a new departure. If we comply with the request with respect to the Children's Bureau, why should we not do the same for the Bureau of Public Health? The public health is paramount, of course. And if we do it for one, we will have to do it for others. The Senator from Kentucky says that the appropriation provided in the bill is inconsequential—and, legislatively speaking, it is, because it is only $18,000—but if we begin this system we shall find that every bureau in the Government will be demanding similar treatment, and with some show of reason, because if we allow it to one bureau, we ought to allow it to other bureaus.

Mr. President, I think I can safely prophesy that if we allow the amount in question this year, next year the Public Health Service will present a like request for appropriation, and so will various other bureaus of the Government.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. ADAMS. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Commenting on the suggestion of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR], my good friend, about the Public Health Service, I wish to say that public-health conferences are usually held and attended by delegates from the States who are members of or in some way connected with the health departments of the States. In all likelihood their expenses are paid by the States. They represent the State health authorities.

Mr. McKELLAR. Why not allow the same procedure in connection with the matter under consideration?

Mr. BARKLEY. All the States that have departments of health—and that includes most of them—may not have children's bureaus. I happen to know that my own State has a State organization, sponsored by the State, known as the children's bureau, on which citizens of the State serve without compensation. It is quite a different matter to have a public-health conference here under the auspices of the Public Health Service, to which delegates are sent by the health and sanitary authorities of the States, than to have a sort of voluntary conference participated in by those interested in child life, interested in the preservation, not only for the present but for the future, of the outlook and the opportunities of our children in a great democratic organization.

I do not think the matter in question is very vital one way or the other. It is not a thing upon which the fate of the Republic will either stand or fall, but I believe that the Committee on Appropriations and the Senate and the House of Representatives may be expected to exercise the necessary discrimination in determining the type of conference for which Congress ought to appropriate money; that we can rely upon that committee and upon the common sense and sound judgment of the Congress to determine whether by appropriating $18,000 for a conference to be held in behalf of the children of the American Republic we are thereby setting a precedent that will arise in the future to embarrass us with regard to the appropriation of funds for other conferences.

Mr. President, I sincerely hope that the committee itself will not insist upon the amendment; and if it does, that the Senate may reject it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations. [Putting the question.] The Chair is in doubt.

On a division, the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next committee amendment.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Navy Department", on page 27, after line 7, to strike out:

PUBLIC WORKS, BUREAU OF YARDS AND DOCKS

Naval proving ground, Dahlgren, Va.: Replacement of Gambo Creek Bridge, $75,000, which amount, together with unexpended balances of appropriations heretofore made under this head, shall be disbursed and accounted for in accordance with existing law and shall constitute one fund.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 27, after line 14, to insert:

BUREAU OF YARDS AND DOCKS

Contingent, Bureau of Yards and Docks: For an additional amount for contingent expenses, etc., including the same object specified under this head in the act making appropriation for the Navy Department and the naval service for the fiscal year 1939 (52 Stat. 238), $47,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 27, after line 20, to insert:

Public works, Bureau of Yards and Docks: Toward the following public-works and public-utilities projects at a cost not to exceed the amount stated for each project, respectively, $200,000, which amount, together with unexpended balances of appropriations heretofore made under this head, shall be disbursed and accounted for in accordance with existing law and shall constitute one fund:

Naval Radio Station, Annapolis, Md.: Purchase of land, $125,000.

Naval Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Va.: Replacement of Gambo Creek Bridge, $75,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Post Office Department—Out of the postal revenues—office of the Postmaster General", on page 29, line 10, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$211,000" and insert "$247,403"; and in line 12, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$510,000" and insert "$590,000", so as to read:

Unexpended balances of appropriations for the Post Office Department are hereby transferred and made available for the purposes of the appropriations to which transferred, as follows: The sum of $130,000 from "Foreign Mail Transportation, 1937" to "Contract Air Mail Service, 1937"; the sum of $247,403 from "Foreign Mail Transportation, 1938" to "Contract Air Mail Service, 1938"; the sum of $590,000 from "Foreign Mail Transportation, 1939" to "Contract Air Mail Service, 1939"; and the sum of $100,000 from "Railway Mail Service, Salaries, 1939" to "Railway Postal Clerks, Travel Allowances, 1939."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Department of State—Miscellaneous", on page 31, after line 18, to insert:

Arbitration of smelter fumes controversy, United States and Canada: For an additional amount for arbitration of smelter fumes controversy, United States and Canada, including the same objects specified under this head in the Department of State Appropriation Act, 1937, fiscal year 1939, to remain available until June 30, 1940, $10,000, together with the unexpended balance of the appropriation for this purpose for the fiscal years 1936–38.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Treasury Department", on page 34, line 2, after the word "in", to insert "Senate Document No. 49, and", and in line 3, after the word "Congress", to strike out "$75.44" and insert "$941.44", so as to read:

COAST GUARD

Claims for damages, operation of vessels, Coast Guard, and Public Health Service: To pay claims for damages adjusted and determined by the Secretary of the Treasury under the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide for the adjustment and settlement of certain claims for damages resulting from the operation of vessels of the Coast Guard and the Public Health Service, in sums not exceeding $3,000 in any one case", approved June 15, 1936, as fully set forth in Senate Document No. 49, and House Document No. 197, Seventy-sixth Congress, $941.44.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "War Department", on page 36, line 21, before the word "aircraft", to strike out "and other", in line 22, before the word "aircraft", to strike out "and other", and on page 37, line 6, after the word "expended", to strike out "$600,000" and insert "$300,000", so as to read:

AIR CORPS

Development of rotary-wing aircraft: For rotary-wing aircraft research, development, procurement, experimentation, and operation for service testing, as authorized by the act approved June 30, 1938 (52 Stat. 1255), and for all purposes authorized therein, including the employment of personnel in the departmental service at the seat of government, printing and binding, and travel of military and civilian personnel engaged on work for which this appropriation is made, fiscal year 1939, to remain available until expended, $300,000.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Colorado make a statement as to why the committee reduced the appropriation from $600,000 to $300,000?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the committee had before it several gentlemen, including a constituent of the Senator from Pennsylvania. There had been an appropriation under general language for the development of the rotary-wing and other types of aircraft, and the statement was that about four-fifths of the money appropriated was used for the development of aircraft of other kinds and a relatively small part for the rotary-wing type. The committee decided to recommend that the appropriation be limited to the rotary-wing type, and as the other developments were eliminated the amount should be reduced, resulting in a larger amount for the development of the rotary-wing type than has been used heretofore.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I have observed in the news dispatches of recent months increasing reference to the development of rotary-wing aircraft. I desire to ask the Senator from Colorado if the committee discussed the rotary-wing aircraft in connection with this appropriation.

Mr. ADAMS. Quite extensively.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, rotary-wing aircraft are going up like elevators all over Europe. There were recently shown in the motion-picture theaters news reels depicting a German helicopter, piloted by a young lady, rising straight up, hovering, turning, and flying in any direction at will, but with such assurance of control that the demonstration was made in a building surrounded by galleries packed with people.

It startles me to realize that in this field of aircraft development we do not have in the entire Nation a single ship of this type or ability of performance. Yet I am reliably informed that Germany is building a six-passenger ship of this type, and is planning the construction of 150 such ships during the next 2 years. We have not one. France already has over 30, but we have not one. England has a rotary-wing aircraft on each big battleship. We should be the leader in this field. We were the pioneers in aviation.

Private citizens in this country can afford to purchase and maintain for business use at least one aircraft for each 100 automobiles. If we had 500,000, or even 250,000, private aircraft and citizen pilots in this country, what a tremendous asset it would be to the Nation's defense! We need the built-in safety that the rotary-wing types can contribute to private flying.

If the Government should attack the technical problems in this field of aircraft, making the information available, private industry could produce ships which would be a business and a family necessity. The act authorizing the expenditure of $2,000,000 for rotary-wing development and purchase has already induced the private expenditure of money in development and experimentation in every part of the country. Should the appropriation be $1,125,000 it would stimulate private industry in this field and encourage the further building up of such industry, opening a new field of employment. Such development might parallel our experience in the motor-car industry, the development of which reached out and stimulated all industry. This country needs new industries.

The total sum asked, $1,125,000, would only approximate the amount which private aircraft companies expend in general design of new transport craft such as now span the Atlantic and the Pacific. This sum would set up a small engineering section to study rotary-wing aircraft and develop new types of autogiros and helicopters for the Army, the Navy, the Coast Guard, the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, the Forestry Service, the Bureau of Biological Survey, the Civil Aeronautics Authority, the Post Office Department, the National Park Service, and other Federal Departments.

Three hundred thousand dollars is entirely inadequate. That entire sum is required to design and construct one helicopter. It is no economy to handicap national defense in its newest arm. We should excel in this field. It is no economy to put the ax to the root of a budding industry. We should nurture it. England has not merely authorized, but has appropriated $2,000,000 for rotary-wing aircraft development. I strongly urge the restoration of the appropriation to the sum of $1,125,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LA FOLLETTE in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment on page 36, line 21.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next amendment reported by the committee.

The next amendment was, on page 37, after line 11, to insert:

UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY

Pay of Military Academy: There is hereby transferred to the appropriation "Pay of Military Academy, 1939", for the pay of cadets, the sum of $50,000 from the appropriation "Reserve Officers' Training Corps, 1939."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Title II—Special appropriations, Military Establishment", on page 42, line 8, after the word "such", to strike out "offices" and insert "officers", so as to read:

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT

Ordnance service and supplies, Army: For an additional amount for ordnance service and supplies, Army, comprising the same objects specified under this head in the Military Appropriation Act, 1939, and including the employment of persons and the procurement of supplies and services, printing and binding, tuition of officers of the Ordnance Department at educational institutions, and communication service, at the seat of government and elsewhere, fiscal year 1939, to remain available until June 30, 1940, $55,366,362, and in addition, the Chief of Ordnance, when authorized by the Secretary of War, may enter into contracts prior to July 1, 1940, for ordnance service and supplies, to an amount not in excess of $44,000,000, and his action in so doing shall be deemed a contractual obligation of the Federal Government for the payment of the cost thereof: Provided, That the President may, with their consent, order Ordnance Reserve officers and Specialist Reserve officers assigned to the Ordnance Department to active duty for such periods as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this appropriation, and the pay and allowances of such officers while so assigned shall be charged to this appropriation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Title III—Judgments and authorized claims—Property damage claims", on page 44, line 4, before the word "For", to insert "(a)", so as to read "Sec. 301. (a)."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the top of page 45, to insert:

(b) For the payment of claims for damages to or losses of privately owned property, adjusted and determined by the following respective departments and independent offices, under the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide a method for the settlement of claims arising against the Government of the United States in the sums not exceeding $1,000 in any one case," approved December 28, 1922 (U. S. C., title 31, secs. 215–217), as fully set forth in Senate Document No. 47 of the Seventy-sixth Congress, as follows:

Social Security Board, $11;
Works Progress Administration, $1,374.46;
Department of Agriculture, $1,125.69;
Department of Commerce, $195;
Department of the Interior, $1,247.33;

Navy Department, $76.80;
Treasury Department, $5;
War Department, $2,172.23;
Post Office Department (payable from postal revenues), $188.70;
In all, $6,432.57.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Judgments, United States courts", on page 46, line 6, after the word "in", to insert "Senate Document No. 48, and"; in line 11, after the name "War Department", to strike out "$920" and insert "$5,920"; and in line 12, after the words "In all", to strike out "$7,700.68" and insert "$12,700.68", so as to read:

JUDGMENTS, UNITED STATES COURTS

SEC. 302. (a) For payment of the final judgments and decrees, including costs of suits, which have been rendered under the provisions of the act of March 3, 1887, entitled "An act to provide for the bringing of suits against the Government of the United States," as amended by the Judicial Act, approved March 3, 1911 (28 U. S. C. 41, 258, 761–765), certified to the Seventy-sixth Congress in Senate Document No. 48, and House Document No. 185 under the following departments and establishments, namely:

Department of Agriculture, $1,105.68;
Department of the Interior, $5,675;
War Department, $5,920;
In all, $12,700.68, together with such additional sum as may be necessary to pay interest and costs as specified in such judgments or as provided by law.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Judgments, Court of Claims", on page 47, line 15, after the word "in", to insert "Senate Document No. 50, and"; in line 23, after the name "War Department", to strike out "$12,599.25" and insert "$49,306.43"; and on page 48, line 1, after the words "In all", to strike out "$387,062.58" and insert "$423,769.76", so as to read:

SEC. 303. (a) For payment of the judgments rendered by the Court of Claims and reported to the Seventy-sixth Congress in Senate Document No. 50, and House Document No. 196, under the following departments and establishments, namely:

Department of the Interior, $296,011.42;
Department of Justice, $40;
Department of Labor, $13,493.36;
Navy Department, $36,122.91;
Treasury Department, $28,795.64;
War Department, $49,306.43.
In all, $423,769.76, together with such additional sum as may be necessary to pay interest as and where specified in such judgments.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Audited claims", on page 48, line 9, before the word "For", to insert "(a)", so as to read "Sec. 304 (a)."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 58, line 5, after the numerals "304", to insert "(a)", so as to read:

Total, audited claims, section 304 (a), $79,124.48, together with such additional sum due to increases in rates of exchange as may be necessary to pay claims in the foreign currency as specified in certain of the settlements of the General Accounting Office.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 58, after line 9, to insert:

Total, audited claims, section 304 (b), $90,065.21, together with such additional sum due to increases in rates of exchange as may be necessary to pay claims in the foreign currency as specified in certain of the settlements of the General Accounting Office.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This completes the committee amendments as printed in the bill.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I send to the desk and ask to have stated an amendment which I submit on behalf of the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, after line 3, it is proposed to insert:

For payment to Rose Douglas Lewis, widow of Hon. James Hamilton Lewis, late a Senator from the State of Illinois, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ADAMS. The junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] has asked me to present an amendment in his behalf. The senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] is familiar with it. It provides an appropriation authorizing the Library of Congress to purchase the papers of Charles Cotesworth Pinckney and Thomas Pinckney. The appropriation is for $37,500. The purchase was authorized by an act approved April 6, 1939. I offer the amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado on behalf of the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 3, after line 6, it is proposed to insert:

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

Acquisition of the Pinckney papers: For the purpose of acquiring for the Library of Congress by purchase, or otherwise, the whole, or any part, of the papers of Charles Cotesworth Pinckney and Thomas Pinckney, including therewith a group of documents relating to the Constitution Convention of 1787, now in the possession of Harry Stone of New York City, as authorized by law, fiscal year 1939, to continue available during the fiscal year 1940, $37,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I offer an amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert in the proper place the following:

Appropriations for the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission shall be available for the purchase of one automobile station wagon at a cost not to exceed $900 and for the operation and maintenance of same.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 5, it is proposed to strike out lines 16 to 21, inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

For construction and equipment of additional laboratory buildings and research facilities on military reservations at Langley Field, Va., and at Sunnyvale, Calif., including connections to public utilities and rights-of-way for, and installation of, power lines, and including expenses in the District of Columbia and elsewhere for the preparation of plans and specifications, advertising, traveling expenses, and supervising of construction, to be immediately available and to remain available until expended, $6,140,000, of which amount $2,140,000 shall be available for the construction and equipment of buildings and facilities at Langley Field, Va., and $4,000,000 shall be available for the construction and equipment of buildings and facilities at Sunnyvale, Calif.: Provided, That the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics is authorized to enter into a contract or contracts for construction and equipment of buildings and facilities at Sunnyvale, Calif., at a total cost of not to exceed $10,000,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON].

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, is there a provision in the amendment for a contract authorization?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will say to the Senator from Colorado that the last few lines of the amendment seem to indicate that such is the case.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, in order to present my views, I move to strike out the proviso in the amendment, which reads:

Provided, That the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics is authorized to enter into a contract or contracts for construction and equipment of buildings and facilities at Sunnyvale, Calif., at a total cost of not to exceed $10,000,000.

An appropriation is one thing; but I have a very definite feeling that the moneys which we appropriate, and which we mean to be spent, should be put in the bill in such form that when the appropriations are totaled they represent the actual appropriations. We should not say to a governmental agency, "Here is $4,000,000 which you may spend; but, in addition to that you are authorized to make a contract for $6,000,000." That would raise the apparent appropriations only $4,000,000, but in fact it would obligate the Government to make an appropriation of $6,000,000 in the next year. I think we should either make the appropriation or not make it.

The same objection was raised in reference to the T. V. A. appropriation. The Senator from Tennessee will remember that there had been a contract authorization from time to time, and that that authorization was eliminated for the same reason. So, I move that the amendment offered by the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON] be amended by striking out the contract authorization.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I may say to the Senator the reason for the insertion of the contract authorization is contained in the letter of the President of the United States. If the amendment is satisfactory otherwise, I should be willing to have it agreed to in that form; but let me read the letter from the President.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, February 3, 1939.

The Speaker of the House of Representatives.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith for the consideration of Congress supplemental estimates of appropriations for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, amounting to $6,723,000. Of this amount, $4,000,000 is for facilities at the proposed new Sunnyvale, Calif., research station, for which the committee is authorized to enter into a contract or contracts in a total amount of not to exceed $10,000,000.

The details of these estimates, the necessity therefor, and the reasons for their submission at this time are set forth in the letter of the Acting Director of the Bureau of the Budget, transmitted herewith, with whose comments and observations thereon I concur.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

That was the reason for appending to the amendment the right of the committee to enter into a contract or contracts in the sum named. Does that answer the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I have never been able to distinguish between the two in respect to the effect upon the Treasury. We appropriate $4,000,000; that is an authorization to make contracts which would consume that amount. It is not an expenditure until it is made, but a contract authorization, in practical effect, is no different except that we evade the apparent necessity of making an immediate appropriation and make our appropriation total seem that much less; that is, we really are spending the money but are making no appropriations for the item. It seems to me, if we are going to spend money, we ought to put it in the appropriation bill and take the responsibility for it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the Chair to understand that the Senator from California has modified his amendment as suggested by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS]?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. No; not as yet, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question, then, is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] to the amendment offered by the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON].

Mr. McCARRAN and Mr. KING addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California has the floor. Does he yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I yield first to the Senator from Nevada, who was first on his feet.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, in furtherance of the amendment offered by the Senator from California, and in opposition to the amendment suggested by the Senator from Colorado to the amendment of the Senator from California, I ask that the clerk read to the Senate at this time the communication which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the clerk will read, as requested.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

NATIONAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE FOR AERONAUTICS,
Washington, D. C., December 30, 1938.

Dr. JOSEPH S. AMES,
Chairman, National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR DR. AMES: The Special Committee on Future Research Facilities submits the following report:

The Army and the Navy are confronted with serious and pressing problems in connection with the technical development of aircraft. Other powers recently have developed aircraft of greater military effectiveness. This has been made possible largely by the tremendous expansion in aeronautical research facilities abroad. The efforts of the Army, the Navy, and the aircraft industry in the United States to regain leadership in the technical development of aircraft are fundamentally dependent upon expansion of the research facilities of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

The committee's present research laboratories at Langley Field, Va., should be augmented by the immediate establishment of a second research station on the west coast at Sunnyvale, Calif., on approximately 50 acres of land to be set aside for the committee's use by the Secretary of War and the most advanced research equipment constructed, at an estimated cost of $11,000,000.

In view of the critical condition of world affairs and the overshadowing influence of air power, it is of vital importance to our national defense to proceed with this program without delay, for on its execution will largely rest the hopes of America to excel, or at least to keep pace with world powers, in the technical development of aircraft.

An additional $2,440,000 should be made immediately available to the committee for the construction at Langley Field, Va., of a structures research laboratory and a stability wind tunnel; for the installation of a new electric power line; for the development of a competent research staff for the proposed new research station; and for the construction of a 20-foot 300-mile-per-hour wind tunnel for rendering special service to the Army, Navy, and industry.

The committee should put into operation as soon as possible, at an estimated cost of $52,000, a plan for the more effective coordination of applied aeronautical research in industry.

The first wind tunnel to be erected at Sunnyvale should be identical to the 20-foot 300-mile-per-hour tunnel proposed for Langley Field. They should be of straightforward design, capable of erection in 90 days, and should be made immediately available to meet the special wind-tunnel service needs of the Army, Navy, and industry in connection with the expanding aircraft procurement program.

Attached hereto and forming part of this report are the following appendixes:

A. Precept dated October 24, 1938.
B. Scope of investigation.
C. The need for additional research in aeronautics.
D. Report of special committee on site for a second research station.
E. Additional facilities needed at Langley Field.
F. A suggested plan for more effective coordination of aeronautical research and for the provision of special wind-tunnel service for the Army and Navy in cooperation with industry.
G. Estimate of costs.

The Special Committee on Future Research Facilities strongly recommends the approval of this program and that it be executed at the earliest practicable date. The committee is of the opinion that the Government can do nothing more effective to enable the United States at least to keep pace with the development of aircraft in other nations. If this plan is approved without delay there should be reasonable expectation that the United States may be able to continue in the forefront of progressive nations in the technical development of both military and commercial aircraft. In addition to the immeasurable value of superior performance and greater safety of aircraft, which are attainable chiefly through such a program as this, the costs of this program will be more than offset by the economic value of the results. Unless action as herein recommended is taken promptly we believe the United States will definitely fall behind.

Respectfully submitted.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON FUTURE RESEARCH FACILITIES,
ARTHUR B. COOK,
Rear Admiral, United States Navy, Chairman
(Chief, Bureau of Aeronautics, Navy).
HENRY H. ARNOLD,
Major General, United States Army
(Chief, Air Corps, War Department).
EDWARD P. WARNER,
Chairman, Committee on Aerodynamics, N. A. C. A.
EDWARD J. NOBLE,
Chairman, Civil Aeronautics Authority.
GEORGE W. LEWIS,
Director of Aeronautical Research, N. A. C. A.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, did I understand the Senator from Colorado to say if the latter part of the amendment concerning contracts that might be hereafter let was stricken that he would accept the amendment?

Mr. ADAMS. I have no authority to accept the amendment. I will state my own personal situation, which is that I am impressed by the desirability of providing research facilities for aeronautical development. I was raising the issue at this time as to a point irrespective of that, which I would raise regardless of my own view.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I thought if we could save an hour's discussion and that much talking by me, which would not be interesting at all to the Senate, we might agree upon that, if it were possible.

Mr. GLASS rose.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I see the Senator from Virginia on his feet. Perhaps he has some views touching the matter.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I have some very decided views, derived from the hearings before the committee. The committee, I think, with a single exception, perhaps two exceptions, voted for the amendment here proposed by the committee after a rather spirited discussion of the whole subject.

This is simply a proposition to duplicate on the west coast the work that is now being done at Langley Field, Va. The main argument for it was that most of the planes are constructed on the west coast. The proponents of the plan very artfully refrained from stating that every single solitary engine made for those planes is constructed on the east coast of the United States.

They further made the contention that the facilities at Langley Field cannot be expanded. Anyone who has ever been to Langley Field knows that they can be expanded. The committee was so impressed with—I will not say the absurdity of the contention, but with the unreasonableness of the contention that it almost unanimously adopted the amendment proposed by the committee.

So far as appropriating $4,000,000 with an authorization for $10,000,000 is concerned, I think we might just as well appropriate the whole amount, if we want simply to duplicate the work by establishing a station on the Pacific coast.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Virginia yield to me?

Mr. GLASS. The Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON] has the floor.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. ADAMS. I merely wish to make a correction. The Senator spoke of the adoption of the amendment by the committee. As a matter of fact, the appropriation for Langley Field came to the Senate in the bill from the House; so the amendment was rejected by the Senate committee rather than adopted, as stated by the Senator. That is, the amendment which was submitted was such an amendment as the Senator from California has offered. The Langley Field provision is in the bill as it came from the House and was not an amendment.

Mr. GLASS. I intended to imply that the committee reported against the proposal to establish an additional station on the western coast to duplicate the work of Langley Field.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Quite so; and I desire to impress upon the Senate that there is no design upon the part of those who have charge of this amendment at the present time, or upon the part of those who had charge of it heretofore, to do anything to Langley Field, to curtail its activities, or to prevent being done at Langley Field the work that is provided for; and the bill expressly authorizes Langley Field to do its work with a sufficient appropriation.

But, Mr. President, before I enter upon a discussion of this matter, I should like to settle the question that has just been suggested, because it is no pleasure for me to stand here for half an hour or an hour talking about what I think is a self-evident proposition. If we could agree that the amendment would be accepted without the particular provision to which the Senator from Colorado has objected, that would end the matter, and I would sit down; and I think, to accomplish that purpose, the Senate ought to be willing to accept almost anything.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I do.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, even if the amendment to which reference has been made were to be accepted, much as I regret to differ with my dear friend from California, I should feel constrained to oppose the entire proposal.

I have visited Langley Field upon a number of occasions. Let me say that my son was a flyer, and worked there for a number of years. I am very familiar with Langley Field, with the wind tunnel, and with the activities and operations there in process of development.

It seems to me that this is merely a geographical desire to obtain on the west coast what is being obtained upon the east coast, and, if the east coast activities are not sufficiently broad, expansion there in order to cover the entire activity that is contemplated.

Mr. President, it seems to me that if we have one adequate field, that is sufficient. If we have one adequate plant to manufacture certain munitions of war, it would be folly to build another one merely to meet some geographical desire. The trouble is that we are trying to meet sectional demands in a great many public activities. This is a sectional demand—and I do not use the word at all offensively—because in the East the work is being done, and splendidly done. Langley Field is adequate to expand to any degree that the Government may desire, and its work in the past is a prophecy of its excellent work in the future.

It seems to me that if we have not sufficient funds appropriated for research, now that we have in operation a factory, so to speak, with men of character and ability and technical experience operating the factory, it would be folly for us to go to the Pacific coast and erect another.

Let me say that if it is important to erect another factory, it seems to me, it ought to be in the central part of the United States, away from the coasts. If it is important that there shall be another factory, I suggest that it be in Chicago, or Iowa, or Omaha, or some central part of the United States, so that the possibility of attack from abroad—and we are in a hysterical attitude, asserting that we may be attacked from abroad—would be more remote than along the Pacific coast. It seems to me that for the present we ought to content ourselves with the work which is being done at Langley Field.

Moreover, we have recently appropriated more than $500,000,000 for the Navy, and my recollection is that that appropriation contained a very large sum for aeronautical development. We are simply becoming hysterical and emotional, and in this hysterical attitude we are throwing away money instead of conserving the resources of our country and limiting our appropriations.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I desire to point out to the Senator that the recommendation made to the committee by Major General Arnold, of the Army Air Corps, and Admiral Cook, in charge of the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy Department, dealt with the very point the Senator made a moment ago; that is, that the Army and the Navy, they say, will spend about $255,000,000 for aircraft during the coming year alone. That is just 1 year's expenditure.

> Looking a few years ahead, such investments in national security will not be worth all they cost unless our aircraft are at least equal in performance to the best produced abroad.

Another one of their findings is:

> It is absolutely impossible to expand adequately at Langley Field, as the Army cannot provide more room without impairing the military efficiency of its own operations.

Finally, they say:

> A second major research station is necessary, and to be of maximum value to the Army and the Navy should be on the west coast. Too much time is now being lost and progress retarded by the great distance separating Langley Field and the aircraft factories on the west coast.

The testimony before the committee is that between 60 and 70 percent of the airplanes now manufactured in the United States are made on the west coast.

I desire to ask the Senator a question. In the light of an expenditure of a quarter of a billion dollars this year, and continued expenditures in the future, if we are to rely upon the head of the Army aviation service and the naval aviation service that that money will not be wisely expended without adequate research, what, in the Senator's judgment, should be done?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, first let me ask whether the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy recommended this appropriation?

Mr. HAYDEN. Oh, yes; it is included in the President's Budget. It is recommended by the Commander in Chief, for that matter.

Mr. KING. But did the Secretary of the Navy or the Secretary of War make a specific recommendation for the expenditure of this $11,000,000 for research in California?

Mr. HAYDEN. It is not of record that the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy recommended it. The record is that General Arnold, the Chief of the Air Corps of the War Department, and Admiral Cook, the Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy Department, recommended it, and upon that recommendation the Budget estimate was sent.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, let me say, also, that the President of the United States, following the investigation made by the special committee, recommended it, as was disclosed by the letter read from the President of the United States.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President——

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. GLASS In response to the statement of the Senator from Arizona that so many more planes are constructed on the west coast than on the east coast, let me say that, as heretofore stated by me, the witnesses before the committee very artfully refrained from stating the fact, until I brought it out, that every engine put in an airplane is constructed on the east coast, and that is the most important part of the airplane.

Mr. HAYDEN. Let me ask whether an engine would have any value as a flying instrument unless it were put in a plane?

Mr. GLASS. Of course, it would not; and the plane would not be worth a continental unless an engine were put in it.

The Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], if I may say so, stated the matter very accurately. This is nothing in the world but a geographical proposal to duplicate on the west coast what is being done on the east coast.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator from Utah whether he recalls—and I know that he has studied it—the testimony before the Military Affairs Committee in which Major General Arnold and other representatives of the War and Navy Departments suggested the advisability of our not having all of our eggs in one basket. It is not a matter of pure economy as to whether we should have one or two Langley Fields, but whether or not we should have all of our eggs in one basket, so that if, unfortunately, an enemy should come over our territory, he would not destroy everything, and we would still have the other field.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, so far as I am concerned in this particular, it is a pure matter of obtaining scientific information such as we would get in great plants where chemists are working, and their scientific developments become the basis of the production of millions and tens of millions—indeed, hundreds of millions—of dollars' worth of commodities. Steinmetz did not have half a dozen factories or plants in which to investigate the great work which he was performing in connection with the development of our automotive industry; and the great investigations which were made of electricity were made in a factory in New Jersey. They were not scattered all over the United States, though those scientific investigations have resulted in building many factories, and producing millions and tens of millions, if not hundreds of millions, of dollars' worth of electrical appliances.

I repeat that Langley Field is ample for expansion and development. If there is any fear of its being bombarded in attacks from beyond the sea, I renew the suggestion I made that we have another field constructed in the interior of the United States, rather than on the Pacific coast, where, if there should be any bombardment, the field might be the target of attack by Japan.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me again?

Mr. KING. Let me first complete my statement. What I was about to observe was that it is a technical investigation which is required; it can be made far better in one place than in two places, and the expenses would be far less if the investigation and the researches were made in one laboratory than if they were made in several laboratories. Therefore, I suggest that we pretermit this appropriation, and if further investigation develops the necessity of expanding Langley Field, or it is shown that it is inadequate for the making of the necessary researches, we can, after further study, determine the safest place for the construction of this chemical research laboratory.

Mr. HAYDEN. I will ask the Senator to let me quote from the record on that very point. It was emphasized to the committee that there was so much research work to be done on so many phases of our airplane program that all of it could not possible be accomplished at Langley Field. This is the conclusion stated by Mr. Victory, secretary of the National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics:

The plan does not involve unwise duplication of equipment, but, on the contrary, provides chiefly for new and improved research equipment necessary for the study of new problems incident to higher speed and larger size of aircraft. The operation of two stations will not involve duplication in the study of problems.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, in conclusion let me say we are today in an emotional and hysterical frame of mind, and before the present Congress shall adjourn we will have appropriated more than $2,000,000,000 for national defense, and I think some people will say, "How many crimes have been committed under the pretense of national defense?"

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President, I should like to take the floor for a moment to remind Senators of the address of the President on the 4th of January last, when, with reference to this general subject, he told us:

Under modern conditions. * * * First, we must have armed forces and defenses strong enough to ward off sudden attack against strategic positions and key facilities essential to insure sustained resistance and ultimate victory. Second, we must have the organization and location of those key facilities so that they may be immediately utilized and rapidly expanded to meet all needs without danger of serious interruption by enemy attack.

Mr. President, if there is any one single and fundamental factor in aviation development which must be secured to us, it is constant experimentation. If we can constantly be prepared to expand our facilities we will then have the means to ward off sudden attack, and come within the principles outlined by the President. The President has already commended the very proposal now being considered. I believe that the amendment of the Senator from California should be supported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS] to the amendment presented by the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON].

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I propose an amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert at the proper place the following:

NATIONAL BITUMINOUS COAL COMMISSION

The paragraph in the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1938, under the caption "National Bituminous Coal Commission" is hereby amended by striking out the following proviso: "Provided, That expenditures during the fiscal year 1939 under this head and under the head 'Salaries and expenses, Office of the Consumers' Counsel, National Bituminous Coal Commission,' shall not exceed an amount equal to the aggregate receipts covered into the Treasury under the provisions of section 3 of the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937."

Mr. NEELY obtained the floor.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NEELY. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. I have discussed the matter with the Senator from West Virginia, and recognize that this amendment does transgress the rule, that it is legislation. I understand the Senator from West Virgina has a motion to suspend the rules, and I suggest that he proceed by presenting his motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from West Virginia yield to the Senator from Colorado to submit a point of order?

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, I will accept the point of order as having been made by the Senator from Colorado, and will ask for a vote on my motion, which I ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair rules that the point of order is well taken.

The clerk will read the motion filed by the Senator from West Virginia.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

In accordance with the provisions of rule XL of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby give notice in writing that I shall hereafter move to suspend paragraph 4 of rule XVI for the purpose of proposing to H. R. 5219 the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1939, the following amendment viz: At the proper place, under the caption "Department of the Interior," insert the following:

"NATIONAL BITUMINOUS COAL COMMISSION

"The paragraph in the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1938, under the caption 'National Bituminous Coal Commission' is hereby amended by striking out the following proviso: 'Provided, That expenditures during the fiscal year 1939 under this head and under the head "Salaries and expenses, Office of the Consumers' Counsel, National Bituminous Coal Commission," shall not exceed an amount equal to the aggregate receipts covered into the Treasury under the provisions of section 3 of the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937.'"

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from West Virginia move to suspend the rule in pursuance of the motion just read?

Mr. NEELY. I do.

Mr. McNARY. A parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. McNARY. What was the order made as to suspension of the rule? Was notice merely given?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Notice was given on April 6, and the motion is now in order.

Mr. NEELY. I ask for a vote on the motion, and then I shall discuss the merits of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from West Virginia, and the Senator from West Virginia is recognized on his motion.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, the amendment, if adopted, will effectuate a recommendation which the Acting Director of the Budget has made and the President has approved, and save the National Bituminous Coal Commission from threatened disaster. Acting Director Bell's letter to the President clearly states the circumstances of the case and persuasively assigns some of the reasons why the amendment should be adopted. Senators are very respectfully requested to lend their ears to the reading of the letter, which is as follows:

BUREAU OF THE BUDGET,
Washington, February 4, 1939.

The PRESIDENT,
The White House.

SIR: I have the honor to submit herewith for your consideration draft of proposed provision pertaining to an existing appropriation for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year 1939, as follows:

"NATIONAL BITUMINOUS COAL COMMISSION

"The paragraph in the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1938, under the caption 'National Bituminous Coal Commission' is hereby amended by striking out the following proviso: 'Provided, That expenditures during the fiscal year 1939 under this head and under the head "Salaries and expenses, Office of the Consumers' Counsel, National Bituminous Coal Commission," shall not exceed an amount equal to the aggregate receipts covered into the Treasury under the provisions of section 3 of the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937' (52 Stat. 294–295, 1128)."

In the Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1939, an appopriation of $3,000,000 was provided for the National Bituminous Coal Commission and $270,000 for the Consumers' Counsel, or a total of $3,270,000. In the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1938, an additional $250,000 was included for the Commission, making total appropriations for the fiscal year 1939 for the Commission and for the counsel of $3,520,000. The increase was provided in order to strengthen the enforcement staff of the Commission and enable it, with the assistance of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, to speed up the collection of taxes. This supplemental appropriation contained the provision which limited the expenditures of the Commission and the Consumers' Counsel to the aggregate receipts covered into the Treasury under the provisions of section 3 of the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937.

At the time the provision was made limiting expenditures for the Commission and the Consumers' Counsel to receipts covered into the Treasury, it was estimated that tax receipts for the fiscal year 1939 would be $3,750,000 or $230,000 in excess of the amounts appropriated. It now appears that while total assessments for the fiscal year 1939 will be approximately the same as the amount originally estimated, actual tax receipts may not exceed $3,320,000 or $200,000 less than the appropriations. It is apparent that if the limitation remains in effect the Commission and the Consumers' Counsel will have to take immediate steps to reduce expenses and that a large part of the reduction would be through furloughing or separating employees whose services are in the opinion of the Commission necessary if it is to function efficiently. As the present difficulty appears to be due in part, at least, to a lag in tax collections, it is not believed that the Commission should be penalized therefor, particularly if such a requirement would in any way interfere with its normal operations. It appears therefore that the language which limits expenditures to receipts covered into the Treasury should be removed.

The foregoing draft of a proposed provision is required to meet a contingency which has arisen since the transmission of the Budget for the fiscal year 1939, and approval is recommended.

Very respectfully,

D. W. BELL,
Acting Director of the Bureau of the Budget.

The President, in transmitting this letter of recommendation to the Speaker of the House, said:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, February 6, 1939.

The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith for the consideration of Congress draft of a proposed provision pertaining to an existing appropriation of the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year 1939.

The details of the proposed provision, the necessity therefor, and the reason for its submission at this time are set forth in the letter of the Acting Director of the Bureau of the Budget, transmitted herewith, with whose comments and observations thereon I concur.

Sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Mr. President, the necessity for the amendment which the Acting Director of the Budget emphasized in February has been greatly intensified during the last 16 days. Since the 1st of April practically no excise taxes on coal have been collected because of the suspension of mining operations occasioned by the failure of the wage conferees, for the operators and miners who have long been negotiating in New York, to adopt a working agreement.

Under existing law and existing conditions the Coal Commission is losing and will continue to lose production taxes at the rate of about $8,000 a day. If the amendment is not adopted the Commission will at once be compelled to drastically reduce its personnel and it will probably be obliged to go out of business entirely before the 1st of July, because its expenditures are limited to the amount that is "covered into the Treasury" from taxes derived from production. Since there is no present production of coal, obviously no production taxes are being "covered into the Treasury" and no funds are becoming available to the Commission with which to defray its expenses.

Mr. BARKLEY and Mr. ADAMS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from West Virginia yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. NEELY. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. If I understand the gist of the argument of the Senator from West Virginia and his amendment, the situation is this: Heretofore we have been appropriating moneys for the expenses of the Bituminous Coal Commission out of the amounts raised by the tax on coal as it has been produced.

Mr. NEELY. Under existing law the Commission's expenditures are limited to the amount of the taxes collected on production.

Mr. BARKLEY. And by reason of the falling off in the production of coal due to a disagreement among the operators and the miners, and probably for some other reason, the amount of the tax is not sufficient to pay the expenses of the Bituminous Coal Commission?

Mr. NEELY. That is correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. And unless the proposed amendment is agreed to, the Bituminous Coal Commission's operations will practically have to cease.

Mr. President, we all know that negotiations are in progress between the operators and the miners looking toward the consummation of a new contract, and we all hope that in the very near future that contract may be agreed upon. But in the meantime the production of coal has been materially affected, and the amount of money raised by that production has been materially reduced, so that adoption of the Senator's amendment is necessary in order that the Bituminous Coal Commission may continue to function.

Have I stated the situation practically as it is?

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, the Senator from Kentucky has correctly stated the Commission's embarrassing situation.

Mr. BARKLEY. This situation has not been brought about by anything that the Bituminous Coal Commission has done or failed to do, but it has been brought about by conditions outside of the Bituminous Coal Commission.

Mr. NEELY. And conditions over which the Coal Commission has not a shadow of control.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NEELY. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. The estimated tax return from the coal industry the present year will be $3,320,000, but that amount for many reasons will not pay the expenses of the Bituminous Coal Commission, and the amendment offered by the Senator from West Virginia is virtually to remedy that trouble. That is all there is to it.

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, the amendment does not propose to increase the appropriation. Its sole purpose is to repeal a restriction which limits the Commission's expenditure of its appropriation to the amount of production taxes covered into the Treasury.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NEELY. I yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GUFFEY. I sincerely hope that the amendment offered by the Senator from West Virginia will prevail.

The situation described by the Senator from West Virginia and the majority leader is correct. I do not see how the Bituminous Coal Commission can function if we limit the Commission to the income collected from the tax before we know what the tax is. We will not know what the tax is before 60 days after the expiration of the present fiscal year.

I sincerely hope that the amendment will be agreed to.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NEELY. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. ADAMS. It seems to me that the motion to suspend the rule should be adopted. The Senator from West Virginia has pointed out the situation as it is. It was necessary in order to preserve the status of the Committee on Appropriations that the objective be reached in this way.

The emergency which has arisen is a genuine emergency, due to unexpected things occurring in the coal industry. I think that the rule should be suspended, and the amendment offered by the Senator from West Virginia should be adopted in order to meet the immediate emergency. I think that ultimately the rule which the law laid down should be reinstated, because we were assured that the Bituminous Coal Commission, by reason of the taxes, would be a self-sustaining organization, and normally we hope that it will continue to be; but the present year is an exceptional year by reason of the controversies between employers and employees and the absence of the taxes. Therefore, my view is entirely in accord with that of the Senator from West Virginia at this time.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NEELY. I yield to the Senator from Pennsylvania; and in the confident belief that my motion to suspend the rules will prevail and that the amendment will be adopted, I yield the floor.

Mr. DAVIS. I have discussed this matter fully with the Senator from West Virginia, and I heartily approve it. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from West Virginia to suspend the rule in order that he may offer an amendment, which has already been read for the information of the Senate. [Putting the question.] Two-thirds of the Senators present having voted in the affirmative, the motion is agreed to and the rule is suspended.

The question now recurs on the amendment offered by the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 19, after line 2, it is proposed to insert the following:

GOVERNMENT OF THE VIRGIN ISLANDS

For an additional amount for defraying the deficit in the treasury of the municipal government of St. Croix because of the excess of current expenses over current revenues for the fiscal year 1939, $45,000.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, the reason the amendment is offered is that the representatives of the Virgin Islands did not get here in time to testify before the committee. However, the President sent in a Budget recommendation for this amount. I wish to read from that recommendation as follows:

For the current year an appropriation of $35,000 was made for this purpose. The appropriation was based on estimated receipts of $207,000 and expenditures of $242,000. Actual receipts for the first 8 months were $97,303.64, and the revised estimate of receipts for the full year is $173,050, or $33,950 below the original estimate. Drought conditions have been responsible for low production of sugar, which has resulted in lower revenues and increased unemployment and compelled the municipality to borrow from trust funds for some of its 1938 obligations. The amount of $45,000 will permit the municipality of St. Croix, by the exercise of close economy, to operate its schools to the close of the term, to carry on its other functions, including hospital operation, care of lepers, maintenance of the poor, and indigent relief, to the close of the fiscal year, and to repay the $12,000 owing the trust-fund accounts on account of low revenues in 1938.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McKELLAR. As part of my remarks concerning the St. Croix situation, I ask that there may be printed in the RECORD at this point a statement by Mr. Frederick D. Dorsch.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ST. CROIX BUDGET SITUATION

(By Frederick D. Dorsch)

The actual additional deficit for St. Croix, V. I., this year is $62,000, and it would have been considerably more if municipal services had been properly maintained, needed repairs made, supply inventories (even medicines) maintained. If we add the $12,000 we could not back pay on our borrowed debt of last year, the total deficit equals much more.

During the sugar boom years of 1919 and 1921 the high prices and the tremendous profits produced local revenues ranging from $211,000 in 1920 to $284,000 in 1922. Of the $284,000 received, $163,000 came from income tax on profits, and that was the only year since the American occupation that the Federal Government has not been called upon for a deficit contribution, proving that we can live on the present standard set for us by inflated means. Compare the income tax of $163,000 in 1922 with the $16,000 budgeted for this year and for the first 7 months of the present fiscal year the total collected, which amounts only to $3,166.06. The financial condition of any community can be determined by its income-tax returns. If St Croix in 17 years and 7 months has decreased its income tax from $163,000 to $3,166.06, you can readily see how low our financial status has fallen.

From 1922 to 1936 the Federal deficit contributions ranged between a minimum of $77,000 and a maximum of $243,000. The average for those 14 years was $115,570. For 1937 it was reduced to $60,000, for 1938 to $50,000, and for 1939 to $35,000, and for next year only $30,000. There is no way in the island to make up for such drastic reductions without inconceivable curtailment of services required by humanity and decency.

The local revenues since 1922 have ranged from a minimum of $77,000 in 1923–24 to a maximum of $191,000 in 1936–38, with $214,100 estimated for this year. The average annual local revenues for that 17-year period is slightly less than $128,000.

The municipality of St. Croix has faced its problem squarely by repeatedly imposing upon itself increased taxes, equaling now $90,000 a year more than 10 years ago. To add more taxes will mean municipal confiscation for delinquency. Collaterally, its 80 lepers, 140 inmates of the poor farm at Kingshill, 383 aged and infirm on direct relief of less than $2 per month, and over 3,000 unemployed registered for W. P. A. work relief constitute an abnormal burden on the abnormally small part of the community who are expected to carry such a burden.

The recent progressive decreases in Federal deficit contributions have apparently been based upon presumption that offsetting increases in municipal revenues would result from rehabilitation projects in the Virgin Islands. In St. Croix no such increases have yet resulted. They should not have been anticipated without factual data in support. They are not likely to occur in the near future solely in St. Croix. However, there are data now available on which to base a sane and sensible forecast controlled by interchange of all factors.

There have been two rehabilitation projects of economic significance to St. Croix—Federal homesteading projects started in 1933 and the Virgin Islands' Co. started late in 1934. While homesteading has greatly improved the living standards and hopeful outlook of 400 families rescued from economic serfdom, it has as yet made no appreciable contribution to municipal revenues except by increasing cane production and consequent sugar export tax over and above the former production of laborers and squatters. On the other hand, 3,000 acres of land transferred to Federal ownership until paid for have temporarily reduced land and property taxes at least $2,000, and their sugar production has only been a participation in the partial restoration of the sugar business that went into rapid decline after 1929.

The Virgin Islands' Co., which began its reclamation of abandoned land and sugar factories 4 years ago has only been in production for 2 years—lean years of drought. Its full production as now planned will under normal conditions only restore St. Croix' employment and sugar production to that of a decade ago. The $35,632 paid by the Virgin Islands' Co. to the municipality last year for taxes, licenses, and fees of all kinds is little if any more than was paid by the Danish West India Sugar Co. 10 years ago, when the Federal deficit contribution was $99,000. In other words, this rehabilitation project has only begun to fill one small gap but nothing has been done about the difference between the $99,000 contribution of 10 years ago and the $35,000 contribution of this year. If we were to receive in the Virgin Islands the internal revenues and the processing taxes on our rum and sugar in like manner as such revenues are returned to all other insular and Territorial areas, the picture of the Virgin Islands' Co. contribution and of St. Croix' financial condition would be entirely changed.

After presenting the decreasing revenue picture it is only fair and just that we analyze our expenditure to see if there has been wastefulness to make this deficit condition we now face. Let us analyze the expenditures in this year's amended budget. The estimated expenditures are far below our actual needs. Only the P. W. A. program for roads, streets, and sanitation makes it possible to limit them to these figures. They include no new construction or major building, though there is desperate need for much of it, at our medical institutions in particular. Only $6,000 is included for maintenance of all our public buildings—seven schools, two hospitals, insane hospital, leper asylum, penitentiary, courts, public works yards and warehouses, two customhouses, and other miscellaneous buildings.

The medical institutions and poor-farm budgets include less than 20 cents per day each for subsistence of over 350 patients, and only the bare normal requirements of most essential drugs and medicines, with practically no provision for possible epidemics and little for preventive work. Hospital equipment badly needed is not included in this year's budget.

The department of education allotments total about $40 per year per pupil, with teachers' salaries from $30 minimum to $100 maximum per month, with the average of all principals and teachers being only $61. There is too little included for needed books, domestic science, school lunches, and science equipment.

Public welfare is budgeted for only $15,000 to cover all direct aid, boys' home, child welfare, pensions, pauper burials, etc. Poor relief averages less than $2 per month per person, with only 65 percent of the applicants provided for.

No salary increases are budgeted this year. The operation of all departments has been held to the minimum for indispensable services. Inadequacy of funds has prevented maintenance that will soon mean replacements; the insane are housed in dangerous and disgraceful barracks; tubercular patients must be bedded in the regular hospital wards; cloth must be stretched above an operating table to catch the dirt falling from a decaying ceiling. Bandages are returned from infected wounds, washed, and reused. Only Federal relief money this year permitted the elimination of the night soil-can system of unsanitation at the Christiansted High School, with its 220 pupils.

Over a period of years we find that our increased budget expenditures have come from legitimate additions to the budget. The road fund was added in 1931–32, when all the island's roads were taken over from private ownership and made public roads. The telephone fund first appears in the budget for 1932–33, when it was found expedient to make the telephone system a budgetary item because it was not self-supporting and needed municipal subsidy. Christiansted High School was inaugurated in the fall of 1935 and the tax assessor's office first appears in 1937–38, when taxation on assessed valuation was adopted by the local legislature.

Thus we see a municipality in a lamentable situation wherein it has not placed itself. World economic conditions, acts of God, and overly hopeful experimentation have all aided to bring a once glorious islands into financial bankruptcy. The dire problem facing St. Croix at the first of the coming month is what to do with 80 lepers, 140 inmates of the poor farm, 383 aged and infirm on direct relief of less than $2 per month, a hundred and some municipal employees, and over 3,000 school children. Over 700 persons, not counting school children, depend on the municipality's appropriation of less than 20 cents per day to feed them. Must they starve while an overly hopeful experimentation attempts to rehabilitate them?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is still before the Senate and open to further amendment.

Mr. DOWNEY. I offer an amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 8, between lines 19 and 20, it is proposed to insert the following:

SOCIAL SECURITY BOARD

Grants to States for unemployment compensation administration: For an additional amount for grants to States, fiscal year 1939, for unemployment compensation administration, as authorized in title III of the Social Security Act, approved August 14, 1935, as amended, including rentals in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, $13,000,000.

Mr. DOWNEY. Mr. President, I understand there is no objection to the amendment on the part of the Committee on Appropriations. The matter is largely of a routine character. The funds in the possession of the different commissions in the States for unemployment compensation have been exceeded. Money has been paid in by the States to the Federal Government, which the Government is holding, I think as trust funds, and the States now need this additional sum of money to pay their administration expenses. It is the amount requested by the Social Security Board, and I understand that the amendment is satisfactory to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. KING. I may inquire of the Senator whether this is part of the 10 percent which the Federal Government retains for the purpose of administration?

Mr. DOWNEY. Yes; it is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY].

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further amendments, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist on its amendments, request a conference with the House of Representatives thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. ADAMS, Mr. GLASS, Mr. MCKELLAR, Mr. HAYDEN, Mr. BYRNES, Mr. HALE, and Mr. TOWNSEND conferees on the part of the Senate.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills and joint resolution, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 828. An act to permit the President to acquire and convert, as well as to construct, certain auxiliary vessels for the Navy;

S. 829. An act to authorize alterations and repairs to certain naval vessels, and for other purposes; and

S. J. Res. 90. Joint resolution to amend the joint resolution approved June 16, 1938, entitled "Joint resolution to create a Temporary National Economic Committee."

PREVENTION OF PERNICIOUS POLITICAL ACTIVITIES

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, I enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which Senate bill 1871, to prevent pernicious political activities, was passed on Thursday last; and I move that the House be requested to return the bill to the Senate.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I should like to know what bill is referred to.

Mr. GUFFEY. Senate bill 1871, the bill with respect to pernicious political activities.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, is the motion open to debate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is not debatable. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Pennsylvania that the House be requested to return the bill to the Senate. [Putting the question.] The Chair is in doubt.

On a division, the motion was agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, as a matter of courtesy to the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH], I think his attention ought to be called to the matter before any action is taken. Let me make a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BARKLEY. I was otherwise engaged for the moment. Was the Senator's motion to reconsider agreed to?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion of the Senator from Pennsylvania to request the House to return the bill was first put to a viva voce vote. The Chair was in doubt, and, on a division, the motion was agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. In that status, of course, the motion to reconsider has not yet been acted upon?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion to reconsider is entered. It cannot be acted upon unless the House responds to the request and returns the measure.

Mr. BARKLEY. So that the action is, of course, without prejudice one way or the other, so far as the motion to reconsider is concerned.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is merely entered, and cannot be acted upon unless the House responds to the request.

Subsequently, during the consideration of the Interior Department appropriation bill, Mr. HATCH said,

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I do not wish to delay a vote on the Interior Department bill. There is, however, one matter which I desire to mention very briefly for a moment.

On Thursday of last week, during the regular call of the calendar, Senate bill 1871 was considered and passed. On that occasion a number of Senators were present; in fact, I think a majority of the Senators were present. The Senate was not mistaken on that day as to the bill being considered. Several committee amendments were read at length, and I think without question every Senator present understood very well what was being voted on. The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BURKE] rose in his place and called attention to the fact that the bill was an important measure, and one entitled to receive the attention of Senators. He said several words on that subject, and asked that the bill be explained.

Mr. President, I am certain that Senators generally understood the purpose of the bill and its provisions, as it not only had been on the calendar for some time, and a complete report on the bill presented, so that any Senator could have advised himself of the terms and provisions of the bill if he had so desired, but the bill had been more or less discussed in the public press of the country since last summer. I doubt whether any Senator can say that he did not understand the bill, and what was intended. Today, the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY], who was not present at the time the discussion took place, being out of the city, I think, moved that the bill be recalled from the House.

I have no objection, Mr. President, to any Senator's making a motion which he is entitled to make, and I should be the last person to question such procedure. The only thing I question about it today is that the motion was made and acted upon without notice to the authors of the bill, notwithstanding the fact that I had been on the floor during the day, and was available in my office, and the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN], one of the joint authors of the bill, was available. I do not know as to the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD]. At any rate, it would not have involved a great deal of trouble to apprise any one of us that it was desired to recall the bill and have it reconsidered. Notwithstanding that fact, Mr. President, the motion was made and was acted upon without any of us being advised that such a motion was contemplated. Whether or not that is the usual courteous treatment accorded in the Senate of the United States I will leave to others to answer.

It was my intention to move to reconsider the motion to recall the bill, believing that on a motion to reconsider the motion to recall we could debate at length the subject of whether or not the bill should be recalled. I have conferred with the Parliamentarian. At first he advised me that a motion to reconsider a motion to recall was not in order. I did not agree with him. I think it is in order, and should be entertained. I know of nothing sacred about a motion to recall a bill which should exempt it from a motion to reconsider, the same as any other ordinary motion. I will say for the Parliamentarian that after investigating the precedents he told me that the only one he could find sustained my view and not his own.

I do not know whether or not a motion to recall is proper parliamentary procedure. I have definitely concluded, Mr. President, that I shall not move to reconsider the motion to recall. The only thing I ask is that the motion to reconsider the action by which the bill was passed be taken up in the Senate as quickly as possible. At that time I wish to explain the bill fully and in detail.

If any Senator wishes to stand on the floor of the United States Senate and say that the bill is wrong, I have no objection to his so doing. If the Senate wishes to defeat the bill, certainly I do not want it passed. I do not want the bill passed unless it is the wish and desire of the Senate of the United States that it become a law. I will join Senators in obtaining opportunity for the fullest expression of their own views on the measure, the purposes which it seeks to attain, and the evils which it seeks to correct. If any Senator wishes to stand on the floor in defense of the practices condemned by the bill, I wish him to have the opportunity to defend them.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HATCH. I yield.

Mr. BONE. I am not able to identify the subject matter of the bill merely by having the number stated. Will the Senator indicate the subject matter of the bill?

Mr. HATCH. The bill relates to certain pernicious political activities. The first section of the bill prohibits the intimidation and coercion of voters. I doubt whether any Senator wishes to stand on the floor of the Senate and say that he favors the intimidation and coercion of voters, whoever they may be.

Another section relates to soliciting funds from work-relief employees. I doubt whether any Senator wishes to take the floor of the United States Senate and justify the solicitation of funds for political purposes from the relief workers of this country. If he does, Mr. President, I want him to have the opportunity of so doing.

So it is with respect to the other sections of the bill.

The last section of the bill is a copy of the present civil-service rules. I think a legitimate criticism has been offered to that section. It was my thought that that section, applying only to administrative or supervisory employees, eliminated policy-making employees in the Government, such as members of the President's Cabinet. I do not consider that they are administrative or supervisory employees. However, if there is any doubt about the question, I will say frankly that it is my opinion that a person holding a policy-making position not only should have the right and opportunity, but he ought to go out and defend his administration and its policies. Certainly it is not my intention to prohibit such action. I should gladly have agreed to an amendment exempting policy-making officials, and had myself planned to go to the House committee and request that the House write in such a reasonable amendment.

Entertaining the confidence that I do in the other branch of the Congress, I cannot help believing, Mr. President, that if there were any remedial amendments which should have been offered, the House committee would have accepted them and made any correction. So far as I am concerned—and I am sure I speak for the other members of our committee and the coauthors of the bill—I should have been glad to accept corrective amendments.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that upon the completion of the consideration of the bill now before the Senate, the motion to reconsider be made the special order of business.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from New Mexico will not propound that request now, because it might involve considerable debate. We are anxious to get the pending bill out of the way, together with one or two small matters. It is contemplated that we shall then take a recess at least until Wednesday.

Also, the question arises whether or not the motion can be taken up until the House has complied with the request of the Senate to return the papers. If the House should not comply with the request and return the papers, the question of reconsideration might become moot.

Mr. HATCH. Of course, in that event, the special order itself would lapse.

Mr. BARKLEY. Probably so. However, the Senator can obtain consideration of his motion when we meet again.

Mr. HATCH. I wish to say that heretofore the Senator from Kentucky has been very helpful in the work on the bill. I have had several conferences with him about it. If the Senator from Kentucky will tell me that he will cooperate in obtaining a vote on the motion some time this week, I will withdraw my request.

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; I desire to have the motion disposed of at the earliest possible date. It probably can be disposed of at the next session of the Senate.

Mr. HATCH. Upon that assurance I withdraw my request, and will not detain the Senate longer this afternoon.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, I should like to make a brief statement.

I am in thorough sympathy with the aims and objects of the bill. However, I do not think it goes sufficiently far. I was absent from the city on Thursday and Friday. I returned Saturday afternoon. I received many telephone inquiries and telegraphic requests with respect to section 9 of the bill. That is the section to which the distinguished Senator from New Mexico referred a few minutes ago.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GUFFEY. First, let me finish.

I did not return to the city until 1:30 today. When I reached my office, I came immediately to the Chamber. I asked one of the parliamentary experts of the Senate to prepare a motion which I then made, failing to realize that the Senator from New Mexico was not on the floor. I thought two of the other members of the committee were on the floor. In that belief I was mistaken. I thought the senior Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], one of the members of the committee, and the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN] were on the floor. I may have been mistaken.

I shall very gladly discuss at length section 9, in which everyone who has communicated with me seems to be interested. If there is any way in which I can help to strengthen the bill and attain its objects and aims, I shall be glad to cooperate to that end. I shall also press for passage, at another date, of an amendment to the election laws prohibiting the expenditure of money to pay watchers, workers, and hired voters on election day in senatorial, congressional, and Presidential elections. That bill is now buried with some committee. At an early date I shall move to put it on the calendar.

Mr. HATCH. I merely wish to say to the Senator from Pennsylvania, regarding the bill to which he has just referred, that my recollection is that the bill was sent to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. I am not certain as to that. It was not referred to the subcommittee which considered the other bill. However, as a member of the Committee on Privileges and Elections I wish to say to the Senator from Pennsylvania that I shall be glad to cooperate with him in every way to obtain a favorable report from the committee on his bill, and, when it reaches the floor, to aid in whatever way I can in its passage.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I wish to say merely a few words.

I call attention at this point to the fact that this bill was not a partisan bill. Its authorship indicates that, and I think the very language of the bill so indicates. It was a matter of some happiness to me that the bill was passed by the Senate without a disclosure of the revolting things that caused the introduction of the bill. I regret to say—not as a threat, but as a mere statement of necessity—that if we must have a discussion of the question whether the Senate will reconsider the vote by which it passed the bill, I shall feel obliged to disclose conditions in the State of Pennsylvania, whence comes the learned Senator who has given notice that he would make this motion, and in other States of the United States, which fully justify all that appears in the bill.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, for the benefit of the senior Senator from Vermont, I merely wish to say that I shall have no objection to his disclosing anything he has regarding conditions in Pennsylvania that was brought out by the former Anti-Saloon League snoopers of the committee who investigated that State. I hope he will place it in the RECORD.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I desire to say to the Senator from Vermont that I agree with him as to what he said about the bill being nonpartisan. I do not think there has been any partisanship at all in it so far as we are concerned. When, however, the Senator refers to conditions anywhere being responsible for the measure, I must disagree with him. Long before any investigation by the "Anti-Saloon League snoopers," to use the expression of the Senator from Pennsylvania—I do not know what he refers to, and I do not mean to be facetious about the matter—long before any election matters were pending, before anything happened, it had been my purpose to secure the passage of legislation of this kind because of conditions which had gone on, not in the past election but throughout the country for many, many years. The election laws had not been sufficiently amended to deal with such conditions, and I thought our own great program of relief inaugurated by this administration was entitled to have thrown around it the protection afforded by the bill.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 4852, making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Arizona.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 4852) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. HAYDEN. I ask unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with and that the bill be read for amendment, the amendments of the committee to be first considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will read the bill for amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the heading "Office of the Secretary", on page 3, line 10, to reduce the appropriations under the office of Solicitor for personal services in the District of Columbia and in the field from $295,000 to $285,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 3, line 23, before the word "for", to strike out "$39,240" and insert $45,500"; in line 24, after the word "exceeding", to strike out "$52,000" and insert "$60,100"; and on page 4, line 2, after the word "service" and the period, to insert "The Secretary of the Interior shall include in his annual report a full statement of all expenditures made under authority of this paragraph", so as to read:

DIVISION OF INVESTIGATIONS

For investigating official matters under the control of the Department of the Interior; for protecting timber on the public lands, and for the more efficient execution of the law and rules relating to the cutting thereof; for protecting public lands from illegal and fraudulent entry or appropriation; for adjusting claims for swamplands and indemnity for swamplands; and for traveling and other expenses of persons employed hereunder, $548,000, including not exceeding $45,500 for personal services in the District of Columbia; not exceeding $60,100 for the purchase, exchange, operation, and maintenance of motor-propelled, passenger-carrying vehicles and motorboats for the use of agents and others employed in the field service. The Secretary of the Interior shall include in his annual report a full statement of all expenditures made under authority of this paragraph.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 8, line 21, after the name "Interior", to strike out "$275,970" and insert "$309,130", and in the same line, after the word "which", to strike out "$66,840" and insert "$100,000", so as to read:

For printing and binding for the Department of the Interior, $309,130, of which $100,000 shall be for the National Park Service, $85,290 for the Bureau of Mines, and $54,500 for the Office of Education, no part of which shall be available for corresponding instruction.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "National Bituminous Coal Commission", on page 10, line 15, after the word "periodicals", to strike out "$2,900" and insert "$3,500", and in the same line, to strike out the colon and "Provided," That expenditures during the fiscal year 1940 under this head and under the head 'Salaries and expenses, Office of Consumers' Counsel, National Bituminous Coal Commission', shall not exceed an amount equal to the aggregate receipts covered into the Treasury during the period July 1, 1937, to June 30, 1940, under the provisions of section 3 of the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937, after deducting therefrom the total expenditures under these heads for the period July 1, 1937, to June 30, 1939", so as to read:

Salaries and expenses: For all necessary expenditures of the National Bituminous Coal Commission in performing the duties imposed upon said Commission by the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937, approved April 26, 1937 (50 Stat. 72) including personal services and rent in the District of Columbia and elsewhere; traveling expenses, including expenses of attendance at meetings which, in the discretion of the Commission, are necessary for efficient discharge of its responsibilities; contract stenographic reporting services; stationery and office supplies; purchase, rental, exchange, operation, maintenance, and repair of reproducing, photographing, and other such equipment, typewriters, calculating machines, mechanical tabulating equipment, and other office appliances and labor-saving devices; printing and binding; witness fees and fees and mileage in accordance with section 8 of the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937; not to exceed $12,500 for purchase, exchange, hire, maintenance, operation, and repair of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles including one for use in the District of Columbia; garage rentals; miscellaneous items, including those for public instruction and information deemed necessary by the Commission; and not to exceed $6,000 for purchase and exchange of newspapers, law books, reference books, and periodicals, $3,500,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "United States Housing Authority", on page 14, line 8, after the word "amended", to strike out the colon and the following additional proviso: "Provided further, That all expenditures by the United States Housing Authority out of the appropriations made by this act shall be subject to audit, in the General Accounting Office in the same manner and to the same extent as expenditures of the Department of the Interior."

The amendment was agreed to.

Great Smoky Mountains National Park, N. C. and Tenn.: For administration, protection, and maintenance, including not to exceed $1,150 for the purchase, maintenance, operation, and repair of motor-driven passenger-carrying vehicles for use in connection with general park work, $89,400: Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be available for the payment of the salary of the present Superintendent of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, this amendment provides "That no part of this appropriation shall be available for the payment of the salary of the present Superintendent of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park." It seems to me that legislation designed to oust from office an employee of the Federal Government is an extremely improper kind of legislation to place before the Senate. I think there ought to be a further explanation of the proposed amendment.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I shall be very happy to give that explanation to the Senator and to the Senate.

The Superintendent of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park is a man by the name of J. Ross Eakin. Mr. Eakin's accounts were first examined by the Department of the Interior in 1937. They were examined in 1938, and again in 1939. The report of Mr. Myers, the accountant of the Interior Department, is published in full in the hearings. I am sure that if the Senator from Ohio, who has questioned the amendment, had been diligent enough to read the report made by Mr. Myers concerning this unfaithful, negligent, and improper servant of the people, he would not have asked the question about it.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. Have the facts been presented to the Secretary of the Interior, and has the Secretary been asked to remove the gentleman from office?

Mr. McKELLAR. The facts have been presented to the Secretary of the Interior. I do not know whether or not he has gone over them. I do not think he has. I think he has depended upon a man by the name of Cammerer, who happens to be at present the head of the National Park Service. Mr. Cammerer himself has been woefully negligent in his duty.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I should like to know in what respect Mr. Cammerer has been negligent in his duties. I have understood that he is as highly efficient a public servant as we could possibly have.

Mr. McKELLAR. I shall be very happy to tell the Senator and the Senate.

This investigation was made under Mr. Cammerer. The report was made to him. He never called the attention of either the Secretary or the Assistant Secretary to the report. However, he did write to this unfaithful public servant, Mr. Eakin, a letter severely criticizing him. That was the end of it; that was what was done. Now I wish to call the attention of the Senate to what was in this report which Mr. Cammerer criticized.

Mr. VANDENBERG. May I ask the Senator one more question?

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Does the Senator base his criticism of Mr. Cammerer solely, entirely, and exclusively on this one episode?

Mr. McKELLAR. That is the sole question before the Senate.

Mr. VANDENBERG. That was not the sole question involved in the Senator's very broad indictment of Mr. Cammerer, was it?

Mr. McKELLAR. I did not understand the Senator.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Is not infinitely more involved in the very broad indictment of the Senator against Mr. Cammerer?

Mr. McKELLAR. I am talking about Mr. Cammerer and saying that he was very negligent so far as this matter was concerned.

Mr. VANDENBERG. As I understand the Senator confines his criticism to this one episode.

Mr. McKELLAR. I think he ought to be investigated, but I am confining it to the question of the duty of the executive agency.

Mr. VANDENBERG. That is a totally different matter.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, in his report Mr. Myers considers that part of the business of the park—I am talking about the Great Smoky Mountain Park—known as emergency construction work. Incidentally between five and six hundred thousand dollars was expended under the direction of Mr. Eakin in this park. I find in the report of Mr. Myers, who was sent there by the Interior Department to make an examination of this report, the following:

Unaccounted for, $132,040.62.

Later on Mr. Myers was sent to my office for the purpose of making an explanation, and, if I can find the testimony, I will read from it.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a moment?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. One thing I do not understand about these hearings. On page 51, it is set out that—

February 24, 1939, the subcommittee (on the Interior Department appropriation bill) met at 11 o'clock a. m. at room 221, Senate Office Building.
Present: Senator McKELLAR.

The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR], then, by himself, examined Mr. Myers at great length. I am a member of the subcommittee, but I never had notice of any such meeting.

Mr. McKELLAR. There was no such meeting.

Mr. TAFT. That is what the record discloses on page 51—

February 24, 1939, the subcommittee met at 11 o'clock a. m.

Mr. McKELLAR. The stenographer made a mistake in putting it that way. Mr. Myers was sent to my office by Mr. Burlew for the purpose of explaining his report.

Mr. TAFT. And the Senator from Tennessee, by himself, conducted the examination of Mr. Myers, which appears at great length. None of the other members of the committee were given an opportunity to examine or cross-examine Mr. Myers. Is not that a correct statement?

Mr. McKELLAR. My friend from Ohio is exceedingly suspicious; he is the most suspicious man in the world. I do not know whether it is ambition or what it is, but something makes the Senator from Ohio very suspicious. Mr. Burlew sent this man to my office for the purpose of letting me examine him to ascertain what the facts were about his report. I telephoned Mr. Burlew and asked him if he had any objection to my examining him in writing. He said he did not have. Thereupon I secured a stenographer and examined him in writing; and his statement is in the record.

When this matter came up, Mr. Eakin was in Washington for a week; he just passed through, and nobody examined him. He himself did not ask to come before the committee. He knew this matter was in the record, but he did not dare to come before the committee. The reason he did not dare to come before the committee was because of his record. The Senator from Ohio—candidate for President or not candidate for President—cannot, by his suspicion, throw the cloak of good character around this unfaithful public servant.

Now, let me read from the report of Mr. Myers:

From the above it will be readily seen that it was impossible to make audit from standpoint of purchase orders issued. After making a survey of the situation, it was decided to make the audit from standpoint of vouchers paid by finance officer. Alphabetical file—

And so forth.

Purchase and contract procedure: A review of the following comments will disclose that proper purchase and contract procedure was not followed. In the auditor's opinion, the greater portion of these discrepancies can be charged to incompetent personnel in charge of purchasing, and—

Let me call the attention of the Senator from Ohio to this—lack of proper supervision by ones responsible.

And Mr. Eakin was responsible.

Several excuses were given for mistakes that had been made, the favorite one being to place blame on clerk that was suspended on August 1, 1936, and the next being failure to receive information from Washington office. It would appear—that anything that was wanted by anybody was purchased, regardless of regulations, and then every known means used to get the same paid by the finance officer, giving him answers to his questions that were not borne out by the facts when he would hold up payment of vouchers for additional information.

Listen to this—

That is the start of it. Let me give some of the examples.

There were a good many employees, and each employee had more than one car which are called in the report "pick-ups," that is, little Ford cars that could be used for passengers and for freight. According to the statement of Mr. Myers, they had 39 such cars, and there were 30 employees at that place. Every man had a car and then there were nine more to draw from. The cars were purchased by the Government; they were operated by the Government; the fuel was furnished by the Government; they were chauffeured by employees of the Government, and one of the uses that were made of these cars was that as shown by this report when they got off at 4:30 o'clock at Gattinburg; that is, when their day of labor ended, some of these employees would go to Knoxville, and some of them go to Asheville in the cars furnished at Government expense, and they would charge the Government a per diem for being away from their station. They would go, according to the report, to Knoxville, and spend the evening there pleasantly at shows or otherwise, and get back the next morning in time to start on duty. They were paid their salaries and at the same time drew a per diem for expenses from the Government. That is petty graft.

Eakin knew about it; he did not attempt to correct it; he has not attempted to correct it since. He was examined in 1938 or 1939, and both reports show conditions were exceedingly bad.

Does the Senator from Ohio defend that kind of petty graft? Does he defend the record of a superintendent of a park who allowed Government cars to be used by Government agents, some of them clerks, some of them officers, and some of them getting small salaries? Does he excuse the Superintendent of the park for allowing that to go on? I do not believe the Senator from Ohio would do that, and I do not believe any other Senator would do that. This man Eakin permitted it. But that is just one of the things. Listen to this:

Excessive purchases: It was noted that a great many automobile tires and tubes were purchased. A check of these purchases shows that between April 1, 1935, and June 30, 1936, tires and tubes amounting to $13,012.62 were purchased. Just why it would be necessary to purchase a hundred tires at one time, and place them in stock at the two warehouses, was never properly explained to auditor, and when you take into account that all of the large tire companies have warehouses and service stations carrying a complete line of truck tires at Knoxville, Tenn., and Asheville, N. C. As a large stock of tires were on hand at Sugarlands warehouse, inquiry was made and answer received that they were for detached-service cars, and when it was pointed out that it was not necessary to have extra tires on hand, when they could be obtained from Knoxville, when and as needed, the answer was then given that the tires on hand had been purchased by the clerk that had been suspended.

It seems that the clerk had been suspended some months before; and, as the examiner says, everything that they could not explain in any other way was put upon the clerk. The Senator from Ohio cannot defend that procedure.

I proceed to read:

As a great many partly worn-out tires were in several places, instructions were given to have all of these tires placed in one building under lock and key, and when this was done, it was found that one abandoned barrack building at Sugarlands was completely filled with worn-out or partly worn-out tires from camps in Tennessee, some of them, in the auditor's opinion, being good tires showing very little use.

The tires were afterward sold, and what became of them no one knows. I do not believe the Senator from Ohio would condone that kind of dealing on the part of a public servant. But I go on.

We next come to contracts. The superintendent rented a house not according to law, not under the rules and regulations of the Department, from a man who seems to have been a favorite of the superintendent, and paid what he chose to pay for it. As I recollect, he paid some $60 a month for a one-room structure built with upright planks, and probably a month's rent paid the entire cost of the house. I do not believe the Senator from Ohio would undertake to defend that action.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. Certainly.

Mr. TAFT. When did the Senator from Tennessee first begin to complain against the superintendent of this park; how many years ago?

Mr. McKELLAR. As I recall, I never knew the superintendent of this park, and I would not know him now if I should see him. He was complained about to me by numerous citizens of Sevier County; and I want to be perfectly frank in telling the Senator from Ohio how my attention was attracted to him.

Mr. TAFT. How long ago?

Mr. McKELLAR. Just 1 minute, and I will tell the Senator everything I know about this man.

Prior to the November election I heard from a friend of mine down there, or several friends of mine down there—they all said the same thing—that we had a Republican superintendent of the park who was the chief cook and bottle washer in the Democratic primary, and that he was undertaking to control Democratic politics in that county. I simply referred the letter, as I recall, to the Secretary of the Interior, and told him that I thought any good Republican who was sent down into that part of the country, even if he had a carpetbag with him, might be sent somewhere else and not to Tennessee.

Mr. TAFT. Did the Senator have a reply from the Secretary of the Interior?

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes.

Mr. TAFT. Has the Senator that reply? Can he put it in the RECORD?

Mr. McKELLAR. If I have it, I shall be very glad to do so. I want to say to the Senator from Ohio that I have nothing to conceal from him or anyone else. The Senator from Ohio may defend, if he wants to, a man whom I believe the record of the Department shows to be a crook; but, so far as I am concerned, I am not going to defend him. I think he ought to be discharged; and if the Secretary of the Interior will not discharge him, I do not think the Congress of the United States ought to pay him. I believe if the Senator from Ohio knew the facts he would take the same position, but the Senator from Ohio is not going to examine into the facts. He is not going to read the facts. He is going to make a statement on the floor of the Senate without knowledge. He is not going to read the facts. I challenge him to read the facts. If he does, if he has the sense that I think he has and is the kind of man I think he is, he will apologize for bringing up this record.

Mr. BARKLEY and other Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Tennessee yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield first to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does the Senator know from what State this superintendent comes?

Mr. McKELLAR. I think he comes from West Virginia.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. Certainly.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. Myers, whose testimony the Senator has been reading, is an examiner for the Park Service?

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes.

Mr. TAFT. And I suppose he brought all these facts to the attention of the head of the Park Service?

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes; he did.

Mr. TAFT. And the Park Service, after considering all the facts that are set out here, has refused to remove Mr. Eakin?

Mr. McKELLAR. That shows that the Senator from Ohio does not know what he is talking about.

Mr. TAFT. I am asking a question. I did not make a statement.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am very glad to tell the Senator. What happened was that when this matter was called to the attention of the Secretary of the Interior he did not remove Mr. Eakin, but he transferred him to the park in the State of the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, what business had he to transfer a crook to Virginia? [Laughter.]

Mr. McKELLAR. Frankly, I felt the same way, and I declined to accept any such proposed compromise. I felt that if this man was unworthy to be the superintendent of a park in Tennessee, he was unworthy to be the superintendent of a park in Virginia; and I would not agree to any such disposition of the matter. Thereupon, as I saw in the newspapers a day or two ago, the Secretary of the Interior, without knowing anything about these facts and without having examined this man, transferred him back to Tennessee, so that we now have him.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President——

Mr. McKELLAR. Has not the Senator a park in Ohio?

Mr. TAFT. If the Senator will yield, I should like to ask whether Secretary Ickes has written the chairman of the subcommittee, the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], a letter regarding this matter?

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not know. Has he?

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes, Mr. President; I had a letter sometime ago with regard to the matter.

Mr. McKELLAR. I did not know it.

Mr. TAFT. In other words, the subject has been called to the attention of Secretary Ickes, and he has refused to remove Mr. Eakin; has he not?

Mr. HAYDEN. Frankly, I have never read the letter. I had the letter.

Mr. TAFT. The Senator——

Mr. McKELLAR. Wait one moment. Notwithstanding the implied criticism of the distinguished Republican candidate for the Presidency who has just been criticizing this amendment, I want to say that I am telling the facts about the matter. The Secretary of the Interior removed Mr. Eakin to the Shenandoah National Park, in the State of the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS]; and when I did not agree to it, which I refused to do, he issued a second order rescinding the first one. Those are the facts. What he wrote to anybody else, I do not know.

Mr. TAFT. The effect of the amendment would be to make it possible for the Secretary to transfer Mr. Eakin to Virginia, so that he could get his salary, would it not?

Mr. McKELLAR. The effect of the amendment is that if Mr. Eakin remains in Tennessee as the superintendent of this park, somebody besides the United States Government will have to pay him.

Mr. TAFT. But he can be transferred to Virginia, and then he will receive his salary. Is not that a fair interpretation of the amendment?

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not believe he can be transferred to Virginia, because after this state of affairs has been disclosed surely no Secretary in the Cabinet of the President will transfer him to Virginia.

Mr. BARKLEY. How about sending him to Ohio?

Mr. McKELLAR. Or even to Ohio. If the Senator from Ohio has a good park where he needs men who will be short in their accounts to the extent of $114,000, which investigators cannot find when they go there to investigate, and if the Senator will make representations to the President that he wants that kind of a man in Ohio, he may get him; but I am not going to help the Senator get him.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I do not object to this man going to Ohio, since the Senator from Ohio seems to be deeply interested in him. I do not want him in Virginia, however.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator from Ohio is deeply interested. He seems to show a good deal of feeling about the matter. I think the Senator from Ohio must have found out that this good Republican down in Tennessee is worth cultivating. If he can go down there as a Republican, vote the Republican ticket, and still control local Democratic politics, he must be a powerful fellow; and probably the Senator from Ohio, who is said to be anxious for future political preferment, would like to know about powerful men.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. Surely.

Mr. WILEY. In view of the fact that this man has gone down into the Senator's State, let me ask whether he was a good man before he became mixed up in politics down there.

Mr. McKELLAR. I never heard of him before. The Senator from Ohio may know him. He may be a good friend of the Senator from Ohio; but, so far as I know, I recall having seen the man only once, when I went to the park about 3 months ago, and he came up and introduced himself to me. He had very little to say to me, and I had very little to say to him.

Now that Senators have asked me a number of questions, and I have given them the facts, I will proceed.

This man made purchases just when and where he pleased, without regard to the law and without regard to the regulations. As Senators know, there is a provision of law that all supplies over $100 in value have to be advertised for. The superintendent of this park paid no attention to that provision of law, according to this man who examined the matter for the Department. He audited the bills of lading, and found them incorrect and improper, if not actually crooked.

On the audit the accounts and records and reports were found wholly improper, if not dishonest and crooked.

Monthly telegraphic report of encumbrances.

By "encumbrances" I understand the report means where they have allotted certain moneys to certain things.

Now we come to purchases. There is another provision of law that purchases amounting to over a hundred dollars cannot under any circumstance be made without competition. He wanted to buy some cement. All this is in the record. He must be a man who makes friends all around. The cement producers wanted to sell cement. He was buying cement for roads, and he complied with the law by advertising for a sack of cement. Keep that in mind. Then he bought about $900 worth of cement from three contractors, who sent in bids stating the price for which they would sell one sack. That was multiplied by the number bought from that particular seller, and in that way they avoided the advertising. He does it in that way—a smart aleck.

The Senator from Ohio is defending this man. Can he defend that? I challenge him here and now, can he defend that kind of a contract on the part of a public servant? By the way, this man has been in the Park Service for many years, and he knows better.

Here is a man who wanted to buy cement with which to build roads, and he advertised for one sack of cement, and then entered into a contract for a carload with each one of three concerns who bid exactly the same price. He wanted to complete arrangements so that he would not have to advertise, but would buy a carload from each of the concerns.

Mr. President, is it possible that our Government has sunk so low that we are going to keep a man like that in the Government employ? I am glad the Senator from Virginia is present. I decline to let a man like that go to his State, and notwithstanding the fact that he is being defended by the distinguished candidate for the Presidency, the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT], on this floor, I would decline, even under those circumstances, to let him go to Ohio, if I had anything to do with it.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, can the Senator state what prompted the Secretary of the Interior to send him to Virginia?

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not know.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, is it not due to the fact that the Senator from Tennessee made it so disagreeable with the Secretary of the Interior that he decided that, since he was a competent man, he would send him somewhere where the Senator from Tennessee would not have any further trouble or difficulty?

Mr. McKELLAR. That is not a fact at all; quite the reverse is the fact. I never talked with the Secretary of the Interior about the matter, and I am quite sure that if the Secretary of the Interior were to read this record, just as I am imploring the Senator from Ohio to read the record, Mr. Ickes would dismiss the man from the service of the United States as he ought to be dismissed.

Mr. TAFT. Then why does not the Senator bring the matter to the personal attention of Mr. Ickes, and have him do the job, instead of putting on the Senate of the United States the burden of an investigation which Senators are not prepared to undertake, have not time to undertake, and have no proper constitutional function to undertake?

Mr. McKELLAR. Wait a moment. If the Senator from Ohio has not time to undertake it, to examine into the facts in a matter like this, it is high time, if the Senator as a new Senator will take the advice of an old one, for him to devote a little more time to the duties of his office here, and perhaps not to other things.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Tennessee yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. WILEY. Answering the question of the distinguished Senator from Virginia, is it possible that this man, who originally came from West Virginia, was all right, but after being in the State of the Senator from Tennessee for a little while something happened, so that it was thought perhaps he could be reformed by going into Virginia?

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not know. I doubt it. If a man allows to go on such a thing as he has allowed to go on in Tennessee, he would never be an honest man anywhere, not even in the Senator's State of Wisconsin. I would not inflict him upon the Senator's State.

Mr. WILEY. I thank the Senator.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Has this individual ever been tried on these charges?

Mr. McKELLAR. No.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. It seems to me that if he has never been tried, he ought to be given an opportunity to explain the charges.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have given him an opportunity. I have referred these charges to the Department, and this man has been here for a week, he saw these charges in the record, the papers carried them, but he did not come before the committee, and he did not ask to come before the committee. I ask the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], did Mr. Eakin ever ask for permission to come before the subcommittee?

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I have a recollection that sometime ago, perhaps a month or more ago, I did receive a letter from Mr. Eakin stating that if his conduct was to be investigated by the committee he desired to be heard. The committee conducted no investigation of Mr. Eakin.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, is it not also true that this particular amendment was inserted in the executive session of the committee after all hearings had been closed?

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator was there, and heard it. He ought not to ask such a question, because he heard the amendment when it was offered before the subcommittee, and he was present. By the way, the Senator never said a word about it then.

Mr. TAFT. I did not happen to be present that day.

Mr. McKELLAR. I accept the Senator's statement. The Senator was in the full committee.

Mr. TAFT. No; not on Saturday.

Mr. McKELLAR. If the Senator had been present at the session of the committee he probably would not have said about this matter what he has stated today.

The next transaction involved oil barrels. They could procure oil cheaper if they returned the barrels, and Mr. Eakin would not return the barrels.

Mr. WILEY. It was not "pork"—not "pork" barrels?

Mr. McKELLAR. No; it was oil. They required a great deal of gasoline and oil. I do not believe he returned anything he got—"pork," or anything else. But there was a lot of "pork" gotten down there, according to the able investigator. He says that anyone at that park bought anything in the world he or she wanted, and they never bothered about authority to do it—they merely got the authority the best they could afterward—just fixed it up. And even then there was a sum of $114,000 for which there were no vouchers. The report says that sum was unaccounted for.

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. WILEY. There have been a number of facetious questions and remarks during the debate, but it seems to me that what the Senator is doing is indicting a department of the Government.

Mr. McKELLAR. If the Senator wishes to take it that way, very well.

Mr. WILEY. I am serious about it. If these things go on, if these small graftings continue, they may result in big graftings, and may mean a large loss to the Public Treasury.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is true, and I think it is indefensible. I am glad the Senator from Wisconsin feels the same way about it, if he does, as I am sure he does.

Mr. WILEY. The Senator need not put an "if" in his statement. There is too much of it going on.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. It seems to me we are overlooking the fundamental proposition which underlies this whole question, that is, whether this individual, charged with a crime, has been called before any competent authority and the charges presented.

Mr. McKELLAR. No.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Then why does the Senator wish to convict him without hearing him?

Mr. McKELLAR. He has been heard.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I understand he has been heard extensively before an inspector.

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Is there any specification charging anything against this man's character? Perhaps the inspector is bothered with a lot of political influence.

Mr. McKELLAR. I will read the Senator what Mr. Eakin himself says about it.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. It does not make any difference what anyone says about anybody else; so long as this man has never had a trial I am not going to vote to convict him.

Mr. McKELLAR. Very well. I am not asking the Senator to do anything in violation of his conscience. If he conscientiously believes that a man of this kind ought to be a Government servant, that is for him and not for me to determine.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Tennessee yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. Who is the investigator?

Mr. McKELLAR. Myers.

Mr. LUCAS. In what department of the Government is he employed?

Mr. McKELLAR. The Interior Department.

Mr. LUCAS. The same department in which Mr. Eakin is employed?

Mr. McKELLAR. The same department; and he was sent there by Mr. Cammerer.

Mr. LUCAS. Has he made a report to the Secretary of the Interior?

Mr. McKELLAR. He has made three reports. The first one is the worst, the second one is a little better, but still complaining at the failure to carry out his directions; and the third is substantially the same.

Mr. LUCAS. The three reports are all adverse?

Mr. McKELLAR. All adverse to him. I shall put them into the RECORD so that every Senator may read them.

Mr. LUCAS. And notwithstanding these three adverse reports which have been made to the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Ickes, this man is still on the pay roll?

Mr. McKELLAR. He is still on the pay roll, and nothing has been done.

Listen to this:

JUNE 2, 1937.

The DIRECTOR,
The National Park Service, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. DIRECTOR: This will acknowledge your letter of May 21 advising of the receipt of a 78-page report from Field Auditors Douglas and Myers covering their review of E. C. W. accounts and records for the period beginning April 1, 1935, and ending October 31, 1936.

Listen to this, Senators:

We—

Editorial "We." The Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS] can understand that, as he is the owner of a newspaper.

Mr. GLASS. I do not understand why he should have been sent to Virginia, though.

Mr. McKELLAR. I agree with the Senator.

We heartily regret your apparent consternation in receiving the unsatisfactory report, but believe you will understand from this explanation that the records were not as irregular and the violations as numerous as portended in the report.

Did he deny the charges? No. Was he having a hearing? Yes. But he confesses and avoids.

We heartily regret your apparent consternation in receiving the unsatisfactory report, but believe you will understand from this explanation that the records were not as irregular and the violations as numerous as portended in the report.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Of course, in a voluminous report there may be included violations which are not important at all. There may be technical violations.

Mr. McKELLAR. These are not technical violations.

I desire to ask the Senator from Wyoming a question, since the Senator has taken up that matter. Is the Senator defending the superintendent of a national park who will condone illegal acts and keep in office those who at Government expense, after the day's work is done at 4:30, take a Government-owned car, with a Government chauffeur, and drive away from their location, on personal errands, stay away until the next morning, and get back to work at the proper hour, but charge the Government a per diem and the mileage on the car? Does the Senator defend that?

Mr. SCHWARTZ. If the Senator please, I am not doing that.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am sure the Senator does not.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I am defending the right of a man to have a trial before the properly constituted officers upon a charge that he is doing these things. Until he gets such a trial I think the Senate should not affirmatively put a brand on him. The Constitution provides for a court of impeachment in the Congress, but in practice Senators have become glorified grand jurors, bringing in information from all over the United States, and now it appears that we must be a petit jury and convict, without trial, persons who are in the executive departments and not under our own jurisdiction.

Mr. McKELLAR. If the Senator is not satisfied with that explanation, made by Mr. Eakin himself, I wonder if he is satisfied with the following statement:

There were also extenuating circumstances in many instances which were explained to the auditors, but from their abusive attitude and threats at times when the audit was trying, it was expected that no quarter would be given, a sufficient justification for their extended visit would be recorded.

After making the admission he charges the auditor with being threatening and with being abusive. Mr. Myers appeared before the committee, having been sent by Mr. Burlew to explain this matter. I asked him if he threatened Mr. Eakin, and, as I recall, he said not only did he not threaten him, but he did not even see him. That Mr. Eakin was too big a man for him to see. So there were no abuses or threats. But this man, while he confesses in part, is trying to get out of it, and apparently got by with the auditor.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I should be glad to vote for a resolution calling on the Secretary of the Interior to send the record to the Senate, and let us know what he has done and what he has not done.

Mr. McKELLAR. I wonder if the Senator, even if he disagrees with me, would not do me the justice as a fellow Senator to read what these reports say? Let the Senator read this letter from Mr. Eakin and pass on it.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Yes; I will read the report, and listen to the reading of his letter.

Mr. McKELLAR. I continue reading:

We interpret from your letter that it is not understood why the conditions prevailed, since only 8 months prior to the arrival of Messrs. Douglas and Myers at our office, another auditor had spent approximately 2 weeks reviewing the E. C. W. accounts and records. This was in December 1935 and that audit should have covered 8 months or approximately one-half of the period in question. We do not know what the report contains.

And so forth. The letter consists of 13 pages—a very unlucky number for some people.

Mr. President, I ask to have printed in the RECORD, not the entire record, but the entire report of the auditor; I also ask to place in the record the letter of Mr. Cammerer, or his assistant. And also I ask to have placed in the RECORD the letter of Mr. Eakin, which discloses the whole situation.

I shall read a part of the letter from the Associate Director of the National Park Service, A. E. Demaray.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Is that the man mentioned in the report?

Mr. McKELLAR. No; this letter is written by Mr. Demaray, who is Associate Director of the National Park Service. Mr. Demaray wrote about the "apparent consternation" to Mr. Eakin in 1937. Listen to this:

The detailed audit of the allotment ledgers indicated that the accounts were inaccurate and it was necessary for the auditors to prepare a list of numerous adjusting entries to correct the unencumbered balances.

The monthly telegraphic report of obligations by alphabetical classifications agreed with the total entries in the allotment ledger for the corresponding month in only two instances.

There were hundreds of instances, perhaps thousands of instances, but in only two did the report agree with the allotment ledger. That bears out the statement of the auditor, who said in his report that anyone in that Service made purchases of anything he wanted, under any circumstances, from whom he pleased, without regard to regulations, without regard to law. That is what Mr. Demaray is referring to here.

There was a difference of approximately $3,000 between the total of the telegraphic report and the total of the FD–1670 allotment ledgers, respectively, for the period beginning April 1, 1935, and ending October 31, 1936. It is important that the obligations report be reconciled monthly with the allotment ledgers.

The allotment ledgers for the FD–570 and FD–870 procurement authorities were not checked in detail, but the auditors reported that the last summary sheet for the FD–570 funds showed unliquidated encumbrances amounting to $146,472.45. The FD–870 allotment ledgers showed unliquidated encumbrances amounting to $6,231.72.

Although it seems improbable that unliquidated items to such an extent should remain at such a late date, the figures were taken from the last records for the procurement authorities FD–570 and FD–870, respectively, which were made available to the auditors. The allotment ledgers and files of supporting documents and vouchers were in such poor shape that it would have required the auditors to spend 3 or 4 additional months in the park to verify the accounts in detail. You are requested to assign someone to the task of cleaning up the old accounts and to liquidate the outstanding encumbrances against the FD–570 and FD–870 procurement authorities so the unencumbered balances may be taken up and the ledgers closed.

Every effort should be made to effect early settlements of the remaining items encumbered against FD–1670 funds. It is quite possible that a number of the accounts may have been paid but the supporting vouchers were not available in your files during the audit.

They took no vouchers until after they made the purchases, according to Mr. Myers, the investigator.

Your office had failed to encumber packing, handling, and transportation charges on Government shipping tickets. The packing and handling charges which were shown on the shipping tickets should be entered in the direct-settlement column of the allotment ledger and transportation charges.

Senators, listen to this. This is the Department now, acting on its own report.

There also appear to have been violations of travel regulations in cases where travel of an apparently personal nature was described as official business. * * *

Listen to that. Does the Senator defend that?

And a claim for per diem reimbursement was made and paid.

A man in the regular employ of the Park Service going to Knoxville on business or pleasure for himself, and claim for per diem reimbursement was made and paid.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I desire to make it plain that I am not approving any transactions of that kind. I take the position that this is not the time, the place, nor the forum in which to convict this man. If anyone should be charged here, if the charges are true, it is the head of the National Park Service and not this individual.

Mr. McKELLAR. No; the Senator is wrong about that. I think the head of the Park Service ought to have discharged the man, of course, but the man who is in the Park Service, who is guilty of this nefarious conduct, is primarily liable.

Mr. SMATHERS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Tennessee yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. SMATHERS. Will the Senator tell me, if all the things he charges against Mr. Eakin are true, why Secretary Ickes has declined to dismiss him?

Mr. McKELLAR. It is beyond my understanding. I have a very high opinion of Mr. Ickes. The only way in which I can account for it is that he has simply not been willing to do at this time the work of examining the entire record as it should be examined.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. TAFT. I understand that Secretary Ickes has written a letter—probably the one which the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] has not read—in which he defends Mr. Eakin and in which he says he has examined the charges, and is in favor of retaining Mr. Eakin in the service. To be fair to Mr. Eakin, I think we ought to have that letter read to the Senate at this time. I will ask the Senator from Arizona if he is willing to send for the letter and read it to the Senate?

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no objection whatever, if the Senator has such a letter.

Mr. TAFT. I do not know. I am only told that such is the character of the letter.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator has been told many things which he has repeated as facts on the floor of the Senate. I think the Senator has a wrong idea of the facts.

Mr. TAFT. There was a letter on the subject which the Senator from Arizona said he had not the time to read. I think the letter ought to be read to the Senate.

Mr. McKELLAR. I shall be delighted to have it read. Listen to this:

Another example, was supervising mechanic leaving Bryson City, N. C., at 7:30 p. m., arriving at Knoxville, 11:15 p. m. and leaving Knoxville at 6 a. m. next morning, arriving at Bryson City at 9:45 a. m. This party's headquarters was Smokemont, N. C., several miles from Bryson City, N. C. He spent a great many evenings in Knoxville, Tenn., and Asheville, N. C., arriving at these places after regular closing hours for all kinds of official business, and leaving the next morning before opening hours, and collected per diem for the time away from official station.

Apparently, a Government car was used for transportation.

Mr. President, all this led me to offer the amendment in the committee. The only way in which we shall get rid of this dishonest, and, as I believe, corrupt, inefficient and improper servant of the people, is to adopt the committee amendment.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for one further question?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. Judging from the reports made by the investigator against the individual named, he has violated every rule and regulation of the Department, as well as certain criminal statutes.

Mr. McKELLAR. Absolutely.

Mr. LUCAS. I should like to know whether or not the Senator from Tennessee has ever personally brought the reports to the attention of the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. McKELLAR. No. The truth of the matter is that rather an unusual incident happened. A few moments ago the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT] asked me about the political side of the question, and I told him just what the facts were. A man in the same county, on seeing the publication—I believe my letter to the Secretary was published by the Secretary—wrote to me and said:

Is it necessary to bring in any political matter? If you will have the Secretary send you the report of Mr. Myers, you will find that a more dishonest man never was superintendent of any park.

I wrote to the Assistant Secretary, Mr. Burlew, and he sent me a copy of the report. The report came from Mr. Burlew's office.

Mr. LUCAS. Did the Senator from Tennessee ever have a personal conversation with the Secretary of the Interior about the matter?

Mr. McKELLAR. Never in my life. All my conferences have been with Mr. Burlew.

Mr. President, sometime ago I wrote a letter to the Secretary or Assistant Secretary of Interior, I have forgotten which, and asked that Mr. J. Ross Eakin, superintendent of the Great Smoky Mountain National Park be transferred. I do not recall that I then asked that he be removed, though I might have. About the middle of January the newspapers began to publish articles about my letter and about Mr. Eakin and on January 19, Secretary Ickes and Mr. Arno Cammerer, Director of the National Park Service, both declared publicly that Mr. Ross Eakin would not be removed. Mr. Ickes was quoted in big headlines as follows: "Won't fire or transfer Eakin, Ickes declares." Further along in the article he said, when asked if he knew what kind of a job Mr. Eakin had done as superintendent of the Great Smoky National Park, he replied: "He's done a good, satisfactory job."

THE KIND OF A JOB DONE

Of course, I do not expect Secretary Ickes to know what kind of a job each man under him has done, especially where it is a superintendent of a park. Probably he has never seen him or knows anything about him and has to take the word of others under him.

Mr. Eakin is wholly unworthy of the defense that Mr. Ickes now makes for him. Indeed, his record as superintendent of that park cannot be justly defended by anyone who knows the facts. Secretary Ickes had the facts, but, I surmise, he did not know that he had them and I do not charge him with knowing what his own records show about Eakin, but the facts were in his office. The facts had been in his office since February 23, 1937. The facts that he had in his office about J. Ross Eakin since February 23, 1937, show beyond the peradventure of a doubt by a report of Mr. Ickes own agent, a man by the name of H. E. Myers, regional fiscal supervisor, that Mr. Eakin was an unworthy, inefficient, inattentive, and wasteful superintendent, utterly unqualified for the place that he holds, if not personally dishonest. In substantiation of this statement, I herewith ask to be printed as a part of my remarks pages 39 to 63, inclusive, of a report on the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, E. C. W., Accounts, Audit Report of Portion of Assignment, by H. E. Myers, filed in the National Park Service, E. C. W., Audit Division, February 23, 1937.

This account of Mr. Myers took up that part of the business of the park known as the Emergency Construction Works Division. He went through all of the accounts, or such as Mr. Eakin had on hand, dissecting each and every one that was not correct, and on page 57 of the report finds as follows:

Unaccounted for, $132,040.62.

I am not going to read this report, but I will read certain excerpts from it at this time. On page 40 I read as follows:

A review of the following comments will disclose that proper purchase and contract procedure was not followed. In the auditor's opinion, the greater portion of these discrepancies can be charged to incompetent personnel in charge of purchasing and lack of proper supervision by ones responsible.

Who is responsible for that park? It is J. Ross Eakin, and this auditor evidently refers to J. Ross Eakin. The auditor then proceeds in the same paragraph:

Several excuses were given for mistakes that had been made, the favorite one being to place blame on clerk that was suspended on August 1, 1936, and the next being failure to receive information from Washington office. It would appear that anything that was wanted by anybody was purchased, regardless of regulations, and then every known means used to get the same paid by the finance officer, giving him answers to his questions that were not borne out by the facts when he would hold up payment of vouchers for additional information.

This is the officer Secretary Ickes, probably prompted by Mr. Cammerer, calls a man who has "done a good, satisfactory job."

Listen, Senators, the first excuse was that a man who had been caught stealing was responsible for the particular thing, whatever department it was in, and the auditor's statement was "That anything that was wanted by anybody was purchased, regardless of regulations." That was in this park under the control of Eakin. In other words, if Eakin or anybody else wanted to purchase anything, he or she could do so without regard to regulations. Then, what did the examining officer find? We use the words of the examining officer himself:

then every known means used to get the same paid by the finance officer, giving him answers to his questions that were not borne out by the facts, when he would hold up payment of vouchers for additional information.

What could be more dishonest or more corrupt in the director of a park, spending hundreds of thousands of dollars a year, than these answers as testified to and reported to the Secretary more than 2 years ago?

And again the auditor says:

While audit was being made several suggestions were made to correct errors as they were discovered, and a later check would disclose that suggestions were not followed out immediately, if at all (p. 41).

This is important in view of the results of this report. I am sure Mr. Ickes never read this report. Without knowing, I am just almost as sure that Mr. Cammerer had seen it. I have had experience with Mr. Cammerer in the Shiloh National Park when he had another corrupt and dishonest director and whom he refused to put out until a committee of the Senate heard the facts and forced his being put out. Mr. Cammerer whitewashed him and no doubt he whitewashed Eakin to Secretary Ickes.

The auditor then goes into more than a hundred items dealing with every part of the business in which hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent, in which he finds that every scheme was used at the hands of these men under Eakin, and apparently with Eakin's full approval, to separate the Government from its money. Some of these are in the purchasing of motor oil, and of gas and tires. I think I will quote an article on automobile tires:

EXCESSIVE PURCHASES

It was noted that a great many automobile tires and tubes were purchased. A check of these purchases shows that between April 1, 1935, and June 30, 1936, tires and tubes amounting to $13,012.62 were purchased. Just why it would be necessary to purchase a hundred tires at one time, and place them in stock at the two warehouses, was never properly explained to auditor, and when you take into account that all of the large tire companies have warehouses and service stations carrying a complete line of truck tires at Knoxville, Tenn, and Asheville, N. C. As a large stock of tires were on hand at Sugarlands warehouse, inquiry was made and answer received that they were for detached-service cars, and when it was pointed out that it was not necessary to have extra tires on hand, when they could be obtained from Knoxville when and as needed, the answer was then given that the tires on hand had been purchased by the clerk that had been suspended.

As a great many partly worn-out tires were in several places, instructions were given to have all of these tires placed in one building under lock and key, and when this was done, it was found that one abandoned barrack building at Sugarlands was completely filled with worn-out or partly worn-out tires, from camps in Tennessee, some of them, in the auditor's opinion, being good tires showing very little use (pp. 41 and 42).

Why should the Director or those under him be careful of the Government's money? It seems to have made no difference to them. Why did they want $13,000 worth of tires on hand at one time? They never made a satisfactory report to the auditor.

The real-estate leases on pages 42 and 43 show a situation that smells to heaven. The cement contracts in which the Government was evidently chiseled out of money. The rental of teams, horses, and advertising and issuing invitations as shown on page 45. They paid no attention to the law about the purchase of advertising—page 46. The audit of travel vouchers showed that these were made the subject of dishonesty and corruption—pages 46, 47, and 48. Audits of bills of lading that were not kept and about which the auditor could get no information, shipping tickets, and pay rolls—pages 50 and 51.

On page 55 of the report we find the following, on the questions of tentage:

As all of this tentage was received during the months of June and July 1935, the auditor feels sure that Memphis Tent & Awning Co. and C. R. Daniels, Inc., have been paid by finance officer, Washington, D. C., but that copies of paid vouchers have never been received from him, or if received have been lost or misplaced, as the same were not discovered during the audit. Request was sent to the finance officer for copies of these vouchers, if paid, and the same had not been received at park office at date of closing audit.

What has become of this? We do not know and we ought to have the information. On page 57 of the record is the main thing:

Unaccounted for---------- $132,040.62

Who is responsible for this money? Mr. Eakin. Has he ever accounted for it? Not that anybody knows of. Then comes a lot of reimbursable collections concerning which the auditor could not get any real information—pages 58 and 59. Unascertained liability for failure to return oil barrels, refunds by railroads for freight picked up by Government. Where, oh, where, has it gone?—pages 60 and 61.

Government-owned automobiles is shown on the exhibit. There were 40 of these pick-up E. C. W. automobiles and each one had a driver. What did these cost? What did they do with these pick-up automobiles? We do not know. We would like to know. If Eakin is a good man he ought to have been able to tell about them.

After making one of the most vigorous and active onslaughts on a Government activity I ever read, after accusing the Director and all others of all sorts of crimes and misdemeanors, including a shortage of $132,040.62, the auditor says that the transactions were proper, "except as otherwise stated in above-mentioned report."

Mr. President, I believe I asked a while ago that certain papers, including the report itself, the statement of Mr. Myers, the letter of Mr. Demaray, and the letter of Mr. Eakin in reply, be printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks, in order that no injustice may be done to Mr. Eakin. Mr. Eakin's reply, as we say in the law, was a confession and avoidance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The documents referred to are as follows:

PART II. GREAT SMOKY MOUNTAINS NATIONAL PARK EMERGENCY CONSERVATION WORKS ACCOUNTS—AUDIT REPORT OF PORTION OF ASSIGNMENT

(By H. E. Myers)

Pursuant to my assignment, I arrived at Gatlinburg, Tenn., July 28, 1936, at 10:30 a. m.

As I had not been furnished with any instructions regarding this assignment, it was necessary to await arrival of Mr. Douglas before outlining program of work on audit.

Upon arrival of Mr. Douglas at Gatlinburg on July 30, I discussed with him brief survey I had made while awaiting his arrival, and it was agreed that I should make the audit of FD 1670 funds, beginning with April 1, 1935, and the following is my report thereon:

INDEX OF EXAMINATION

1. Audit of purchase orders and vouchers.
2. Audit of travel vouchers.
3. Audit of bills of lading.
4. Audit of shipping tickets.
5. Audit of pay rolls.
6. Audit of accounts, records, and reports.
7. Other matter.

AUDIT OF PURCHASE ORDERS AND VOUCHERS

From April 1, 1935, until some time in the early part of 1936, file of purchase orders in numerical sequence was not maintained. Purchases were made verbally, and when invoice was received, a voucher on form 1034 was prepared. In some instances a purchase order would be prepared for the purpose of obtaining receiving signature, and this receipted copy of purchase order attached to office copy of voucher.

Vouchers so prepared were encumbered in the allotment ledger, either at the time they were sent to finance officer, or when paid copy was received from finance officer, and in many instances, not at all.

Reference numbers in allotment ledger might be a purchase-order number that was assigned to the encumbrance some place along the line, with no attempt at numerical sequence, or the entry would be given a reference number that appeared on the allotment ledger, and in some cases, but not all, on the vouchers.

Paid vouchers were filed in alphabetical arrangement, as this was the only way they had of ascertaining if an obligation had been paid, and even this method was not used for what it was worth, as numerous duplicate payments were made.

About February 1, 1936, a copy of purchase order issued was placed in a separate file, but as purchase orders were not issued for all obligations incurred—purchase order numbers being stated on vouchers only—file was not complete.

From the above it will be readily seen that it was impossible to make audit from standpoint of purchase orders issued. After making a survey of the situation, it was decided to make the audit from standpoint of vouchers paid by finance officer. Alphabetical file of paid vouchers was rearranged, so that vouchers were in order of months paid, and each month's vouchers in numerical order. Also it was necessary to obtain from finance officer a list of all vouchers paid by him, charged to FD 1670 funds on account of this park, and when this list was checked with vouchers in file, several were missing, and copies of these missing vouchers were obtained from finance officer. An alphabetical card index was prepared for all vouchers. When audit was completed, vouchers were left in numerical order, spoken of above, the card index affording ready reference.

Attention is called to letter from Washington office, dated December 23, 1935, directed to superintendent of park, requesting that purchase orders in paid file be filed numerically, beginning January 1, 1936. As above stated these instructions were not complied with.

Receipts for materials and supplies were not obtained in majority of instances. In some cases copy of invoice attached to voucher would be approved by O. K. of project superintendent; a great many vouchers did not have copy of invoice attached; a few vouchers had a copy of purchase order attached, receipt signed by project superintendent, or H. A. Hunt, Emergency Conservation Work clerk, who also acted as purchasing agent.

Purchase and contract procedure: A review of the following comments will disclose that proper purchase and contract procedure was not followed. In the auditor's opinion, the greater portion of these discrepancies can be charged to incompetent personnel in charge of purchasing, and lack of proper supervision by ones responsible. Several excuses were given for mistakes that had been made, the favorite one being to place blame on clerk that was suspended on August 1, 1936, and the next being failure to receive information from Washington office. It would appear that anything that was wanted by anybody was purchased, regardless of regulations, and then every known means used to get the same paid by the finance officer, giving him answers to his questions that were not borne out by the facts, when he would hold up payment of vouchers for additional information.

While audit was being made several suggestions were made to correct errors as they were discovered, and a later check would disclose that suggestions were not followed out immediately, if at all.

Files show that considerable trouble was experienced with finance officer in having vouchers paid, as he was continually returning some of these for correction, or additional information, the omissions complained of by him being simple ones in a great many instances.

Irregular purchase procedure: A great many irregularities in purchase procedure were noted. Some of these are as follows:

Motor oil purchased in open market, not under Navy contract; typewriter rentals, no contract; purchase of typewriter; service station deliveries of gasoline; photographic equipment; printing of forms; time books, field books, ledgers, daybooks, and columnar journals; repair parts for automobiles not under TPS contracts 7807 and 7808; office furniture, desks, drafting tables, stools, steel desks, steel cabinets, and steel files; drafting instruments; printed envelopes; spark plugs in large quantities at double TPS contract price; junk batteries traded in on new batteries, a dozen or more at one time; and blowtorches traded in on new ones.

Excess purchases: It was noted that a great many automobile tires and tubes were purchased. A check of these purchases shows that between April 1, 1935, and June 30, 1936, tires and tubes amounting to $13,012.62 were purchased. Just why it would be necessary to purchase a hundred tires at one time, and place them in stock at the two warehouses, was never properly explained to auditor, and when you take into account that all of the large tire companies have warehouses and service stations carrying a complete line of truck tires at Knoxville, Tenn., and Asheville, N. C. As a large stock of tires were on hand at Sugarlands warehouse, inquiry was made and answer received, that they were for detached service cars, and when it was pointed out that it was not necessary to have extra tires on hand, when they could be obtained from Knoxville, when and as needed, the answer was then given that the tires on hand has been purchased by the clerk that had been suspended.

As a great many partly worn-out tires were in several places, instructions were given to have all of these tires placed in one building under lock and key, and when this was done, it was found that one abandoned barrack building at Sugarlands was completely filled with worn-out, or partly worn-out tires, from camps in Tennessee, some of them, in the auditor's opinion, being good tires showing very little use.

Further investigation showed that no uniform truck drivers' report system was in effect, showing care of tires as to inflations. It was impossible for auditor to check accountability for all tires purchased, due to the method of handling the same all around.

Many purchase orders were issued for batteries for automobiles and trucks, orders being for 1 dozen, sometimes 2 dozen or more at a time. Here again it was discovered that as no uniform truck drivers' report system was being used, in fact, only one camp showed a battery hydrometer on property inventory, so it was impossible for truck drivers to properly test batteries.

Irregular contracts: Inspection of contracts in file shows that a general understanding of contract procedure was not had by all concerned with the preparation of contracts.

While it would take up considerable space to set forth all of the irregularities discovered by auditor, in contracts prepared at this park, some of the most important ones are as follows:

Real estate leases: 1. Contract No. I–23p–532, lessor, A. J. Huff, Gatlinburg, Tenn., dated October 21, 1933 (?) (No date on office copy of contract). For rent of "one building approximately 2 feet 2 inches by 16 feet 2 inches for use as an office for Government employees." Beginning October 21, 1933, to as long as needed, with option in either party to terminate same upon 30 days' notice. Rental, $21 a month. Heat and light furnished.

Premises covered by above lease contract consist of an extension that was built onto a building occupied by National Park Service, and owned by Mr. Huff, rent for balance of building being paid out of regular National Park Service appropriations.

Light not being furnished by lessor, as Emergency Conservation Work is paying for all electric light and power used in entire building under contract No. I–23p–718 E. C. W.

Mr. Huff stated to auditor that at the time an extension was built onto the back of the building to house what is now known as the radio room he made a verbal agreement with park superintendent that in place of National Park Service paying additional rent to cover the radio room that it pay for all electric light and power used in the building.

Rent paid out of regular National Park Service appropriations for balance of building being $42 per month, making total rent for building $63 per month, or $756 per year.

2. Contract No. I–23p–748 (Emergency Conservation Work). Lessor A. J. Huff, Gatlinburg, Tenn. Dated December 10, 1934. For rent of "building located in rear of Mountain View Hotel with 1,156 square feet floor space, containing four rooms and toilet." For duration of Emergency Conservation Work and/or 30 days' notice of either party. Rental $53 per month. Heat and water furnished. Premises covered by above lease known as landscape office.

3. Contract No. I–23p–749 (Emergency Conservation Work). Lessor A. J. Huff, Gatlinburg, Tenn. Dated April 1, 1934. For rent of "building located in rear Mountain View Hotel used as a garage containing two stalls." "A garage for two Government-owned passenger cars." "Duration of the Emergency Conservation Work and/or 30 days' notice by either party." Rental $6 per month. No heat, light, or water to be furnished by lessor.

This building being used as a storage for office supplies and not as a garage, at time of audit, and from all appearances had been so used for some time past.

Building is a shed-type frame garage, cheaply constructed.

From the above it will be noted that the National Park Service is paying rent on the three buildings, as follows:

	Per month	Per year
Administration office building (Emergency Conservation Work, $21; regular National Park Service, $42 per month)	$63	$756
Landscape office (Emergency Conservation Work pays all rent)	53	636
Garage or storage (Emergency Conservation Work pays all rent)	6	72
Total	122	1,464

The three Emergency Conservation Work leases above mentioned have never been renewed. Rent paid to June 30, 1936, and invoices from lessor for last rent paid shows above contract numbers.

All three leases above mentioned are on standard form No. 2.

No evidence in file showing:

(a) That selection of premises determined as result of advertising and that award was made to lowest bidder, or any showing as to why advertising was dispensed with and authority therefor.

(b) That form PSC No. 6, "Clearance," was ever prepared or submitted.

(c) That there ever was submitted a statement showing that no space available in Federal building.

Cement contracts: 1. Contracts ER:I–23p–22, 23, and 24. Invitations were sent on February 28, 1936, for "cement in paper bags of 94 pounds net." No quantity stated. Volunteer Portland Cement Co., Penn Dixie Cement Corporation, and Southern States Portland Cement Co., all submitted identical bids of $2.49 per barrel, of four paper sacks, in carload lots of not less than 132 barrels. The above three mentioned firms were equal low bidders; a fourth bidder was 5 cents per barrel higher.

On these three bids, under the same invitation, three contracts were awarded for a carload of 132 barrels, viz: A contract with Volunteer for 132 barrels, one with Penn Dixie for 132 barrels, and one with Southern States for 132 barrels.

2. Contract ER:I–23p–28 (Emergency Conservation Work), dated March 17, 1936, with Volunteer Portland Cement Co. for $414.38. Three equal low acceptable bids were received. Award was made to concern nearest park, instead of by lot, following justification being stated on statement of award: "But it would result in increased cost to split the award, and due to the fact that it would also result in delay and cost to Government to request that representatives of these companies draw lots for award * * *."

Splitting contracts so as to avoid Washington office approval (?): The following contracts were made with Tennessee Metal Culvert Co.: No. I–23p–800, accepted May 28, 1935, for $904.36; No. I–23p–801, accepted May 29, 1935, for $919.20; purchase order No. 653, dated May 27, 1935, covers contract No. 800, and purchase order No. 655, dated May 29, 1935, covers contract No. 801. Invoice for contract No. 800 dated May 28, 1935; invoice for contract No. 801 dated May 31, 1935. Both contracts for metal culvert pipe for delivery to NP–2 Sugarlands. No copies of any rejected bids in file. Fast work for contracting for and delivery of $1,823.56 of metal culvert pipe.

Emergency Conservation Work property used as part payment for services: Contract I–23p–756 (Emergency Conservation Work) with Carolina Auto Parts Co., for vulcanizing tires, amount of contract $498.75, and "143 old tires with more than four injuries," no amount mentioned as consideration for old tires.

Rental of teams, horses, etc.: Several contracts were entered into for horse hire, but as purchase orders were not issued to cover these rentals, vouchers only being prepared, and as some of these vouchers would have noted in proper place a contract number, while others would not, it was impossible for auditor to determine which rentals were covered by contract and those that were not. Several irregularities were noted in these contracts.

1. Contract No. I–23p–509 Emergency Conservation Work, date of acceptance August 26, 1933, with R. N. Wiggins for two teams of horses and harness at P–9 at $4.40 per day per team. Estimated use 1 month, with option for continuing for additional month or fraction. While this contract was made in 1933, for 1 month, with option for additional month, vouchers covering team rentals from June 1935, to January 1936, show this contract number. Other payments were made on vouchers to this same party for team rental during same period, that do not show on voucher, this, or any other contract number.

2. On April 15, 1935, seven contracts were made for team rentals, being numbers I–23p–790 to 797 (except 793). In one instance, it was noted that award was made to one of the bidders, not the low bidder, at price bid by the low bidder. Vouchers covering payments made to these seven parties did not always contain contract reference, so it was impossible to determine the payments that were covered by contract. From files it appeared to auditor that finance officer had returned several rental vouchers for contract reference, and these were then marked "Open Market Purchase," "Temporary Rental," some with rubber stamp "Temporary Hire—Will not exceed $100," etc., and returned to him and paid. Father of procurement clerk, one of the accepted bidders.

Advertising and issuing invitations: All contracts examined, that had attached copy of Form No. 1036, showed that regulations were not being followed as to posting of notice in public places, and method of advertising used, as indicated on form plainly showed that notices were not posted, but no explanation stated on form as required.

Only one copy of bid was required to be signed by contractor, and in the case of successful bidder, this signed copy was forwarded as the Returns Office file, all other copies of contract containing typed signature of contractor, and in the case of rejected bids, the signed copy was included with the Returns Office file, no copy of rejected bid being retained in Park files.

PURCHASES IN EXCESS OF $100 NOT COVERED BY CONTRACTS

Several purchase orders were issued for amounts in excess of $100 that were not covered by contract. Statement made to auditor that it was the understanding of all concerned at the park office that, beginning April 1, 1935, authority was granted to make open-market purchases up to $299.99, and no one had any recollection of the receipt of memorandum advising that any purchases in excess of $100, not covered by contract, were to be reported monthly on a schedule accompanying the allotment ledgers, with explanation of the emergency involved. Supplement No. 297, E. C. W. Handbook, chapter 5, page 26c, dated October 28, 1935, was found in Park Office E. C. W. Handbook, but was evidently never read by anyone, as schedule of open-market purchases in excess of $100 was never submitted for any month, after receipt of above-mentioned supplement No. 297, while open-market purchases in excess of $100 were frequently made, and so far as auditor could ascertain, without any real emergency existing at the time.

Several instances were discovered where invitations were sent, and when low bid was determined and it was found to be less than $300, the contract was never completed, the bids being filed with the file copy of the voucher, and in a few such instances, the voucher paid by finance officer bore the statement that "as purchase was less than $300 no contract was required."

Attached as exhibit A is schedule of open-market purchases in excess of $100 and under $300, and as exhibit A–1, schedule of open-market purchases in excess of $299.99.

AUDIT OF TRAVEL VOUCHERS

Travel orders were issued by superintendent of park, and in a few cases by acting superintendent, reading "Great Smoky Mountains National Park and vicinity," and based on these travel orders files show that travel was performed and paid for by finance officer to and from various places in Tennessee, North and South Carolina, and Georgia. Other travel orders were issued specifying certain places in Tennessee, North and South Carolina, Georgia, and Virginia, all outside of limits of Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

Travel orders issued did not always correctly state headquarters of traveler. For example, Gatlinburg, Tenn., was shown as headquarters on a great many travel orders, whereas actual headquarters of traveler was NP–2 Tennessee, 4 miles from Gatlinburg. Also a great many travel orders were issued showing Bryson City, N. C., as headquarters, whereas official headquarters of traveler was one of the camps within the park area several miles from Bryson City in North Carolina.

Several travel vouchers have been paid out of FD 1670 funds, for travel incident to purchase of land for park, condemnation proceedings in connection with acquisition of land, etc. Park office reported to auditor that all such payments from FD 1670 funds were authorized by letter from Washington office, but clerks unable to find such authorization in files.

Travel orders were issued by Washington office, dated May 1, 1935, to Gordon G. Bruce, George A. MacPherson, Francis R. McGovern, and John B. Quinn, for travel by personal car from Luray, Va., to Gatlinburg, Tenn. (permanent change of station). Paragraph D of all these travel orders was deleted, by crossing (XXX) out the portion of paragraph from "the amount" to "mentioned above." Above change not initialed on park office copy; at the bottom was inserted "Justification: It is determined to be more economical and advantageous to the Government for you to use your personal car at a mileage rate, that will not exceed cost by common carrier." [Italics indicate underscoring supplied by auditor.]

Travel vouchers submitted by Bruce, McGovern, and Quinn each asked reimbursements for use of personal car on mileage basis of 478 miles at 5 cents per mile, $23.90. MacPherson traveled with Bruce. and so stated on his voucher.

Finance officer has paid each of the three men above mentioned $23.00 for mileage. From information obtained by auditor, finance officer apparently overlooked "Justification" at bottom of travel orders, and more than likely General Accounting Office will suspend payments made.

Several vouchers for travel between April 1 and June 30, 1935, show travel orders issued prior to April 1, 1935, appropriation chargeable being FD 570 or FD 870. Letter in file from finance officer conveys impression that he was not aware of the fact that appropriation shown on travel orders referred to on vouchers, and on vouchers, were not the same, as he was of the opinion that new travel orders were required at the beginning of each fiscal year, whereas FD 1670 covered all travel performed on and after April 1, 1935, and new travel orders should have been prepared on that date showing FD 1670 as the appropriation chargeable.

Travel orders for clerks, project superintendents, foremen, and enrollees, whose official duties per appointment do not require travel, do not show justification for travel authorized.

Examination of travel vouchers would give auditor the impression that all travelers were not making deductions for lodgings furnished free of charge at camps, as vouchers plainly show traveler at camp overnight, but no deduction made for free lodging, and statement made that no lodgings furnished free of charge, and of course it was based on this statement that finance officer paid vouchers as submitted.

Several travel vouchers were paid to Emergency Conservation Work clerks in park office, and supervising mechanics, that have the appearance of Federal Government paying for employees' pleasure trips. For example, Emergency Conservation Work clerk in Gatlinburg office being paid for per diem on trips to Knoxville, Tenn., showing leaving headquarters (Gatlinburg) after 4:30 p. m. (office closing time) for Knoxville, Tenn., remaining in Knoxville (a distance of 40 miles from Gatlinburg) overnight, and leaving there the next morning at 7 a. m., arriving Gatlinburg at 8 a. m. Another example was supervising mechanic leaving Bryson City, N. C., at 7:30 p. m., arriving at Knoxville, 11:15 p. m., and leaving Knoxville at 6 a. m. next morning, arriving at Bryson City at 9:45 a. m. This party's headquarters was Smokemont, N. C., several miles from Bryson City, N. C. He spent a great many evenings in Knoxville, Tenn., and Asheville, N. C., arriving at these places after regular closing hours for all kinds of official business, and leaving the next morning before opening hours, and collected per diem for the time away from official station.

Travel orders were issued, and per diem paid thereon, to various parties whose official duties placed them in travel status, who would leave official headquarters, either Bryson City, N. C., or Gatlinburg, Tenn., between 7 and 10 a. m., traveling to places within park or points in vicinity, returning to official headquarters early in the evening.

Statement made to auditor by Chief Clerk and Washington office was furnished with copies of all travel orders issued by park superintendent. No acknowledgment of receipt by Washington office was available for auditor.

AUDIT OF BILLS OF LADING

Very little attention was paid to bills of lading. Of those issued by this office, no record was kept, that is, no register was maintained to account for all numbers, and if a copy of bill of lading was retained at the office at the time of issue, it was not routed through proper channels for purpose of entering on allotment ledger, being filed with other papers pertaining to shipment, no separate file being maintained for bills of lading issued by this office, or for bills of lading issued by other offices chargeable to this office.

A search was made of all files, desk baskets, desk drawers, and all bills of lading found in these places were removed and sorted with the following results:

1. National Park Service (Emergency Conservation Work) bills of lading on hand unused September 29, 1936; Nos. 251 to 300, 500 to 529, 551 to 600, 601 to 650, 651, to 700, 701 to 750, 1051 to 1100, 3851 to 3900, 3901 to 3950, 3951 to 4000.

2. While Mr. Douglas was in Washington office during September 1936, he obtained list of bills of lading issued to this office, the same being Nos. 251 to 400 and 501 to 750, under date of June 26, 1933. Auditor requested a list of bills of lading chargeable to this park, but Chief Clerk was unable to find any such list of bills of lading in park files. It will be noted that the bill of lading numbers listed under "1" accounts for all of the ones issued by Washington office under date of June 26, 1933, except 301 to 400 and 501 to 528, inclusive.

3. The results of above-mentioned search would indicate that Nos. 301 to 400 were evidently issued under FD 570 and FD 870 funds. Of these, no copies were found for the following numbers: 301, 302, 303, 304, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 318, 319, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 329, 331, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 343, 345, 346, 348, 349, 352, 355, 374, 387, 388, 389, 390.

4. Of the bills of lading Nos. 301 to 400 found in the files, no paid copies were found for the following: 316, 327, 330, 342, 344, 345, 353, 354, 358, 359, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 370, 371, 372, 373, 378, 379, 380, 381, 383, 384, 394, 395, 398.

5. Of the balance of the numbers to be accounted for, viz, 501 to 528, inclusive, no copies were found for the following: 509, 512, 513, 514, 516, 518, 520, 521; and no paid copies for 517, 524, 525, 526, and 527.

6. Form letters from Washington office forwarding bills of lading that had been paid by finance officer. Accounted for all bills of lading shown on these letters except two. Some of these were encumbered, others were not.

7. All references on allotment ledgers that were presumed to refer to bills of lading were noted. Bills of lading were not always recorded by numbers; sometimes the railroad name only was used, while in other cases description of shipment and point of origin was used. These entries were matched with bills of lading found in files, or reversed on schedule of adjustments. All unencumbered bills of lading properly chargeable to this office were then encumbered on "Schedule of auditor's adjustments" on miscellaneous allotment ledger for October 1936, F. D. 1670 funds, sheets 123 and 124, and entries appearing on these sheets pertaining to above-mentioned schedule verified by auditor.

8. File folders were prepared to classify bills of lading for ready reference and instructions given to all clerks concerned as to proper method for handling bills of lading. Form of register, as outlined in handbook, was drawn up, and definite instructions given to record thereon all bills of lading issued, commencing with No. 529.

AUDIT OF SHIPPING TICKETS

Packing and handling charges on shipping tickets were not encumbered by this office. A thorough search of all files in park office was made, and all shipping tickets found were placed in a file entitled "Shipping tickets," and those showing packing and handling charges against F. D. 1670 funds were scheduled. A copy of this schedule was furnished allotment ledger clerk, with instructions to make entries on October 1936, miscellaneous allotment ledger for F. D. 1670 funds, and same have been properly entered on sheets Nos. 124, 125, and 126, and vouched by auditor, being 65 entries.

Instructions were issued by auditor to all concerned regarding shipping tickets and encumbering of packing and handling charges shown thereon.

AUDIT OF PAY ROLLS

Very few "paid" copies of pay rolls in park files; while a few have voucher number notation of finance officer only; from list of vouchers paid by finance officer, was able to verify copies of pay rolls in file with amounts paid, with a few exceptions.

One pay roll prepared each half month, on Form 1074, for employees at office and all camps, distribution summary being shown on last sheets. Summaries were checked to allotment ledgers, and corrections noted as shown on "Schedule of adjustments." Summaries totaled to see that total of amounts encumbered same as total paid by finance officer. One error found and correction shown on "Schedule of adjustments."

Pay rolls were not prepared from time sheets, but were prepared and sent to finance officer before time sheets were received, and in some cases checks were received from finance officer, and distributed before time sheets were received. Time sheets were used principally for the purpose of placing in file, to be on hand, when and as called for by auditor. Information contained thereon regarding leaves was not always checked against leave slips. Due to sending pay rolls to finance officer before receipt of time sheets, in many cases persons were carried on pay rolls in error, two cases being noted of employees having died before pay rolls submitted, and when checks were received and error discovered, check would then be returned to finance officer for cancelation and reverse entry made on allotment ledger. As no separate file was maintained to show the checks that were returned to the finance officer for cancelation and no notation made on copy of pay roll, it was impossible for auditor to verify that all such checks were returned to finance officer, that had been so issued in error, and that all such checks so returned were covered by proper entries on allotment ledgers. It was noted where office record showed that check or checks had been returned for cancelation, that finance officer's record of voucher payments showed the total pay roll as originally submitted.

Valuation experts, surveyors, etc., carried on pay rolls. Park office reported that Washington office had authorized same by letter, but search of files failed to disclose such authorization. These parties were paid for services in connection with condemnation proceedings in connection with acquisition of parcels of land for park.

No work by supervisory personnel on Saturday mornings before October 8, 1936, and no slips ever prepared for such leave.

Test check of pay rolls showed that files did not contain time sheets, and/or record of leave, Form 1–128, for all persons carried on pay rolls; file of leave slips did not contain slips for leave shown on Form 1–128 and time sheets; leave shown on time sheets not shown on Form 1–128 or by slip in file.

Addressees not shown on pay rolls; all checks sent to park office by finance officer and distributed from there.

Three cases noted where employees on pay roll had also been paid by purchase order amounts for horse and team rental, and one superintendent for typewriter rental, part of which General Accounting Office had discovered and requested reimbursement, which was made; but balance not requested from employee, waiting to see if same discovered by General Accounting Office; one of the cases noted above of horse rental to a foreman, where he was paid twice for same rental, and reimbursement of duplicate payment never requested.

AUDIT OF ACCOUNTS, RECORDS, AND REPORTS

(a) Allotment ledgers.
(b) Schedule of unliquidated encumbrances.
(c) Monthly telegraphic report of encumbrances.
(d) Cost records.
(e) Reimbursable collections.

Allotment ledgers: All entries appearing on allotment ledgers, consisting of 563 sheets, were verified by auditor, with the exception of entries for which no supporting documents were found or satisfactory explanation made as to basis for entries. After making every effort to ascertain the facts regarding these entries, the same were reversed on schedule of auditor's adjustments, on November 1936 allotment ledgers. The majority of these entries were, in the opinion of the auditor, duplication of entries otherwise recorded.

The allotment advices were checked with the record for the period. Amounts shown on allotment advices received monthly and divided between camps, viz, North Carolina allotment between occupied camps in North Carolina, Tennessee allotment between occupied camps in Tennessee. Monthly allotments checked to each State recapitulation sheet for each month and found to be properly entered.

Total allotments, FD 1670 funds, April 1, 1935, to June 30, 1936:

North Carolina	$273,659
Tennessee	259,486

As shown by Allotment Advice No. 730, dated June 16, 1936.

In view of permission given national parks, in National Park Service Emergency Conservation Work Handbook, chapter III, division G, section 1, sheet 1, second paragraph, it was deemed advisable by auditors to show all allotment ledger entries, commencing with November 1936, on one allotment ledger (for FD 1670 only) and as this was agreeable with superintendent, necessary instructions were given allotment ledger clerk by auditors, and for November 1936 a combined allotment ledger covering all camps in Great Smoky Mountains National Park FD 1670 funds was started, first sheet being numbered "1," and unencumbered balances of allotments shown on Tennessee and North Carolina recapitulation sheets for month of October 1936 were brought forward as "Previous balance" on combined allotment ledger. This procedure saved a great deal of time in many respects. Several errors were discovered during audit, where encumberance had been recorded on allotment ledger of a certain camp, and then liquidated on either "Miscellaneous" or on another camp ledger. If separate ledgers were still to be maintained it would have been necessary to make entries correcting these errors, as between ledgers; whereas by combining all allotment ledgers into one, the above-spoken-of errors were automatically adjusted. Also, if separate ledgers were to be maintained, it would have been necessary to liquidate in some manner the large red balance at the end of October 1936 on "Miscellaneous," whereas that was also accomplished by use of the combined allotment ledger. This procedure also permitted the recording in one ledger of all auditor's adjustments.

All columns in allotment ledger sheets April 1 to July 31, 1935, were machine-added, and no errors found. Commencing with August 1935, through October 1936, a test check was made by adding "Liquidated" and "Authorized" columns, and found only one error in addition, that being in January 1936, as found by Washington office, as per letter of February 28, 1926. (This letter not in file, but above reference from entry on NP–2/10, sheet No. 21, correcting error.)

Also found error of $150 in distribution of "Miscellaneous" to camps in month of August 1935, as per letter from Washington office, dated September 18, 1935, which letter was found in file, and error was corrected in September 1935; distribution of "Miscellaneous," in keeping with above-mentioned letter.

Auditor requested all letters from Washington office pertaining to audit of allotment ledgers by that office, and letter of September 18, 1935, above-mentioned, was only one available.

Totals on all sheets were checked to recapitulation ledger. For month of June 1935 it was discovered that totals on camp sheets did not agree with amounts shown on recapitulation sheets, for several camps; on Tennessee recapitulation sheet, and one camp on North Carolina recapitulation sheet the errors appearing in "Audited vouchers" and "Liquidated" columns in the same amounts, consequently not affecting unencumbered balance of allotment. These errors amounted to $238.47 plus on Tennessee camps and $406.37 plus on North Carolina camps and were never adjusted, as "Totals to date" were carried forward as "Totals previous month" on July 1935 recapitulation sheets, and so on from month to month to and including October 1936 as all "Totals to date" on recapitulation sheets were checked to the subsequent recapitulation sheet as "Totals previous month."

The above-mentioned errors of $238.47 and $406.37 effected the unliquidated encumbrances, when "Liquidated" and "Authorized" amounts in "Totals to date" on both recapitulation sheets for October 1936 were used to arrive at the unliquidated encumbrances as shown by all allotment ledgers on October 31, 1936—this being the only way that this step could be accomplished in view of statements made elsewhere herein.

Adjusting entries were made on schedule of auditor's adjustments on sheet No. 26, November 1936 allotment ledgers to correct the errors last above mentioned.

It was also discovered that errors were made in bringing forward "Totals previous month" on allotment ledgers for camps 4 and 14 and camps 18 and 19, for October 1935. "Totals previous month" on June 1935 allotment ledgers (that being the last previous month for which allotment ledgers were prepared) being shown as "Totals previous month" on October 1935 instead of "Totals to date" on June 1935 being shown as "Totals previous month" on October 1935. These last-mentioned errors do not in any way affect the "Totals to date" on recapitulation sheets, as these last-mentioned totals are brought forward from recapitulation sheet from preceding month.

Schedule of unliquidated encumbrances: At time of starting audit (July 28, 1936) it was discovered that schedule of unliquidated encumbrances was not being prepared at the end of each month. Instructions were given by auditor for preparation of such schedule as of the close of business July 31, 1936, for all funds. The only way that a schedule of unliquidated items for FD 1670 could be prepared, until audit of those funds was completed, was to make a schedule of all unpaid purchase orders, bills of lading, etc., in pending file. This was prepared by allotment ledger clerk and given to auditor. When audit of allotment ledgers of FD 1670 funds was completed, an attempt was made to check this schedule so prepared against open items on allotment ledgers, but without success, as it contained items that had been paid several months before it was prepared, and did not contain several items that were unpaid as shown by allotment ledgers.

From information obtained from all available sources, a schedule was prepared by auditor, as of October 31, 1936, and each item carefully checked by him, and all information so obtained discussed with chief clerk, so that he in turn could see that same were liquidated at earliest date possible. A great many items are believed by auditor to have been paid, but supporting papers showing such payment were either lost, misplaced, or never received from finance officer.

Attached as exhibit B is schedule of unliquidated encumbrances for FD 1670 funds, so found by auditor, totaling $9,809.04, which amount is the difference between "Authorized" and "Liquidated" encumbrances, after all auditor's adjustments have been made.

By reference to this schedule it will be noted that three large items appearing thereon, viz: (1) Purchasing office, Department of Interior, Washington, D. C., $6,456.96; (2) Austin-Western Co., $576; and (3) Alpha Portland Cement Co., $1,080; total $8,112.96, leaving $1,696.08 covering the balance of items shown on schedule.

Purchasing office, Department of Interior, $6,456.96: On June 1, 1935, an entry was made for $9,100 covering estimated cost of tentage being purchased for park through Washington office. Very little was known about the details of this transaction except in a general way, as the matter had been handled by H. A. Hunt, clerk suspended August 1, 1936, and pending file did not contain information showing status of transaction. After audit of allotment ledgers was completed, auditor was able to piece together, from information obtained from various sources, the following:

The following contracts had been awarded by Washington office:

Fulton Bag & Cotton Mills	No. I–1p–3293	$1,486.98
H. Wenzel Tent & Duck Co	No. I–1p–3292	1,210.00
Memphis Tent & Awning Co	No. I–1p–3291	3,559.98
C. R. Daniels, Inc	No. I–1p–3294	2,230.55

The above contracts evidently cover the estimated encumbrance of $9,100, as they cover all items in Invitation No. 655 (PJB) dated April 29, 1935.

Files contain copy of paid voucher in favor of Fulton Bag & Cotton Mills for $1,486.98, less 2 percent of $29.74, net $1,457.24, being No. 3360 paid by finance officer, Washington, D. C., July 12, 1935. Also paid voucher in favor of H. Wenzel Tent & Duck Co., for $1,210 less 2 percent of $24.20, net $1,185.80, being No. 627 paid by finance officer, Washington, D. C., July 2, 1935. The total of these two vouchers—$2,643.04—deducted from the estimated encumbrance of $9,100, leaves a balance of $6,456.96.

As all of this tentage was received during the months of June and July 1935, the auditor feels sure that Memphis Tent & Awning Co. and C. R. Daniels, Inc., have been paid by finance officer,

Washington, D. C., but that copies of paid vouchers have never been received from him, or if received have been lost or misplaced, as the same were not discovered during the audit. Request was sent to finance officer for copies of these vouchers, if paid, and the same had not been received at park office at date of closing audit.

It will be noted that when the two missing vouchers are received and liquidated there will be a balance of $724.34 unliquidated of the original encumbrance of $9,100, and instructions were given by auditor, that when these two last-mentioned paid vouchers were received, if in the meanwhile nothing turns up to throw any light on any additional encumbrance contemplated by the $9,100 entry, that this amount of $724.34 be included in the amount liquidated for the two vouchers above mentioned.

Austin-Western Co., $576: This covers purchase order for repair parts for heavy equipment that finance officer refused to pay on account of its exceeding $300, and same has been referred by him to General Accounting Office. This matter has been the cause of considerable correspondence back and forth but still unpaid at date of investigation, and from the looks of things was going to be a difficult matter to get settled. (For more complete details see exhibit A–1.)

Alpha Portland Cement Co., $1,080: The greater portion of this amount will be liquidated when finance officer's payment advices are received and liquidated covering invoices of company dated September 22, 1936, for 168 barrels at $2.80, $470.40, and 232 barrels at $2.80, $649.60, less 10 cents a barrel for cash discount and 40 cents a barrel for return of sacks, and balance will be liquidated when and if cloth sacks are returned in good condition.

Monthly telegraphic report of encumbrances: Monthly telegraphic reports of encumbrances for the period April 1, 1935, to October 31, 1936, were examined and compared with net encumbrances as shown by allotment ledgers, with the following results:

1. Only 2 months, May and June 1936, were in agreement with allotment ledgers.
2. Telegrams for July, August, September, and October 1936, included only encumbrances for CC 5507 funds.
3. Telegraphic reports did not always state appropriation and none stated total encumbrances being reported.

Instructions were given to study section of new handbook pertaining to telegraphic report, and to prepare telegrams commencing with November 1936 in keeping therewith.

Exhibit C shows total encumbrances by States, both for telegrams submitted and as shown by allotment ledgers.

Cost records: At various times during the audit attempts were made to ascertain if items encumbered were for authorized projects, and if such authorization covered the items in question, but it was found impossible to definitely check any such transactions, due to the manner in which cost accounts were kept.

Cost records are kept at the camps by the project superintendents and camp clerks (enrollees) each camp using its own method of assembling, distributing, and reporting cost data, there being no attempt to reconcile costs as reported with actual encumbrances as disclosed by allotment ledgers.

Monthly cost reports as submitted by project superintendents are checked in a way at the park office, but such checking as they do receive amounts to very little in the way of ascertaining if all costs are being reported.

The entire cost work is supervised by Mr. Spillers in the park office on the Emergency Conservation Work pay roll as technician, $2,600 per annum. Mr. Spillers is an engineer but spends practically all of this time checking reports received from project superintendents and taking care of other matters pertaining to project approval and cost work, and is the only one about the park office that is presumed to know anything about cost work.

A test check was made of FD 1670 funds allotted between April 1, 1935, and June 30, 1936, to ascertain if all funds expended had been reported in costs reports, with the following results:

Total funds allotted	$533,145.00
Less: Type-mapping allotments	19,127.00
Total allotments for work program	514,018.00
Less: Balance unexpended (adjusted)	602.95
Total to be accounted for	513,415.05
Cost reported:
Fifth period	175,589.98
Sixth period	149,242.10
First half seventh period	56,542.35
Total costs reported	381,374.43
Unaccounted for	132,040.62

As the above-mentioned "Unaccounted for" represents roughly 25 percent of the total to be accounted for, this matter was discussed with Mr. Spillers, and he advised that, during the fifth period (April 1 to September 30, 1935), the detached pay roll was not included in the supervision reported on the monthly cost reports. The detached pay roll for this period amounted to $17,259. Further discussion with Mr. Spillers disclosed that expenditures for equipment, appearing on allotment ledgers, were not included in costs reported. As stated above, it was impossible, without an endless amount of work, to ascertain just what items are included in the cost reported.

The auditors while at NP–2 Sugarlands had the camp clerk show them just how he compiled the data set forth in monthly cost reports, and after thoroughly going into the matter and looking over the working papers submitted by camp clerk the auditors were of the opinion that the methods used were far from accurate and could readily see where 25 percent of actual expenditures were overlooked and never discovered any place along the line.

The entire cost-accounting procedure at this park should be revamped and, in the opinion of the auditor, the correct time to start the new procedure would be at the beginning of a work period.

Instructions were given to check cost reported with allotment ledger encumbrances, but due to the facts stated above there is very little to be accomplished until a new complete cost program is put into effect.

As the work of revamping the cost system would take considerable time, in the way of drawing up forms and instructions to all concerned as to the proper method to be followed, the auditors, due to pressure of other assignments, were compelled to defer the matter and only give such instructions as might help the present system.

Reimbursable collections: From various sources, mostly from unfinished transactions and memoranda in desk baskets of allotment ledger, and voucher clerks, and from references obtained during course of audit, it was discovered that there were several reimbursable collections items that were incomplete, as follows:

1. Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, $991.67: In safe at park office was check dated August 31, 1936, from Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, for $991.67. Chief clerk stated as reason for holding check instead of sending through for deposit, it was necessary to ascertain finance officer's voucher numbers for original payments, and due to files being used in audit was unable to do this. This check covers refund of 2 cents a gallon on gasoline purchased under contract I–23p–672 ECW, and paid during the months of May and June 1935. The delayed payment by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey explained by the refund being overlooked by Park Office & Co. until brought to attention by General Accounting Office, and then further delayed by the fact that several invoices for this company were held up, the whole matter being the subject of a great deal of correspondence. All invoices paid for out of FD 1670 funds to this company under this contract were checked against schedule attached to check and found to be covered by the refund in the proper amount. FD 1670 funds entitled to $600.60 of this refund and balance to FD 870. Chief clerk stated that as soon as auditors left he would have prepared the necessary data required by finance officer and send check through for clearance.
2. Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, $32.45: On July 18, 1936, finance officer, Fort McPherson, Ga., acknowledged by proper receipt, check of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, for $400.12. Of this amount $32.45 was credited to FD 1670. No entry made in the allotment ledgers for this collection at date of examination. The same covered refund by company for errors in invoicing.
3. R. P. Abbott, $1: On October 28, 1936, finance officers, Fort McPherson, Ga., acknowledged receipt of $1 refund of overpayment to R. P. Abbott on voucher No. 8659 September 1935. This collection not entered on allotment ledger at date of examination.
4. H. C. Wilburn, $9.50: On October 28, 1936, finance officer, Fort McPherson, Ga., acknowledged receipt of $9.50 refund of overpayment to H. C. Wilburn on travel voucher No. 5884 September 1935, $9, and voucher No. 5885 September 1935, 50 cents. This collection not entered on allotment ledger at date of examination.
5. H. A. Hunt, $30: Letter to Washington office, dated October 22, 1936, calls attention to fact that $30 of collection made from H. A. Hunt should be credited to FD 1670, instead of CC 5507, as directed by Washington office letter dated October 10, 1936. This collection not entered on allotment ledger at date of examination awaiting reply from Washington office.
6. Sale of tents to Indian agencies, $279.68: Letter from finance officer, Washington, D. C., dated July 29, 1936, acknowledged receipt of remittances totaling $279.68, covering sale of tents to various Indian agencies. These collections not entered on allotment ledger at date of examination.
7. Rhyne Lumber Co., $49.13: Check of finance officer, Fort McPherson, Ga., to order of Rhyne Lumber Co., dated July 14, 1936, for $49.13 was sent to park office by vendor with statement that it was a duplicate payment. Matter being investigated by clerk. No entry being made on allotment ledger for this collection at date of examination.
8. Carter, Rice & Co., $27.10: On August 6, 1936, finance officer wrote park superintendent, advising that Carter, Rice & Co. had returned his check for $27.10, paid that company on his voucher No. 8382, July 25, 1936, claiming same was a duplicate payment of like amount received on June 2, 1936. On September 6, 1936, finance officer again wrote park superintendent, requesting information, and again on October 14, 1936. On October 19, 1936, park superintendent wrote finance officer that he was unable to find where any previous payment of like amount had been made this company.
9. A. W. Sherrill, Jr., foreman, $18.66: Letter from Washington office, dated November 6, 1936, requested collection be made for excessive leave taken by A. W. Sherrill. On November 20, 1936, $18.66 was transmitted to Washington office. No entry made on allotment ledger awaiting instructions from Washington office.
10. Sale of worn-out tires and tubes, $300.50: During course of audit it was discovered that tires and tubes had been sold from time to time. Inquiry was made, and information furnished by Chief Clerk that all such collections were handled through the regular channels for park funds, being deposited to "Miscellaneous receipts." A schedule was furnished auditor containing information as to the sale of 1,305 tires and tubes, between September 24, 1935, and April 17, 1936, to nine different contractors, together with deposit number and date. The total of these sales amounting to $330.50.

11. During audit several questionable duplicate payments were discovered and brought to the attention of Chief Clerk for proper investigation.

OTHER MATTER

(a) Unascertained liability for failure to return oil barrels; (b) refunds by railroads for freight picked up by Government; (c) Government-owned automobiles; (d) work on equipment for other governmental agencies; (e) auditor's adjustments; (f) FD 570 funds; (g) FD 870 funds.

Unascertained liability for failure to return oil barrels: As a great many empty oil barrels were noticed at the various camps, and especially at Smokemont, N. C., investigation was made, and it was discovered that Sinclair Refining Co. had been for some time prior to our visit attempting to have returned to it empty oil barrels in which motor oil under Navy contract had been furnished to the various camps. It had been the practice at the various camps to pay no attention to return of oil barrels, and they were allowed to accumulate. It developed that Sinclair representative had made several trips to Smokemont, trying to obtain return of these barrels.

Matter was taken up with park office and auditor informed that the same was being looked into. Several weeks later, while at Smokemont, noticed that nothing had been done, and again took this matter up with Chief Clerk and Mr. White, assistant to the superintendent, and was informed by Mr. White that he had requested one of the men to take care of this situation.

In going over correspondence in park office, came across letters from Gulf Refining Co., demanding that it be paid for the barrels that had not been returned to it, according to terms of contract under which sales were made.

Just before leaving park, noticed that nothing had been done regarding the return of these barrels, they were still where I had first noticed them—that is those that had not rolled down the side of the mountain.

Navy contract with Sinclair Refining Co., contains provision, that if oil barrels are not returned within a specified time, charge will be made for the empty oil barrel. Gulf Refining Co., and all other large oil companies, do the same thing.

Finance officer, at Fort McPherson, Ga., has repeatedly refused to pay purchase orders for oil barrels that should have been returned under terms of sale of oil.

Refunds by railroads for freight picked up by Government: As it has been the custom for railroads in the Southeast to make refunds of 5 cents per hundredweight on all freight picked up by Government trucks at railroad freight station at delivery point for some time past, and as these refunds are sometimes paid in cash by local freight agents to E. C. W. employees, and as no such refunds were discovered in the audit, Mr. Douglas and the writer called on the freight agent at Sevierville, Tenn., of the Tennessee & North Carolina Railroad, this being the railroad over which all freight shipments are received for Tennessee side of the park, and was informed that his railroad did not participate in the tariffs authorizing these refunds.

Chief Clerk was requested by us to obtain letters from the general freight agents of all railroads over which the park had received shipments, stating that these railroads were not required by tariffs covering these shipments to make refunds for pick-up service performed by the Government.

Government-owned automobiles: As a great number of pick-ups were carried on inventory, investigation was made as to work performed by these cars. Attached as exhibit D is schedule showing the drivers that have been assigned pick-ups.

It will be noticed that several regular National Park Service employees are using Emergency Conservation Work pick-ups, and that one was assigned to an employee on Civilian Conservation Corps pay roll, without reimbursement in any manner to Emergency Conservation Work.

So far as auditor could ascertain these cars are used, in most instances, from the time employee leaves his place of residence until he returns, and car is left overnight at place of residence of driver, not under shelter.

A few of these cars are left standing each night in the parking space near the park office, in all kinds of weather. Just before leaving Gatlinburg saw several cars so parked covered with snow.

There is no contract for storage of Government cars in a garage. As stated under contract comments, while it would appear that there was a contract for space for storage of two Government automobiles, this space is used for other purposes.

While engaged on work of audit, an inspection was made by traveling mechanic assigned to district E, region 1, and he advised the writer that his inspection showed that the above-mentioned pick-ups were not receiving the proper attention.

Work on equipment for other governmental agencies: Work reports from Smokemont and Sugarlands garages show that considerable work is performed by Emergency Conservation Work mechanics on equipment belonging to other governmental agencies. No reimbursement is made to this Service for such work. Chief Clerk informed the auditor that parts were replaced by regular National Park Service for any work performed on regular park equipment, but that no attempt was made to reimburse Emergency Conservation Work for the labor.

Auditor's adjustments: A schedule of all auditor's adjustments (except those for shipping tickets and bills of lading, which were recorded as stated in foregoing comments under those two subjects) was prepared and these adjustments were entered on November 1936, combined allotment ledger for FD 1670 funds, sheets 1 to 26, inclusive, and entries so made on allotment ledger sheets checked by auditor with his working papers. For that reason the schedule is not set forth herein, as it was very lengthy, the totals being as follows:

Direct settlements	$2,050.82
Audited vouchers	4,223.99
Encumbrances liquidated	4,066.46
Encumbrances authorized, RE	1,584.04
Reimbursable collections, RE	291.77

FD 570 funds: Auditor requested allotment ledger sheets for FD 570 funds, for purpose only of reporting totals, as our instructions were to omit auditing of these funds. Chief Clerk stated that these allotment ledger sheets had been filed away some place, and he would have to make a search for the same. They were not found by the time we were ready to leave, so Chief Clerk was requested to forward the totals shown on the last recapitulation sheet submitted to Washington office, when the same were found.

The "Totals to date" so obtained, for February 1935, are as follows:

Direct settlements	$2,848.91
Audited vouchers	146,229.23
Encumbrances liquidated	52,807.81
Encumbrances authorized	199,280.26
Reimbursable collections	128.02
Allotments	295,422.57
Unencumbered balance of allotments	None

From the above it will be noted that there is a balance of $146,472.45 of unliquidated encumbrances.

We did not find in any of the files anything pertaining to FD 570 funds, as evidently all vouchers, etc., had been filed away in storage.

There was one adjustment on account of voucher paid by finance officer being charged to FD 1670 instead of FD 570, and superintendent has been instructed by auditor to submit allotment ledgers showing the adjustment, when proper adjustment voucher is received from finance officer.

FD 870 funds: Allotment-ledger sheets for FD 870 funds were found in binder. Totals to date as shown on recapitulation sheet for March 1936, last month for which sheets were found, are as follows:

Column headings	Tennessee	North Carolina	Total
Direct settlements	$2,107.54	$2,159.85	$4,267.39
Audited vouchers	127,823.32	128,311.95	256,135.27
Encumbrances liquidated	10,342.79	11,961.82	22,304.61
Encumbrances authorized	13,367.71	15,168.62	28,536.33
Reimbursable collections	875.81	814.68	1,690.49
Allotments	143,000.00	130,000.00	273,000.00
Unencumbered balance	10,920.03	RE2,863.92	8,056.11

In keeping with instructions, to omit auditing of these funds, nothing was done regarding the same.

From the above it will be noted that there is a balance of $6,231.72 of unliquidated encumbrances. No schedule of these obtainable, as chief clerk stated none was ever prepared.

We found one file drawer completely filled with vouchers, vendors' invoices, etc., of FD 870 funds. As above stated, no check was made of the same, except to ascertain if any papers belonging to FD 1670 funds, were therein included, and such as were found were removed and placed with proper files for FD 1670 funds.

There were several adjustments on account of vouchers paid by finance officer being charged to FD 1670 instead of FD 870, and superintendent has been instructed by auditor to submit allotment ledgers showing the same, when proper adjustment vouchers are received from finance officer.

CERTIFICATE

I hereby certify that, based upon the records and supporting papers examined, and information and explanations obtained, subject to the scope of the examination and the comments thereon, the obligations and disbursements for those transactions reviewed, were proper and in accordance with the regulations of Emergency Conservation Work, except as otherwise stated in above-mentioned report.

Left Gatlinburg, Tenn., at 11 a. m., November 27, 1936, for my official headquarters, Atlanta, Ga., via U. S. D. I. car 10988.

Sincerely yours,

H. E. MYERS,
Regional Fiscal Supervisor.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
NATIONAL PARK SERVICE,
Washington, February 16, 1938.

The DIRECTOR
National Park Service, Washington, D. C.
(Through Mr. Tolson.)

DEAR MR. DIRECTOR: Pursuant to our instructions we left Washington, D. C., on February 7, 1938, for Great Smoky Mountains National Park and arrived at park headquarters, Gatlinburg, Tenn., at 3 p. m., proceeding immediately with an audit of the accounts and records.

Actual cash on hand for deposit to miscellaneous receipts amounted to $5, $2 being lease fees and $3 topographical map sales. This balance agreed with receipted collection bills although no collection account was maintained in the disbursing officer's ledger. We recommended that a collection account be opened to show all collections, deposits, and balances on hand each day and the chief clerk promised this would be done, effective February 1, 1938.

The agent cashier's cash was verified and found to be correct in accordance with records maintained currently. A balance of $400 was on hand under symbol No. 94–943 and $300 under symbol No. 106–106, both amounts being the full amount authorized.

Topographical maps received from the United States Geological Survey on consignment are sold for 60 cents each, 36 cents of which is remitted to the Geological Survey and 24 cents deposited to miscellaneous receipts. The record of the sale of these maps, however, did not readily disclose the cash on hand from sales and we made suggestions to correct this condition. Some of the maps are purchased by the park for official use and payment had not been made to the Geological Survey for these maps for several months. Chief Clerk Ray agreed to make full settlement for the maps at least once a month and to improve the record kept in accordance with our suggestions.

Postage stamps amounting to a value of $8.36 were on hand in the office safe, agreeing with record kept of stamp purchases and issues. Payments to the Gatlinburg postmaster for office box rent had been made by stamps, and we advised the park that payment should be made in the regular way on a 1034 voucher.

The park had established office hours of less than the 8 hours per day (except Saturday) required by the regulations, basing such action on a misinterpretation of a memorandum issued May 20, 1937, by Mr. Herbert Evison, former Civilian Conservation Corps regional officer, region 1. During our stay, however, Superintendent Eakin issued orders correcting the condition and establishing a working day of 8 hours.

Disbursing ledgers were checked from January 1, 1937, to January 31, 1938, with accounts current and schedule of disbursements. Earlier months were found to be out of balance, but the record for November, December, and January was found correct, indicating proper procedure had been established November 1, 1937, with the exception of a collection account as hereinbefore mentioned.

Deductions were being made on Civilian Conservation Corps pay rolls for National Park Service quarters furnished Civilian Conservation Corps personnel, and rental payments were deposited to "Miscellaneous receipts." We advised the park that the deductions should be deposited as repays to the current park appropriation. The same procedure was being followed on regular park pay rolls, and pay rolls did not refer to the number and type of quarters furnished. This was called to the attention of the Chief Clerk.

Mr. Ray stated that replies to letters of inquiry from the park to the regional office and Washington office were not received within a reasonable time, often not for 60 or 90 days. We explained that often it was necessary to obtain information elsewhere before answering inquiries, but he was not fully convinced that any logical reason existed for the long delays.

Upon examining pay rolls, time slips, memoranda of employment, and personnel records from January 1, 1936, to January 31, 1938, the following discrepancies were noted:

Mrs. Herman Bishop was hired on memorandum of employment Form 10–37 December 1, 1934, as laborer, at $0.25 per hour, and has worked 2 to 5 hours per day as laborer ever since. Her actual duties were those of a telephone operator and she remained on duty all the time instead of only 2 to 5 hours daily. We advised the superintendent that an appointment as telephone operator should be secured at once if the need for the position should continue. Chief Clerk Ray stated that her station would be handled through some other exchange within a week or two, and that her services would be discontinued.

Mrs. Oma K. Ogle was employed November 15, 1934, on a memorandum of employment Form 10-37, as senior laborer, at $0.30 per hour, and according to the time slips, worked as such 3 or 4 hours practically every day from date of her employment to date. During this time she performed janitor work exclusively in the park office. As need for a janitor's services will continue, we suggested that an appointment as janitor be secured in the regular way.

Mr. John Morrell was employed intermittently from January 1 to July 1, 1937, as laborer, at $0.30 per hour, as shown by the time slips and pay rolls. His services were actually utilized in checking land titles to private lands within the park. Mr. Morrell being an attorney, and employed on legal work, it was obviously very irregular to carry him on the rolls as a laborer.

On July 1, 1937, five laborers were carried on the rolls for 12 to 16 hours per day each. No showing of necessity or emergency was made, but Mr. Eakin stated that he believed this was occasioned by a bad landslide and that the overtime was necessary to clear one of the main roads in the park. One Terry Huskey was employed as watchman and worked 10 hours every day from September 1 to October 31, 1937, without any showing of an emergency. We explained that in all cases where it was necessary for per diem men to work more than 8 hours per day that a showing of the emergency should be made.

Memoranda of employment were in poor condition, often not being signed by the superintendent or any park official. When men were discharged and rehired in subsequent years, new memoranda were not obtained. A slight improvement was noted in recent months. Many employments were made prior to December 1, 1937, on a monthly basis instead of at a per diem rate, as authorized by the approved per diem schedule of rates. During the calendar year 1937 practically no memoranda of employment were executed except covering a few men not theretofore employed. We suggested to Chief Clerk Ray that new memoranda be executed at once for all employees on an hourly or per diem basis, and he agreed that this would be done, and that hereafter memoranda would be signed whenever applicable.

Time slips prior to December 1, 1937, were in poor condition. Very few were signed by the employees. Since December 1, 1937, time slips have been signed by the employees and park representatives.

Mr. Eakin and Mr. Ray expressed concern in regard to certifying Bureau of Public Roads vouchers in connection with force account road work without actual knowledge as to the correctness thereof. Mr. Ray suggested that occasionally the pay checks for the men employed by the Bureau should be delivered to the park office for delivery to the employees. While the park did not intimate that any irregularities existed in connection with Bureau of Public Roads pay rolls, it was felt that there was no adequate check on the pay rolls and vouchers cleared through the park for payment by the regional disbursing officer from park funds.

Vouchers submitted by the Bureau for payment were ordinarily in excellent condition. The files disclosed a few cases, however, where vouchers for more than $100 had been paid without contract. In nearly all cases these were vouchers covering payments for truck and equipment repairs and statements were typed on the back of the vouchers to the effect that the repair parts were sold only by the manufacturer or his agents at a fixed uniform price, making it impossible to secure competition. There were several vouchers in favor of C. M. McClung & Co., Knoxville, Tenn., for general hardware, each involving less than $100 but totaling more than $100 for December 1937 purchases.

Equipment cards kept by the park were totaled and the total reconciled with the December 1937 statement of control accounts, as follows:

Total as shown by cards		$37,345.56
Total equipment as shown by statement of control accounts, Dec. 31, 1937	$37,498.81
Less value of old mimeograph, $163.25, traded in on new mimeograph for $10—net difference	153.25
Corrected total statement of control accounts (correction to be made on January statement)		37,345.56

The cards were in good condition generally, except that full details as to name of vendor, purchase order number, and unit prices were not shown. This information was being added to the cards, and we were informed that they would be completed as rapidly as possible. A physical inventory of all equipment should also be taken and the cards reconciled to show the actual equipment on hand.

Vouchers were examined from January 1, 1936, to December 31, 1937, those being paid during the calendar year 1937 being more closely scrutinized. They were found to be in very good condition generally.

Gasoline and oil had been purchased in Gatlinburg and Bryson City in the open market exceeding the $100 limitation allowed by law and at a higher cost than the items could have been secured from Civilian Conservation Corps storage tanks in the park filled by tank-wagon delivery under contract. A contract was entered into with a Gatlinburg firm during the latter part of December 1937, but at the time of the audit gasoline and oil were still being purchased at Bryson City without contract greatly exceeding open-market limitation. The park agreed to remedy this situation by soliciting bids and awarding contract.

Whenever practicable gas and oil were being obtained from Civilian Conservation Corps supplies for use in connection with National Park Service cars and trucks, and a record of such issues was being maintained. However, instead of making reimbursement in the regular way by means of adjustment vouchers, the park would buy additional gasoline for delivery to Civilian Conservation Corps camps and make payment from regular funds. In other words, supplies were being replaced instead of being paid for, and we suggested that the proper procedure would be for the park to reimburse Civilian Conservation Corps funds on adjustment vouchers for gasoline actually used.

Many travel vouchers were noted payable to John T. Needham, chief ranger. These vouchers usually covered trips from his headquarters at Bryson City to Maryville or to Gatlinburg, and in practically all cases he would be absent from his headquarters more than 24 hours, or at least overnight. It seems that Mr. Needham is required to make these trips as he collects rents from lessees, handles sales of old buildings on park property, and transacts most of the "outside" work of the park. If Mr. Needham did not take care of this business it would be likely that the superintendent would have to do more traveling. We found few vouchers reimbursing the superintendent for travel. Expense vouchers paid to Mr. Needham from regular funds would average $35 or $40 per month, but no irregularities in connection therewith could be found from an examination of the vouchers.

Office furniture and books had been purchased in a few instances without reference to the Washington office, as shown by Bureau voucher No. 988, January 1937, covering an office safe purchased from Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Co., general schedule contractor, in the amount of $181. Bureau voucher No. 1303 covered purchase of a dictionary from R. Carter Ballantyne, general schedule contractor, in the amount of $12.95. Chief Clerk Ray stated that he knew about the regulations covering books but did not understand that office furniture was to be procured through the Washington office.

In September 1937 payment of Bureau voucher No. 183 was made to Chas. A. Ogle & Co. in the amount of 50 cents for a broom, without clearance being obtained from the Federal Prison Industries, Inc. Other similar purchases had been made properly.

Vouchers covering repairs and parts for passenger-carrying vehicles since July 1, 1937, did not show total costs of such items of each vehicle. Chief Clerk Ray stated that such costs would be assembled and properly shown on all applicable vouchers in the future.

Allotment ledgers were checked and examined from July 1, 1937, to February 1, 1938, and were found to be in excellent condition. Entries were made currently and encumbrances properly entered. Unliquidated encumbrances as of February 1, 1938, were checked for each appropriation and account, and found to be in agreement with the allotment accounts.

Treasury cash for appropriations 14–1007 and 14–1130 had been rather heavily overdrawn for several months and upon our recommendation the park requested the regional disbursing officer to deposit the excess to the credit of the appropriations. Mr. Ray stated that the overdraft occurred by reason of reverse allotments of funds, but no reason appeared why the excess funds should not be returned to the Treasury.

We were cordially received at the park, and all possible assistance was given us in conducting the audit. The park officials displayed a fine spirit of cooperation, and promised that any irregularities would be corrected without delay.

The audit was completed on February 12, and we left the park the same day, arriving in Washington on February 13.

Respectfully submitted.

EARL H. BROWN, Senior Auditor.
CARL F. JONES, Accountant.

NATIONAL PARK SERVICE,
Cincinnati, Ohio, January 16, 1939.

The DIRECTOR, NATIONAL PARK SERVICE,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. DIRECTOR: Pursuant to my assignment, I left Atlanta, Ga., at 2 p. m. December 1, 1938, arriving at Gatlinburg, Tenn., 9 p. m. same day. I have examined the vouchers, records, and other supporting papers, as hereinafter set forth, on file pertaining to the disbursement of funds allotted to Great Smoky Mountain National Park, Gatlinburg, Tenn., for Civilian Conservation Work for the period beginning December 1, 1937, and ending November 30, 1938.

The funds allotted this procurement office for that period aggregated $236,830, of which $232,064.32 had been disbursed or obligated as of November 30, 1938.

There were seven camps under the supervision of this office as at November 30, 1938.

INDEX OF EXAMINATION

1. Audit of purchase orders and vouchers.
2. Audit of pay rolls.
3. Audit of accounts, records, and reports.
4. Other matter.

1. AUDIT OF PURCHASE ORDERS AND VOUCHERS

The audit of purchase orders and vouchers covered an inspection of all purchase orders and vouchers of $25 or more, including a review of the prices for commodities and services, extensions, quantities received as shown by receipted orders or delivery tickets, and other supporting papers, such as requisitions and contracts. Receiving signatures were scrutinized and appear to be regular. Purchase order numbers were in numerical order. Procurement code numbers were checked occasionally and the coding was reasonably accurate. The following irregularities were noted in regard to purchase and contract procedure:

1. Contracts Nos. I–23P–3 and 4 CIV: Real-estate leases with A. J. Huff, Gatlinburg, Tenn., both dated July 1, 1937. For office space for Civilian Conservation Work employees, No. 3 being for a rental of $21 per month and No. 4 for $53 per month. No clearance Form PSC Form No. 6, submitted for either of these two leases. Leases were not renewed for the period beginning July 1, 1938. Rental payments made through November 1938 show above contract numbers as authority. Also see auditor's comments in two preceding audit reports regarding contracts for this same office space.

2. Contract I–23p 20 CIV: Real-estate lease, with J. A. Lowe, chairman, board of commissioners, Haywood County, N. C., dated July 1, 1938, for the term beginning July 1, 1938, and ending with December 31, 1938, with privilege of renewal for 6-month period. Premises leased being office space in Citizens National Bank Building, Waynesville, N. C., for Hiram C. Wilburn, Civilian Conservation Corps foreman, and storage space for museum specimens that have been collected by Mr. Wilburn in conjunction with North Carolina Museum Committee, monthly rental being $10. This contract renews real-estate lease for same premises as covered by contract No. I–23p–CIV–11 for period July 1, 1937, to June 30, 1938, and is on United States Standard Form No. 2 instead of being on Form of Renewal of Government Lease. The reason stated by Mr. Ray, chief clerk, for making lease for 6 months, with privilege of renewal for 6 months, instead of renewing former lease for 1 year as required by regulations governing real-estate lease, was to circumvent the preparation and submission of Clearance Form PSC 6, under the rule that lease was only for 6 months, and annual rental did not amount to $500. No certificate submitted from clerk of board of county commissioners and register of deeds for Haywood County, N. C., that J. A. Lowe was the chairman of the board of county commissioners and authorized to execute leases on behalf of Haywood County. (See letter from Washington office to superintendent, dated October 2, 1937, regarding contract No. I–23p–CIV–11.)

3. Contract I–23p–14 CIV, dated December 3, 1937, with J. C. Mahan Motor Co., Knoxville, Tenn., covering Ford repair parts as purchased. As contract was not approved by the Secretary for purchases thereunder in excess of $1,000, and as contract was still being quoted on vouchers covering purchases, as of the time of audit, the matter was brought to the attention of superintendent immediately by the auditor, when he ascertained that purchases made under contract had exceeded $1,000. Superintendent, on December 5, 1938, sent a memorandum to the director enclosing copies of contract, explaining circumstances and requesting authority to continue use of contract through supplemental approval of the Secretary. Superintendent, on December 10, 1938, received letter from the Director advising that contract could no longer be used and it would be necessary to initiate steps to procure a new contract covering Ford repair parts. Total purchases under this contract that had been paid by finance officer on November 30, 1938, were $2,579.33.

4. Contract I–23p–24 CIV, dated January 26, 1938, with Day Pulverizer Co., Knoxville, Tenn., covering repair parts for Day crushers, was not approved by the Secretary for purchases in excess of $1,000 and total purchases under contract were $1,544.74. Contract was not used after June 30, 1938, due to general schedule of supplies contract being in effect.

5. Contract I–23p–94 CIV, dated June 13, 1938, with T. L. Lay Packing Co., Knoxville, Tenn. Not on Standard Contract Form No. 33. Statement on Form 1036, "Due to emergency contract handled as per chapter III, division B, section 4, sheet 4 of the Handbook." Attached to office copy of Form 1036 is a copy of a letter from Lay Packing Co., dated June 13, 1938, quoting prices on 100 pounds of beef livers at 16 cents to be shipped June 15 to apply on contract covering weekly shipments for 19 weeks. Under this contract, purchase orders were issued from June 17 to October 10, 1938, for 4,154½ pounds of beef liver for which $664.72 was paid by finance officer. From contract (?) and rejected bids (letters from two other packing companies) it is impossible to determine just what the invitation was, which was evidently handled over telephone.

6. Contract I–23p–24 CIV, dated September 30, 1938, Crane Co., for galvanized pipe. Invitation states: "This pipe shall comply with Federal Specifications WW–P–441." Crane Co., in its bid, called attention to error in specifications, stating that specification WW–P–441 applied to wrought-iron pipe and not galvanized pipe, and that Federal specification for galvanized pipe was WW–P–403. As rejected bids are not in file, impossible to determine if rejected bidders discovered the error in designation of specification. According to abstract of bids, Tidewater Supply Co. was an equal low bidder, except as to discount. Also, plain end pipe was accepted and deduction made of $10.24 on this account. Invitation did not specify whether pipe was to be threaded or not.

7. Contract I–23p–32–CIV, House Hasson Hardware Co., Knoxville, Tenn., for batteries for radio department. Invitation contained provision: "This contract will be awarded as a whole." Quotations invited on items 1, 2, 3, and 4. Only one bid received and that on all four items. Accepted for items 1 and 3 only and items 2 and 4 purchased in open market at higher price from another company on same date as items 1 and 3.

8. Contract I–23p–21–CIV, with National Cast Iron Pipe Co., dated January 18, 1938, and contract I–23p–89–CIV, dated June 28, 1938, Tennessee Mill & Mine Supply Co., both for manhole covers and frames, gray iron castings. No clearance obtained from Federal Prison Industries, Inc.

9. Irregularities in open-market purchase procedure:

(a) Numerous purchases made without obtaining competitive bids.

(b) Like items purchased at different times during fiscal year, the total of such purchase being in excess of limitations stated in memorandum F–15–3.

(c) Items purchased from dealers that should have been purchased from manufacturers direct.

(d) Six purchase orders, all for less than $100 each, issued to C. M. McClung & Co., Knoxville, Tenn., dated June 28, 29, and 30, 1938, totaling $402.44, no competition invited; also 2 purchase orders, dated June 14 and 17, 1938, respectively, for a total of $155.18 to this same concern, and 5 orders dated August 6 and 11, 1938, to same concern for a total of $186.67. Altogether, between June 14 and September 28, 1938, 21 open-market purchase orders, without competition, were issued to C. M. McClung & Co. for total purchases of $1,121.80.

(e) Three purchase orders issued for sanitation supplies for comfort station that should have been purchased from regular funds.

(f) Ice purchased frequently between August 11 and October 14, 1938, from Blount Ice Co., open market.

Travel vouchers: Since July 1, 1938, travel orders issued by superintendent have specified $4 per diem. Before that date, per diem was stated as $5 and $2 when obtaining meals and lodgings at camps. Under plan now in effect, $4 per diem, travelers deduct one-fifth, or 80 cents for each free lodging obtained in Civilian Conservation Corps barracks buildings. Office unable to show any authority for paying $3.20 net per diem when obtaining free lodging at Civilian Conservation Corps camps. Also, per diem of $4 allowed and paid for in two instances to Hiram C. Wilburn where travel in question did not require him to be away from his official headquarters overnight.

2. AUDIT OF PAY ROLLS

The pay rolls for the period were examined and bore the stamp of the finance officer. All names appearing on the pay roll for period November 16 to 30, 1938, as well as all names on all skilled labor or hourly rate pay rolls for the period December 1, 1937, to November 30, 1938, were listed with notations of amounts paid, and in case of hourly rate employees notations made of hours and rate paid, and job numbers on which labor performed. All names were checked against letters of appointment, emergency field agreements (Form 1–325) and memorandums of employment (Form 10–37). During visits to camps by auditor, all names appearing on regular pay roll were accounted for by meeting the employees, in most cases on the job while working, with a few exceptions where employees were on leave and proper leave slips were on file, and where it was impossible to drive to job where men were working, due to conditions of roads or from lack of time, in which cases employees' presence and performance of duties for which appointed were verified by certificate from J. T. Maxey, property supervisor. In the case of skilled labor, those still employed at date of visit were met by auditor, and all jobs on which skilled labor was charged during period were inspected by auditor, and by verbal statements from different members of supervisory personnel, he was able to satisfy himself that skilled labor paid for had actually been employed.

Time sheets (Form 10–42) were inspected and several were missing from files and a list of these exceptions was given to Mr. Ray by auditor with request that correct time sheets be obtained for all such cases and placed in proper files.

AUDIT OF ACCOUNTS, RECORDS, AND REPORTS

(a) Allotment ledgers.
(b) Project cost records.
(c) Property records and equipment.
(d) Records of leave and absence.

(a) Allotment ledgers: All entries for $25 or more, in "audited vouchers" covering purchase-order vouchers, were checked with supporting papers, and adjustments found necessary were entered on January 1939 allotment ledgers.

Reconciliations of expenditures under procurement authorities CC 5507, ECW 5507, and CP 5507 as of July 31, 1938, and GA 91–225 as of September 30, 1938, were handled in keeping with instructions, and one copy of statements with auditor's notations thereon as to findings was mailed to Washington office by auditor under date of January 12, 1939. Schedule of unliquidated obligations for GA 91–225 and CP 5507 were balanced with the difference between the accumulative totals of the encumbrance and liquidated columns. Entries in allotment ledgers are being made currently, which reports the status of funds at all times. Remington Rand electric bookkeeping machine, purchased by park from regular funds, being used to record entries on Civilian Conservation Corps allotment ledgers, to good advantage, showing a saving of clerical time over old method used.

(b) Project cost records: Cost records are maintained showing distribution of encumbrances as between overhead and project accounts, a card system being used, and examination of same disclosed that the same were well kept. Auditor explained to clerks the system of keeping cost records on Remington Rand electric bookkeeping machine, the same as has been installed in the Civilian Conservation Corps central procurement offices, and manager of Remington Rand, Inc., was contacted while auditor was at park regarding instructions on the use of this machine for this phase of the work. These instructions were received just a few days before auditor left the park, but he was informed that the instructions would be carefully studied and if the same could be used to advantage this would be done.

Job applications (Form 10–352) for all jobs shown on monthly distribution of encumbrances (Form 10–351) for November 1938, which showed skilled labor had been charged, and all jobs where material had been charged in excess of $25, were examined by auditor as to approvals and charges and were found to be properly maintained. During visits to camps, auditor viewed such of these jobs as he could readily get to, without taking up too much time, and, generally speaking, from an auditor's viewpoint, found such jobs as were viewed to be in keeping with approvals and cost records as above stated.

During visit to camps, discovered that camps are still being required to submit monthly obsolete Form 4 distributing overhead items over various jobs worked on, and upon inquiry at park office, auditor was informed that these reports were used by the engineers and technicians, and were not a part of the regularly maintained cost accounting. In other words, found two cost systems being used, one by the engineers—the way formerly used in National Park—and the other by the accounting section.

(c) Property records and equipment: Records of nonexpendable property were well maintained, both at office and camps. Test checks made at each camp were very satisfactory. The same applies to the two central garages and the warehouse at Sugarlands.

At each camp found a different method for accounting for gasoline, oil, and grease issues. So that gasoline and oil issues can be readily checked periodically by property supervisor, auditor gave the necessary instructions to all concerned as to how this should be done, so as to have the same method used at all camps.

Issues of gasoline, oil, and grease to regular National Park Service cars being repaid to Civilian Conservation Corps accounts, all of these being handled as reimbursable collections.

It was suggested by auditor that Mr. James T. Maxey, property supervisor, when visiting camps in connection with property matters, also check on oil and gasoline records to see that same are properly maintained, and if his suggestion is followed, feel sure that gasoline and oil accounts will be well maintained at all camps.

(d) Records of leave and absence: Leave taken as shown on time sheets (Form 10–42) checked with leave records (Form 1–128) and several differences were noted. A list of these was given to chief clerk by auditor for purpose of obtaining leave slips (Form 1–034) where necessary.

Discussion of these differences disclosed that leave shown on time sheets (Form 10–42) was not checked by clerks in office. As recent instructions require the submission of time sheets 6 to 8 days before close of the half-month period, it was suggested by auditor that each camp submit on the 15th and last day of each month a report of all leave taken during the preceding half-month period and leave shown on these reports to be checked with leave slips (Form 1–034) and leave records (Form 1–128).

4. OTHER MATTER

In regard to unliquidated encumbrances for FD 570 and FD 870 funds, as mentioned in previous audit reports, it was discovered that nothing had been done during the past year to check these matters out. After discussion of this matter with clerks, auditor came to conclusion that they did not know how to go about it. In other words, were afraid to tackle it, so he spent a half day on FD 870 funds, starting at the beginning in August 1934 and showed one clerk, Mr. Tom Morris, the proper procedure to follow, and believe if some time is spent on this phase of the work each week, we will eventually ascertain the cause for these differences. From the time spent as above stated, auditor is of the opinion that numerous errors were made in recording liquidations, and also it is his opinion that numerous vouchers were paid by finance officer but that liquidation entries were never made, and in such cases it will be necessary to obtain copies of these vouchers from finance officer, where same are not found in park files. The reason for advancing this theory is that similar problems were encountered when checking down the FD 1670 funds for this park in 1936. It was discovered that the clerks do have some spare time, and duties can be arranged so that some time can be spent on this phase of the work each week. It may require more exacting follow-up work on the part of the Washington office to get this done, as the excuse used in the past, of the clerks not having the time, no longer holds good, and it is the auditor's opinion that with the start now made as above stated, and by close follow-up, these old matters should be cleared up, at least more progress made than has been during the past 2 years.

Regarding park property, consisting of steel cases, exhibits and specimens at the University of Tennessee, spoken of in previous audit report, found that all this property is properly marked, and carried on property records at park.

Generally speaking, it will be noted that considerable improvement has been made in fiscal procedure at this park in the past 2 years. However, there is still room for improvement, especially in the contract and purchase department.

Every effort was made on the part of the administrative, office, and camp personnel to expedite the review of their work and the recommendations and instructions were received appreciatively.

CERTIFICATE

I hereby certify that, based upon the records and supporting papers examined and information and explanations obtained, subject to the scope of the examination and the comments thereon, the obligations and disbursements for those transactions reviewed were proper and in accordance with the regulations of civilian conservation work.

Left Gatlinburg, Tenn., 8 a. m., January 14, 1939, arriving at Cincinnati, Ohio, same day at 6 p. m.

Sincerely yours,

HERMAN E. MYERS,
Regional Fiscal Supervisor.

STATEMENT OF HERMAN E. MYERS, REGIONAL FISCAL SUPERVISOR, NATIONAL PARK SERVICE

Senator McKELLAR. Mr. Myers, early in 1937 you made a report of your examination of the Civilian Conservation Corps work done at the Great Smoky Mountains National Park; did you not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. You having done that work in October and November of 1936?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Senator McKELLAR. Mr. Burlew was good enough to send me a copy of that report, which is marked "Filed February 23, 1937," and I now have it before me. It is stamped: "National Park Service, E. C. W., Audit Division, February 23, 1937."

What do the initials E. C. W. mean?

Mr. MYERS. That was Emergency Conservation Work.

Senator McKELLAR. And that was the portion of the work that you examined at the park that year, and in those months?

Mr. MYERS. That is right.

Senator McKELLAR. What was the condition of the books and vouchers and affairs as kept by those in charge of the park at that time?

Mr. MYERS. For the period I was auditing, they were not in very good shape.

Senator McKELLAR. What was that period?

Mr. MYERS. I believe it was from April 1, 1935, to June 30, 1936.

Senator McKELLAR. Was Mr. Ross Eakin the superintendent of the park at that time?

Mr. MYERS. Yes; he was.

Senator McKELLAR. He had been since 1931, I believe?

Mr. MYERS. I do not know when he came there. During the time I was auditing he was there as superintendent.

Senator McKELLAR. On page 40 of this report you say:

"Paid vouchers were filed in alphabetical arrangement, as this was the only way they had of ascertaining if an obligation had been paid, and even this method was not used for what it was worth, as numerous duplicate payments were made."

That is a correct statement; is it?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. What do you mean by "duplicate payments"?

Mr. MYERS. Well, they would pay for the same thing twice.

Senator McKELLAR. They would pay for the same thing twice?

Mr. MYERS. Yes; by their method that they used. I found several instances of that kind.

Senator McKELLAR. Is not that very unusual?

Mr. MYERS. Yes; it was.

Senator McKELLAR. If a thing was paid for twice, it might have easily been that only one thing was bought, and the payments just made in that way, and the person paying might have gotten the duplicate money; might he not?

Mr. MYERS. Well, they had to get refunds from those that they had paid twice. I cannot recall offhand how many, but I know they had to get refunds where they had overpaid them, or paid them the second time.

Senator McKELLAR. Paid them the second time?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Senator McKELLAR. Do you remember about how many of those there were?

Mr. MYERS. I could not tell you offhand; no.

Senator McKELLAR. And they got refunds?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Senator McKELLAR. Do you know whether they got refunds from the persons to whom the money had allegedly been paid, or whether they had simply used that money and restored it?

Mr. MYERS. As far as I know from all that I found, where there had been duplicate payments made they either got the refund or they offset the overpayment against a later purchase.

Senator McKELLAR. You again say:

"About February 1, 1936, a copy of purchase order issued was placed in a separate file, but as purchase orders were not issued for all obligations incurred—purchase order numbers being stated on vouchers only—file was not complete."

That would lead to endless trouble; would it not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes. From an audit standpoint, it was very hard to determine.

Senator McKELLAR. Was it not the easiest way in the world to take the Government's money?

Mr. MYERS. Well, they did not follow our regulations, and that is what I am talking about there. They did not do what we had specified they should do.

Senator McKELLAR. You really were not able to make an audit of many of these purchases; were you?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, no; there were a lot of them we could not find the substantiating papers for.

Senator McKELLAR. Do you know how much they were?

Mr. MYERS. No; I do not, offhand.

Senator McKELLAR. Did they amount to several thousand dollars?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, yes. They would amount to several thousand dollars if you put them all together, I imagine. There was close to half a million dollars involved in the whole period of time.

Senator McKELLAR. And for many thousands of these there were no substantiating documents to show what had become of the money?

Mr. MYERS. I would not say there were thousands of them; no—thousands of dollars' worth, I mean; not thousands of vouchers.

Senator McKELLAR. No; I mean, were there many thousands of them? Take the half-million dollars that were expended through this activity during the period of time for which you examined: About how many were there that there were no vouchers for?

Mr. MYERS. It is awfully hard for me to tell you offhand. I had to go down to the finance officer at Fort McPherson and get copies of the vouchers that he had paid. I think I got something around 100 vouchers. Just the amount of money that was involved in those 100 vouchers I could not tell you offhand; I do not know; but, you see, I only got a copy of the voucher. I did not get a copy of the substantiating papers, like the vendor's invoice, or the receipted copy of the purchase order; and those are what I would term "substantiating papers."

Senator McKELLAR. So in many instances they did not keep the substantiating papers, and could not furnish them to you?

Mr. MYERS. They were not in the files to be furnished to me.

Senator McKELLAR. And you never did find them?

Mr. MYERS. No.

Senator McKELLAR. You further say, on the same page:

"Attention is called to letter from Washington office, dated December 23, 1935, directed to superintendent of park, requesting that purchase orders in paid file be filed numerically, beginning January 1, 1936."

Were those orders complied with?

Mr. MYERS. No; they did not do that.

Senator McKELLAR. So far as you know, they paid no attention to it?

Mr. MYERS. They kept on doing it the other way, the way they had been doing it.

Senator McKELLAR. And the way they had been doing it, you could not get heads nor tails of it?

Mr. MYERS. We could not find all the papers in the right order. In other words, it took a whole lot longer to do it that way than it would if they had done it right.

Senator McKELLAR. You say:

"Receipts for materials and supplies were not obtained in majority of instances."

Is that correct?

Mr. MYERS. I mean that nobody signed for them to show that they had been received.

Senator McKELLAR. Do you mean that of the half-million dollars or about half a million dollars expended there in that period, receipts were not obtainable in the case of the majority of that money?

Mr. MYERS. I cannot tell you offhand how many they did not have, but I know there were a lot of them for which they did not have the receipted copies.

Senator MCKELLAR. You say here:

"Receipts for materials and supplies were not obtained in majority of instances."

That is correct?

Mr. MYERS. That would be right; yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. It was fresh in your mind then, and you knew?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. Again, you say:

"In some cases copy of invoice attached to voucher would be approved by 'O. K.' of project superintendent."

Is that correct?

Mr. MYERS. I did not quite get your point, Senator.

Senator MCKELLAR. I am quoting from what you say in your report:

"In some cases copy of invoice attached to voucher would be approved by 'O. K.' of project superintendent."

Mr. MYERS. Oh, yes; I know what I mean there. Instead of the project superintendent signing the purchase-order copy acknowledging receipt of the material, he would approve the vendor's invoice, which was wrong.

Senator MCKELLAR. Then you say:

"A few vouchers had a copy of purchase order attached, receipt signed by project superintendent, or H. A. Hunt, E. C. W. clerk, who also acted as purchasing agent."

Who was H. A. Hunt?

Mr. MYERS. He was the clerk who was suspended about the time we started the audit.

Senator MCKELLAR. Do you know of the superintendent ever making any examination as to H. A. Hunt?

Mr. MYERS. I do not; no. I do not know anything about that.

Senator MCKELLAR. He was supposed to be short in his accounts; was he not?

Mr. MYERS. Well, he was the clerk who looked after the majority of the E. C. W. operations.

Senator MCKELLAR. He was under Mr. Eakin; was he not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Senator MCKELLAR. Do you know whether Mr. Eakin suspended him?

Mr. MYERS. I cannot tell you. It happened just as I got there. He was terminated just a day or two after I arrived in the park, and I do not know the particulars about that now.

Senator MCKELLAR. You say:

"Several excuses were given for mistakes that had been made, the favorite one being to place blame on clerk that was suspended on August 1, 1936."

Is that correct?

Mr. MYERS. That is right; yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. In other words, as I understand, Mr. Myers, you found an intolerable mess of the accounts down there, and whenever you suggested anything about mistakes they laid it on Mr. Hunt. Is that correct?

Mr. MYERS. That is right.

Senator MCKELLAR. Did they also lay any blame on failure to receive information from the Washington office? You say that here in your report, and I am wondering if that is correct.

Mr. MYERS. Well, yes; what I mean there is that when I would call their attention to certain regulations that they were not observing they would say that they had never received any such instructions from the Washington office.

Senator MCKELLAR. I quote from the last paragraph on page 40, in which you say:

"It would appear that anything that was wanted by anybody was purchased regardless of regulations, and then every known means used to get the same paid by the finance officer, giving him answers to his questions that were not borne out by the facts, when he would hold up payment of vouchers for additional information."

Is that statement correct?

Mr. MYERS. That is right; yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. In other words, anything that was wanted at that park insofar as the C. C. C. activities were concerned was purchased, and then they undertook to arrange vouchers for the purchase or reasons for the purchase afterward, as best they could?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir; that is right.

Senator MCKELLAR. Had you ever run across such a condition in any park before, Mr. Myers?

Mr. MYERS. We had some along that line, but not to that extent.

Senator MCKELLAR. Not to that extent?

Mr. MYERS. No.

Senator MCKELLAR. That was the worst that you ever came in contact with?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. How long have you been examining accounts in parks?

Mr. MYERS. At that time I had been in the Service about a year and 4 or 5 months.

Senator MCKELLAR. Have you been in the Service since that time?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. You are in the Service now?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. And according to your views, that was the worst mess of any park you had ever examined?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. Did they pay any attention to the regulations about amounts over $100 being advertised?

Mr. MYERS. During the time that I was auditing, they did not.

Senator MCKELLAR. They did not. Did they pay any attention to buying where they could buy cheapest, namely, under what was known as the naval contract?

Mr. MYERS. You mean oil?

Senator MCKELLAR. Yes, sir.

Mr. MYERS. I found several instances where they bought oil from other companies, instead of buying it from the company that had the naval contract.

Senator MCKELLAR. They could buy it cheaper from the company having the naval contract; could they not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. They paid no attention to that, and bought it from whomsoever they pleased?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. Was that to the Government's interest?

Mr. MYERS. No; it was not, because they paid a higher price for it from the other fellow.

Senator MCKELLAR. Did you talk to the people down there, those in charge of the park with whom you came in contact, and tell them that they were doing wrong, and that they ought to change it?

Mr. MYERS. As I would find things of that kind I would take them up with the chief clerk, Mr. Ray.

Senator MCKELLAR. What is his first name?

Mr. MYERS. Tom Ray. Most of my dealings were with him.

Senator MCKELLAR. Most of your dealings were with Mr. Ray?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. Was he fully advised of these improper dealings of which you speak?

Mr. MYERS. Well, he did not know about them, I would say, until I brought them to his attention.

Senator MCKELLAR. I say, did you give him full knowledge of them?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, yes.

Senator MCKELLAR. You explained them to him fully.

You say:

"While audit was being made several suggestions were made to correct errors as they were discovered, and a later check would disclose that suggestions were not followed out immediately, if at all."

Is that a correct statement?

Mr. MYERS. Yes; it is. What I mean there is that things that I told them to do they did not put into effect at once, as they should have.

Senator MCKELLAR. How was motor oil purchased, and by whom was it purchased?

Mr. MYERS. The Government had a contract with the Sinclair Oil & Refining Co. at that time for furnishing all of the motor oil required by our activities, and all of our departments were supposed to buy their oil under that contract.

Senator MCKELLAR. Did the Park Service buy under that contract?

Mr. MYERS. They bought some of it under the contract, and some they bought in the open market from other companies.

Senator MCKELLAR. How much did they buy in the open market from other companies?

Mr. MYERS. I could not remember now.

Senator MCKELLAR. Did their books disclose how much they had bought?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, yes. You could tell by making an examination. I do not know whether I have in my working papers a schedule of those purchases or not. I cannot tell right now.

Senator MCKELLAR. The same state of affairs was carried on in regard to typewriter rentals; was it not? There were not contracts for typewriter rentals; were there?

Mr. MYERS. I found some rentals for typewriters that were not under contract; how many, I do not recall.

Senator MCKELLAR. The purchase of typewriters was the same way?

Mr. MYERS. Well, they bought a typewriter, and the question there was that they should have asked the Washington office to buy the typewriter for them instead of their buying it themselves.

Senator MCKELLAR. They paid no attention at all to that, and bought it themselves?

Mr. MYERS. During the period I was auditing, you understand, they had bought a typewriter.

Senator MCKELLAR. That is what I mean.

What about service-station deliveries of gasoline? They just bought whenever they wanted to; did they not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes; they were buying gas from service stations, and of course that was not under a contract, either. That was wrong.

Senator MCKELLAR. Photographic equipment, printing of forms, time books, field books, ledgers, daybooks, and columnar journals all were bought in the same way, by whomsoever needed them and without regard to the regulations?

Mr. MYERS. That is right; yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. You say here, in this report:

"Repair parts for automobiles not under TPS contract 7807 and 7808."

What did you mean by that?

Mr. MYERS. There was a contract with the Ford Motor Co. for furnishing repair parts for Ford trucks, and there was a contract with the General Motors Co. for furnishing parts for the Chevrolet trucks. All of the parts for those types of trucks should have been purchased under those contracts.

Senator MCKELLAR. Could they have been purchased cheaper under the contracts?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. But they paid no attention to the contracts, and purchased them during this period wherever they desired?

Mr. MYERS. I found several vouchers that had been paid for repair parts for automobiles that did not specify the TPS contracts on the vouchers.

Senator MCKELLAR. Were those parts purchased at a higher price than under the TPS contracts?

Mr. MYERS. I could not tell you whether they were or not.

Senator MCKELLAR. Take office furniture, desks, drafting tables, stools, steel decks, steel cabinets and steel files, and drafting instruments: How were they purchased—according to regulations or without regard to regulations?

Mr. MYERS. They were not purchased according to our regulations.

Senator MCKELLAR. Were they advertised for where they were over $100?

Mr. MYERS. Well, as near as I can recall, they just went out and bought them in the open market; but I cannot say for sure without referring to my papers.

Senator MCKELLAR. The same thing is true of printed envelopes, and spark plugs in large quantities at double TPS contract price, so you say. That is correct; is it not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. Junk batteries traded in on new batteries, a dozen or more at a time—did you find that?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. And blowtorches traded in on new ones—is that right?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. All of that was against the regulations, was it not?

Mr. MYERS. There was something wrong with the transaction. That is the reason I bring it to the attention of the Department in my report.

Senator MCKELLAR. Does not the kind of purchasing that was done there just open the door to any dishonest official of the Government to make almost what he pleases out of that half-million dollars?

Mr. MYERS. Well, I would not say so, no, because they bought what they needed for the park, but they did not buy it under the regulations. I did not find anything bought that was not really used in the park, anything that I could tell about; but they bought excessive quantities of some things.

Senator MCKELLAR. Are you sure about that? I call your attention to your next paragraph:

"As a great many partly worn-out tires were in several places, instructions were given to have all of these tires placed in one building under lock and key, and when this was done it was found that one abandoned barrack building at Sugarlands was completely filled with worn-out or partly worn-out tires from camps in Tennessee, some of them, in the auditor's opinion, being good tires, showing very little use."

Mr. MYERS. That is right.

Senator MCKELLAR. Is not that right?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. You were tremendously impressed, were you not, with the way in which tires had been bought, and the amounts, and the use of them? It made an impression on you; did it not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. Did you not wonder that they had used tires just for a few days or a few hundred miles on their cars and then discarded them?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. You say, further:

"Further investigation showed that no uniform truck drivers' report system was in effect, showing care of tires as to inflation."

What did that mean?

Mr. MYERS. What I mean was I tried to check down the tires bought and used, to see if they had all been accounted for; and because they did not have a uniform system of truck drivers' reports I could not do it.

Senator MCKELLAR. Mr. Myers, I want to say to you, after having carefully examined this report, that I think you did a splendid job down there in making this examination, and that, as far as I am able to see, if your report had been followed, you probably would have saved an immense amount of money to the Government; and I want to commend you for it. I am not criticizing you in asking you these questions. I am simply trying to get what the facts were as you found them.

I find another statement on page 42, as follows:

"Many purchase orders were issued for batteries of automobiles and trucks, orders being for a dozen, sometimes two dozen, or more at a time."

That is correct?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. Was that necessary in a camp like that?

Mr. MYERS. I could not see, myself, where it was.

Senator MCKELLAR. You further say:

"Here again it was discovered that as no uniform truck drivers' report system was being used, in fact only one camp showed a battery hydrometer on property inventory, so it was impossible for truck drivers to properly test batteries."

In other words, you just were able to get no information at all about this matter?

Mr. MYERS. That was right.

Senator MCKELLAR. It was all done in a harum-scarum manner?

Mr. MYERS. That is right.

Senator MCKELLAR. Who is Mr. A. J. Huff, of Gatlinburg?

Mr. MYERS. He owns the Mountain View Hotel.

Senator MCKELLAR. Mr. Huff is a big man there?

Mr. MYERS. He owns a lot of property; yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. And he owns a number of institutions; does he not? Does he not own the filling station, and the garage, and other things around there?

Mr. MYERS. I do not know whether he owns the filling station and garage, but he owns the hotel and several of the buildings around there.

Senator MCKELLAR. Yes, sir. Did they rent these buildings from Mr. Huff?

Mr. MYERS. The office building that the park office is in and the landscape office are rented from Mr. Huff; yes.

Senator MCKELLAR. How were they rented? Just like any private citizen would rent them, or were they rented by bids?

Mr. MYERS. I could not find where any bids had been received for the rental of any buildings, because there was nobody down there that had any buildings to rent. That is what they told me.

Senator MCKELLAR. How did they fix the value of buildings for rentals; do you know?

Mr. MYERS. I do not; no, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. You say here that one building, approximately 20 feet 2 inches by 16 feet 2 inches, for use as an office for Government employees, was rented for $21 a month, heat and light being furnished. That was just one room?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Senator MCKELLAR. At a little place like Gatlinburg, is not $21 for one room 20 by 16 feet a tremendous price to pay for an office?

Mr. MYERS. I should say it was. That is the reason I referred to it.

Senator MCKELLAR. That was the reason you made that report?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. What was that room made of?

Mr. MYERS. The materials it was built of, you mean?

Senator MCKELLAR. Yes.

Mr. MYERS. It was just a frame building.

Senator MCKELLAR. Just a frame room?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Senator MCKELLAR. Upright planks?

Mr. MYERS. It was ceiled inside with pine ceiling. It was not plastered.

Senator MCKELLAR. It was not plastered; just ceiled. The whole room could have been built for probably $200, could it not?

Mr. MYERS. I do not know, but I should say it would not cost very much.

Senator MCKELLAR. I imagine it could be built at very much less cost than that, and yet the Government was paying $21 a month for it, or $252 a year; and even then the light was not furnished by the lessor, as you state here.

Mr. MYERS. It was at first; and then they made another arrangement of some kind, and it was discontinued after that. I remember something about that now. They changed the lease.

Senator MCKELLAR. I will ask you if this is correct, to refresh your memory, at the bottom of page 42:

"Mr. Huff stated to auditor that at the time an extension was built on to the back of the building to house what is now known as the radio room, he made a verbal agreement with park superintendent that in place of National Park Service paying additional rent to cover the radio room, that it pay for all electric light and power used in the building."

That is corect, I suppose?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir; that is right. That is the way it was.

Senator MCKELLAR. What was the balance of the building—just that room, and a shedroom for the radio room?

Mr. MYERS. Well, there was an entrance room that we paid for in this $21 a month. Then, back of that was another room, the balance of the building, that was paid for out of the regular park funds.

Senator MCKELLAR. And they paid $756 a year for that, did they not?

Mr. MYERS. I cannot recall offhand how much the regular funds paid, now.

Senator MCKELLAR. I will read to you, to refresh your memory, at the top of page 43:

"Rent paid out of regular National Park Service appropriations for balance of building being $42 per month, making total rent for building $63 per month, or $756 per year."

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir; that is right.

Senator MCKELLAR. And that building consisted of these two little rooms?

Mr. MYERS. Well, there was the big room, and then there was—I should say the whole building is about three times the size of this room I mention there, for which we paid $21.

Senator McKELLAR. All of it built out of cheap material and ceiled, with no plastering. What kind of a floor did it have?

Mr. MYERS. An ordinary pine floor.

Senator McKELLAR. The whole thing could have been built for half of $756; could it not?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, no. I should imagine the whole building would cost a couple of thousand dollars, anyway.

Senator McKELLAR. Again you say:

"Contract No. I–23p–748 (E. C. W.): Lessor A. J. Huff, Gatlinburg, Tenn. Dated December 10, 1934. For rent of building located in rear of Mountain View Hotel with 1,156 square feet floor space, containing four rooms and toilet."

Was that the same building?

Mr. MYERS. I imagine it is. As I say, I cannot say without studying it.

Senator McKELLAR (reading):

"For duration of E. C. W. and/or 30 days' notice of either party. Rental $53 per month. Heat and water furnished."

Mr. MYERS. No; that is the building they call the landscape office. That is another building.

Senator McKELLAR. What did they put in that building?

Mr. MYERS. They had the architects in there.

Senator McKELLAR. What use was there for architects in the little town of Gatlinburg, where the principal building was this building?

Mr. MYERS. When I say "architects," I mean all kinds of technicians—the landscape architects and the engineers. Those types of professional men had their offices up there. I do not know just what their work was. That is out of my line entirely and I do not know anything about it.

Senator McKELLAR. What sort of a building was this garage for which you were charged $6 a month?

Mr. MYERS. The garage was up beyond this landscape building, and in there they had room for two automobiles.

Senator McKELLAR. I call your attention to this part of your report, at the bottom of page 43:

"No evidence in file showing (a) that selection of premises determined as result of advertising, and that award was made to lowest bidder, or any showing as to why advertising was dispensed with, and authority therefor."

That was correct; was it?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator McKELLAR (reading):

"(b) That form PSC No. 6 'clearance' was never prepared or submitted.

That is correct?

Mr. MYERS. That is right; yes, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. What does "PSC No. 6 'clearance'" mean?

Mr. MYERS. That is the form that is required wherever a building is rented by the Treasury Department Procurement Division.

Senator McKELLAR. That was not complied with.

"(c) That there ever was submitted a statement showing that no space available in Federal building."

Was there a Federal building there?

Mr. MYERS. There was no building there; but they should have filed a statement to the effect that there was no space available in a Federal building before they rented this other building.

Senator McKELLAR. Now I come to the very important matter of cement contracts. I will read you the first paragraph:

"Contracts ER:1–23p–22, 23, and 24: Invitations were sent on February 28, 1936, for 'Cement in paper bags of 94 lbs. net.' No quantity stated. Volunteer Portland Cement Co., Penn Dixie Cement Corporation, and Southern States Portland Cement Co. all submitted identical bids of $2.49 per barrel, of four paper sacks, in carload lots of not less than 132 barrels. The above three mentioned firms were equal low bidders, a fourth bidder was 5 cents per barrel higher.

"On these three bids, under the same invitation, three contracts were awarded for a carload of 132 barrels, viz: A contract with Volunteer for 132 barrels, one with Penn Dixie for 132 barrels, and one with Southern States for 132 barrels."

What have you to say about that transaction?

Mr. MYERS. That was an irregular contract procedure that was followed there. That is what I am talking about.

Senator McKELLAR. What was the proper procedure?

Mr. MYERS. They should have advertised, should have shown in their invitation first how much cement they wanted to buy. They did not do that. Then, when they awarded the contracts, they bought three carloads from three different contractors, whereas, if their invitation had been properly sent out for three carloads, they would have then bought it from the one contractor after the award had been made by drawing lots, if they were all equal bidders.

Senator McKELLAR. It appears that there was only one carload advertised for.

Mr. MYERS. They did not advertise for a carload. They advertised for one sack, according to the invitation, if I remember right.

Senator McKELLAR. I suppose the representatives of these three companies were nice men, and Mr. Eakin just thought that he would be kind and gentle and good-natured and generous with all three who had bid exactly the same price, and he would just give each one of them a carload order. Do you know whether they needed three carloads or not?

Mr. MYERS. I do not know offhand what they used the cement for. They were doing a lot of road work there. It was probably used in bridges or something around there. They may have wanted three carloads when they sent out their invitation, but they did not say so. That is the point I am talking about.

Senator McKELLAR. Did you look it up? Was this cement paid for? Did you find receipts for it, or what did you find about it?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, it was paid for; yes. All three carloads were paid for.

Senator McKELLAR. Did you find whether it was ever delivered? Do you know whether it was delivered? Could you tell by any books or papers that the cement was ever delivered?

Mr. MYERS. I could not say offhand now whether I checked into that particular delivery or not. On account of the condition of their records, I could not tell whether there were receipts for all of the material that was bought or not. In some cases there were receipts there, and again there would not be; so I cannot tell now which was which.

Senator McKELLAR. I quote again:

"Contract ER: I–23p–28 (E. C. W.), dated March 17, 1936, with Volunteer Portland Cement Co. for $414.38: Three equal low acceptable bids were received. Award was made to concern nearest park instead of by lot, following justification being stated on statement of award: 'but it would result in increased cost to split the award, and due to the fact that it would also result in delay and cost to Government to request that representatives of these companies draw lots for award——'"

What does that mean?

Mr MYERS. What I am speaking about there is that they evidently did not understand the correct contract procedure in a case of that kind.

Senator McKELLAR. In splitting contracts in that way, their evident purpose was to avoid Washington office disapproval, was it not?

Mr. MYERS. Well, if the total contract exceeded $1,000 it had to be sent here to Washington for approval. I do not know whether that particular case you are speaking about comes under that or not. That was only $414, you said?

Senator McKELLAR. $414.38.

Mr. MYERS. In that particular case it was not necessary to send it to the Washington office for approval; no.

Senator McKELLAR. What about the following:

"The following contracts were made with Tennessee Metal Culvert Co.: No. I–23p–800, accepted May 28, 1935, for $904.36. No. I–23p–801, accepted May 29, 1935, for $919.20. Purchase order No. 653 dated May 27, 1935, covers contract No. 800, and purchase order No. 655, dated May 19, 1935, covers contract No. 801. Invoice for contract No. 800 dated May 28, 1935, invoice for contract No. 801 dated May 31, 1935. Both contracts for metal culvert pipe for delivery to NP–2 Sugarlands. No copies of any rejected bids in file. Fast work for contracting for and delivery of $1,823.56 of metal culvert pipe."

What did you think of that contract?

Mr. MYERS. I said in the report, I think, everything that I think about it.

Senator McKELLAR. You put a question mark by it here. That is the reason I asked you what you thought about it. It looks as though they were trying to avoid having to come to Washington to get approval; does it not?

Mr. MYERS. That is what I bring that forward for, because it looks like that.

Senator McKELLAR. One of them is $919, and the other is $904. Does it not look as though that was made into two contracts merely for the purpose of avoiding having to come to Washington for approval?

Mr. MYERS. That is what it looked like to me; yes.

Senator McKELLAR. Is that an honest way of conducting the Government's business?

Mr. MYERS. No; it is irregular, and that is the reason I called it to the attention of the Department.

Senator McKELLAR. Who approved these contracts?

Mr. MYERS. They were accepted, I suppose, by either Mr. Eakin or Mr. White.

Senator McKELLAR. Who is Mr. White?

Mr. MYERS. He is the assistant superintendent.

Senator McKELLAR. The contract had to be approved by one or both of them?

Mr. MYERS. It had to be accepted by them.

Senator McKELLAR. And both are responsible for it, of course?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Senator McKELLAR. I next come to "Contract I–23p–756 (E. C. W.) with Carolina Auto Parts Co. for vulcanizing tires, amount of contract $498.75." I stop long enough to ask, ought not that to have been advertised for, where they made a contract for over $100?

Mr. MYERS. It should have been advertised for; yes.

Senator McKELLAR (reading):

"Amount of contract, $498.75, and '143 old tires with more than four injuries,' no amount mentioned as consideration for old tires."

Was that a regular transaction, or an irregular one?

Mr. MYERS. That was irregular.

Senator McKELLAR. If a Government agent were allowed to transact the Government's business in that way, it would just open the door to all kinds of wrongdoing, would it not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. And that is why you referred to it?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. That is not an honest method of dealing with the Government's business, is it?

Mr. MYERS. I should say it was irregular, contrary to all the laws and regulations.

Senator MCKELLAR. Is not that dishonest, when it is contrary to all the Government laws and regulations? You would consider it so, would you not?

Mr. MYERS. Well, I would not say it was dishonest. I would say the man that was doing it should have known better.

Senator MCKELLAR. He did not advertise the contract, and he had no right to give the Government's property in trade, or in part trade, had he?

Mr. MYERS. No; he did not.

Senator MCKELLAR. There are regular laws and rules and regulations by which Government-used property can be sold?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. And those were not complied with, were they?

Mr. MYERS. That is right.

Senator MCKELLAR. I hope your mind has gone back to these transactions enough to tell me what was the trouble about teams and horses as you found it there, in your own language. It seems that they rented teams and horses. What was the trouble about that?

Mr. MYERS. We had a regulation requiring that all teams be rented under contract, and they did not do that, if I recall right. We had another way of doing it in the national parks, which was to have their rates approved by the Secretary of the Interior once a year; and they did not do that.

Senator MCKELLAR. They just went out and rented horses and teams and wagons at will, just as you said in the beginning; anybody who wanted anything just went out and got it, and then got it paid for as best he could?

Mr. MYERS. A lot of times they would not know about it, I guess, until the bill would show up for the obligation.

Senator MCKELLAR. And then they would have to get a justification for it, if they could?

Mr. MYERS. That is right.

Senator MCKELLAR. And if they could not get a justification, they left nothing there that you could find as to what had happened; did they? The books were not kept in such a way that you could find them?

Mr. MYERS. The substantiating papers were not always there to show.

Senator MCKELLAR. Four dollars and forty cents a day was a reasonable amount for teams?

Mr. MYERS. Four dollars and forty cents a day for a team?

Senator MCKELLAR. Yes.

Mr. MYERS. That was, I think, down there, considering what they paid to other people.

Senator MCKELLAR. What about advertising and issuing invitations? Did they carry out the regulations about that?

Mr. MYERS. Do you mean for everything?

Senator MCKELLAR. The report says: "Advertising and issuing invitations."

I suppose you mean issuing invitations to bid?

Mr. MYERS. That is right.

Senator MCKELLAR. The regulations were not followed in reference to those things?

Mr. MYERS. What I mean there is that they did not advertise for the team rental, I suppose, the way they should have done under the regulations.

Senator MCKELLAR. Did they pay any attention to the law or the rules and regulations in purchases in excess of $100 not covered by contracts?

Mr. MYERS. As I recall now, there were several instances where they had bought in excess of $100 at one time without complying with the regulations. I cannot state offhand how many of those there were.

Senator MCKELLAR. What about travel vouchers? Did you find a good many irregularities as to travel vouchers?

Mr. MYERS. Yes; there were several in that respect.

Senator MCKELLAR. Your report says that travel orders were issued to persons in the employ of the Government to pay for going to and from various places in Tennessee, North and South Carolina, and Georgia. That is correct; is it not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. All outside of the limits of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. Was any reason given for it?

Mr. MYERS. Well, I could not understand, under the regulations, where the park superintendent had authority to issue that type of travel orders, because the regulations provided that he was permitted to issue travel orders for the area comprising Great Smoky Mountains National Park, and I did not consider Georgia a part of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

Senator MCKELLAR. Neither was Virginia or South Carolina; was it?

Mr. MYERS. No.

Senator MCKELLAR. I call your attention to this part of your report:

"A great many travel orders were issued showing Bryson City, N. C., as headquarters, whereas official headquarters of traveler was one of the camps within the park area several miles from Bryson City in North Carolina."

Is that correct?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR (reading):

"Travel orders were issued by Washington office, dated May 1, 1935, to Gordon G. Bruce, George A. MacPherson, Francis R. McGovern, and John B. Quinn, for travel by personal car from Luray, Va., to Gatlinburg, Tenn. (permanent change of station). Paragraph D of all these travel orders was deleted by crossing out the portion of paragraph from 'the amount' to 'mentioned above.' Above change not initialed on park office copy; at the bottom was inserted 'Justification: It is determined to be more economical and advantageous to the Government for you to use your personal car at a mileage rate that will not exceed cost by common carrier.'"

What have you to say about that?

Mr. MYERS. The point I am bringing out there is that the travel order was not properly made out according to the regulations.

Senator MCKELLAR. You go on to say:

"Travel vouchers submitted by Bruce, McGovern, and Quinn each asked reimbursements for use of personal car on mileage basis of 478 miles at 5 cents per mile, $23.90."

What is there in that proposition?

Mr. MYERS. The point I am bringing out there is that they were not paid for their travel in keeping with the travel order.

Senator MCKELLAR. You further say:

"Travel orders for clerks, project superintendents, foremen, and enrollees, whose official duties per appointment do not require travel, do not show justification for travel authorized."

That was true; was it not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. That is dishonest; is it not?

Mr. MYERS. Well, I do not know. I could not tell why they were traveling. There was no justification for it.

Senator MCKELLAR. Was there ever any explanation made for it by anybody who received the travel pay?

Mr. MYERS. I cannot recall offhand now. I did go into it, but I cannot tell you offhand now just what the answer was.

Senator MCKELLAR. I quote again at the bottom of page 47:

"Examination of travel vouchers would give auditor the impression that all travelers were not making deductions for lodgings furnished free of charge at camps, as vouchers plainly show traveler at camp over night, but no deduction made for free lodging, and statement made that no lodgings furnished free of charge, and of course it was based on this statement that finance officer paid vouchers as submitted."

Is that correct?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. That is dishonest—clearly so.

Mr. MYERS. Well, if they understood what they were doing, it certainly was.

Senator MCKELLAR. Has it not been your experience in life that where men are taking money that does not belong to them, they usually understand what they are doing?

Mr. MYERS. In this particular case, though, the case of these fellows that would travel, it would be understood that they were going to get $4 a day for their per diem while they were out; and they did not know, a lot of them, maybe, that they were not entitled to that when they stayed at the camps.

Senator MCKELLAR. Listen to this:

"Several travel vouchers were paid to Emergency Conservation Work clerks in park office, and supervising mechanics, that have the appearance of Federal Government paying for employees' pleasure trips."

Mr. MYERS. It did look like that; yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. I continue:

"For example, Emergency Conservation Work clerks in Gatlinburg office being paid for per diem on trips to Knoxville, Tenn., showing leaving headquarters (Gatlinburg) after 4:30 p. m. (office closing time) for Knoxville, Tenn., remaining in Knoxville (a distance of 40 miles from Gatlinburg) overnight, and leaving there the next morning at 7 a. m., arriving Gatlinburg at 8 a. m. Another example was supervising mechanic leaving Bryson City, N. C., at 7:30 p. m., ariving at Knoxville 11:15 p. m., and leaving Knoxville at 6 a. m. next morning, arriving at Bryson City at 9:45 a. m. This party's headquarters was Smokemont, N. C., several miles from Bryson City, N. C. He spent a great many evenings in Knoxville, Tenn., and Asheville, N. C., arriving at these places after regular closing hours for all kinds of official business, and leaving the next morning before opening hours, and collected per diem for the time away from official station."

That is correct, is it not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. That is dishonest, is it not?

Mr. MYERS. That is irregular in every respect; yes.

Senator MCKELLAR. And you did not uphold it. You put it in this report for the purpose of stopping it if you could; did you not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. Are those employees still working for Mr. Eakin down there?

Mr. MYERS. I could not tell you offhand who they are.

Senator MCKELLAR. Do you know who they are? Do you remember their names?

Mr. MYERS. This clerk that was suspended——

Senator MCKELLAR. Was he one of them?

Mr. MYERS. He was one of them.

Senator MCKELLAR. Who was the other one?

Mr. MYERS. As I say, offhand I cannot tell you. I know their supervising mechanic that you talked about, Mr. Abbott, is dead. He died last fall.

Senator MCKELLAR. Well, we cannot do anything with him.

Mr. MYERS. No. I found out afterward that there was a mistake in one of his travel vouchers; that he had "p. m." down there where he should have had "a. m."

Senator MCKELLAR. I call your attention to another statement on page 48:

"Travel orders were issued, and per diem paid thereon, to various parties whose official duties placed them in travel status, who would leave official headquarters, either Bryson City, N. C., or Gatlinburg, Tenn., between 7 and 10 a. m., traveling to places within park or points in vicinity, returning to official headquarters early in the evening."

That was a very corrupt practice, was it not?

Mr. MYERS. It was not right; no. We did not want them to do that, and we wanted them to stop it.

Senator MCKELLAR. Have you stopped it down there?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, yes. I think the last time I was down there I found one or two instances of that kind.

Senator MCKELLAR. Did Mr. Eakin bring these men before him and tell them that they must stop that kind of practice?

Mr. MYERS. I do not know.

Senator MCKELLAR. Did he dismiss anybody for indulging in that kind of petty thievery?

Mr. MYERS. Not that I know of.

Senator MCKELLAR. But the Chief Clerk did say that the Washington office was furnished with copies of all travel orders issued by the park superintendent, did he not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Senator MCKELLAR. Did they ever get any acknowledgment of receipt by the Washington office?

Mr. MYERS. No; they did not acknowledge receipt of them. He would just mail them down to them.

Senator MCKELLAR. Just to be perfectly plain about it, this travel-order system that you found in vogue down there was just petty thievery, was it not, getting so much for travel on trips into Knoxville and into Asheville and into other towns?

Mr. MYERS. I could not say that it was petty thievery. It did not look right to me, and that is the reason why I put it in my report.

Senator MCKELLAR. I think you were exactly right.

You have a page and a half here about the audit of bills of lading. What does that mean? Can you tell me in a word what that means?

Mr. MYERS. As I recall now, bills of lading had not been properly handled, and it was necessary to spend quite a lot of time trying to find out whether they had encumbered on their records the correct charges for transportation shown by the bill of lading.

Senator MCKELLAR. What do you mean by "encumbered"—written up in the office?

Mr. MYERS. That is, taken up on their records.

Senator MCKELLAR. Put on their records.

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Senator MCKELLAR. And the same thing is true of shipping tickets?

Mr. MYERS. The packing and handling charges on shipping tickets were not properly handled.

Senator MCKELLAR (reading): "Audit of pay rolls."

You say: "Very few 'paid' copies of pay rolls in park files."

Without those, you could not audit the pay rolls, could you?

Mr. MYERS. No.

Senator MCKELLAR. What you have to say about that here is correct?

Mr. MYERS. That is right.

Senator MCKELLAR. And you found it irregular and improper, and you did not approve it?

Mr. MYERS. Whatever I put in the report was something that I considered irregular, and I wanted to call it to the attention of the Washington office.

Senator MCKELLAR. Do you know what the Washington office ever did with this report after it was received?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, yes; there was quite a lengthy letter written to the superintendent, and I was furnished with a copy of it.

Senator MCKELLAR. Can you send me a copy of the letter from the office here?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, yes.

Senator MCKELLAR. I know Mr. Burlew will get it. Would you mind sending it down, please?

Mr. MYERS. I will ask Mr. Burlew to do so.

Senator MCKELLAR. At this point, while it is on my mind, I should like to have you get a copy of that letter and copies of any correspondence that may have been had regarding your report.

Mr. MYERS. Excuse me for interrupting you, but I understood yesterday in talking with Colonel White that you had been furnished with all of that.

Senator MCKELLAR. It may have come in. I will look it up and see. I believe there is a subsequent letter here, and I must look it up. I want also the two subsequent reports that you made. You were down there in the latter part of 1937 and the latter part of 1938, and made a report in each case.

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. And if any letters have been written about that, I should like to have them.

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. What about the allotment ledgers? I do not understand just exactly what you mean by that.

Mr. MYERS. The allotment ledger is their regular book where they keep track of their obligations.

Senator MCKELLAR. Were they kept properly?

Mr. MYERS. Not during the period I was auditing.

Senator MCKELLAR. I notice you say:

"These errors amounted to $238.47 plus on Tennessee camps, and $406.37 plus on North Carolina camps, and were never adjusted."

Mr. MYERS. I do not know just what you are referring to.

Senator MCKELLAR. I am reading from page 53.

Mr. MYERS. Yes; but I mean, what comes before that probably tells the story.

Senator MCKELLAR. It is under the general title of "Allotment ledgers." You do not know what that means? Anyhow, if you said they were short in their money, they were short?

Mr. MYERS. It was evidently errors that I found in checking over their records that I had them make adjustments for, I imagine.

Senator MCKELLAR. Under the head of "Schedule of unliquidated encumbrances" you say:

"When audit of allotment ledgers of FD 1670 funds was completed, an attempt was made to check this schedule so prepared against open items on allotment ledgers, but without success, as it contained items that had been paid several months before it was prepared, and did not contain several items that were unpaid as shown by allotment ledgers."

That is correct, is it?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. That is not a proper way of managing the Government's business?

Mr. MYERS. No, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. You say here:

"A great many items are believed by auditor to have been paid, but supporting papers showing such payment were either lost, misplaced, or never received from finance officer."

That is correct?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR (reading):

"Attached as exhibit B is 'Schedule of unliquidated encumbrances' for FD 1670 funds, so found by auditor, totaling $9,809.04, which amount is the difference between 'authorized' and 'liquidated' encumbrances, after all auditor's adjustments have been made."

That is $9,809.04 that has not been accounted for, is it not?

Mr. MYERS. No; that is the amount of obligations that they had incurred that had not been paid or liquidated at the date I closed the audit. That is what I mean.

Senator MCKELLAR. It does not mean that they were short that much?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, no.

Senator MCKELLAR. You say:

"Purchasing office, Department of Interior, $6,456.96: On June 1, 1935, an entry was made for $9,100 covering estimated cost of tentage being purchased for park through Washington office."

Mr. MYERS. Yes; I remember that now.

Senator MCKELLAR. That was a defalcation, was it not?

Mr. MYERS. No. They were authorized, I guess, to purchase the tents. What I am talking about there is that they had not gone ahead and followed through the transaction and cleared it up on their records.

Senator MCKELLAR. You say:

"Very little was known about the details of this transaction, except in a general way, as the matter had been handled by H. A. Hunt, clerk, suspended August 1, 1936."

Hunt was suspended for dishonesty, was he not?

Mr. MYERS. I believe it was for using some Government gas in his automobile. I think that is what the charges were. I am not so sure, but I believe that was it.

Senator MCKELLAR. Was not everybody else doing it at the same time?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, no; not in their own personal cars. He was using Government gas in his personal car, if I recall.

Senator MCKELLAR. Did he ever make it good, or was any effort made to make it good?

Mr. MYERS. I do not know.

Senator MCKELLAR. Do you know how much gas there was?

Mr. MYERS. No; I do not.

Senator MCKELLAR. You could not tell from the books?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, no.

Senator MCKELLAR. Here are a lot of contracts with the Fulton Bag & Cotton Mills and various other concerns—one for $1,486.98, another one for $1,210, another one for $3,559.98, another one for $2,230.55; and then you say:

"The above contracts evidently cover the estimated encumbrance of $9,100, as they cover all items in Invitation No. 655 (PJB) dated April 29, 1935."

But there is a difference, leaving a balance of $6,456.96. That was a strange transaction for you to find there, was it not?

Mr. MYERS. What I am talking about there, as I recall, is a lot of tents that were purchased, and an estimated amount was encumbered to cover the cost of them, and then they did not follow through to get the paid vouchers recorded on their books and liquidate the balance of the encumbrance. They got all the tents, I found out, but they did not properly report them on their records.

Senator MCKELLAR. The tents cost about $6,000, and they put them on their books at $9,100?

Mr. MYERS. No; I think they estimated, when they ordered them, that they would cost $9,100. Just what they did cost I cannot tell you, but something less than that.

Senator MCKELLAR. Were they advertised for?

Mr. MYERS. I think they were purchased from Government departments. No; they were purchased under a Government contract made here in Washington. That was the way it was.

Senator MCKELLAR. Did you ever get copies of the paid vouchers, or could you make head or tail of this transaction?

Mr. MYERS. I finally got that transaction all straightened out over a period of time. I had to correspond with different finance officers and different officers, but I was able to get that cleared up. There was nothing particularly wrong about it after we got it cleared up.

Senator MCKELLAR. What about the cost records?

Mr. MYERS. The cost records during the time that I was auditing there were in very bad shape. They were not kept up in accordance with the ledgers.

Senator MCKELLAR. Now I come to a transaction on page 57. You say:

Total funds allotted		$533,145.00
Less type-mapping allotments		19,127.00
Total allotments for work program		514,018.00
Less balance unexpended (adjusted)		602.95
Total to be accounted for		513,415.05
Cost reported:
Fifth period	$175,589.98
Sixth period	149,242.10
First half seventh period	56,542.35
Total costs reported		381,374.43
Unaccounted for		132,040.62

Did they ever account for that money, that $132,000?

Mr. MYERS. That means that they did not take up on their cost records $132,040 worth of expenses that they had paid out.

Senator MCKELLAR. Does not that mean that they had $513,415.05 of Government money to be expended, but when you came to find their vouchers and receipts you found only $381,374.43; is not that right?

Mr. MYERS. No; that is not right.

Senator MCKELLAR. What is right?

Mr. MYERS. I found the vouchers eventually for the $513,000, but their cost records where they distributed those disbursements totaled three-hundred-and-some-odd thousand, whatever it is.

Senator MCKELLAR. $381,374.43.

Mr. MYERS. In other words, they had not posted to their cost records all of their disbursements.

Senator MCKELLAR. Then you have nothing to show for that difference of $132,000, have you? Their books do not show where it went?

Mr. MYERS. Their cost records do not show. There are two sets of books. There are the cost records, and there is the allotment ledger.

Senator MCKELLAR. The allotment ledgers just show what they had to pay out and what they have paid out. Is not that right?

Mr. MYERS. The allotment ledgers show, for instance, in this case, that $513,000 was paid out.

Senator MCKELLAR. Yes.

Mr. MYERS. Now, the cost records are a different set of records entirely.

Senator MCKELLAR. The cost records show what that was paid out for; do they not?

Mr. MYERS. What jobs it was charged to.

Senator MCKELLAR. There is a discrepancy of $132,040.62, and nobody on earth could tell from these books where that $132,000 was?

Mr. MYERS. You could not tell what jobs it was properly chargeable to.

Senator MCKELLAR. If you could not tell what jobs it was properly charged to, there is no record of it, is there? In other words, suppose a man on one job had $40,000. He might have spent $30,000 and put the other $10,000 in his pocket so far as the cost record was concerned?

Mr. MYERS. No; that does not mean that. For instance, down there they had a big pay roll at the office, what they call a detached pay roll, and that detached pay roll was not spread over the jobs that were being worked on in the park. I found that that was part of the cause for the difference, but I could not prove it up to the penny. I did not know where it all went.

Senator MCKELLAR. I will give you your explanation of it, as given on page 57:

"As the above-mentioned 'unaccounted for' represents, roughly, 25 percent of the total to be accounted for, this matter was discussed with Mr. Spillers"—

Mr. Spillers was the engineer?

Mr. MYERS. He was the engineer keeping the record.

Senator MCKELLAR (reading):

"and he advised that during the fifth period (April 1 to September 30, 1935), the 'detached pay roll' was not included in the supervision reported on the monthly cost reports. The detached pay roll for this period amounted to $17,259. Further discussion with Mr. Spillers disclosed that expenditures for equipment appearing on allotment ledgers were not included in costs reported. As stated above, it was impossible, without an endless amount of work to ascertain just what items are included in the cost reported."

That was correct?

Mr. MYERS. That is right; yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. You thought this was such an unusual circumstance that you ought to talk to Mr. Spillers, the general engineer who had charge of the books, did you not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. And you called his attention to this unaccounted-for amount of $132,040.62, did you not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. And when you did that, he said there was a detached pay roll that would account for it, and when that was brought in, it was $17,259. Is that right?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. If you deduct $17,259 from $132,040.62, it leaves $114,781.62. They never did find any detached or other pay rolls that accounted for that difference, did they?

Mr. MYERS. Well, as I say, they would just tell me of items that they did not include. They did not prove it up to me.

Senator MCKELLAR. You had to take their word for it. They did not prove it up to you, did they?

Mr. MYERS. Mr. Spillers' cost records were in such shape that I could not determine what amounts he had included and what amounts he had left out.

Senator MCKELLAR. So far as the records show—as this record shows—Mr. Spillers accounted for only $17,259 of that unaccounted-for fund; did he not? That is all he accounted for?

Mr. MYERS. Well, as I say, he told me about other things, but he did not show me the amount.

Senator MCKELLAR. Here was $132,000 unaccounted for. You thought it was of such moment that you submitted it to Mr. Spillers and demanded an explanation from him, as a good auditor, did you not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. And when you submitted it to him, he gave you vouchers on what he called a detached account of $17,259, did he not?

Mr. MYERS. That, as I recall now, was the only specific amount that he pointed out.

Senator MCKELLAR. He told you about other amounts, but he did not get you any other vouchers to show for them, did he?

Mr. MYERS. As I say, the records were in such shape that if he had, it would not have done me a whole lot of good.

Senator MCKELLAR. It would not have done any good.

You go on to make a most remarkable statement here. I want to read it to you:

"The auditors, while at NP–2 Sugarlands, had the camp clerk show them just how he compiled the data set forth in monthly cost reports, and after thoroughly going into the matter, and looking over the working papers submitted by camp clerk, the auditors were of the opinion that the methods used were far from accurate and could readily see where 25 percent of actual expenditures were overlooked, and never discovered any place along the line."

That is correct, is it not?

Mr. MYERS. That is right; yes.

Senator MCKELLAR. Is that the way the Government's business ought to be transacted, Mr. Myers?

Mr. MYERS. We have changed that method. The Park Service has changed that way of reporting those costs since then.

Senator MCKELLAR. Yes; but what about those responsible for it at that time? Was not that about the loosest piece of business that ever you saw?

Mr. MYERS. There was not a whole lot of attention paid to the cost records back in those days.

Senator MCKELLAR. Not only that, but there was not a whole lot of attention paid to the Government's business back in those days at that camp, was there?

Mr. MYERS. Well, they had their own way of doing it. They thought they were doing it right, but they were not.

Senator MCKELLAR. How could they think they were doing it right when they could not account for 25 percent of an enormous sum like $513,000? It is pretty hard to stretch the imagination to think that is right, is it not?

Mr. MYERS. Well, the way they did things out there, I can see, from my experience, where it was possible to do that.

Senator MCKELLAR. And still be honest?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Senator MCKELLAR. Where they went out and bought what they pleased, at any price they pleased, without regard to regulations, and used every hook and crook possible to get the officials to approve it afterward—you do not think that was correct, do you?

Mr. MYERS. No; it was not right.

Senator MCKELLAR. It was not right. You do not believe there could be any accuracy in a system of that sort, do you?

Mr. MYERS. Well, whatever they bought went into the park.

Senator MCKELLAR. It might or might not. You have not any record to show it.

Mr. MYERS. I mean, in what I checked into that was irregular, that I am speaking about, there in that part you quote from the report, they did not comply with the regulations and the laws that had been laid down for them; and when they found that out, then they had to do everything they could to get the bill paid.

Senator McKELLAR. Yes. In other words, suppose I had been Mr. Hunt, and I had the Government pay for all my trips to Knoxville. At the same time, under the system here, if I had wanted to do it, I could have bought cars and sold them, and committed almost any other thievery at the hands of the Government, and covered it up, could I not, under that system?

Mr. MYERS. They could have done a lot of irregular business there.

Senator McKELLAR. Yes, sir. Now, about these reimbursable collections—what do you mean by "Reimbursable collections," on page 58?

Mr. MYERS. "Reimbursable collections," in our accounting, mean items, say, for instance, like a man had been overpaid, and he had to refund the amount. The reporting of that refund on the records is called a reimbursable collection.

Senator McKELLAR. Here is one from the Standard Oil Co., the first one, $991.67. Did you find that on the books?

Mr. MYERS. I do not recall, now, the transaction, just what it is.

Senator McKELLAR (reading):

"In safe at park office was check dated August 31, 1936, from Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, for $991.67. Chief Clerk stated, as reason for holding check instead of sending through for deposit, it was necessary to ascertain finance officer's voucher numbers for original payments, and due to files being used in audit was unable to do this. This check covers refund of 2 cents a gallon on gasoline purchased under contract I-23p-672 ECW and paid during the months of May and June 1935."

And yet he had held that check for 15 months?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, no. The purchase was made in 1935, but I do not know what the date of the refund check was.

Senator McKELLAR. The date of the refund check is given as August 31, 1936, and you were making this report in 1937.

Mr. MYERS. But I was auditing there from August 1936 to November 1936.

Senator McKELLAR. Why should that refund check be held by the man at all?

Mr. MYERS. It is necessary, before you send a check through for deposit by the finance officer, in a case of that kind, to show him, or advise him, the voucher number and the month in which he paid the original amount, before he will accept the check and give you a clearance on it. They did not have time to do that, or did not have the records to do it with, due to the fact that I was using the records in the audit; and they kept the check in the safe in the meanwhile.

Senator McKELLAR. Why would H. A. Hunt hold a check of $30. You thought the handling of these reimbursable checks was highly irregular, did you not?

Mr. MYERS. The reason I wanted to call their attention to that check in the safe was that that was something that should have been recorded during the period that I was auditing, and I did not want it to be overlooked by the next auditor.

Senator McKELLAR. Here is "Sale of worn-out tires and tubes $300.50." What ever became of that money?

Mr. MYERS. I do not recall the transaction, unless you read me the facts about it.

Senator McKELLAR (reading):

"During course of audit it was discovered that tires and tubes had been sold from time to time."

That is irregular, in itself, is it not?

Mr. MYERS. No; they sell them. They advertise for bids and sell them.

Senator McKELLAR. Did they advertise for bids?

Mr. MYERS. I do not believe they did in this case. I do not know.

Senator McKELLAR. They just sold them from time to time. [Continues reading:]

"Inquiry was made, and information furnished by Chief Clerk that all such collections were handled through the regular channels for park funds, being deposited to "Miscellaneous receipts." A schedule was furnished auditor containing information as to the sale of 1,305 tires and tubes between September 24, 1935, and April 17, 1936, to 9 different contractors, together with deposit number and date, the total of these sales amounting to $330.50."

If 1,305 tires and tubes were sold for a total of $330.50, that is approximately 23 cents apiece. Does not that look strange to you?

Mr. MYERS. Yes; there were some of them that looked to me as if they did not get enough for them. I think there were some of them as low as 10 cents apiece. I am not so sure now; but they were advertised.

Senator McKELLAR. To whom were they sold?

Mr. MYERS. I believe in those cases they advertised for bids and awarded it to the highest bidder. I believe that was done.

Senator McKELLAR. Did Mr. Hunt or Mr. Eakin buy them?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, no; they were sold to vulcanizing concerns, somebody that wanted to buy or that dealt in used tires.

Senator McKELLAR. You next take up a number of things—unascertained liability for failure to return oil barrels; refunds by railroads for freight picked up by Government; Government-owned automobiles; work on equipment for other governmental agencies; auditor's adjustments; FD 570 funds; FD 870 funds.

You then go on and discuss them. You thought there were irregularities in regard to all of them?

Mr. MYERS. There was something about them that I had to bring to the attention of the Washington office.

Senator McKELLAR. Do you know whether the Washington office ever took any steps about them?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, yes; in that letter I spoke about.

Senator McKELLAR. That is the only thing.

Then you go on to say, on page 63:

"From the above it will be noted that there is a balance of $6,231.72 of unliquidated encumbrances. No schedule of these obtainable, as chief clerk stated none was ever prepared."

Did you ever get that $6,231.72?

Mr. MYERS. That is their unpaid obligations, according to their allotment ledger, against—I suppose that is the FD 870 funds.

Senator McKELLAR. What is "FD 870 funds"?

Mr. MYERS. That is the total of the procurement authority under which they got their allotment.

Senator McKELLAR. I call your particular attention to your certificate on page 63:

"I hereby certify that, based upon the records and supporting papers examined, and information and explanations obtained, subject to the scope of the examination and the comments thereon, the obligations and disbursements for those transactions reviewed were proper and in accordance with the regulations of Emergency Conservation Work, except as otherwise stated in above-mentioned report."

The fact is that while that certificate is literally true, and, of course, I do not question it, you did not find in your splendid examination of this activity down at the Great Smoky Mountains Park any part of it done in a regular manner, did you?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, yes; there were some transactions that were regular; oh, yes.

Senator McKELLAR. What ones were they?

Mr. MYERS. Well, I could not tell you.

Senator McKELLAR. You do not mention them here.

Mr. MYERS. I do not talk about the ones that are regular. I talk about the ones that are irregular.

Senator McKELLAR. Do you not talk about every phase of the business in this report? On pages 39 to 63, inclusive, of this report you discuss practically every phase of that activity down there, do you not?

Mr. MYERS. I discuss every phase of it, but not all of the transactions within the different phases. There were monthly pay rolls that were paid every month. They were all right. Everybody was properly appointed. They did their work, but maybe the paid copy was not in the files the way it should have been. They had sent the paid copy on to Washington. They had not requested a paid copy for their file. That pay roll was all right.

Senator McKELLAR. But all the irregularities and discrepancies that you recite in this report were there, and they took place just as you reported them?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, yes, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. And I believe you said a while ago that in all your work on parks—and it has been over a period of how many years?

Mr. MYERS. Four years.

Senator McKELLAR. Four years—that this is the worst accounting you have come across anywhere?

Mr. MYERS. That is right; yes, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. And that is absolutely indefensible, is it not? It was absolutely indefensible, was it not?

Mr. MYERS. Well, as I say, I do not know of any other case like it.

Senator McKELLAR. Any sensible man, any man with good, hard common sense, whether he could keep books or not, would not have allowed to go on in that park what you found there, would he?

Mr. MYERS. Well, they claim that there were circumstances that caused it, by this clerk being sent down there that was not able to do the work, and they had all kinds of confidence in him.

Senator McKELLAR. Was he sent down from Washington?

Mr. MYERS. He was sent down to them from Washington.

Senator McKELLAR. And during the entire time of your accounting down there—amounting to how many months?——

Mr. MYERS. I was there at that time 4 months.

Senator McKELLAR. About 4 months—their constant cry, in answer to all these irregularities was that Mr. Hunt, who had been discharged, was responsible for it?

Mr. MYERS. He was given as the excuse in, I should say, 75 percent of the cases.

Senator McKELLAR. Did he do 75 percent of the work down there? Were there not many other clerks?

Mr. MYERS. Well, from what they told you, it looked as if he did everything.

Senator McKELLAR. Mr. Myers, in a letter dated June 2, 1937, Mr. Eakin says:

"There were also extenuating circumstances in many instances which were explained to the auditors; but from their abusive attitude and threats at times when the audit was trying, it was expected that no quarter would be given, and sufficient justification for their extended visit would be recorded."

Did you or your associates abuse Mr. Eakin?

Mr. MYERS. No; in fact, I did not talk to Mr. Eakin except a very few times. I did not discuss anything with him except when I was getting ready to leave the park.

Senator McKELLAR. Did you abuse other officials there?

Mr. MYERS. I do not know what they are talking about. No; we did not.

Senator McKELLAR. You do not look to me like a man who would abuse another one without reason.

Mr. MYERS. We do not do that in auditing. I do not know what they are talking about.

Senator McKELLAR. Did you threaten them?

Mr. MYERS. No.

Senator MCKELLAR. Did you assume an abusive attitude toward them?

Mr. MYERS. We might have gotten into an argument about whether we were right or wrong and had arguments; but——

Senator MCKELLAR. You did not abuse them or threaten them with anything?

Mr. MYERS. No; I do not know what they are talking about.

(Thereupon, at 1 p. m., the subcommittee adjourned until tomorrow, Saturday, February 25, 1939, at 9 a. m.)

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1939.

The subcommittee hearing was resumed at 9 a. m., at room 221, Senate Office Building.

Present: Senator MCKELLAR.

CONTINUATION OF STATEMENT OF HERMAN E. MYERS, REGIONAL FISCAL SUPERVISOR, NATIONAL PARK SERVICE

Senator MCKELLAR. Mr. Myers, on yesterday I asked you to procure for me a copy of the letter which the Department wrote to Mr. Eakin on May 21, 1937, after receiving your report. Will you look at the copy I hand you and see if that is a copy of the letter?

Mr. MYERS (after examining letter). I should say, without reading it over, that it looks very much like the one I received a copy of at the time; yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. I will ask to have that letter made an exhibit to Mr. Myers' testimony.

(The letter is as follows:)

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
NATIONAL PARK SERVICE,
Washington, May 21, 1937.

Mr. J. ROSS EAKIN,
Superintendent, Great Smoky Mountains National Park,
Gatlinburg, Tenn.

DEAR MR. EAKIN: There has been received a 78-page report from Field Auditors Douglas and Myers covering their review of your Emergency Conservation Work accounts and records for the period beginning April 1, 1935, and ending October 31, 1936. The auditors have commented in detail upon the many irregularities in your accounts and the numerous violations of procedure which were disclosed during the examination.

During the 4 years in which this service has participated in the Emergency Conservation Work program there has never been brought to the attention of this office a situation in any park comparable to that which confronted the auditors when they began their assignment. The service files show that only 8 months prior to the arrival of Messrs. Douglas and Myers at your office, another auditor had spent approximately 2 weeks reviewing the Emergency Conservation Works accounts and records and discussing fiscal procedure and regulations with the park personnel.

The irregularities and violations which were reported will be generally discussed even though copies of memoranda of instructions signed by you during the audit indicate that, in most instances, corrective measures have already been instituted to correct the unsatisfactory conditions and eliminate further irregularities in your accounts.

The allotment ledgers had not been prepared in accordance with chapter III, division G, section 1, of the National Park Service Emergency Conservation Work Handbook. The poor system of reference numbers made it impossible to verify many entries in the accounts and in several cases errors had been made in carrying forward balances from one month to the next and in preparing the summary sheets. The detailed audit of the allotment ledgers indicated that the accounts were inaccurate and it was necessary for the auditors to prepare a list of numerous adjusting entries to correct the unencumbered balances.

The monthly telegraphic report of obligations by alphabetical classifications agreed with the total entries in the allotment ledger for the corresponding month in only two instances. There was a difference of approximately $3.000 between the total of the telegraphic report and the total of the FD 1670 allotment ledgers, respectively, for the period beginning April 1, 1935, and ending October 31, 1936. It is important that the obligations report be reconciled monthly with the allotment ledgers.

The allotment ledgers for the FD 570 and FD 870 procurement authorities were not checked in detail but the auditors reported that the last summary sheet for the FD 570 funds showed unliquidated encumbrances amounting to $146,472.45. The FD 870 allotment ledgers showed unliquidated encumbrances amounting to $6,231.72.

Although it seems improbable that unliquidated items to such an extent should remain at such a late date, the figures were taken from the last records for the procurement authorities FD 570 and FD 870, respectively, which were made available to the auditors. The allotment ledgers and files of supporting documents and vouchers were in such poor shape that it would have required the auditors to spend 3 or 4 additional months in the park to verify the accounts in detail. You are requested to assign someone to the task of cleaning up the old accounts and to liquidate the outstanding encumbrances against the FD 570 and FD 870 procurement authorities so the unencumbered balances may be taken up and the ledgers closed.

Every effort should be made to effect early settlements of the remaining items encumbered against FD 1670 funds. It is quite possible that a number of the accounts may have been paid, but the supporting vouchers were not available in your files during the audit.

Your office had failed to encumber packing, handling, and transportation charges on Government shipping tickets. The packing and handling charges which were shown on the shipping tickets should be entered in the direct settlements column of the allotment ledger and the transportation charges, where shipments have been accomplished on bills of lading, should be entered in the authorized encumbrances column and liquidated upon receipt of notices of payment. Correct entries for the shipping tickets were included in the auditors' list of adjusting entries.

A complete audit of charges on Government bills of lading was impossible, because, in a number of instances, copies of bills of lading were not available in the files. To maintain a complete record of the bills of lading issued by your office, it is suggested that you establish a bill of lading register to show the number, date of issue, consignee, carrier, and other information. The register should be maintained currently, and copies of missing bills of lading should be secured to complete the files.

Encumbrances for pay rolls in some instances were not supported by copies of paid vouchers. Sufficient copies of pay rolls should be prepared to provide a copy of the paid voucher for your files and a similar copy for the Washington office. It was reported that pay rolls had been prepared before the receipt of time sheets and in some cases the checks had been issued by the finance officer and actually distributed to the payees before the time sheets had been received in the office. The practice resulted in many overpayments and in at least two cases the employees were deceased before the pay rolls were submitted but no notations were made thereon and the finance officer issued checks for the full amounts due. Your files, however, indicated that the checks were later returned to the finance officer for cancelation.

Individual records of leaves of absences were not posted up to date and in most cases the leave slips which had been recorded did not agree with the absences indicated by the time sheets. Employees had not been charged with absences from duty on Saturday mornings prior to October 8, 1936. The matter should be thoroughly investigated and leave slips to cover all unreported absences must be submitted to this office without further delay. Under the present leave regulations, it is absolutely necessary than an accurate and complete record be maintained for each employee. So your records of leaves of absences will always be complete, the leave slips should be entered in your records prior to their submission to the Washington office for recording.

The examination of travel expense vouchers indicated that travelers were not making deductions for meals and lodgings furnished at camps although the vouchers showed the travelers had stopped at the camps overnight.

There also appear to have been violations of travel regulations in cases where travel of an apparently personal nature was described as official business and a claim for per diem reimbursement was made and paid. For example, in one case, the supervising mechanic left Bryson City at 7:30 p. m., arrived at Knoxville at 11:15 p. m., left Knoxville at 6 a. m. the following morning, and returned to Bryson City at 9:45 a. m. The employee spent a number of evenings in Knoxville and Nashville, arriving at these places after closing hours for business establishments and leaving the next morning before opening hours. Per diem was claimed and received for the time absent from official station and apparently a Government car was used for the transportation.

There were numerous instances reported where travel orders were issued and reimbursement of per diem was claimed by various employees who would leave their official headquarters between 7 and 10 a. m. in the morning for points within the park nearby and return to their official headquarters early in the evening.

You are requested to investigate the circumstances which required the mechanic to visit Knoxville and Nashville on occasions similar to those stated above and to make a complete report to this office. The other apparent violations and abuses of travel regulations should also be investigated and your findings included in the report.

The Emergency Conservation Work monthly progress and cost report was not in agreement with the allotment ledgers. A discrepancy of approximately $132,000 was reported to exist between the totals of the FD 1670 allotment ledgers and the costs reported for the corresponding period. A discrepancy of approximately $800 was noted between the CC 5507 allotment ledgers and the Emergency Conservation Work monthly progress and cost report for the period July 1 through October 31, 1936. Your attention is called to Memorandum to Field Officers, R–11, of March 15, which describes the Monthly Distribution of Encumbrances, Form 10–351, which supersedes and takes the place of the monthly progress and cost report. It should be noted that the totals reported on the Form 10–351 are to be reconciled with the totals of the allotment ledgers for the same period. You will also note in Memorandum R–11 that after April 1 it is not necessary to prorate expenditures for the overhead items such as supervision, tools, and light equipment, gas and oil, etc., to the job accounts. Encumbrances for overhead obligations will be summarized in the overhead accounts.

The audit of the allotment ledgers and supporting vouchers was unnecessarily complicated by the condition of the files and the fact that in many instances proper supporting invoices, receipts, and purchase orders were not available and too frequently the accounts had not been encumbered until copies of paid vouchers had been received from the finance officer.

The auditors reported that there has been a marked improvement in the manner in which the current allotment ledgers were being prepared at the conclusion of their assignment.

In service letter of December 23, 1935, you were requested to file purchase orders and vouchers in numerical order beginning January 1, 1936. The request had not been carried out, and as a result numerous duplicate payments were made.

It was reported that voucher forms 1034 had been prepared in the park office, whereas Emergency Conservation Work regulations provide for the finance officer to prepare the vouchers. It is noted that your memorandum of August 31 provides for the adoption of the regular Emergency Conservation Work voucher procedure as stated in chapter III, division B, section 2 of the Emergency Conservation Work Handbook.

Your procurement procedure had not conformed with Emergency Conservation Work regulations. It was found that numerous deliveries had been made by vendors on verbal instructions and confirming purchase orders or voucher forms 1034 were prepared when the vendors' invoices were received. Other purchase orders prepared prior to the receipt of articles were not signed by an authorized purchasing officer. Supervising mechanics who are not authorized procurement officers have made purchases without prior authority from your office. Too many small purchases were made because requirements were not anticipated in advance and in other instances apparently to avoid contract procedure.

More than $1,000,000 have been allotted to your park from Emergency Conservation Work funds, and, judging from the auditors' report, there has been extreme laxity in control of the funds, and the purchasing and contracting has not been properly supervised. Apparently some unauthorized purchases have been made, because employees have been ignorant of regulations, but too many others have been made in direct violation of instructions.

Under the FD 1670 procurement authority, national parks and monuments were authorized to make emergency purchases in the open market in aggregate amounts not to exceed $299.99, provided a schedule of open-market purchases in excess of $100 be submitted with the allotment ledger for the month during which the purchases were recorded. Your office made purchases in excess of the $100 limitation, but the provisions of supplement No. 297 to the Emergency Conservation Works Handbook dated October 28, 1935, were not followed. Open-market purchases in excess of the $100 limitation were authorized only when public exigencies required immediate deliveries or performance of services. Many of the purchase orders prepared by your office were not of an emergency nature and were therefore issued contrary to regulations.

The auditors reported other open-market purchases in amounts exceeding the statutory limitations for which payments have not been made because competitive bids were not secured or contracts prepared.

Under the current Emergency Conservation Work appropriation, open-market purchases are limited to $99.99, but purchase orders in excess of the amount have been issued subsequent to June 30, 1936. For example, your purchase order No. 2–5 to the W. J. Savage Co. was issued for $170. Purchase order No. 6–25 to the W. J. Savage Co. was issued for the amount of $112.

Purchase orders for motor oil have been issued in the open market and spark plugs and automotive repair parts have not been purchased under the General Schedule of Supplies contracts. The class 8, General Schedule of Supplies contracts for automotive and equipment repair and replacement parts are mandatory on the field offices of this Service. To avoid suspension by the General Accounting Office, you are advised to use the General Schedule of Supplies contracts in every instance where they are mandatory. The TPS contract and item numbers must be shown on the purchase orders as the references are required by the Finance and General Accounting Offices.

Purchase orders have been issued for typewriter rentals and other purchases of services and supplies of a continuous nature. Blueprinting, drafting supplies, films, and similar items have been procured from time to time without compliance with contract procedure. Frequently recurring charges and purchases of a continuous nature must be covered by contracts.

Regulations of the Joint Committee on Printing prohibit the purchase of printed materials, such as time books, field books, record books, and stenographers' notebooks in the field. A number of purchases of this class of items have been made through your office.

The General Accounting Office will suspend payments on purchase orders covering envelopes unless proper clearances have been obtained from the Post Office Department. Your office has made several purchases of envelopes for which proper clearances had not been obtained.

Several cases were reported where teams and a typewriter had been rented from employees on the park pay roll. In one of the cases the employee had received duplicate payment for team hire. Except as provided in office order No. 215, section 9, there is no authority to hire, rent, or purchase property from an employee of the National Park Service. Chapter III, division B, section 1, sheet 2 of the National Park Service Emergency Conservation Work Handbook prohibits the purchase or rental of property from any Federal employee.

A typewriter was purchased by your office contrary to office order No. 136, which requires national parks and monuments to requisition typewriters and other office labor-saving devices through the Washington office and expressly prohibits the purchase of such items in the field.

As stated in the foregoing paragraphs, contracts have not been prepared in many instances where purchases have been made in excess of open-market limitations. Regulations covering the preparation of contracts require that three copies of the bid be signed by the successful bidder. You have not complied with the requirement. Furthermore, the Forms 1036 indicated that notices were not being posted in public places as required by statute.

The leases which your office has executed for office space have not been prepared in accordance with Emergency Conservation Work regulations. There was no evidence to show that selection of the premises had been made as a result of advertising or that awards had been made to the lowest bidder. There was no evidence that a clearance Form PSC–6 had been prepared, even though in two cases the leases exceeded $500 per annum and extended over a period of more than 6 months.

The records indicated that leases dated October 21, 1933, and December 10, 1934, respectively, have never been renewed, but payments of rent under leases have been made through June 30, 1936. The lessor's last rent invoices referred to the contract numbers assigned to the original leases. Leases may not be executed for a period of more than 1 year. You are requested to take steps to renew the leases or to execute new ones without further delay.

Your contract No. I–23p–749 (Emergency Conservation Work) for rental of garage space for two Government-owned passenger cars was dated April 1, 1934, and has not been renewed. It is reported that the space is now being used for storage of office supplies and not as a garage for Government cars. If this is the case, the lease must be executed on standard Form 2. Leases are not required for the rental of garage space, but standard Form 33 should be used.

Your contracts Nos. I–23p–22ER, I–23p–23ER, and I–23p–24ER were awarded in violation of contract regulations. Supporting papers indicate that separate awards were made to three cement companies for one carload of cement each, because identical bids had been received. Where equally low bids are received the award must be determined by drawing lots, and the method of award must be shown on the Form 1036.

In another instance, in which three equally low and acceptable bids were received, the award was made to the concern nearest the park instead of by drawing lots. Your statement on the Form 1036 to the effect that it would result in increased cost to split the award and would result in a delay and additional cost to the Government to request the representatives of the companies to draw lots for the award appears to be inconsistent.

Your contracts Nos. I–23p–800 and I–23p–801, accepted May 28 and 29, 1935, respectively, cover awards to the Tennessee Metal Culvert Co. amounting to $1,823.56. Both contracts were for metal culvert pipe for delivery to NP–2, and it appears that the contracts were prepared in this manner to evade the $1,000 limitation on field approval of contracts.

As provided in office order No. 215, section 10, teams may be rented at rates approved by the Secretary without compliance with the provisions of statute 3709, but in the absence of an approved schedule of rates, team rentals must be covered by regularly executed contracts. Several violations of the regulations governing team hire were reported.

Your contract I–23p–756 (Emergency Conservation Work), in the amount of $498.75, covered the vulcanizing of tires, and the terms of the contract provided for the trade-in of 143 old tires. No amount was mentioned as consideration for the old tires. The procedure for the purchase and trade-in of reconditioned engines, as stated in chapter III, division B, section 1, sheet 3 of the Emergency Conservation Work Handbook, is equally applicable to other articles which are turned in as a partial payment. Your method of trading in used tires and batteries had been irregular and must be discontinued.

During the period July 1 through October 31, 1936, only 11 contracts were prepared by your office, and of this number 7 covered electric and telephone services. It appears that materials for the 8 camps are being purchased in extremely small quantities and requirements are not anticipated sufficiently in advance to permit grouping of purchases on invitations to bid.

When the auditors arrived at the park, the property records were in very poor shape and indicated extreme negligence on the part of the employees who were responsible for the maintenance of the records. The property records for the eight camps which were still in operation were not in agreement with the physical inventories which had been prepared as of June 30, 1936. There was no record to indicate that inventories were being prepared for the property stored at the nine abandoned camps. At four of the camps it was necessary to take new inventories.

Many tools had been lost or destroyed during the fire and it was impossible to determine whether they were the property of the park or had been purchased from Emergency Conservation Work funds. In accordance with chapter III, division G, section 3 of the Emergency Conservation Work handbook, the designation "ECW" shall be stamped on all nonexpendable property purchased from Emergency Conservation Work funds or transferred from other agencies. Wherever practicable, Emergency Conservation Work property must be stored separately and not confused with other property.

Tools had been issued to the fire towers from the abandoned camps and no records had been made of the issues. The Form 10–133, Receipt for Property, had not been used except at the two central warehouses.

The property surveys which were made during the auditors' visits disclosed large quantities of broken and otherwise unserviceable property. Periodic surveys of Emergency Conservation Work property should be made and unserviceable property condemned and disposed of in accordance with regulations so the property inventories will not include useless equipment and tools.

Requisitions for tools, light equipment, automobile batteries and tires, and similar items should be checked against current inventories before additional purchases are made. In this manner excess and surplus stocks may be reduced to a minimum.

The auditors reported that a great many empty oil barrels were accumulated at the various camps, and although the Sinclair Refining Co. had for sometime attempted to secure the return of the barrels, no action had been taken. The auditors brought the matter to the attention of your office, but up until the time of their departure no steps had been taken to return the barrels. The Sinclair Refining Co. contract provides that, if the oil barrels are not returned within a specified time, a charge will be made therefor. The finance officer at Fort McPherson has refused to pay purchase orders covering oil barrels and his action is approved by this office. There is no reason why the barrels when empty cannot be returned to the vendor in accordance with the terms of the contract.

Work reports from the Smokemont and Sugarlands garages show that considerable work has been performed by Emergency Conservation Work mechanics on equipment owned by other governmental agencies and reimbursements have not been made to this Service for the work. The matter should be investigated and the agencies involved should be billed in proper amounts for the services performed.

The auditors devoted an unprecedented length of time to the examination of your accounts and records and their report indicates that many of the irregularities which existed at the beginning of their assignment were corrected or eliminated before the completion of their assignment. Their constructive criticisms have been reflected in certain improvements which have been effected since September 1, 1936. Your memoranda of August 31 and September 30, respectively, indicate that park employees and project personnel have been instructed in the correct procedure for issuing purchase orders and requisitions, accounting for camp, garage, and warehouse property, and the maintenance of accurate property records. The instructions contained in your memoranda should be followed closely to effect better administrative control over the Emergency Conservation Work fiscal operations in the park.

You are requested to follow through on the above comments and to institute whatever additional measures may be necessary to eliminate further irregularities and to correct the unsatisfactory conditions which were reported.

Your assistance and cooperation will be greatly appreciated.

Sincerely yours,

A. E. DEMARAY.

Senator McKELLAR. What kind of force did Mr. Eakin have for this E. C. W. work when you were there; how many employees?

Mr. MYERS. Do you mean in the office?

Senator McKELLAR. Yes.

Mr. MYERS. I think there were four clerks on the E. C. W. pay roll at that time; and I believe the first time I went down there, there were three on the regular National Park pay roll.

Senator McKELLAR. And four on the E. C. W. roll?

Mr. MYERS. I think that is right; yes.

Senator McKELLAR. Did they seem to be men who were efficient or knew their business?

Mr. MYERS. They kept changing around quite a bit. I had to stop to think. We had a very good boy there, I recall, who kept the allotment ledgers, and he left while we were working there. He got a job down here in Washington. Then they brought in a man that they had over at the Bryson City office, and we had to show him how to keep the ledgers, and they had a lot of trouble with him.

Senator McKELLAR. What was his name?

Mr. MYERS. Fleming was the man's name. He resigned or was terminated, or something, by the time we got back there the next time. As I say, they have changed around so much in the 3 years that I cannot just recall offhand who was there at any one particular time.

Senator McKELLAR. If Mr. Eakin had had four competent and efficient clerks, would that have been sufficient to do this work properly?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, yes; it should have been. With the number of camps they had at that time—eight—four good, competent clerks should have done the work properly.

Senator McKELLAR. But your idea was that they were constantly changing and were not competent clerks?

Mr. MYERS. Some of them were and some of them were not. The ones they have left now are very good. Two of the clerks they have there now have been there all the time.

Senator McKELLAR. And two of them were of the shifting kind that did not do anything?

Mr. MYERS. They have gone out. One of them that left was a very good man. He got another job. He was a very good boy.

Senator McKELLAR. But the second one?

Mr. MYERS. The next one was not any good. The one they have now is the best one they have ever had down there.

Senator McKELLAR. Have the FD-570 and FD-870 unliquidated encumbrances ever been closed up?

Mr. MYERS. They had not been when I left there in January of this year.

Senator McKELLAR. So nobody knows what those encumbrances were?

Mr. MYERS. What we call the outstanding, unliquidated encumbrances—you cannot tell what they are, because the schedule of them was never prepared. Consequently, we do not know what represents that outstanding balance until it is checked down.

Senator McKELLAR. Is that the $132,000 that you spoke of?

Mr. MYERS. On the 570 funds there is over $100,000, I think; $143,000, or something like that. On the 870 funds there was somewhere between six and eight thousand dollars.

Senator McKELLAR. And that has never been checked up, never been accounted for, and nobody knows what has happened to that fund?

Mr. MYERS. When I was there this last time I spent half a day, as I state in my report, showing this clerk there how to go about checking it down, and I reported to the Washington office that I had done that, to see if that would help them get started on checking it down.

Senator McKELLAR. In his letter Mr. Eakin says:

"Forty-two encumbrances have been liquidated against FD 1670 funds since November 1936, but there are still 83 remaining. The majority of the remainder are for small amounts and are gradually being cleared."

That is not true; is it?

Mr. MYERS. You are talking about 1670 funds now. The 1670 has all been cleared up now.

Senator McKELLAR. But the 870 is not?

Mr. MYERS. And the 570.

Senator McKELLAR. And the 570 is not.

He further says:

"Our failure to encumber packing, handling, and transportation charges on Government shipping tickets was due to ignorance on our part."

Did you explain that to him?

Mr. MYERS. Yes; I cited the regulations or the paragraph in the handbook that required them to pick up the packing and handling charges, and they are doing that now.

Senator McKELLAR. Did they claim then that it was ignorance?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, yes; they said they did not know that they had to be picked up.

Senator McKELLAR. At any rate, those old accounts have never been cleared up?

Mr. MYERS. No—that is, the 570 and the 870.

Senator McKELLAR. One of them involves $143,000, and the other one $6,000?

Mr. MYERS. About, yes; approximately.

Senator McKELLAR. And although that has been 3 years ago, they have never been cleared up by Mr. Eakin?

Mr. MYERS. Nothing was done on them until I was there in January of this year. I spent half a day starting them in on it again to see if I could get them working on it.

Senator McKELLAR. But they have not done it yet?

Mr. MYERS. I do not know what they have done since I was there.

Senator McKELLAR. Again, Mr. Eakin says:

"From time to time during the audit when Mr. Myers or Mr. Douglas called our attention to the procedure outlined therein, since we had not received such instructions we were at a loss to say anything other than to refer him to the instructions dated December 13, 1935, from Auditor Britton, and approved by your office, December 23, 1935."

Is that correct? What did they do?

Mr. MYERS. They did make reference to some instructions that were given by the auditor who was there before we were in there; but they had not followed them, and that was the point that in one instance I remember; and that was the only time that I remember their bringing up this matter.

Senator McKELLAR. What was the difference between the total of the telegraphic report and the allotment ledger due to?

Mr. MYERS. I do not know. That is set forth in my report. I cannot give you the facts about that from memory.

Senator McKELLAR. But what you said about it in your report is correct?

Mr. MYERS. I checked it down; yes. That is a correct statement.

Senator McKELLAR. You found that the leave records were not posted; did you not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes. There was something wrong with the leave records, like I state in my report. I do not recall offhand now just what that was at that time.

Senator McKELLAR. What about employees being required to remain in camp on Saturday mornings?

Mr. MYERS. You see, the enrollees do not work, as a rule, on Saturday morning; so the supervisory personnel are required to be in camp 4 hours on Saturday mornings to complete their 44 hours for the week and do other miscellaneous duties around the camp. If I recall right, they had not been putting in this 4 hours at these camps in the Great Smoky Mountains up until the time I got there, or while I was there, or something like that; and I called it to their attention.

Senator McKELLAR. They had been drawing pay for the 4 hours without actually doing any work?

Mr. MYERS. That is right; or they had not been charging it up to annual leave when they were gone on Saturday morning, due to an interpretation of a ruling, as they understood it, that the supervisory personnel was not required to be on duty when the enrollees were not being worked; something like that. But we got it straightened out while I was there, and from that time on they worked on Saturday morning, or they put in a leave slip.

Senator McKELLAR. Fleming was one of those who was working the Government on per diem and travel orders; was he not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes; he was the clerk in the Bryson City office that we afterwards transferred over to the Gatlinburg office, and I remember he had some travel.

Senator McKELLAR. And per diem, too?

Mr. MYERS. I mean, he got paid per diem for travel. Whatever I say in the report about it is what I found. I do not recall offhand.

Senator McKELLAR. Did he not have a very prolific amount of vouchers there for travel pay and per diem?

Mr. MYERS. I cannot just recall what it is. If you will refer to my report, that would tell the facts.

Senator McKELLAR. And Fleming was one of the men who had to be gotten rid of?

Mr. MYERS. He eventually turned out to be very unsatisfactory and resigned or was terminated; I do not know which.

Senator McKELLAR. Mr. Eakin says:

"Mention is made by you of confirming purchase orders being issued after receipt of the material. We will not attempt to offer excuses or reasons justifying any such instances, but will advise that, even now, some purchase orders made out prior to the receipt of materials must require duplication of work in that receipted purchase orders will not be accepted by the finance officer unless exact prices and terms are listed thereon, even though the auditors instructed estimated figures for encumbrance, where actual quantities, prices, and terms were not available, should be used."

Has that practice of buying the goods and getting the purchase orders afterward been discontinued?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, yes; that has been discontinued now. They do not do that any more.

Senator McKELLAR. But it was all because of your report?

Mr. MYERS. Since we were there they have discontinued it.

Senator McKELLAR. I have already called your attention to the fact that Mr. Eakin said that you and Mr. Douglas were abusive. I call your attention to the letter of Mr. Demaray, or whoever wrote the letter, of June 21, 1937, in which it is said:

"The auditors devoted an unprecedented length of time to the examination of your accounts and records, and their report indicates that many of the irregularities which existed at the beginning of their assignment were corrected or eliminated before the completion of their assignment."

I suppose that is true?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. Did they ever complain that you were abusive? Did Mr. Eakin complain that you were abusive of him or of those under him while you were there?

Mr. MYERS. No, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. Or since that time?

Mr. MYERS. No, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. Mr. Eakin says:

"Approximately 85 percent of Mr. Douglas' time was spent in an effort to secure an inventory."

Is that correct?

Mr. MYERS. He spent practically all his time working on the property; yes.

Senator McKELLAR. Mr. Eakin further says:

"In conclusion, I desire to state that in my many years experience as superintendent never has an auditor come into my park with the supercritical attitude of Messrs. Myers and Douglas."

Did you have any supercritical attitude when you went there?

Mr. MYERS. I just do not know what is covered by "supercritical" myself, but, as I say, we got along all right with them. We would have a hot argument once in a while. They would object to doing something that we told them should be done, and we argued it out with them; but we generally won out and got them to do it the way we wanted them to do it. They would not do it right away; but after they got better acquainted with us, and found out we knew what we were talking about, their resistance was not so great.

Senator McKELLAR. Did you have a new accounting system, or did you just apply to this park the same accounting principles that you applied to all other parks?

Mr. MYERS. Just the same as we were doing everywhere else, and had been doing for years.

Senator McKELLAR. You did not apply any new accounting system; did you?

Mr. MYERS. No. Practically everything was the same as we had been doing in other places.

Senator McKELLAR. In 1938 when you went back again you found a good many things wrong; did you not?

Mr. MYERS. The last time, do you mean?

Senator McKELLAR. No; 1938.

Mr. MYERS. That was 1938—the report for 1938.

Senator McKELLAR. This is January 7, 1938.

Mr. MYERS. I was there in December of 1937 then.

Senator McKELLAR. That is right. Well, you found things pretty ratty then; did you not?

Mr. MYERS. Mr. Baldwin and I were there at that time. We found a lot of things had been corrected since we were there the year before.

Senator McKELLAR. But you found a lot of things that were still out of gear; did you not?

Mr. MYERS. Whatever we set forth in the report is what we found out.

Senator McKELLAR. Here are some of the things: As to purchase orders, "office copies in several cases were not receipted." Is that right?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, yes.

Senator McKELLAR (reading):

"A few were receipted by camp clerk (enrollee) instead of by project superintendent."

Was that the case?

Mr. MYERS. Yes; I remember that.

Senator McKELLAR (reading):

"Numerous orders for supplies and services of an administrative nature were receipted by the same clerk who prepared the purchase order and acted as purchasing agent."

Is not that true?

Mr. MYERS. That is right; yes, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. That is all wrong, is it not—that a clerk should act as purchasing agent, and prepare the purchase order, and receipt for it? Nobody under God's heaven could tell what was done with that money except the clerk.

Mr. MYERS. It is against our regulations for them to do that; and I called it to their attention first, and then again in this report.

Senator McKELLAR. Not only that, but—

"Requisitions did not, in all cases, bear the approval signature of the park superintendent or his administrative assistant."

Is not that so?

Mr. MYERS. That is right; yes.

Senator McKELLAR. That is bad business; is it not?

Mr. MYERS. There is a regular form for requisition that has a blank on there to be approved. The idea there is that the park superintendent will approve the requisition before the purchasing department will take any steps to buy it; and what he did in this case was that they would go ahead and buy it, and then he would sign the purchase order and not sign the requisition. That is what I wanted him to do there.

Senator McKELLAR. When you made your first report, in 1937, you found, as I remember the substance of what you said, that anybody at the park would purchase anything at any time that anyone wanted it. That was the substance of it.

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Senator McKELLAR. You found the same thing in December 1937, did you not?

Mr. MYERS. No; not so much of it.

Senator McKELLAR. Not so much of it?

Mr. MYERS. There might have been a little, but not so much.

Senator McKELLAR. To refresh your memory, I call your attention to your report:

"The following exceptions to purchase procedure were noted:

"1. Open-market purchases of gasoline and oil at service stations by technical personnel, paid for by purchase order."

That is right, is it not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Senator McKELLAR. That is all wrong, too, when it comes to handling the Government's business?

Mr. MYERS. What we wanted them to do there was this: The camp at Sugarlands was just 4 miles from the office; and they could have gone out to Sugarlands and got their gas and oil instead of going across the street to the filling station and buying it there at a higher price.

Senator McKELLAR. That just made it cost the Government that much more?

Mr. MYERS. That is right.

Senator McKELLAR. And then you had no check on it at all?

Mr. MYERS. Everyone who got the gas would receipt for it. We could check it down.

Senator McKELLAR. You could check it down, but you do not know what this clerk did with the gas and what he used it for?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, no. You would have to get the other information to do that.

Senator McKELLAR. And if he signed the purchase order and bought the gas, no man under God's heaven could tell what he did with the gasoline?

Mr. MYERS. Well, but the point I am bringing out there is that there should have been a contract covering the service-station deliveries that had to be made.

Senator McKELLAR. Then you say:

"2. Numerous open-market purchases of kerosene, used for lighting, heating, and cleaning of motors.

That was correct; was it not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes. They did not have any contract, in other words, for kerosene.

Senator McKELLAR. Again:

"Side camp equipment, such as cups, plates, dishes, etc., and lumber and screen doors for mess-hall tent."

They were bought on the side?

Mr. MYERS. I want to tell you: A lot of those things that I referred to in the report I think might be irregular when I am in the field. I do not know, so I put it in my report; and it is up to the Washington office to decide whether any action should be taken on the matter or not.

Senator McKELLAR. Again:

"4. Coal for cooking purposes at side camp."

That was purchased irregularly?

Mr. MYERS. That is one of the matters I spoke about. I do not know whether it is irregular or not, so I put it down.

Senator McKELLAR (reading):

"5. Open-market purchases of fuel oil used in tractors."

Mr. MYERS. What I mean there is that they did not have any contract for the fuel oil.

Senator McKELLAR. They just bought it as they pleased, like they had been doing ever since you first found them down there?

Mr. MYERS. They had not been observing the regulations. That is what I mean.

Senator McKELLAR (reading):

"6. Roofing buildings belonging to J. R. Boyd used as side camp. Cost report shows 87 rolls roofing at $1.50 per roll, total $130.50, were used. No lease contract with J. R. Boyd covering period January 1 to June 30, 1937, period during which work was performed."

Was there any justification for those expenditures?

Mr. MYERS. The point there is that these buildings belonged to another individual. They did not belong to the Government. They were leased, if I remember right, for a dollar rental every 6 months and I believe the lease provided that the man who owned the buildings was to keep them in repair, though he only got a dollar rental every 6 months; and I found that they had reroofed some of these buildings with our funds, and that is what I am calling to their attention.

Senator McKELLAR. When you went down there the first time, you called the particular attention of Mr. Eakin and the others to the rental of the Huff Office Building, so-called, at $53 a month; did you not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. Did you not find that in the same condition when you went back?

Mr. MYERS. In all of my reports there is some question about those leases—that is, that they had not been properly handled according to the regulations.

Senator McKELLAR. You called that to the attention of the authorities down there in 1936, when you were down there. Then you called it to their attention in December 1937, when you were down there. Then you called it to their attention in December 1938, when you were down there—three different times.

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. And they have not done anything about it to this good day; have they?

Mr. MYERS. Well, they would do part of it, I should say, but did not do all that they were required to.

Senator McKELLAR. They have still got those unauthorized leases; have they not?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, no. They are not what you would call unauthorized leases. They have not complied with the regulations in all respects regarding them.

Senator McKELLAR. They have not complied with them. In other words, they are running that park down there to suit themselves, are they not?

Mr. MYERS. Just why they did not do a lot of the things, I do not know.

Senator McKELLAR. But they did not do it? They have not done it yet?

Mr. MYERS. Anything that they did not do right, I put in the report.

Senator McKELLAR. You were exactly right.

In your report of December 1937, you say:

"When Mr. Wertman was in Gatlinburg during October 1937, the matter of moving the technicians occupying the landscape building to Keener House—a park-owned property—in the park, was discussed with Superintendent Eakin. After Mr. Wertman's departure Mr. Eakin evidently discussed this move with the various technicians affected, and they each then wrote a memorandum to Mr. Eakin setting forth their objections to moving, giving their reasons. At time of making the audit, no action had been taken regarding the move, and from all indications none was contemplated in the near future."

Did you recommend that they go to the Keener House?

Mr. MYERS. I did not recommend it. Mr. Wertman, who is the chief of our department here, was in Gatlinburg before I made the second audit; and in going over the park we got into this Keener House, and both of us were of the opinion that it would be a very good place for them to have their office, instead of paying rent down at the Huff place.

Senator McKELLAR. It was not being used?

Mr. MYERS. It was being used, but there was still plenty of room in there that we thought they could use for their office.

Senator McKELLAR. How far was it from Gatlinburg?

Mr. MYERS. It is in the park, about 4 miles from Gatlinburg, I imagine. I do not know how far it would be. Gatlinburg spreads all over the hills out there, you know.

Senator McKELLAR. Yes.

Mr. MYERS. But it is right in the park, at the entrance to the park on the Gatlinburg side.

Senator McKELLAR. In other words, the Government had the office space there or the room space there for these gentlemen, but they preferred to rent the property from Mr. Huff?

Mr. MYERS. Evidently. I never could find out.

Senator McKELLAR. Have they ever corrected that in any way?

Mr. MYERS. No; they are still there.

Senator McKELLAR. As to the other property owned by Mr. Huff which was rented by them—

"Description of premises leased, 'one building 20 feet 2 inches by 16 feet 2 inches for use as an office for Government employees.' This building is a room that was built onto a building owned by Mr. A. J. Huff, occupied by park personnel as park administrative office, at Gatlinburg, Tenn."

Then you say:

"New lease prepared each year instead of renewal of real-estate lease."

What is the trouble about that?

Mr. MYERS. The regulations provided that, in the case of real-estate leases, where they are renewed, you use a renewal form instead of making out a new lease each time; and, instead of using the renewal form, they would make out a brand new lease with this man.

Senator McKELLAR. Here are references to copies of contracts with cement companies and pipe companies that you criticize. What is the trouble with them?

Mr. MYERS. I cannot recall unless you tell me what is in the report, because I do not remember now.

Senator McKELLAR. They did not show stamp of approval by the Secretary.

Mr. MYERS. Oh, I see. That was probably a contract in excess of $1,000——

Senator McKELLAR. It was.

Mr. MYERS. Which did not bear the stamp of approval of the Secretary; but whatever I found out about it is what I state in the report. I cannot recall it.

Senator McKELLAR. That is all right. Had they quit buying where the purchases exceeded $300?

Mr. MYERS. Do you mean in the open market?

Senator McKELLAR. Yes.

Mr. MYERS. Yes; very little of that had taken place in the past year.

Senator McKELLAR. You call attention to it here.

Mr. MYERS. That was the second audit. I mean now they have corrected it to a great extent.

Senator McKELLAR. They had not corrected it in the second audit?

Mr. MYERS. That is right.

Senator McKELLAR. Now travel vouchers. They had not corrected that either, had they?

Mr. MYERS. Well, you know each time we go down there there is a different set of travel vouchers to examine; and I cannot tell you what was wrong with the ones the second time.

Senator McKELLAR. You set out six paragraphs about it, criticizing it; and what you say about it was correct?

Mr. MYERS. That is right.

Senator McKELLAR. Now, bills of lading: You criticized them again, did you not?

Mr. MYERS. I would not say that I criticized them. We have to put in our reports certain information for follow-up purposes, and I do not know whether there was anything particularly wrong with the bills of lading or not.

Senator McKELLAR. You found there were a number on hand that were unused?

Mr. MYERS. That is all right. That is what we are supposed to do, report that.

Senator McKELLAR. What about the audit of pay rolls? They had not improved their methods about them, had they?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, yes. The pay-roll procedure, if I remember right, now, the second time was in very different shape than it was when we first went there.

Senator McKELLAR. "Audit of accounts, records, and reports." They had not made much progress along that line, had they, judging from your report?

Mr. MYERS. I cannot say. I cannot tell you just what was wrong there unless you read to me what I say.

Senator McKELLAR. It gives it in the report.

In the second report you found a great many irregularities. What about "Technician Helper J. Glenn Smith, $70 a month," who was working at the State university instead of for the park?

Mr. MYERS. We have to check up everybody on the pay roll and meet them.

Senator McKELLAR. Yes, sir.

Mr. MYERS. And I found a young man over at the University of Tennessee who claimed that he was doing work pertaining to the park who was on our pay roll, and I reported it. I did not know whether it was all right or not.

Senator McKELLAR. What about Lewis K. Baxter, rodman, at 60 cents per hour?

Mr. MYERS. That was an unusual case that I did not know about, so I just put it in the report to see if anything was to be done about it.

Senator McKELLAR. Ennis D. Ownby, laborer, at $60 per month. He was drawing $60 a month and had a pick-up car that belonged to the park, did he not?

Mr. MYERS. He must have been one of the caretakers.

Senator McKELLAR. He is listed as a laborer, but you say he "has a pick-up assigned to him, which he drove over 1,200 miles during November 1937."

Mr. MYERS. I know now. These caretakers at abandoned camps were carried on the pay roll as laborers at, I thought, $70.

Senator McKELLAR. $60, so you say here.

Mr. MYERS. I thought it was $70. I had to meet them, of course, under my instructions; and I went over to this camp at Greenbrier—that is where that fellow was supposed to be, I think—and I did not find him there. I understood that these caretakers should be living in some of the buildings at the abandoned camps and be there all the time; so in coming out of the Greenbrier entrance I noticed a pick-up. It was a Sunday afternoon. Mr. Baldwin and I drove over there on a Sunday afternoon to see this fellow, and we saw this pick-up standing in front of a house or alongside a house or something, and I just dotted down the number of the U. S. D. I. license tag that was on it; and when we got to the office on Monday morning I asked Mr. White, I believe, about this caretaker. I told him I was over there and could not find him. He said, "Oh, he lives in the first house down the road from the camp. That is a park-owned property down there, and he lives there." I told him I had seen this pick-up there, and I went and looked at the record, and I found that this pick-up was assigned to this man Ownby; and I questioned, What would a caretaker at an abandoned camp need with a pick-up?

Senator McKELLAR. You mean by a "pick-up" an automobile?

Mr. MYERS. Yes; that is a Ford automobile that has a truck body on it. I do not recall what they told me, but I did not get a satisfactory answer, anyhow; and I went back and I looked up the record on this pick-up for the month before, and I found it had been run several hundred miles.

Senator McKELLAR. 1,200 miles.

Mr. MYERS. Yes; 1,200 miles. That is about it.

Senator McKELLAR. And how much gasoline had been used?

Mr. MYERS. Well, I could not tell you that offhand. About 15 miles to the gallon is what you get. But anyhow, my point was, what would a caretaker who was supposed to be at the camp all the time be doing with a pick-up and traveling 1,200 miles with it? He was not doing much caretaking. That was the point I brought out there.

Senator McKELLAR. He was on relief; was he not? Mr. Eakin just had him as a relief man. He thought he needed a pick-up. He needed a home, and he needed a car, and for his health he ought to ride around a good deal, and he should be furnished gasoline. The Government was furnishing gasoline and cars and other things to other relief workers, and so they put him in one. Was not that about the way of it?

Mr. MYERS. No; in keeping after the matter I found out that this fellow was doing what they call warden or junior warden duties in the park, and was carried on our pay roll as a laborer or caretaker.

Senator McKELLAR. How many pick-ups have they in that camp?

Mr. MYERS. I do not know now. I remember one time, the first time I was down there and counted them, I think there were around 40 altogether. My first report tells about it. I put it in there, and I give a list of all of them.

Senator McKELLAR. You say your report tells about it?

Mr. MYERS. Yes; in the first report you will find a schedule of them.

Senator McKELLAR. There seem to be 39 of them. Is the Government paying for gasoline for 39 of those pick-ups?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, yes.

Senator McKELLAR. They pay for the gasoline?

Mr. MYERS. They use all Government gas in there: yes.

Senator McKELLAR. And pay for their upkeep. What do those men do?

Mr. MYERS. I cannot tell you offhand, without taking each one of them; but as a rule they are used by different park employees in their duties down there.

Senator McKELLAR. What would a man who has jurisdiction of telephones do with a car?

Mr. MYERS. He has to look after the telephone lines all through the park.

Senator McKELLAR. How many telephone lines are there through the park?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, they go to all these camps and all these fire-stations and all those kind of places.

Senator McKELLAR. And you pay that man a salary and furnish him an automobile and gasoline and repairs and everything else?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir. He is one of the hardest working boys they have down in that camp, too. He has a big job on his hands.

Senator McKELLAR. Here is a property supervisor: Why would a property supervisor have an automobile?

Mr. MYERS. I will tell you about that. When we went down there, like our first report shows, the property was in an awful mess, and we put in charge of it a man by the name of Maxey, who was designated as a property supervisor. We instructed him in his duties and told him what to do.

Senator McKELLAR. Does he get mileage on running around over the park?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, no. He has one of these pick-ups, or Government cars, and he uses Government gasoline in it. He does not have any mileage; no.

Senator McKELLAR. There is one case where a man charged up his mileage here.

Mr. MYERS. That is where he used his own personal car.

Senator McKELLAR. Here is a man doing type-mapping. Why would he need a car?

Mr. MYERS. That is all they are doing, away out in the wilds somewhere. They are doing their work there, whatever type-mapping is. I do not know. I met those fellows once, I believe, when I was down there. I do not know much about their work.

Senator McKELLAR. Here is a Mr. Allen who is in the radio business. I just cannot understand why he would want a pick-up. I can understand why he would want a car, probably, given him, because anybody would take anything the Government has down there, apparently; but why would a radio operator have to have a car? They do not carry the radio around in the car, do they?

Mr. MYERS. He had to go to all these different radio stations that they have.

Senator McKELLAR. How many radio stations have they in there?

Mr. MYERS. I do not know. They have them in all different points of the park. They talk by radio.

Senator McKELLAR. Now I come to the engineer: What in the name of heaven would an engineer do with an automobile for the Government?

Mr. MYERS. Who is that?

Senator McKELLAR. That is Mr. Stallings.

Mr. MYERS. I do not know. He is one of the men on the North Carolina side. He is on the regular park pay roll, by the way. I never met him, I believe.

Senator McKELLAR. What are the duties of wardens?

Mr. MYERS. They are like policemen in the park, caretakers, and so forth.

Senator McKELLAR. It takes 40 cars to take those 40 employees around on their duties?

Mr. MYERS. I do not know anything about that. That is an administrative matter. I do not know anything about what their duties are.

Senator McKELLAR. But you do know that there are 40 men in that park who are using Government automobiles and Government gasoline and Government repairs for these automobiles?

Mr. MYERS. There were at that time. Just how many they are using now, I do not know; but they are still using a lot of them.

Senator McKELLAR. Still using a lot; probably more than ever. I asked you about a radioman a minute ago. Would a radio mechanic need a car to take him around?

Mr. MYERS. He would not need one regularly, but he might need one on special assignments, where he had to go out and do some repair work or something like that.

Senator McKELLAR. Here is Mr. Bishop, a mechanic, at $1,320. He has a car, too.

Mr. MYERS. If it is in there, he had. I do not remember.

Senator McKELLAR. How many other employees are there there; how many employees, all told?

Mr. MYERS. I do not know. You see, I have nothing to do with the regular park pay rolls.

Senator McKELLAR. I know; but you were down there, and I thought you might be able to tell me.

Mr. MYERS. It is a big place. You just travel around, and there are a lot of them I never met in the 3 years I have been going down there; so I do not know.

Senator McKELLAR. Have they any man down there who has not an automobile run by the Government? Do you know of an employee, whether a laborer, mechanic, warden, superintendent, assistant superintendent, or any other person working for the Government in that park who has not an automobile of one kind or another, whether you call it a pick-up or what you call it, that he rides around the park in—a Government-owned-and-run automobile?

Mr. MYERS. I would not say that everybody has one, no; because——

Senator McKELLAR. I was just wondering if you knew of anyone.

Mr. MYERS. Oh, yes.

Senator McKELLAR. Could you name me a man? What man down there has not one?

Mr. MYERS. Well, I will say the clerk in the office.

Senator McKELLAR. What is his name?

Mr. MYERS. There is Tom Morris, the clerk in the office; he does not have any automobile.

Senator McKELLAR. Let us see whether he has or not. [After examining list.] If he has, he has not a pick-up, according to this report.

Mr. MYERS. He works in the office. He does not have to have one; and there are a lot of employees like that who do not have any use for an automobile, so they do not have any.

Senator McKELLAR. As I remember, there are only about 30 employed around there, are there not, all told; or are there more than that?

Mr. MYERS. Oh, no. You see, a lot of these technicians, as they call them, are there. Some of the technicians are there that are on the regional office pay roll—that is, the Richmond pay roll—and there have been some of them down there that were on the Washington pay roll, assigned there; so I cannot tell, because there are a lot of employees. Those are all administrative matters. All I have to do is to check up the ones on the pay rolls that are being audited.

Senator McKELLAR. You know that Mr. Eakin has a car?

Mr. MYERS. He has a regular park car.

Senator McKELLAR. A regular park car?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Senator McKELLAR. And he has a chauffeur?

Mr. MYERS. No; not that I know of. I do not know of his having a chauffeur.

Senator McKELLAR. Does Mr. White, the assistant, have a car?

Mr. MYERS. I do not know whether he has one of our cars, one of the C. C. C. cars, or whether he has a regular park car.

Senator McKELLAR. But he has one or the other?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Senator McKELLAR. Is it not a fact that practically everybody, from laborers on up, have Government cars down there?

Mr. MYERS. If they have to do any traveling around on Government business, they have one.

Senator McKELLAR. Yes, sir.

How did you find the gasoline and the cars charged? Here is $500,000 that was spent in the park on the E. C. W. side of it. How is the gasoline charged? How does it appear in the accounts of the superintendent?

Mr. MYERS. They keep a record, at each one of these camps where there is a pump, of the car that any gasoline was furnished to. They do not put the gasoline in anything but a Government car.

Senator MCKELLR. Where they buy it from a private concern, a private filling station, like they have done so much, there is not any way to keep track of that, is there?

Mr. MYERS. They have to account for it. Everybody who has a Government car has to submit a report each month.

Senator MCKELLAR. It just depends on what person submits. These cars are driven outside of the park?

Mr. MYERS. Well, they do not report, as a rule, every place they go with them, no; but they are all administrative matters handled by the one in charge.

Senator MCKELLAR. You could not tell about it?

Mr. MYERS. As an auditor, I am not interested in it. I do not go into it.

Senator MCKELLAR. Now I come to your last report, made January 16, 1939 That was last month. You report again about Mr. Huff's real estate.

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. They never have fixed that?

Mr. MYERS. There is still something wrong with their leases down there that they have not straightened out.

Senator MCKELLAR. Mr. Huff and Mr. Eakin are great friends, are they not?

Mr. MYERS. I do not know. I suppose they are.

Senator MCKELLAR. And so Mr. Eakin is really still running that real estate that he is renting from Mr. Huff, about which you complained three times, to suit himself, is he not?

Mr. MYERS. I do not know why they do not get it straightened out. I cannot tell you that. I never went into it.

Senator MCKELLAR. But you know it has never been straightened out?

Mr. MYERS. That is right.

Senator MCKELLAR. And Mr. Eakin is running it just as he has always been running it?

Mr. MYERS. Those matters I have always talked over with Mr. Ray, the Chief Clerk.

Senator MCKELLAR. But they have never conformed to the law and the regulations?

Mr. MYERS. No; they have always had some excuse about it, of something or other. As I said before, I do not know whether it is all right or not, the way they are doing it, so I report it the way I find it, and it is up to the Washington office to tell them about it if they are wrong.

Senator MCKELLAR. You referred to the real-estate lease with J. A. Lowe, chairman of the Board of Commissioners of Haywood County, N. C. What was the trouble about that? Well, you have reported it here.

Mr. MYERS. It is what I put in my report. There are two or three points involved about it. Whatever I say in the report is what I find wrong with it.

Senator MCKELLAR. You also reported you found something that you did not approve in a contract with the J. C. Mahan Motor Co. at Knoxville.

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Senator MCKELLAR. Disregarding the contract?

Mr. MYERS. No. In that case there was a contract for Ford motor parts, and they had bought over $1,000 worth under that contract, and the contract had not been approved by the Secretary of the Interior for purchases in excess of $1,000. That was what was the matter.

Senator MCKELLAR. Was that the same trouble in the case of the Day Pulverizer Co. of Knoxville?

Mr MYERS. Yes; that was a similar situation.

Senator MCKELLAR. And the T. L. Lay Packing Co. of Knoxville?

Mr. MYERS. No; that had to do with some beef liver that was bought to feed the fish with. I considered that irregular. I do not know whether there was anything wrong about it or not. It was not uniform, in other words.

Senator MCKELLAR. Another one was the Crane Co., for galvanized pipe.

Mr. MYERS. All of those points I am bringing out there are exceptions I am taking to their contract procedure. They are not regular.

Senator MCKELLAR. You went back to your old friend, "Irregularities in open-market-purchase procedure." You have been fighting with them for 3 years about that, have you not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes.

Senator MCKELLAR. And they never have improved it?

Mr. MYERS. They keep getting better right along, but they do not come 100 percent.

Senator MCKELLAR. In this report you say:

"Numerous purchases made without obtaining competitive bids."

Mr. MYERS. That was open-market purchases where they have not been inviting competition.

Senator MCKELLAR. They were in excess of the limitations, too?

Mr. MYERS. I do not recall what I found about that.

Senator MCKELLAR (reading):

"Like items purchased at different times during fiscal year, the total of such purchase being in excess of limitations stated in memorandum F-15-3."

Mr. MYERS. That has to do with the purchase of like items during a fiscal year on the open market.

Senator MCKELLAR. You specifically refer to—

"Six purchases orders, all for less than $100 each, issued to C. M. McClung & Co., Knoxville, Tenn., * * * totaling $402.44, no competition invited."

Mr. MYERS. That is right.

Senator MCKELLAR. That was against the law and against the rules and regulations?

Mr. MYERS. They were not doing the thing according to our regulations and the laws.

Senator MCKELLAR. I notice that you still complain about our old friend "Travel vouchers" again.

Mr. MYERS. Not so many.

Senator MCKELLAR. Not so many, but they are still there?

Mr. MYERS. You see, their funds are being cut down. They do not do so much travel as they used to do.

Senator MCKELLAR. And the "Audit of pay rolls" is still with us.

Mr. MYERS. We make the regular comment on pay rolls in every report. I do not think there was a whole lot wrong with their pay rolls this time, but I have to make the regular statement about what I find.

Senator MCKELLAR. We find our old friends the allotment ledgers, the project-cost records, the property records and equipment, and the records of leave and absence. They are still with us.

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator MCKELLAR. And our hoary friend "Unliquidated encumbrances for FD 570 and FD 870 funds." They are still with us?

Mr. MYERS. They have not done a thing on those; and, as I state in the report, I instructed one clerk how to go about it.

Senator MCKELLAR. It rather looks as though that $143,000 and that $6,000 is gone forever, is it not? It is like the foreign debts due to the United States.

Mr. MYERS. It is awfully hard to explain what that is.

Senator MCKELLAR. That is what our foreign debtors say.

Mr. MYERS. I do not think it involves any money, because I think all of the obligations have been paid. There is nobody asking for the money. There is no vendor claiming he has not been paid, but still this $143,000 appears as outstanding and unpaid. So there must be some errors made in their records, and what I wanted to do was to find out and check it down and get it cleaned up.

Senator MCKELLAR. I see here also a copy of a report from Messrs. Earl H. Brown and Carl F. Jones, accountants.

Mr. MYERS. I would not know anything at all about that. Those are the regular accounts, and I do not know a thing about those.

Senator MCKELLAR. You only took part in the E. C. W. work, and you do not know whether their accounts were straight or not?

Mr. MYERS. I do not know a thing about the regular accounts.

Senator MCKELLAR. You did not come in contact with Mr. John L. Humbard, did you?

Mr. MYERS. I have met him; that is all. I just know the gentleman. He used to come to the hotel for dinner once in a while. Outside of that, I do not know anything about him.

(Thereupon, at 11 a. m., the subcommittee adjourned.)

GREAT SMOKY MOUNTAINS NATIONAL PARK,
Gatlinburg, Tenn., June 2, 1937.

The DIRECTOR, NATIONAL PARK SERVICE,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. DIRECTOR: This will acknowledge your letter of May 21 advising of the receipt of a 78-page report from Field Auditors Douglas and Myers covering their review of our E. C. W. accounts and records for the period beginning April 1, 1935, and ending October 31, 1936.

We heartily regret your apparent consternation in receiving the unsatisfactory report, but believe you will understand from this explanation that the records were not as irregular and the violations as numerous as portended in the report. There were also extenuating circumstances in many instances which were explained to the auditors, but from their abusive attitude and threats at times when the audit was trying, it was expected that no quarter would be given, and sufficient justification for their extended visit would be recorded.

We interpret from your letter that it is not understood why the conditions prevailed since only 8 months prior to the arrival of Messrs. Douglas and Myers at our office, another auditor had spent approximately 2 weeks reviewing the E. C. W. accounts and records. This was in December 1935, and that audit should have covered 8 months or approximately one-half of the period in question. We do not know what the report contains, but believe a check of it will discern more irregularities from April 1 to November 30, 1935, than in the subsequent period not audited until the arrival of Mr. Myers and Mr. Douglas.

It might be stated at the inception of the emergency conservation-work program when former Director Albright advised me of the opportunity to accomplish worth-while work in this park and requested that I ask for as many camps as possible, I hesitated advising him that the skeleton organization available could not handle but a few, but upon his insistence I asked for and received nine comps. At that time the clerical force comprised one clerk and one temporary assistant clerk who both had their hands full with regular disbursing, accounting, stenographic, and other office work. This may or may not be accepted as an excuse for the lack of supervision and maintenance of the FD 570 and FD 870 accounting records which were maintained a short time after start of the work by an employee sent to us from your office with recommendation that he was qualified for carpentry or forestry work, but because of the mass of office work was placed here as a clerk upon your approval. Whether these old accounts can be cleared is questionable. When Mr. Britton was here in June 1935, if a proper audit was made at that time, the balances would not have appeared so ridiculous. A study of these old accounts will be made just as soon as the employee capable of making it can get away from his regular work, which must be kept current, and you will be advised in the near future what can be accomplished.

Your attention is called to the fact that the numerous violations and irregularities in procedure were contrary, as stated in your letter, to instructions contained in chapter III, division G, section 1, of the National Park Service E. C. W. handbook, which were received in this office November 27, 1936, sometime after the audit was completed. From time to time during the audit when Mr. Myers or Mr. Douglas called our attention to the procedure outlined therein, since we had not received such instructions we were at a loss to say anything other than to refer him to the instructions dated December 13, 1935, from Auditor Britton, and approved by your office, December 23, 1935, as well as assist him in clearing up such discrepancies as existed. This fact in itself, which was known to the auditors, should have prevented citation of charged violations of procedure of which we were unaware.

The difference between the total of the telegraphic report and the allotment ledgers was due to delay in entering charges on the last day of the month. With installation of the improved system, there should be no recurrence of this error.

It will be a difficult matter to clear the FD 570 and FD 870 unliquidated encumbrances. If the auditors estimate that it would take an adidtional 3 or 4 months to clear up these old accounts without assistance, this office will be handicapped in clearing the matter, as no one can be taken away from regular work that must be kept current, and there is only one clerk available who might clear up the major portion of it.

Forty-two encumbrances have been liquidated against FD 1670 funds since November 1936, but there are still 83 remaining. The majority of the remainder are for small amounts and are gradually being cleared.

Our failure to encumber packing, handling, and transportation charges on Government shipping tickets was due to ignorance on our part. Since they have been picked up, and we are now familiar with the work, this error will not occur again. A bill of lading register has been established, and an encumbrance is made at the time of issuance supported by a copy of the bill of lading.

The stamped copy of paid pay-roll vouchers were sent to your office, our copy being inked in as to number of voucher and date of payment. Sufficient copies are now being sent to the finance office to keep a stamped-paid copy in our files.

At the beginning of E. C. W., time sheets were not required for reporting time of salaried men, and we do not have any record of receiving such instructions prior to Mr. Britton's of December 13, 1935, effective January 1, 1936, at which time they were originated. Prior to then, the project superintendents were required to keep the time of their supervisory and facilitating personnel, reporting to this office any periods of absences. The pay rolls were prepared twice a month; on the 14th and next to the last day of each month, and the project superintendents were instructed to advise this office of any changes within the current period which would affect the pay roll, prior to its preparation. After the leave privileges were extended E. C. W. personnel the project superintendents were required to keep leave records of their personnel and of course this office also kept an individual record of each. This procedure proved very satisfactory. When the first E. C. W. auditor, Mr. Richard D. Britton, visited the park in June 1935, he reviewed our procedure and approved continuance of same. The only recommendation he made in this connection contrary to the regular procedure was that the pay-roll clerk should not distribute the checks when the pay rolls were paid, and this was complied with. The practice did not result in many overpayments. The two deceased employees referred to in your letter are junior foremen, A. J. Gunter and Stewart Ramsey. A. J. Gunter died on March 20, 1936, and his project superintendent immediately advised us of this fact. The regular E. C. W. pay roll for the period March 16–31, 1936, carried A. J. Gunter for 5 days, with the following notation appearing in the remarks column of said pay roll: "Died March 20." The finance officer struck his name off the roll, mailing the other checks to us, and requesting that a separate supplemental roll be submitted for decedent, which was done. The check returned in this connection was a check paid employee for the previous period, March 1–15, 1936, which he had not endorsed and the administrator of his estate requested that it be returned for reissuance to the estate. Payment was made in March 1937 to the estate of Mr. Gunter for salary due to him for the period March 16 to 20, $23.33, but we have not been advised of disposition of the check for the period March 1–15, 1936, $70, which was returned to the finance officer April 7, 1936, for transmittal to, and disposition by the General Accounting Office, and is still an obligation against FD 1670 funds. Mr. Stewart Ramsey died on May 24, 1936, at 5 a. m. He was not placed on the regular roll, but entered on a supplemental roll for the period May 16–31, 1936, with a credit for 8 days, and notation in the remarks column, "Died May 23." The finance officer asked to be advised the exact day and hour of employee's death and when advised, he returned this pay roll and instructed that since the employee died during the day of the 24th, even though not reporting for duty, was entitled to full pay for that day. The pay roll was changed accordingly.

The statement that the leave records were not posted to date is also unfounded. The leave slips are posted on our records as they are received in this office and prior to their submission to the Washington office, with each copy of the semimonthly pay rolls. What Mr. Myers actually observed was that when he reviewed our file of leave applications a number of applications had been posted and returned by your office, approximately 1 month, and had not been filed, but they had been posted here before being submitted to your office. In view of the fact that these applications are held in your office for such a long time it is a hard matter to keep this leave application file current for audit. For instance, on April 26, 1937, we received 281 leave applications from your office, ranging in dates from September 1936 to January 1937, and they had been submitted to your office with each corresponding semimonthly pay roll for the periods within that time.

It is true that E. C. W. supervisory and facilitating employees had not been charged with absences from duty on Saturday mornings prior to October 8, 1936. In the old handbook, paragraph 5, chapter III, page 8, it is stated that "it is recognized that if foremen, for example, have nothing to do but to supervise enrolled crews their working hours cannot be greater than those of enrolled men. This may happen occasionally; but there is always a multitude of things demanding the time of competent foremen and facilitating personnel on such work and it is believed that regular national park hours will be fully occupied in the great majority of cases." Two foremen have always been required to remain in camp Saturdays and Sundays during fire season, and one at all time of the year, and were considered sufficient from both our and the project superintendents' standpoint for ordinary details that might arise. When enrollees were required to work Saturday to make up time lost because of inclement weather all foremen of course were required to be on duty the entire day. Foremen were not given any compensatory time for many nights during weeks of fire seasons for overtime required of them.

The only regulations that might cancel the regulation recognizing that working hours of foremen supervising enrolled crews cannot be greater than those of enrolled men is contained in your memorandum of June 27, 1936, received July 6, 1936, to which was attached list of the working hours prescribed by the Secretary for all employees. Since October 8, 1936, all E. C. W. employees are required to remain in camp on Saturday mornings, and during this 4-hour period when enrollees are not available for work, a picture of their activities would be far from what is expected of an employee in a work status for the simple reason that their work is in the field, or on roads, trails, etc, which cannot be prosecuted without the aid of workmen. The grounds, of course, are kept clean, and tools in their proper places, but during hours of the enrolled men. It is recommended under the circumstances that you do not require that leave slips be submitted to your office for Saturday mornings, at least not more than for the period from July 1, 1936, to October 8, 1936, and if proper not at all. Please let us have your further reaction to this matter.

The example cited wherein apparent personal business was described as official business and a claim for per diem reimbursement was made and paid is wholly unsupported. Since a paid voucher and an encumbrance sheet is still in our files, we are sending herewith the encumbrance copy of the voucher for your perusal. The total amount claimed, $38.75, covers the period from November 2, 1935, to March 28, 1936, at the rate of $5 per diem. The examples of the number of evenings in Knoxville, and Nashville (Asheville, N. C.) evidently first refer to the trip of November 2. It will be noted that no change in date was made for p. m. and a. m. notations, left Bryson City, N. C., 7:30 p. m., arrived Knoxville, Tenn., 11:15 p. m. Left Knoxville, Tenn., 6 a. m., arrived Bryson City, 9:45 a. m. The travel, according to Mr. Abbot, took place on November 2, only, and should have been recorded: Left Bryson City, N. C., 7:30 a. m., arrived Knoxville, Tenn., 11:15 a. m., left Knoxville, Tenn., 6 p. m., arrived Bryson City, N. C., 9:45 p. m., which would make no difference in the claimed allowance. Reference to order No. 5–1714, Dempster Bros., Inc., of Knoxville, Tenn., shows the purchase of a dipper stick for a Hanson shovel at a price of $125, November 4. So that this shovel would be in working order the following work day. Engineer White authorized the trip to Knoxville by Mr. Abbot, Saturday, November 2, 1935, to see if a dipper stick could be made up special for the shovel at a savings in cost and delivery, both of which were accomplished, and this dipper stick was picked up the following Monday morning.

The other trip, February 24, 1936, covered an authorized trip to Knoxville, Tenn., to a moving picture showing by Sam Horne Co. of methods and tools used to correct motor trouble on tractors and trucks. Messrs. Inskeep, Tramell, and Thurman were at this showing, but did not claim allowance. Mr. Abbott also on this trip made arrangements with Burdette Oxygen Co. to have acetylene and oxygen left at Sam Horne Co., which was needed and taken back with him.

There were not numerous instances where travel orders were issued and reimbursement of per diem claimed by various employees who would leave their official headquarters between 7 and 10 a. m. in the morning for points within the park nearby and return to their official headquarters early in the evening. We will explain here one of the examples, that of O. B. Fleming, Jr., clerk, who was stationed at the Bryson City office and prepared for a time all orders for the North Carolina camps, and in a number of instances was required to get the material. There is a prolific appearance on vouchers approved for him recording leaving

Bryson City at 7 a. m., returning at 6 p. m., left Bryson City at 9 a. m., returned at 8 p. m., and so forth. Even though the claims were within the law, for a long period consideration was not given to them on our reasoning that the employee was only out lunch money, and it was not a fair claim, but after deliberation he was advised that sufficient claims to reimburse him for his lunches would be presented for payment. He withheld submission of some, none would be considered until Chief Ranger Needham had placed a penciled O. K. on them, and even thereafter vouchers were returned to cut down on some of the claims. Mr. Fleming entered on duty July 22, 1935, and from then until October 31, 1936, a period of 15 months, five vouchers were placed in line for payment, totaling $44.50. Other travel vouchers originating in the Bryson City office had to receive a penciled O. K. by Mr. Needham before being given consideration, and violations of travel regulations are grossly misrepresented to you by the auditors. Your files will show that one former landscape architect of this park who used a Government truck for a joy ride was summarily recommended for dismissal.

To refute the examination that indicated travelers were not making deductions for meals and lodgings furnished at camps although the vouchers showed the travelers had stopped at the camps overnight, there is sent herewith letter of January 22, 1935, prior to the period of audit covered, from the finance officer, returning two travel vouchers insisting that a statement must be placed on page 2 of the vouchers signed by the claimant showing whether or not any Government meals and/or lodgings were furnished without charge, etc. A copy of the letter has been made for our files. This at least shows that the finance officer was watching for any such irregularity, and so were we, and I am sure the General Accounting Office was. There were six particular travel vouchers presented quite regularly each month during the most of the period audited, by the type mappers, Horace Denton, Victor Denton, George McPherson, Dempsey Jenkins, Francis R. McGovern, and John B. Quinn, that may have been misconstrued as showing them staying in E. C. W. camps. To provide for their subsistence during the estimated 18-month period that they would be at different points in the park, for from 4 to 10 weeks at each, they were allowed a $1.50 per diem. Statements on the vouchers show "at Mingus Creek side camp," "at Forney Creek side camp," etc. This cannot be interpreted as staying at E. C. W. camps, nor being furnished quarters, as a tent was merely pitched at each so-called side camp, miles in the woods, and the allowance of $1.50 per diem was trimmed to that figure to provide for their subsistence only. This is substantiated by the fact that $2 was the regular allowance and even with a deduction of one-fifth for lodging, they would still be entitled to $1.60 per diem. The finance officer questioned these vouchers at first, but, upon proper explanation, passed them for payment.

The cost reports were not in agreement with the allotment ledgers, as indirect charges of overhead of detached employees, cost of their trucks, and purchase of tools and equipment were not included in the monthly progress and cost report submitted for each camp, although possibly we should have understood this expense should have been distributed on some percentage basis over all the camps. The instructions in memorandum R–11 have been carefully noted, and are being followed.

It will be noted in the report of Auditor Britton, December 13, 1935, approved by you, that reference is made to the preparation of vouchers, in this office, and was apparently condoned up to that time. Now that the new procedure has been installed since the visit of the auditors, we are as well pleased with it as they and you are. Mention is made by you of confirming purchase orders being issued after receipt of the material. We will not attempt to offer excuses or reasons justifying any such instances, but will advise that, even now, some purchase orders made out prior to the receipt of materials must require duplication of work in that receipted purchase orders will not be accepted by the finance officer unless exact prices and terms are listed thereon, even though the auditors instructed estimated figures for encumbrance, where actual quantities, prices, and terms were not available should be used. They did say that quotations should be secured prior to purchase whenever possible on materials. You will note for example in the instructions issued August 31, 1936, and effective September 1, 1936, upon recommendations of the auditors, orders for estimated monthly quantities of gasoline should be made at the beginning of each month. This, of course, necessitates reconciliation of the estimated quantity with the deliveries made during the month for each particular purchase order issued, and rewriting the purchase order to correspond with each delivery. Nor can it be expected, being 37 miles distant from the nearest city where an assortment of the materials required can be secured that at the time of issuance of the purchase order we can in all cases have the correct prices and terms on a purchase order where the quantity and kind required are small. The delay and cost incident to securing exact figures at the time of issuance would be detrimental to the Government and unwarranted. You may be assured, however, that the instructions are being closely followed in that purchase orders are prepared and obligated prior to the receipt of material.

As to not anticipating our needs far enough in advance, this may have happened in some instances, but it is not our practice or intention. At certain times, particularly at the close of an E. C. W. period where a change in appropriation is made, it would be beneficial to good accounting under the system now installed, rather than stocking up and using all available balances, for it easily can be seen that the inventory of stock on hand at such times are charged to the old appropriations, rather than being carried to the next where they will be used.

Although more than $1,000,000 has been apportioned to this park under the E. C. W. program, it can be stated that no General Accounting Office exceptions have been received on the accounts thus far that could not be readily clarified, and even though there has been considerable pressure on the clerical division to secure materials and get the jobs started after in some cases long delays in necessary approval of the projects, there have not been many instances of direct violation of instructions. This reflection is overlooked as far as we are concerned but noted. However, does it not seem a gross exaggeration and reflection upon the intelligence of the General Accounting Office and the Finance Office, whom we would be prone to say are ignorant of regulations? They might miss one or two, but not numerous violations.

As to open-market purchases reported by the auditors in amounts exceeding the statutory limitations for which payments have not been made because competitive bids were not secured or contracts prepared, we fail to find any outstanding on our books. There was one particular outstanding open-market purchase in the amount of $576 from the Austin-Western Road Machinery Co. at the time of the departure of the auditors, which was explained in detail to the finance officer and the General Accounting Office. In this instance not only was a Cletrac "55" tractor valued at $4,100 broken down and holding up important road work, but the parts were secured at the factory at the lowest available prices. Prices could only be secured from the factory, or its dealer at a fixed price, and each day's delay held up the work of several enrollees, and work on a road in extremely bad condition. The questions raised by the unit head of the General Accounting Office were principally as to difference in prices appearing on our order from those billed, which was explained by the fact that prices on the order had been taken from a 1934 price list, which had been supplemented September 1, 1935, and at the time of preparing the order we did not have the latter price list. The voucher was approved by the General Accounting Office and paid by the Finance Department March 8, 1937.

Purchase Order 6–25 was not issued to W. J. Savage Co. in the amount of $112. This order number is in favor of Tidewater Supply Co. for $26.95. Purchase Order 2–5 was issued to W. J. Savage Co. in the amount of $170 less 2 percent. It constituted the purchase of two double-drum, double-purchase derrick crabs, which were required for handling heavy rocks and stone for the Elkmont Bridge. It is a known fact that Engineer P. L. Cox, upon instructions from Engineer Robert P. White, secured informal bids on this purchase from Dempster Bros., Inc.; W. J. Savage Co.; and Brooks-Payne-Osborne Co., of Knoxville, Tenn.; and the W. J. Savage Co. bid was the only one below $300. There is no record of this attached to the encumbrance copy, possibly because they may have been attached to the original voucher or that in July 1936 it was our understanding that the $300 limitation was still in effect. The statement that informal bids were secured may, however, be further substantiated through the companies mentioned.

It is to our advantage to secure materials from departmental contracts, whether mandatory or not, and this is done when we have knowledge of it, as it saves considerable clerical labor. It is unfortunate that the old method of a bound volume for all classes of materials contracted has been discontinued. The present method of issuance of loose-leaf awards on each class is unsatisfactory from our standpoint, as we receive some that are mandatory and some that are not, and do not receive them all, but we endeavor in all cases to adhere to the requirements of the General Schedule of Supplies. If there were numerous violations, it is a positive fact that at least one would have been caught by the Finance Office of the General Accounting Office.

We have had two exceptions on team hire and typewriter rental from the General Accounting Office with respect to rentals from employees on the park pay roll, which were deposited in the Treasury, and when this was called to our attention, the practice was immediately discontinued, and prior to the arrival of the auditors, or issuance of the E. C. W. Handbook.

The finance officer has withheld from payment a few invoices covering emergency purchases of time books, field books, etc., on which we were required to secure the necessary authority, which was done, and the bills have since been paid.

Your reference to the purchase of a typewriter contrary to office order No. 136 which requires national parks and monuments to requisition typewriters and other labor-saving devices through the Washington office has been carefully noted, and if this violation occurred in the 18-month period audited we will endeavor to eliminate a further recurrence.

Thus far we have received no complaint from the returns office requiring a signed copy of the low bid, and it has also been our practice to send to the contractor a copy signed by the procuring officer only. Original signatures are on the copy sent to the Audit Division. However, we will immediately take steps to secure three signed copies of the low bid in the future. In issuing bids, since Auditor Myers called the matter to our attention, a copy has been mailed to post offices for posting.

The present office location was established prior to the beginning of Emergency Conservation Work, but an addition to one office, and another building close by were rented for E. C. W. occupancy. All leases were renewed June 30, 1936, and heretofore as a survey of Gatlinburg has shown that no space was available, which was noted on the contracts, bids were not issued. You should carefully note on the contracts the amount of space secured for the cost, for comparison with other rentals in the service. If one of the buildings leased is moved, they must all be moved; that is, the space rented for office, storage of office supplies, and garage space for two cars. We do not believe it is your intention that we move into the park until administrative headquarters have been authorized and established. If it is your desire, prior to June 30, 1937, we will post notice in the Gatlinburg post office covering the rental of office space, garage space, and warehouse space required, which may or may not cause an increase in cost of the space now used. We know the lessor will not reduce his rate, when there is no other competition in the vicinity. He has been approached relative to this matter on several occasions.

Reference to contract I–23p–187 under the regular park appropriation will refute the report that under contract I–23p–749 E. C. W. rental of garage space was used for the purpose of storing of office supplies. This is the only space rented for storage of office supplies by the park, and the contract number has remained the same, dated July 1 of each year for the past 3 years. Contract No. 1–23p–749 (E. C. W.) was supplemented by Contract No. 1–23p–993, dated July 1, 1936, payable from the regular appropriation under the passenger-car account. There was no set-up for maintenance, repairs, and operation of these passenger cars prior to that time under the regular appropriation, and it was proper to make the charge to E. C. W. as they were used almost wholly on E. C. W. work.

We cannot see where any violation of contract regulations took place in the awarding of contracts numbered I–23p–22ER, I–23p–23ER, and I–23p–24ER, merely because of the fact that no quantity was stated in the bid that was sent out. It may have been desired that we try out the cement of each company, and since a minimum carload was required and ordered from each at no additional cost to the Government, there was nothing detrimental in the awards made under these contracts. Otherwise, it had been our policy where equal bids were received to favor the local merchant, as it was our understanding that this was the purpose of emergency or relief appropriations, with reference to the securing of both labor and material. We have carefully noted and will follow the instructions contained in the handbook, received November 27, 1936, as to drawing lots where bids are equal, and have also noted decision A–81117 dated November 28, 1936, of the General Accounting Office to the Secretary of the Interior suggesting that this is the preferable method. Both of these instructions were received after completion of the audit.

Contracts Nos. I–23p–800 and I–23p–801 accepted May 28 and 29, 1935, respectively, covering awards to the Tennessee Metal Culvert Co., in the total amount of $1,823.56 have been noted, and the assumption of the auditor that the contracts were prepared in a manner to evade the $1,000 limitation on field approval of contracts cannot be refuted at this time. We can only say that this is not our intention.

We are familiar with the regulations governing team hire, and it may be stated that this office was not responsible for the violations of hiring teams in amounts exceeding the open-market limitation. Project superintendents would advise this office of the necessity of this rental, estimating the use of same for short periods, at the expiration of which they would give justification for an extension of the rental, and prior to issuance of bids in some cases these rentals had exceeded the open-market limitation.

Your reference to the trade-in of tires and tubes under contract No. I–23p–756 E. C. W. has been noted, and there will not be a repetition of this irregularity. During the period audited, there were several sales of old tires and tubes recorded through the issuance of posted notices, and the amount secured for them was covered in the Treasury.

You have stated that 11 contracts were prepared by this office during the period July 1 through October 31, 1936. I–23p–12 E. C. W., dated October 31, 1936, was issued to McAfee-King Co. At the project superintendents' meeting today instructions will be given to these employees to anticipate their needs for a reasonable period sufficiently in advance to secure the materials through bid invitations where possible.

The property records were in poor condition, and are not correct as yet. Approximately 85 percent of Mr. Douglas' time was spent in an effort to secure an inventory. He succeeded in getting the work started, and after his departure an inventory of all E C. W. equipment was submitted to the regional office on October 21, 1936. The cards 10–191, are in agreement with the inventory and quarterly corrections subsequent to that time, and Forms 10–133 are being used to cover transfers of property. All tools are being marked, and when adjustments are made to cover all changes in N. P. S. property, during this month, the card records will be in agreement with the field records, and all properly stamped. This has been a considerable task, but there has been a decided improvement in this work.

The accumulation of empty oil barrels was disposed of to the various companies from whom they were secured, and project superintendents have been instructed at meetings to promptly return them, and a memorandum will be issued immediately so that responsibility will rest with the superintendents for prompt return of these barrels. We have received one bill from the Gulf Refining Co. for the loss of two empty oil barrels in 1933, which we spent considerable time in trying to locate. The persons signing for the barrels could not be held responsible for them, as they did not use the oil contained in them. We have done nothing about this bill for $16, as we do not know what action to take in the matter. The responsibility will be fixed for future return of oil barrels.

The garages have been instructed to report to this office work done and parts used on equipment of other Government agencies. To cover work done and parts used on trucks payable from the park appropriation, we believe it should be sufficient to cover replacement of the parts only, which is being done.

There has been improvement in the accounting work of this park due in part to the assistance of the auditors, issuance of clarified instructions in the handbook, and to the fact that employees are becoming more familiar with the work. We do not believe that there is a park in the system that has had as many as 17 E. C. W. camps at one time, nor do we believe there is one that has been handicapped with less experienced help. All of our office employees have started without previous knowledge of Government procedure, and the chief clerk has always had to do as much as fellow clerks, thereby allowing little time for supervision, and having to instruct each and every one of the clerks. At the present time, two under clerks are needed, one for each of the garages, if records are to be maintained properly. Recommendations are going to be made for these positions in the very near future, and it is hoped that favorable consideration will be given to our recommendations.

In conclusion, I desire to state that in my many years' experience as superintendent, never has an auditor come into my park with the supercritical attitude of Messrs. Myers and Douglas. Helpfulness should have been their first objective, but it was secondary to criticism. The most of their criticisms could have been covered by a simple statement that our system was not in line with the newly approved accounting system, of which we had not the slightest inkling until they arrived. This statement would have obviated the necessity of a 78-page report. Their attitude and manner of speaking were most objectionable. I venture the assertion that few if any chief clerks in the Service could have done better than Chief Clerk Ray under the circumstances.

Sincerely yours,

J. R. EAKIN, Superintendent.

Mr. McKELLAR. Before I close, Mr. President, I wish to say one other thing. I do not know whether or not Senators have informed themselves as to the tremendous misuse of automobiles in many of the Departments.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. It seems to me that the proviso seeking to prevent any of the appropriation going to this superintendent is not sufficient. Could not the Secretary transfer him to some other division in the Department of the Interior and pay him out of some other fund?

Mr. McKELLAR. I was told that the language of the amendment was sufficient. If the Senator can make the language any stronger, I will cheerfully accept his suggestion.

Mr. CONNALLY. We can very easily make it stronger by saying that no part of any appropriations carried in the bill shall be used for that purpose.

Mr. McKELLAR. Very well.

Mr. CONNALLY. I am not interested in the matter.

Mr. McKELLAR. Perhaps the language suggested by the Senator would be better.

Mr. President, I move that the committee amendment be amended by the use of the words just suggested by the Senator from Texas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's suggestion will be in the form of an amendment to the committee amendment. Will the Senator please state it?

Mr. McKELLAR. In line 5, on page 112, after the word "appropriation", I move to insert the words "in this act."

Mr. CONNALLY. I suggest to the Senator that after the words "no part of" he move to strike out "this" and insert "any."

Mr. McKELLAR. I move that after the word "appropriation" the words "in this act" be inserted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Tennessee to the committee amendment. [Putting the question.] The Chair is in doubt.

On a division, the amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McKELLAR. I now move to amend the committee amendment on page 112, line 4, by striking out the word "this" just before the word "appropriation" and inserting the word "any."

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. HAYDEN. I suggest to the Senator, as a matter of parliamentary justice, that the limitation would be proper in this bill; but to say that no other appropriation shall be expended for the purpose would be a change in existing law.

Mr. McKELLAR. No; "no part of any appropriation in this act." That is all right.

Mr. HAYDEN. I thought the Senator meant any appropriation.

Mr. McKELLAR. No.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Tennessee to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on agreeing to the committee amendment, as amended.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. President, in the first place I wish to say that I never heard of Mr. Eakin before last week. I do not know him. I do not know what his party affiliations may be. I have read the testimony which the Senator has submitted; and it seems to me to show a large number of minor irregularities. I do not see, however, that the gentleman has ever been charged with any moral turpitude.

By the amendment, particularly as amended, we are throwing out, without any trial or any hearing, a man who has spent his entire life in the Park Service, who has grown up in the Service until he has reached the position of superintendent of one of the great parks in the United States. The Senator conducted some kind of a star-chamber session in which he examined Mr. Myers, the accountant. Mr. Myers did not come before the committee. The committee did not have any opportunity to cross-examine him. The chairman of the subcommittee has just admitted that Mr. Eakin, or his representative, requested an opportunity to appear before the committee if the question came up. He had no hearing before the committee. Even if there had been a hearing, it seems to me perfectly clear that this is not the body to try anybody for any offense against the laws of the United States. If Mr. Eakin has committed any offense he can be tried, and if he is convicted he can be removed. This is not the place to do it. It seems to me that the proposed procedure is simply trial by lynch law because of the personal feeling of one Member of the Senate against a particular man.

I have not been able to obtain the letter from the Secretary of the Interior, but certainly the Senate will not act unfavorably to this man without at least hearing from his superior officer. We have a right to that hearing.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. TAFT. It seems to me the Senate of the United States is not constitutionally empowered to try persons in the executive service and remove this man or that man simply on charges which are submitted, without even a trial by an investigating committee of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. TAFT. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator referred to personal feeling on my part. I am sure the Senator will correct his statement. I personally have nothing against Mr. Eakin. My objections to the man are as an official. I hardly know the man. I would not know him if I were to see him today. I met him on one occasion. He came up to speak to me when I was in Gatlinburg, Tenn. That is the only time I recall ever seeing him. I would not know him today if I should see him. I have nothing personal against him, but I am opposed to that kind of a man having such a place as he occupies in the Government service and handling as much as $500,000 or $600,000 of the Government's money.

Mr. TAFT. Any court or any department would give a man a full hearing and a chance to present his own case. The Senate of the United States, if it adopted the amendment, would be denying to him the constitutional right that every man has and would be throwing him out of his livelihood and the occupation in which he has spent his entire life. I submit the amendment should be defeated.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, there is just one point I should like to clear up, if I can. Do I understand that there is in existence a letter from the Secretary of the Interior on this subject which has not been produced for the information of the Senate?

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not know of any such letter. I appeal to my friend the Senator from Arizona if he has such a letter to produce it. I have not any such letter.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Michigan yield to me?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Yes; I yield to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. HAYDEN. The Secretary of the Interior sent me a letter—frankly, I will say to the Senator I have never read it— in regard to this matter, upon the assumption that there would be a hearing before the subcommittee of which I am chairman. The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR] came to me and indicated that he wanted such a hearing. I suggested to the Senator that if a hearing were held, nothing would be accomplished, because, as the matter then stood, it was wholly for executive determination. Then the Senator from Tennessee indicated that he would be entirely satisfied if there were printed in the hearings the matter that now appears there as the report of the investigator, and certain comments on it. That was all that happened so far as my subcommittee was concerned. There was no hearing; there was no occasion for the agent to appear; there was no occasion for the Secretary to appear; and there was no occasion for a defense, because the matter stood in the situation I have outlined to the Senate. I have sent for the letter from my files and shall be glad to insert it in the RECORD, if that will help the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. VANDENBERG. If it is a letter asserting the attitude of the Secretary of the Interior toward one of his old employees, I should think that, as a matter of simple justice, the Senate should have the benefit of the Secretary's official opinion before it determines to do what the Secretary himself should have done if the charges are true. Upon what possible theory can the Senate proceed to convict this man in the absence of a letter from his superior officer which is known to be existent but which is not produced?

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I now have the letter, and I ask unanimous consent that the clerk read it. I never have read it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I am glad that finally we will hear the letter read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the letter will be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, April 4, 1939.

Hon. CARL HAYDEN,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR HAYDEN: I am writing you as chairman of the subcommittee of the Senate Appropriations Committee which is now considering the appropriation bill for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year 1940. It has come to my attention that certain charges have been made before your committee concerning Mr. J. Ross Eakin, Superintendent of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. I believe that the injustice which is done to Mr. Eakin by those charges is sufficiently great to warrant a letter of explanation so that the facts may be available to you and your committee.

At the outset I wish to point out that Mr. Eakin has had an enviable record in public service over a long period of years, a record doing great credit to his reputation for honesty, sincerity, industry, and competence. He is a World War veteran who had had considerable experience in Government service as an engineer of the Geological Survey before his transfer to the National Park Service in 1921. Since that time he has held responsible positions with the National Park Service which he has discharged with great credit to himself and to the Service. As superintendent of Glacier National Park and of Grand Canyon National Park he established a reputation for being able to cope with and overcome particularly difficult situaticns in park development and public relations. Consequently, it was not unnatural that in 1931 he was transferred to the superintendency at Great Smoky Mountains National Park, a newly created park in a then new area for national park operations, where a particularly difficult problem in park development was anticipated.

Although I do not know the exact charges which have been made against Mr. Eakin before your committee, I understand that they are similar to charges which have formerly been the subject of correspondence and discussions between Senator McKELLAR and this Department. Broadly speaking, the accusations may be considered in two categories: Those involving mismanagement and possible loss or misuse of funds, and those involving political activity or favoritism. The accusations of both types have been determined to be entirely without foundation.

The charges involving mismanagement and possible loss or misuse of funds are based on audit examinations and reports made by this Department. It is true that the audit reports revealed irregularities in the accounts and records of the park, particularly in connection with Civilian Conservation Corps activities during the period from 1933 to 1936. It is also true, however, that those irregularities have been constantly diminished in scope since attention was first called to them and are now almost entirely eliminated. Furthermore, I wish to emphasize the fact that the irregularities which were found to exist were, with very few exceptions, merely irregularities in accounting and clerical procedure and the maintenance of the records. No actual shortage or misuse of funds has been discovered despite very careful and thorough examination

That there should have been irregularities in the accounting and clerical procedure and in the records is not surprising. In 1933 this was a new park in the process of initial development. The clerical and office staff was small. The superintendent himself was then and thereafter required to spend most of his time outside the office in actual development work. During 1933 the Civilian Conservation Corps became operative. Sixteen camps were created to assist in the development of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park—a larger number than were assigned to any other park. Naturally the responsibilities of the superintendent for actual supervision of development work were greatly increased by the creation of that large number of camps. And, likewise, the amount and complexity of the clerical and accounting work of the park office increased manyfold. There was no compensating increase in clerical assistance. Ultimately one additional clerk was supplied for the park by the Washington office, but his incompetence became apparent and he was separated from the service. Furthermore, the emphasis in the Civilian Conservation Corps program was to create camps and to get their personnel on constructive work as quickly as possible. The formulation and promulgation of regulations governing the clerical and accounting work incident to the activities of the camps necessarily lagged far behind. At the time of the audit of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park for the period ending October 31, 1936 (which is the audit from which the charges against Mr. Eakin arose), it appears that the park office had not even yet received the new comprehensive regulations governing procedure, on the basis of which the audit was conducted. In view of all these circumstances it seems clear to me that Superintendent Eakin cannot be held subject to valid criticism for the irregularities which were found.

I have stated that none of the irregularities have been found to have resulted in any shortage or misuse of funds. The auditors actually did question, on the basis of the books alone, the propriety of a few items of expenditure, but all of those have been satisfactorily explained by additional information. One item, however, I wish to mention specially, since it is an item on which Senator McKELLAR has placed some emphasis. In the audit for the period ending October 31, 1936, the auditors reported that the costs reports left "unaccounted for" a total of $132,040.62. It has been suggested that this figure represents a shortage in the funds of the park. That is not so. The audit report itself makes it clear that the $132,040.62 was not a shortage, but was merely the amount expended which should have been posted to particular projects but was not. The $132,040.62 discrepancy was purely one of bookkeeping and, in fact, one pertaining to supplemental accounts and having no effect on the general ledger accounts of the park. A supplemental account is set up showing the amounts of the total funds available which are allocated to each individual project to be undertaken. As expenditures are made they are to be shown not only in the general accounts but also they are to be prorated and charged to particular projects and, as so prorated, are to be entered on the supplemental account to offset the allocations to the particular projects which have been entered there. The $132,040.62 item is merely the amount of expenditures actually made and recorded in the general accounts, which had not then been entered in the supplemental account. It is therefore apparent that no shortage of funds is involved.

Those charges against Mr. Eakin which concern alleged political activity or favoritism were fully and carefully investigated at my direction by the Division of Investigations of this Department and were shown to be entirely unfounded. I can most simply present this matter to you by quotation from the memorandum, reporting the result of the investigation, from the Director of the Division of Investigations. The substance of that memorandum is fully borne out by the voluminous evidence collected as a result of the thorough and impartial inquiry conducted by that Division. The more important portions of the memorandum are as follows:

"Senator McKELLAR, of Tennessee, stated he had information that a concerted effort was being made by Superintendent J. Ross Eakin of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park to prevent residents of Tennessee and Democrats from obtaining positions in the park, and that substantially all the employees are Republicans. He further stated he had information that Superintendent Eakin was politically active and was involved in some trouble at the polls; that Mr. Eakin unlawfully solicited landowners for the sale of land adjacent to the park to the National Park Service; and that all reports concerning Mr. Eakin showed his unfitness for the position he now occupies.

"The investigation discloses that the informants to whom the special agents were referred by Senator McKELLAR had no knowledge of their own which would substantiate the aforesaid allegations; that of the 27 National Park Service employees employed in the park, 12 were born in Tennessee and 5 in North Carolina; that 15 were listed in congressional districts in Tennessee and 6 in North Carolina, leaving 6 employees listed from other States; that these latter 6 obtained their positions in the park either by transfer within the National Park Service or were selected from the national civil-service registers without regard to political affiliations; and that Mr. Eakin was not politically active nor was he involved in any trouble at the polls.

"It is shown that Mr. Eakin, as part of his duties, facilitated the acquisition of park land within the proposed boundary line by contacting some of the landowners adjacent to the park, but that no undue pressure was exerted upon them by Mr. Eakin. All employees of the park, with but one exception, and numerous persons of prominence in the community gave sworn statements that Mr. Eakin is competent, efficient, and a fit person for the position he now occupies. W. Conley Henry, park ranger, stated that, considering Mr. Eakin's age and the problems confronting him at the park, he would say Mr. Eakin was not fit for the position of superintendent."

* * * * * * *

"According to the sworn statements of D. Neal Adams, Clarence C. Corpening, and J. Mayes, camp manager, senior clerk, and clerk, respectively, for the Bureau of Public Roads, Department of Agriculture, Gatlinburg and Elkmont, Tenn., they conspired to obtain information as to how Superintendent Eakin, Robert P. White, engineer, Chief Clerk Thomas J. Ray, and other employees at the park would vote in the 1936 election. The manner and method as to how this information was to be obtained was left to the discretion of J. Mayes, election officer at the Gatlinburg precinct, Gatlinburg, Tenn. Mr. Mayes stated that he marked the ballots of the above-named park employees by ink smears from his fingertip and after they were counted he took them into his possession. These ballots were turned over to W. T. Kennerly, attorney, at Knoxville, Tenn., who recently transmitted them to Senator McKELLAR.

"During the course of the investigation an opportunity was afforded all persons having any information relative to the issues involved to submit whatever evidence they had and it is believed that the report presents a comprehensive summary of the attitude and feeling of the citizens in the locality concerning Superintendent Eakin and his administration of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park."

In this connection I also quote a sworn affidavit made by Mr. Eakin concerning his ballot in the 1936 election:

"On this 28th day of March 1939, at Washington, D. C., before me, Harold W. Lincoln, a special agent, of the Department of the Interior, personally appeared J. R. Eakin, who, having been advised of the penalty of law for making any statement of a material fact knowing it to be false, deposes and says:

"I am J. Ross Eakin, residing in Gatlinburg, Tenn., and am the same person who made affidavit to Special Agents Drexler and Lincoln by writing, dated January 20, 1939, and desire to make the following supplemental statement:

"It is my understanding that it has been claimed that in the 1936 general election I voted for Landon for President. This is untrue for I voted for President Roosevelt.

"I had heard rumors from a source which I do not remember that my ballot was to be checked to see for whom I voted. I marked my ballot, laid it on top of the ballot box, turned around and walked from the room. Any ballot voted for Mr. Landon was certainly not the ballot I marked.

"I have read the above statement and, to the best of my knowledge and belief, it is true and correct.

"J. ROSS EAKIN.

"Sworn to and subscribed to before me this 28th day of March 1939.

"HAROLD W. LINCOLN,
"Special Agent."

If the election officials saw fit to mark Mr. Eakin's ballot for identification, as is clearly established, it may well be wondered whether they might not also substitute a ballot.

From a careful consideration of all the facts I am convinced that there is no merit in any of the charges against Superintendent Eakin, and it is my desire that you and your committee may also understand this matter fully.

Sincerely yours,

HAROLD L. ICKES,
Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, this is the first time I have ever seen or heard that letter. The letter evidently was prepared by the Department and signed by the Secretary of the Interior. The Secretary of the Interior is entirely mistaken about the matter. He says there was no shortage in this man's accounts. Here is the statement of his own examiner:

Total funds allotted	$533,145.00
Less: Type-mapping allotments	19,127.00
Total allotments for work program	514,018.00
Less: Balance unexpended (adjusted)	602.95
Total to be accounted for	513,415.05
Cost reported:
Fifth period	175,589.98
Sixth period	149,242.10
First half seventh period	56,542.35
Total costs reported	381,374.43
Unaccounted for	132,040.62

When an examiner examines the accounts of a man, and states that there is $132,040.62 unaccounted for, what does it mean? That seemed to me at the time to be unusual. It now seems to me to be unusual. Therefore, I took occasion to examine Mr. Myers about that very matter.

Senator McKELLAR. There is a discrepancy of $132,040.62, and nobody on earth could tell from these books where the $132,000 was?

Mr. MYERS. You could not tell what jobs it was properly chargeable to.

Senator McKELLAR. If you could not tell what jobs it was properly charged to, there is no record of it, is there? In other words, suppose a man on one job had $40,000. He might have spent $30,000 and put the other $10,000 in his pocket so far as the cost record was concerned?

Mr. MYERS. No; that does not mean that. For instance, down there they had a big pay roll at the office, what they call a detached pay roll, and that detached pay roll was not spread over the jobs that were being worked on in the part. I found that that was part of the cause for the difference, but I could not prove it up to the penny. I did not know where it all went.

Senator McKELLAR. I will give you your explanation of it, as given on page 57:

"As the above-mentioned 'unaccounted for' represents, roughly, 25 percent of the total to be accounted for, this matter was discussed with Mr. Spillers—"

There was $513,000 in the hands of this man to be accounted for; one-fourth of it was unaccounted for and the auditor wanted to know where it went.

Mr. Spillers was the engineer?

Mr. MYERS. He was the engineer keeping the records.

Senator McKELLAR [reading]:

"And he advised that during the fifth period (April 1 to September 30, 1935), the 'detached pay roll' was not included in the supervision reported on the monthly cost reports. The detached pay roll—"

That is the one he referred to—

"for this period amounted to $17,259. Further discussion with Mr. Spillers disclosed that expenditures for equipment appearing on allotment ledgers were not included in costs reported. As stated above, it was impossible, without an endless amount of work to ascertain just what items are included in the cost reported."

That was correct?

Mr. MYERS. That is right; yes, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. You thought this was such an unusual circumstance that you ought to talk to Mr. Spillers, the general engineer who had charge of the books, did you not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. And you called his attention to this unaccounted-for amount of $132,040.62; did you not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. And when you did that, he said there was a detached pay roll that would account for it; and when that was brought in, it was $17,259. Is that right?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. If you deduct $17,259 from $132,040.62, it leaves $114,781.62. They never did find any detached or other pay rolls that accounted for that difference, did they?

Mr. MYERS. Well, as I say, they would just tell me of items that they did not include. They did not prove it up to me.

There was a shortage of $114,000. The Secretary of the Interior says that is an "irregularity." A shortage of $114,000 may be an irregularity to the Secretary of the Interior, but it ought not to be a mere irregularity to the Senate or to the Congress.

I read further:

Senator McKELLAR. You had to take their word for it. They did not prove it up to you, did they?

Mr. MYERS. Mr. Spillers' cost records were in such shape that I could not determine what amounts he had included and what amounts he had left out.

Senator McKELLAR. So far as the records show—as this record shows—Mr. Spillers accounted for only $17,259 of that unaccounted-for fund; did he not? That is all he accounted for?

Mr. MYERS. Well, as I say, he told me about other things, but he did not show me the amount.

Senator McKELLAR. Here was $132,000 unaccounted for. You thought it was of such moment that you submitted it to Mr. Spillers and demanded an explanation from him, as a good auditor, did you not?

Mr. MYERS. Yes, sir.

Senator McKELLAR. And when you submitted it to him, he gave you vouchers on what he called a detached account of $17,259, did he not?

Mr. MYERS. That, as I recall now, was the only specific amount that he pointed out.

Leaving $114,000, plus, short in this man's account, which the Secretary says, in the long letter of 10 pages he has written, was an "irregularity."

Senator McKELLAR. Is that the way the Government's business ought to be transacted, Mr. Myers?

Mr. MYERS. We have changed that method. The Park Service has changed that way of reporting those costs since then.

Senator McKELLAR. Yes; but what about those responsible for it at that time? Was not that about the loosest piece of business that ever you saw?

Mr. MYERS. There was not a whole lot of attention paid to the cost records back in those days.

I desire to read further at another place. Mr. Ickes says the defalcations and irregularities have been later. In the two reports, one made in 1938 and the other in 1939, the same auditor shows that the same superintendent is still conducting an improper, incompetent, and inefficient business there, and criticizes him most severely.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. How can the Senate reconcile the statement made by the examiner, or the auditor, with the letter which has just been read by the clerk of the Senate, written by the Secretary of the Interior?

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not think they can be reconciled.

Mr. LUCAS. Whom is the Senate to follow? It seems to me we are in somewhat of a dilemma. The examiner says that this man is a crook. On the other hand, the Secretary of the Interior, by written testimony, says that the general reputation for uprightness and good character and honesty of this man is excellent, and he wants him retained.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator heard the letter. The letter, like the letter of Mr. Eakin himself, was in confession and avoidance. The truth is that Mr. Ickes knew that these charges were made and that they were before the committee; and the record shows, by the Secretary's letter, that Mr. Eakin was in Washington and going over this matter with the Department officials. Yet he did not come before the committee, and he did not ask to come before the committee. He let the committee alone; he let them severely alone. He virtually confessed.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. I am not a member of the committee, and know nothing about the matter personally, but I think the able Senator from Arizona stated he had received a letter wherein this gentleman said he wanted to be heard.

Mr. McKELLAR. Did the Senator from Arizona say that?

Mr. HAYDEN. No; I received a letter a month or more ago stating that if this matter came before the subcommittee and there was a hearing, he would like to be heard. We had no hearing.

Mr. McNARY. It was the same thing; no hearing was held, hence he was not called.

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, yes; his attention was called to it.

Mr. McNARY. Wait a moment.

Mr. McKELLAR. The report of the investigator was published in the Knoxville papers.

Mr. McNARY. Oh, well——

Mr. McKELLAR. Everyone knew about it, and this man has been here.

Mr. McNARY. Who reads the Knoxville papers, anyway?

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. Eakin read them; and they were all on his side, too.

Mr. McNARY. I base my question on the simple and frank statement of the chairman of the subcommittee, that he did receive a letter from this gentleman, the committee did not hold hearings, and hence he was not called; but the simple fact is that he wanted to be called.

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not understand the Senator from Arizona to say that.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. Eakin wrote me a letter a month or more ago stating, in substance, that he understood there might be some matters affecting him before the committee, and if there were, he would be glad to appear. That was the last I heard of him.

Mr. McKELLAR. He was here and made an affidavit just about 2 weeks ago. We were having hearings at that time. He was here in Washington.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Tennessee a question?

Mr. McKELLAR. Indeed the Senator may.

Mr. GLASS. The examiner and auditor, whose report is so absolutely in conflict with the letter of the Secretary of the Interior, is still in the employ of the Interior Department?

Mr. McKELLAR. He is still in their employ, made a report on this very question in 1938, on this very superintendent, another one in 1939, and sets out a host of delinquencies—not so many as in the first, but, as the Senator will see in the record, sets out a number of delinquencies.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. In line with what the distinguished Senator from Virginia just said, I wish to make a final observation in connection with what seems to me a very unusual situation in the Department of the Interior. If the report of this examiner is true, Eakin should be discharged. If we take what the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Ickes, says, as correct, then the examiner who made the report ought to be discharged.

Mr. McKELLAR. That may be so. I have no facts to indicate that there is anything wrong with Mr. Myers, who comes from the State of the distinguished defender of Mr. Eakin, the Senator from Ohio [Mr. TAFT]. I saw him but once. He impressed me as being a very honest man and a very able accountant.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Was this letter presented to the Senate Committee on Appropriations when it passed judgment on Mr. Eakin?

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator means Mr. Eakin's letter?

Mr. VANDENBERG. Yes.

Mr. McKELLAR. It was not.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The letter had been received prior to the action of the committee, had it not?

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not know. I never heard of the letter until we got on the floor today.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, this action was taken at the very end of the proceedings of the committee. I did not have the letter with me. I had not read it, never heard it read, until now. The letter was sent to me purely as a precautionary measure, that if hearings were held by the committee, it might go into the record. No hearings were held, and it did not go into the record; and that is all there is to it.

Mr. VANDENBERG. No hearings were held, except ex parte, to the extent that Mr. Eakin was indicted and not given a chance to defend himself.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. Eakin was in Washington all the time while the committee was sitting. He was in Washington fully a week, to my knowledge. I did not see him, but I know he was here. He could have defended himself if he had wanted to. He knew about this testimony, about these reports.

Mr. VANDENBERG. How could he have defended himself?

Mr. McKELLAR. He saw the reports which had been published in the hearings.

Mr. VANDENBERG. If the thing was done so suddenly that even the chairman of the subcommittee could not produce a letter, I do not know how Mr. Eakin could have produced himself.

Mr. McKELLAR. The thing to which the Senator from Arizona is referring is the amendment which was offered prohibiting the Secretary of the Treasury from using the funds appropriated in paying this superintendent.

Mr. VANDENBERG. That is his death warrant.

Mr. McKELLAR. Unless some private person, or unless the Senator from Ohio, perhaps, or someone else——

Mr. TAFT. Why should a man ask for a hearing before the Committee on Appropriations when, so far as he knew, there were no proceedings before the Committee on Appropriations charging him with anything, or proposing to oust him, or cut off his salary? He did not know that. It seems to me the Committee on Appropriations is the last place where a man would think he was going to be tried and driven from office, and I cannot think of any reason why he should have requested the Committee on Appropriations for the right to appear, unless he was informed that a proceeding was pending before that committee to oust him.

Mr. McKELLAR. There is another provision in the same bill as it came from the House, is there not?

Mr. HAYDEN. To what does the Senator refer?

Mr. McKELLAR. Another provision of the exact kind, because it was that which gave me the suggestion to take the matter up in this way.

The Department refuses absolutely to get rid of this dishonest and, I believe, utterly corrupt superintendent, and I think this is the effective way to get him out.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, it is perfectly clear to me that if the report of the examiner and auditor of the Department is true, the Department itself is subject to severe criticism for not removing this man. If it is not true, Secretary Ickes himself is a proper subject of severe criticism for not removing the examiner and auditor, because his letter and the report are in absolute contravention of one another, and it seems to me that he ought to appear before the committee and justify his conduct in retaining these people in office if they have slandered Mr. Eakin, as he suggests they have done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the committee amendment, as amended. [Putting the question.] The nays appear to have it.

Mr. McKELLAR. I demand the yeas and nays on this question.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McNARY (when his name was called). On this vote I have a pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] and will vote. I vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DAVIS. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. Not knowing how he would vote on this question, I transfer my pair to the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. BYRNES. I have a general pair with the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. In his absence, I withhold my vote.

Mr. AUSTIN. I am requested to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON]; and

The Senator from Maine [Mr. WHITE] with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY].

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST], the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN], the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BULOW], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. CLARK], the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the Senator from New York [Mr. MEAD], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], the Senator from Louisiana

[Mr. OVERTON], the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL], the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] are detained on public business.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HUGHES], and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS] are unavoidably detained.

The Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the Senator from California [Mr. DOWNEY], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HERRING], the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. RADCLIFFE] are attending various committee meetings.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote the yeas are 28, and the nays are 30.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask for a recapitulation of the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The vote will be recapitulated.

The vote was recapitulated.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I inquire how I am recorded?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is not recorded.

Mr. WAGNER. I vote "yea."

Mr. HATCH. I am recorded as voting "yea." I desire to be recorded as voting "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 28, nays 31, as follows:

So the amendment of the committee, as amended, was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the next amendment reported by the committee.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, on page 115, line 4, after the name "General Grant National Park", to strike out "$126,735" and insert "$131,735", so as to read:

Sequoia National Park, Calif.: For administration, protection, and maintenance, including not exceeding $1,275 for the purchase, maintenance, operation, and repair of motor-driven passenger-carrying vehicles for the use of the superintendent and employees in connection with general park work, including maintenance and repair of the Generals Highway between the boundaries of Sequoia and General Grant National Parks, $131,735, and the unexpended balance of the appropriation of $25,000 contained in the Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1939, under this head for the development of Crystal Cave and the approach road thereto is continued available for this purpose until June 30, 1940.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 117, after line 16, to insert:

Manassas National Battlefield Park, Va.: For the construction of an administration-museum building in the Manassas National Battlefield Park, Va., $56,000, to remain available until expended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 118, line 25, after the word "protection", to insert "improvement", and on page 119, line 7, after the name "Nevada", to strike out "$99,730" and insert "$124,730", so as to read:

Boulder Dam, National Recreational Area, Arizona and Nevada: For administration, protection, improvement, and maintenance of the recreational activities of the Boulder Dam National Recreational Area and any lands that may be added thereto by Presidential or other authority, including not exceeding $800 for the purchase, maintenance, operation, and repair of motor-driven passenger-carrying vehicles, and not to exceed $10,000 for the lighting of the airplane landing field at Boulder City, Nev., $124,730.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 119, after line 7, to insert:

Jefferson National Expansion Memorial: The unexpended balance of the funds made available by the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935 and allocated by Executive Order No. 7253 for the acquisition and development of a historic site under the act of August 21, 1935 (49 Stat. 666), to be known as the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial, contingent upon a contribution thereafter made by the city of St. Louis, Mo., as its proportionate sum for such purposes, is hereby reappropriated and made available until expended for acquisition and development of the said memorial.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 123, line 5, after the word "expended", to strike out "$4,000,000" and insert "$5,000,000", and in line 7, after the word "That", to strike out "$1,200,000" and insert "$1,500,000", so as to read:

Blue Ridge and Natchez Trace Parkways: For continuing the construction and maintenance, under the provisions of section 8 of the act of June 8, 1938 (52 Stat. 635), of the Blue Ridge and Natchez Trace Parkways, including not exceeding $3,100 for the purchase, maintenance, operation, and repair of motor-driven passenger-carrying vehicles, to be immediately available and remain available until expended $5,000,000, of which amount not to exceed $50,000 shall be available for personal services in the District of Columbia: Provided, That $1,500,000 and any other sums received from other sources for said Natchez Trace Parkway shall be allotted and expended ratably between the States of Mississippi, Alabama, and Tennessee according to mileage of said parkway in each respective State and said allotments shall be used for no other purpose: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior shall make a detailed statement of expenditures from this appropriation to the Senate and House Committees on Appropriations at the beginning of the next regular session of Congress.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Office of Education—Vocational education", on page 129, at the end of line 19, to strike out "$422,600" and insert "$428,200", so as to read:

Salaries and expenses: For carrying out the provisions of section 7 of the act entitled "An act to provide for the promotion of vocational education, and so forth", approved February 23, 1917, as amended by the act of October 6, 1917 (20 U. S. C. 15), and of section 4 of the act entitled "An act to provide for the further development of vocational education in the several States and Territories", approved June 8, 1936 (49 Stat. 1488), $428,200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "St. Elizabeths Hospital", on page 140, line 17, after the word "friends", to insert a semicolon and "not exceeding $1,000 for expenses of attendance at meetings or conventions concerned with the work of psychiatry, medicine, and other scientific subjects of interest to St. Elizabeths Hospital, when specifically authorized by the Secretary of the Interior", so as to read:

For support, clothing, and treatment in St. Elizabeths Hospital for the insane of insane persons from the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, insane inmates of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, persons charged with or convicted of crimes against the United States who are insane, all persons who have become insane since their entry into the military and naval services of the United States, insane civilians in the quartermaster service of the Army, insane persons transferred from the Canal Zone who have been admitted to the hospital and who are indigent, American citizens legally adjudged insane in the Dominion of Canada whose legal residence in one of the States, Territories, or the District of Columbia it has been impossible to establish, insane beneficiaries of the United States Employees' Compensation Commission, insane beneficiaries of the United States Veterans' Administration, and insane Indian beneficiaries of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, including not exceeding $27,000 for the purchase (including one at not to exceed $1,200), exchange, maintenance, repair, and operation of motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles for the use of the superintendent, purchasing agent, and general hospital business, and including not to exceed $185,000 for repairs and improvements to buildings and grounds, $1,227,280, including cooperation with organizations or individuals in scientific research into the nature, causes, prevention, and treatment of mental illness, and including maintenance and operation of necessary facilities for feeding employees and others (at not less than cost), and the proceeds therefrom shall reimburse the appropriation for the institution; and not exceeding $1,500 of this sum may be expended in the removal of patients to their friends; not exceeding $1,000 for expenses of attendance at meetings or conventions concerned with the work of psychiatry, medicine, and other scientific subjects of interest to St. Elizabeths Hospital, when specifically authorized by the Secretary of the Interior; not exceeding $1,500 in the purchase of such books, periodicals, and newspapers as may be required for the purposes of the hospital and for the medical library, and not exceeding $1,500 for the actual and necessary expenses incurred in the apprehension and return to the hospital of escaped patients.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Freedmen's Hospital", on page 143, line 5, before the word "for", to strike out "$314,620" and insert "$318,640"; in the same line, after the word "light", to insert "not exceeding $1,000 for expenses of attendance upon meetings of a technical nature, pertaining to hospital administration and medical advancement, when authorized by the Secretary of the Interior"; in line 20, before the word "including", to strike out "$480,820" and insert "$484,840"; and in line 22, after the word "of" where it occurs the second time, to strike out "$480,820" and insert "$484,840", so as to read:

For officers and employees and compensation for all other professional and other services that may be required and expressly approved by the Secretary of the Interior, $318,640; for subsistence, fuel and light, not exceeding $1,000 for expenses of attendance upon meetings of a technical nature, pertaining to hospital administration and medical advancement, when authorized by the Secretary of the Interior, clothing, to include white duck suits and white canvas shoes for the use of internes, and cotton or duck uniforms or aprons for cooks, maids, and attendants, and rubber surgical gloves, bedding, forage, medicine, medical and surgical supplies, surgical instruments, electric lights, repairs, replacement of X-ray apparatus, furniture; purchase, maintenance, and operation of passenger-carrying vehicles, including not exceeding $500 for the purchase of books, periodicals, and newspapers; and not to exceed $2,000 for the special instruction of pupil nurses, and other absolutely necessary expenses, $166,200; in all, for Freedmen's Hospital, $484,840, including reimbursement to the appropriation for Howard University of actual cost of heat and light furnished, of which amount of $484,840 one-half shall be chargeable to the District of Columbia and paid in like manner as other appropriations of the District of Columbia are paid.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That concludes the committee amendments.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, by direction of the committee I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 14, line 2, after the word "exhibits", it is proposed to strike out the colon and the word "Provided," and insert:

not to exceed $25,000 for employing persons or organizations, by contract or otherwise, for special reporting, engineering, technical, legal, and other services determined necessary by the Administrator, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U. S. C. 5), and without regard to the civil-service laws and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended: Provided, That of the $4,500,000 hereby made available for administrative expenses of the Authority, not to exceed $1,500,000 shall be available for such expenses incurred at the site, and in connection with the construction, of the United States Housing Authority non-Federal projects, and shall be reimbursed by the public housing agencies constructing such projects, and such reimbursements shall be available for administrative expenses of the Authority: Provided further, That hereafter all necessary expenses in connection with the management and operation of projects transferred to the Authority by Executive Order No. 7732 of October 27, 1937, as modified by Executive Order No. 7839 of March 12, 1938, may be considered as nonadministrative expenses for the purposes hereof, and be paid from the rents received from each transferred project: Provided further, That hereafter the funds made available for administrative expenses of the United States Housing Authority shall be available for the payment, when specifically authorized by the Administrator, of actual transportation expenses and not to exceed $10 per diem in lieu of subsistence and other expenses to persons serving, while away from their homes, without other compensation from the United States, in an advisory capacity to the Authority: Provided further.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona on behalf of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I offer a further committee amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 36, line 9, after the word "annum", it is proposed to insert a colon and the following:

Provided further, That hereafter the appropriation "Development of Indian arts and crafts" shall be available for the payment of not to exceed $10 per diem in lieu of subsistence and other expenses of members of the Indian Arts and Crafts Board, serving without other compensation from the United States while absent from their homes on official business of the Board.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona on behalf of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, on behalf of the committee I offer a further amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 144, line 13, it is proposed to insert a new section, as follows:

SEC. 4. That hereafter no part of this or any other appropriation for any executive department, establishment, or agency shall be used for the payment of long-distance telephone tolls except for the transaction of public business which the interests of the Government require to be so transacted; and all such payments shall be supported by a certificate by the head of the department, establishment, or agency concerned, or such subordinates as he may specially designate, to the effect that the use of the telephone in such instances was necessary in the interest of the Government.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona on behalf of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter from the Acting Comptroller General relating to the amendment just adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The letter is as follows:

COMPTROLLER GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, February 27, 1939.

Hon. CARL HAYDEN,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: There has been received your letter of February 13, 1939, as follows:

"Please furnish me with a statement of the statutory authority by which the Government pays charges for telephone messages made by administrative officials on departmental business. Could this authority be abolished or curtailed, in your opinion, without serious inconvenience to the functions of government?"

The authority for the payment by the Government of charges for telephone messages made by an administrative official on departmental business is an appropriation authority. For instance, the act of June 16, 1937, making appropriations for the Departments of State and Justice and for the judiciary, and for the Departments of Commerce and Labor for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938 (50 Stat. 261), provides under the heading of contingent expenses for the Department of State (50 Stat. 262), and under the heading contingent expenses for the Department of Justice, page 273, for the payment of "tolls." Under the heading of contingent expenses, Foreign Service, page 266, the appropriation authority is for the payment "for telephones and other similar services." As to the Department of Commerce and the Department of Labor, pages 283 and 298, respectively, the appropriation authority is for the payment "for telephone service." Similar provisions will be found in the annual appropriations for other departments and establishments of the Government.

Section 7 of the act of August 23, 1912, 37 Stat. 414, provided: "That no money appropriated by this or any other act shall be expended for telephone service installed in any private residence or private apartment or for tolls or other charges for telephone service from private residences or private apartments, except for long-distance telephone tolls required strictly for the public business, and so shown by vouchers duly sworn to and approved by the head of the department, division, bureau, or office in which the official using such telephone or incurring the expense of such tolls shall be employed."

This statute clearly recognizes as legal and proper charges against appropriated moneys long-distance telephone tolls where the calls are on strictly public business even when made from private residences or private apartments.

It is not believed that the authority to make payment for telephone messages should be abolished, for to do so would unquestionably be a serious inconvenience to the functions of government. The use of telephones for the transaction of Government business is, of course, primarily an administrative matter and the authority for the use of telephones by administrative officers on departmental business could be curtailed through appropriate legislation and if such curtailment is deemed necessary there is suggested for your consideration a provision, to be attached to some pending appropriation bill, as follows:

"That hereafter no part of this or any other appropriation for any executive department, establishment, or agency shall be used for the payment of long-distance telephone tolls except for the transaction of public business which the interests of the Government require to be so transacted; and all such payments shall be supported by a certificate by the head of the department, establishment, or agency concerned, or such subordinate as he may specially designate, to the effect that the use of the telephone in such instances was necessary in the interest of the Government."

I trust this will serve the purpose of your inquiry.

Sincerely yours,

R. N. ELLIOTT,
Acting Comptroller General of the United States.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I offer the following amendment to be inserted on page 85, after line 13:

Deschutes project, Oregon: For continuation of construction, $400,000, from the reclamation fund, special fund, fiscal year 1940, to remain available until expended (52 Stat. 321–322), $400,000.

This amendment is based on an estimate which reached the committee today. At the request of the chairman of the subcommittee I am offering the amendment. It relates to a project in my State, and the money comes out of the reclamation fund. The project is in course of construction. The amendment is to carry on the construction and comply with the contracts entered into for this year.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, the amendment offered by the Senator from Oregon is supported by a Budget estimate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Oregon.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, on my own motion I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 61, after line 3, it is proposed to insert the following:

Reindeer industry, Alaska: For the purchase, in such manner as the Secretary of the Interior shall deem advisable, of reindeer, abattoirs, cold-storage plants, corrals and other buildings, and communication and other equipment, owned by nonnatives in Alaska, as authorized by the act of September 1, 1937 (50 Stat. 900), $820,000; and for necessary administrative expenses in connection with such purchase and the establishment and development of the reindeer industry for the benefit of the Eskimos and other natives of Alaska, as authorized by said act, including personal services in the District of Columbia (not to exceed $2,300) and elsewhere, traveling expenses, erection, repair, and maintenance of corrals, fences, and other facilities, $250,000; in all, $1,070,000, to be immediately available: Provided, That under this appropriation not exceeding an average of $4 per head shall be paid for reindeer purchased from nonnative owners: Provided further, That the foregoing limitation shall not apply to the purchase of reindeer located on Nunivak Island.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment will be agreed to.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I do not believe the reindeer amendment of the Senator from Arizona should be adopted without any consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair did not hear any objection. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona; and the Senator from Colorado is recognized on the amendment.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, this matter has repeatedly been before the Committee on Appropriations. It was rejected by the committee. As the Senator from Arizona says, he is presenting the amendment on his own account because of his own belief in the soundness of the theory embodied in the amendment.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I will state that I advised the committee that I should offer the amendment on the floor.

Mr. ADAMS. The amendment involves the expenditure by the Government of over a million dollars in the initial purchase of reindeer in Alaska. That is not the only thing involved. Under the program to be inaugurated, the Federal Government not only is to purchase the reindeer, but is to undertake their supervision and management. It means the creation of a Reindeer Bureau and the employment of personnel to look after and herd the reindeer for the benefit of the natives every year. It is estimated in the testimony that there will be at least $150,000 of administrative expense. As I have stated, it also means the creation of a bureau.

Briefly, the reindeer situation is this:

About 1892 the Federal Government imported into Alaska some 1,200 or 1,300 reindeer in order that the natives might have something to substitute for other game which had disappeared and for the domestic uses of the natives. The reindeer have now increased until there are probably half a million of them. It is estimated that 320,000 of them belong to the natives, and 180,000 belong to the nonnatives. However, the nonnatives have filed statements of claim to the effect that they own 500,000 reindeer. The proposed appropriation is based upon the estimate of the committee which visited Alaska, and the idea that the reindeer were to be purchased at $5 per head. The amount proposed to be appropriated is that which will be necessary if there are only 180,000 reindeer.

If there are 500,000 reindeer, as is claimed, there will have to be a far greater appropriation. It is testified, and I think accurately, that the reindeer can be looked after properly only after being herded. They have been turned out on the Alaska ranges. They are ranges of a kind adequate, apparently, for reindeer.

We were told a year ago that the reindeer had increased to such an extent that they were depleting and destroying the moss upon which they fed, and that unless the reindeer herd was regulated and decreased, the range would be permanently destroyed. We are told this year that unless we buy the reindeer the ranges will be destroyed.

The Eskimos who are involved number from 18,000 to 19,000. That is the total number of Eskimos in Alaska. It is proposed to buy 180,000 reindeer, to turn over to the Eskimos practically in their own ownership over 500,000 reindeer, in order to provide clothes and domestic animals for 19,000 Eskimos, at a cost of management of $150,000 a year, and excluding from the ranges of Alaska every owner unless he be one of the natives.

It seemed to some members of the committee that we were not ready to indulge in this expensive and extensive program. It was difficult for some of us to disagree with the much-beloved and very able chairman of the subcommittee, but I felt that some such statement ought to be made. I think we are not ready to enter upon such a program. If we were to go into Alaska and say to the natives, "We will buy for you so many reindeer, provided you look after them," that would be one thing, and that was the original theory of the Reindeer Act under which we were operating. But the Eskimos apparently does not propose to herd his own reindeer. He is objecting now because, as he says, if he herds them, he is going to be herding some of the white men's reindeer at the same time, and he does not propose to do that.

I will be willing to go a reasonable way to provide the Eskimos with a reasonable number of reindeer, but with the understanding that he look after his own reindeer, and that the United States Government should not undertake the herding and the feeding of his livestock.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I would not bring this matter to the attention of the Senate but for the fact that the recommendation is made based upon the report of a committee appointed by the Congress. It is not an Executive recommendation.

We had before us last year a Budget estimate for over a million dollars. Congress adopted an authorization, made upon the recommendation of the late Senator Kendrick and a number of other Senators who visited Alaska, among them the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], the senior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER], and the junior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE]. Based upon their recommendations we passed an act authorizing an appropriation of $2,000,000. Nothing was done about it last year, because we thought we did not have the proper information. So Congress provided that the chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations, Representative TAYLOR of Colorado, and the chairman of the Senate Committee on Appropriations, the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], should appoint three men to go to Alaska and make an investigation for our information. Three men were appointed. One was a very able stockman from Colorado, experienced in handling livestock. There was a very able representative of the agricultural college of Virginia, and a representative from the Forest Service familiar with range management. They were our committee. We sent them to Alaska, and they brought back their report. They appeared before the House Committee on Appropriations, and upon recommendation of that committee this item was reported in the bill to the House. It is not the full sum of money they recommended; it is a substantial sum, however, to carry out their report. It was stricken out of the bill on a point of order in the House because there was some reference to a statute.

I am offering the language exactly as it was reported from the House committee. I would not offer it, as I have said, if it were merely an ordinary routine recommendation from the department which the committee passes on and accepts or rejects; but it is our committee making a report to us, and it seems to me it ought to be passed upon by the Senate.

What is the other side of the picture? We have sent three competent men to Alaska to tell us what to do, and we refuse to do what they recommend. Are we gaining anything by letting the reindeer situation run on just as it is? The testimony of these men is that the number of reindeer in Alaska are rapidly decreasing, because wolves and other predatory animals are preying upon them. Their testimony is that the Eskimo will not look after the reindeer if, mingled with them, are reindeer belonging to white men. If we give them the deer and say they are their deer they will look after them.

The reindeer is a domesticated animal, and it would be just as sensible to turn a herd of sheep loose in the Arctic as to turn loose a herd of reindeer. They were domesticated a thousand or more years ago by the Lapps. They have to have care, and that care is provided for in the bill. When we acquired Alaska we found the Eskimo taking care of himself. The Eskimo had the seal, the walrus, and fish. The seal and walrus supplies have been cut off, and the fish supply has been diminished. Keeping reindeer is the only way he has of taking care of himself. I can call upon any Senator in this body who has been in Alaska to testify that what is proposed is the only practical way of meeting the situation, and that is why I am asking the Senate to adopt the amendment.

Mr. TAFT. I was not able to understand the matter in the committee, and my reason for opposing the amendment is that it is stated that the natives will not look after their 320,000 reindeer because 180,000 reindeer belonging to white men are mixed with them. I cannot see why there is any assumption that various native groups of reindeer will not get mixed up together. I cannot see how by buying the reindeer and giving them to the natives, we are going to increase the natives' interest in herding reindeer. It seems to me that if we are to spend $150,000 a year, after we get through, without buying the reindeer with the $150,000, we can provide herding regulations which will make the natives, as well as others, herd their deer. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars is a fairly large sum to be appropriated to handle such a matter for 19,000 people, whether they be Eskimos or others. Why do we have to spend a million dollars, or practically a million dollars, to buy reindeer? What do we gain? Why cannot the Eskimos save their herds, why can we not make them herd their deer properly? I could not get an answer from those testifying before the committee, and I still do not understand the matter. Why should we pay $800,000 for reindeer and then spend $150,000 in regulating the manner in which the natives are going to herd their reindeer?

Mr. HAYDEN. I thought there was a very satisfactory answer given to the Senator when I listened to the witnesses. It is perfectly plain that until the matter of the white ownership of the reindeer is disposed of we cannot solve the problem, and it will take some money to do that. Whether it will require $150,000 or $50,000 a year, as years go on, Congress will take care of the matter as it makes the annual appropriations. But the Eskimos stand in exactly the same relation to our Government as do the Indians, and we carry in this bill over a million dollars for the Indians. Yet we hesitate to appropriate $150,000 to take care of the Eskimos, who are equally wards of the Government.

Mr. TAFT. We are not going to give these herds to the natives right away. As I understood the testimony, it is going to take a number of years before it will be possible finally to work out a method for giving the reindeer back to the natives.

Mr. HAYDEN. It is a bad situation. It is true, too, that the Eskimos and Indians in Alaska do not understand the reindeer business as the Lapps of Norway understand it, they having learned it a thousand years ago. But if a Navajo Indian in Arizona who did not have a horse and who did not have a cow and who did not have a sheep can now become a great stockman, I do not see why the Indians in Alaska and the Eskimos, if given this animal which is suitable to that climate, cannot do well with it.

Mr. TAFT. They already have 320,000 animals. It is now proposed to give them 180,000 more. If they cannot take care of the 320,000 I do not see any evidence that they can take care of 500,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN]. [Putting the question.] The Chair is in doubt.

On a division, the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. I ask unanimous consent that the clerks may be authorized to change the totals in the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, that order will be entered.

The bill is still before the Senate and open to further amendment.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I wish to make an inquiry of the Senator from Arizona. There is a proviso on page 14 of the bill, beginning in line 2, as follows:

Provided, That no part of the funds made available in this paragraph for administrative expenses of the Authority shall be used to increase the salary of any position which on the date of the approval of this act is provided for at the rate of $4,000 or more per annum, except in consequence of a reallocation of position under the Classification Act of 1923, as amended.

I have been informed that the measure now contains a provision that not more than the general average of pay in any particular class under the Classification Act may be paid to any individual under the U. S. H. A. Under the provisions of the bill an administrative promotion cannot be made within a particular classification. For instance, if an employee now receives a salary of $4,000, and it is desired to give him an administrative promotion, and the limit of pay in that particular class is, say, $4,600, under the provisions of this measure he cannot be given the extra $100 or $200 or $300. If it is desired to promote him, his position would have to be reallocated, which may mean that if he is to be promoted at all his salary will have to be raised to $5,000 in order to get into the new classification. It seems to me—and I should like to be corrected if I am mistaken—that this provision would lead rather to extravagance than to economy.

Mr. HAYDEN. The limitation applies only to this one appropriation. If it does not work, we can change it in another year.

Mr. WAGNER. I was going to mention that.

Mr. HAYDEN. The reason the Senate committee did not change the House provision is because of what was stated in the House report, which I shall read to the Senate:

In studying the break-down of personnel as submitted in the Budget, the committee was impressed by the fact that the rates of pay for positions were in excess, in many instances, of the amount required to carry on this program in an efficient manner, and that numerous promotions were contemplated in many of the higher salary grades. The committee is opposed to such a promotion program and has inserted in the bill a limitation prohibiting the use of funds for promotions where a position is provided for at the rate of $4,000 or more per annum, except in cases where a position is reallocated under the Classification Act of 1923, as amended.

Mr. WAGNER. If I may interrupt the Senator, I do not see that the language provides a limitation on the payment of salaries. And by the way, the restriction is only against one particular agency, the United States Housing Authority. It does not apply to any other agency in the Government.

Mr. HAYDEN. That is true.

Mr. WAGNER. If it is desired to make a promotion, the U. S. H. A. will be compelled, under the provisions of the bill, to reallocate the position, which would mean to pay the individual a higher salary than the Authority could promote him to if the restriction in the bill were not imposed.

Mr. HAYDEN. But the allocation could not be made unless it were justified.

Mr. WAGNER. The promotion can only be made within limitations, I mean within two or three hundred dollars, or $400 a year.

Mr. HAYDEN. Our committee felt that we would not be justified in overriding the judgment of the House in this matter; and that we could throw it out after having tried it for a year, if we found that it did not work.

Mr. WAGNER. It is being tried out on one particular agency. That does not seem to me to be fair. I do not want to press the point by asking to have the provision eliminated, although it does not really seem to be fair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further amendment, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments, and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill H. R. 4852 was read the third time and passed.

PAINTING OF SIGNING OF THE CONSTITUTION FOR CAPITOL BUILDING

Mr. BARKLEY. From the Committee on the Library I report back favorably House Joint Resolution 224 to authorize the painting of the signing of the Constitution for placement in the Capitol Building, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the House joint resolution?

There being no objection, the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 224) to authorize the painting of the signing of the Constitution for placement in the Capitol Building was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed as follows:

Resolved, etc., That a commission consisting of the Vice President of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the Architect of the Capitol be, and is hereby, created and authorized and directed to employ an artist to paint upon canvas (approximately 20 feet by 30 feet in size), at a price not exceeding $30,000, a painting of the scene at the signing of the Constitution. The said painting shall be subject to the approval of the Joint Committee on the Library, and, when so approved, shall be mounted in a space in the Capitol Building to be selected by the commission. The commission shall consult the Commission of Fine Arts and any suggestion for such suitable painting by any artist shall be considered by the Commission.

AUTHORIZATION FOR REPORTING AND SIGNING OF BILLS, ETC.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that during the adjournment of the Senate all committees may have authority to report bills, resolutions, and nominations, including any minority reports that may be filed; that the Vice President may be authorized to sign bills and resolutions; and that the Secretary of the Senate may be authorized to receive messages from the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LA FOLLETTE in the chair), as in executive session, laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations (and the withdrawal of the nomination of Thomas R. Amlie, of Wisconsin, to be an Interstate Commerce Commissioner), which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

ADJOURNMENT TO WEDNESDAY

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate adjourn until Wednesday next.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MONDAY, APRIL 17, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Reverend Alcuin W. Tasch, O. S. B., St. Vincent College, Latrobe, Pa., offered the following prayer:

Almighty and eternal God, Creator of the universe and Ruler over the hearts of men, we humbly come to Thee and beg Thine assistance for the important task that lies before us today. Give us, O Lord, wisdom that we may have a true insight into the serious problems that affect our national life. Endow our minds with prudence and understanding that we may work out a solution that is based on justice and charity and whatever safeguards the blessings of liberty, the precious heritage of our free people.

Fill our hearts with courage that we may do our duty as we honestly see it. As representatives of a Christian nation, we acknowledge Thy supreme dominion over us, and implore Thy blessing on our deliberations.

Bless us, O God, we beseech Thee. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Thursday, April 13, 1939, was read and approved.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendment of the House to a bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 911. An act for the relief of Roscoe C. Prescott, Howard Joslyn, Arthur E. Tuttle, and Robert J. Toulouse.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1117) entitled "An act to provide for the reimbursement of certain enlisted men or former enlisted men of the United States Navy for the value of personal effects lost in the hurricane at the submarine base, New London, Conn., on September 21, 1938," with an amendment.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an address made by a former Member of the House, Hon. Edward C. Eicher, of Iowa, at Wichita, on Thursday.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a resolution of the Senate of the State of Tennessee.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

T. V. A. MINORITY REPORT—PEOPLE OF NEW JERSEY OVERCHARGED $49,352,200 A YEAR FOR ELECTRIC LIGHTS AND POWER

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, on last Wednesday, April 12, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WOLVERTON] placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a speech which he delivered over the radio attacking the T. V. A. yardstick as a proper measurement for electric-light and power rates to the ultimate consumer. In that speech he invited his hearers to write him "care of the House of Representatives Office Building in Washington," and stated that he should "be glad to send you a copy of the minority T. V. A. report," which looks like an attempt to flood the country with that minority report for propaganda purposes. I wonder who is going to pay for the printing of those extra copies.

As I pointed out on the floor of the House several days ago, that minority report, signed by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WOLVERTON], the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS], and the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS], is largely a rehash of the propaganda that is being put out against the T. V. A. yardstick, of which the radio speech of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WOLVERTON] is a fair sample, as I shall show in the course of these remarks.

This proposition vitally affects everyone who pays an electric bill. Practically every one of them is overcharged at least 100 percent. The man who is paying two or three times what his electricity is worth, the woman who is denied the use of an electric iron or a refrigerator because of these high rates, the power consumers generally who are paying this billion dollars in overcharges each year—they are beginning to think of their Congressmen, their Senators, and every other elected official every time they turn an electric switch or pay an electric bill.

That should be particularly true in New Jersey, and I will tell you why. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WOLVERTON], in the course of this radio broadcast in which he invited his hearers to write him for copies of the minority report attacking the T. V. A. yardstick says, "Electricity is being furnished to the consumers in the Tennessee Valley by the T. V. A. at less than cost." In other words he tells you the T. V. A. yardstick rates are too low.

Now, let us see about that. Let us see what those rates are and whether or not they are justified. Remember the yardstick rates are the retail rates—the rates the ultimate consumer has to pay.

Here are the T. V. A. yardstick rates. I wish everyone who turns an electric switch could read them. They are not too low; if anything, they are too high, and will be reduced as time goes on. Everybody in America should be able to get electricity at these rates. But that is what the opposition is fighting to prevent.

T. V. A. residential yardstick rates to ultimate consumers

	Cents per kilowatt-hour
First 50 kilowatt-hours per month	3
Next 150 kilowatt-hours per month	2
Next 200 kilowatt-hours per month	1
Next 1,000 kilowatt-hours per month	.4
Excess over 1,400 kilowatt-hours per month	.75

If a residential consumer uses 1,400 kilowatt-hours or more a month, the average cost will be 7½ mills a kilowatt-hour.

T. V. A. commercial yardstick rates to ultimate consumers

	Cents per kilowatt-hour

These are the retail rates that should be paid by the ultimate consumers of electricity for the three classes of service in every State in the Union, including New Jersey, Ohio, and Pennsylvania.

The T. V. A. is selling this power at wholesale to the municipalities and cooperative associations throughout the T. V. A. area. Now remember the T. V. A. sells this power at wholesale to the municipalities and cooperative associations and they retail it to the ultimate consumers at the yardstick rates.

During the month of February 1939 the city of Tupelo, Miss., which is about 100 miles from the Wilson Dam, and which uses on an average of about 10,000,000 kilowatt-hours a year, paid the T. V. A. 5.35 mills per kilowatt-hour for electricity laid down in Tupelo, while Florence, Ala., which is in sight of the Wilson Dam, and which uses about the same amount of electricity used in Tupelo, or a little more, paid the T. V. A. 4.82 mills a kilowatt-hour for its electricity during the month of February 1939.

During the Hoover administration, when the Republicans were in power, that administration made a contract to sell this power generated at Wilson Dam to the Commonwealth & Southern, for 5 years, at less than 2 mills a kilowatt-hour, which they said would yield the Government a reasonable return on that part of the investment charged to power.

Two of the gentlemen who signed this minority report, Mr. WOLVERTON and Mr. JENKINS, were Members of Congress at that time and alined with the Hoover administration, and Senator DAVIS, the other signer, was a Member of Mr. Hoover's cabinet.

If it was profitable to sell this power to the Power Trust at less than 2 mills a kilowatt-hour when the Republicans were in power, then how can they contend that it is being sold at a loss now when it is being delivered to Florence, Ala., in sight of the dam, at 4.82 mills a kilowatt-hour, or more than three times the price at which it was sold to the Power Trust by the Hoover administration?

The record shows that the Commonwealth & Southern paid the Government only 1.56 mills a kilowatt-hour for this power the last year this contract was in force.

During the life of that contract the power company was selling this power to the residential consumers in Florence, Ala., in sight of the dam, at 10 cents a kilowatt-hour, or a spread of approximately 6,000 percent. The city of Florence is now selling it at the T. V. A. yardstick rates, which is a maximum of 3 cents a kilowatt-hour, as shown by the tables which I have just inserted, and is making money by the transaction.

The following table showing the power company rates in Florence, Ala., in 1932, and the T. V. A. yardstick rates now in force in Florence, furnishes a deadly parallel that every power consumer in America should see. It also applies to Tupelo, Miss., and all the cities, towns, and communities that were then served by the power companies and are now enjoying T. V. A. power at the T. V. A. yardstick rates.

Here is a comparative table up to 1,400 kilowatt-hours per month:

Residential rates, Florence, Ala.

	Power-company rates, 1932	T. V. A. yardstick rates, 1939
First 30 kilowatt-hours a month	$3.00	$0.90
Next 170 kilowatt-hours a month	13.60	3.60
Next 300 kilowatt-hours a month	21.00	2.40
Next 350 kilowatt-hours a month	21.00	1.40
Next 550 kilowatt-hours a month	27.50	2.20
Total (1,400 kilowatt-hours a month)	86.10	10.50

I wish every person who pays an electric-light bill anywhere in the United States, and especially in New Jersey, Ohio, and Pennsylvania, could see this table and could take these T. V. A. yardstick rates and compare them with the rates they now have to pay. Then they would understand why those of us who are leading this fight are struggling so desperately to force reduction of light and power rates to the T. V. A. yardstick levels in every State in the Union.

But the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WOLVERTON] tells you that this electricity is being furnished to the consumers in the Tennessee Valley by the T. V. A. "at less than cost." Surely he is not trying to say that the T. V. A. wholesale rates are too low, when they are about three times the rates at which his administration was selling this power to the Power Trust in 1930.

Is he trying to say that the T. V. A. yardstick rates are too low, when every municipality that handles T. V. A. power is making a profit?

Let us turn to his State of New Jersey and see what the rates are in his State and what they should be.

During the year 1937 the New Jersey Power & Light Co. sold to the Metropolitan Edison Co. 174,220,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity wholesale at 3.85 mills a kilowatt-hour, and during the first 6 months of 1938 the New Jersey Power & Light Co. sold to the Metropolitan Edison Co. 90,824,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity at 3.79 mills per kilowatt-hour.

That power was sold at wholesale, at a lower rate than the T. V. A. sells power to Florence, Ala., or to any other municipality or cooperative association in the entire T. V. A. area.

That is not unusual; during the year 1937 the Alabama Power Co. sold to the Mississippi Power Co. 145,580,000 kilowatt-hours of firm power, delivered in Mississippi at points ranging from the immediate T. V. A. area to the Gulf coast, at 4.22 mills a kilowatt-hour, which is a lower rate than the T. V. A. sells power wholesale to Florence, Tupelo, Amory, Corinth, or any other municipality or cooperative association in the entire T. V. A. area.

During the year 1937 the Louisiana Power & Light Co. sold and delivered to the Arkansas Power & Light Co. in Arkansas 235,195,000 kilowatt-hours of firm power at 3.5 mills a kilowatt-hour. During the first 6 months of 1938 the Louisiana Power & Light Co. sold to the Arkansas Power & Light Co. 54,179,000 kilowatt-hours of firm power at 2.39 mills a kilowatt-hour—or less than half the rate paid the T. V. A. by the city of Tupelo, or even by Florence, Ala., right at the dam, or by any other city, town, or cooperative association throughout the entire T. V. A. area.

All of this power could have been distributed to the people of these States at the T. V. A. yardstick rates shown in the tables which I have inserted. But instead of that, let us see what happened. In the State of New Jersey, we will say, the home of the distinguished gentleman [Mr. WOLVERTON] who so bitterly attacks the T. V. A. yardstick, as I have just pointed out, this power was sold by the New Jersey Power Co. to the Metropolitan Edison Co. wholesale at 3.79 mills a kilowatt-hour. It could have been distributed to the people of New Jersey at the T. V. A. yardstick rates with a profit to the power company that distributed it.

Witnesses for the power companies testified in the T. V. A. investigation that electricity could be produced with coal at $3 a ton at 4.18 mills a kilowatt-hour anywhere in the United States. That power could also be distributed profitably at the T. V. A. yardstick rates.

But let us see what actually happened.

In 1937 the people of New Jersey used 3,070,594,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity, for which they paid $94,549,900. Under the T. V. A. yardstick rates it would have cost them $45,197,700, or $49,352,200 less than they actually paid for it.

In other words, the people of New Jersey, the ultimate consumers who turn the switches and pay the bills, were overcharged $49,352,200 a year for electric lights and power, according to the T. V. A. yardstick rates—when power is being sold wholesale to the power companies in that State at a lower rate than that paid to the T. V. A. by the municipalities that are distributing this power throughout the T. V. A. area at the yardstick rates.

Under the Tacoma, Wash., rates these 3,070,594 kilowatt-hours, for which the people of New Jersey paid $94,549,900 in 1937, would have cost them $41,219,600, or $53,330,300 less than they actually paid for it, showing an overcharge to the people of New Jersey for electricity in 1 year, according to the T. V. A. rates, of $53,330,300.

Under the Ontario rates, now in effect throughout the Province of Ontario, Canada, this power which cost the people of New Jersey, the ultimate consumers, $94,549,900, would have cost them $35,902,500, which shows that, according to the Ontario rates, the people of New Jersey were overcharged $58,647,400 for electric lights and power during the year 1937.

At the rates this power was sold to the power companies wholesale throughout that area, they could have retailed it to the ultimate consumers at the Ontario rates without loss.

It seems to me that instead of attacking the T. V. A. yardstick, or trying to destroy the last hope of the power consumers of America for cheap electricity, or for rates based upon the cost of generation, transmission, and distribution, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WOLVERTON] should be devoting his time to trying to relieve the people of his own State of this enormous burden of $58,000,000 a year in overcharges which they are now paying as tributes to the Power Trust.

There are 988,703 residential consumers of electricity in the State of New Jersey. Last year they used 640,527,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity, for which they paid $36,004,300. Under the T. V. A. yardstick rates it would have cost them $17,894,100, which shows that these helpless residential users of electricity in New Jersey paid overcharges, according to the T. V. A. rates, amounting to $18,110,200 a year. Under the Tacoma rates the cost to them would have been $17,642,100, which shows an overcharge, according to the Tacoma rates, of $18,362,200 a year. Under the Ontario rates, instead of costing $36,004,300, this amount of electricity would have cost the residential consumers of New Jersey during the year 1937, $12,781,500, which shows an overcharge, according to the Ontario rates, of $23,222,800 a year. The result is that the people of New Jersey have to pay such high rates that they use the minimum amount of electricity. The residential consumers of that State use only about 50 kilowatt-hours a month when they should use more than 200 kilowatt-hours a month, as they do in Tupelo.

These high rates not only hold down the consumption of electricity, but they prevent the use of those electrical appliances necessary for the comforts and conveniences of their homes, and for the successful operation of every business establishment in New Jersey.

Now let us turn to the commercial consumers in New Jersey, the merchants, the hotel, restaurant, and filling-station operators, and all others who pay commercial rates, and see how they suffer as a result of these overcharges. There are 194,475 commercial consumers of electricity in New Jersey. In 1937 they used 749,312,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity, for which they paid $34,282,100. Under the T. V. A. yardstick rates they would have paid $14,055,700, or $20,226,400 less. Under the Tacoma rates they would have paid $14,672,700, or $19,609,400 less; while under the Ontario rates they would have paid $11,450,200, or $22,831,900 less.

In other words these helpless commercial consumers of electricity in New Jersey paid approximately three times as much for their electricity as they would have paid under the Ontario rates, and more than twice as much as they would have paid under the Tacoma rates or under the T. V. A. yardstick rates.

Now let us see what the industrial consumers in New Jersey have to pay for this power that is being sold wholesale to the private power companies there at a lower rate than the T. V. A. is selling power to the municipalities throughout the T. V. A. area:

There are 24,664 industrial consumers of electricity in the State of New Jersey. During the year 1937 they used 1,680,755,000 kilowatt-hours of electric energy, for which they paid $24,263,500. Under the T. V. A. yardstick the cost would have been $13,247,900, or $11,015,600 less than they paid—showing that these industrial consumers in New Jersey were overcharged approximately 100 percent according to the T. V. A. rates.

According to the Tacoma rates the cost would have been $8,904,700, which shows that they paid an overcharge of $15,358,000, according to the Tacoma rates, which is more than 100 percent—almost 200 percent. Under the Ontario rates the cost would have been $11,670,700, or $12,592,800 less than they actually paid, which also shows an overcharge of more than 100 percent.

How in the world can the industrial consumers of New Jersey compete with the industrial consumers in the Province of Ontario, Canada, when they have to pay more than twice as much for power as their competitors in Ontario have to pay?

No wonder industries in New Jersey are breaking down.

This power could be delivered to their residential consumers, to their commercial consumers, and to their industrial consumers throughout the State of New Jersey at the T. V. A. yardstick rates, at the Tacoma, Wash., rates, or at the Ontario rates, without loss, if it were not for the exorbitant overcharges which these people are compelled to pay in order to pay dividends on watered stocks, maintain useless holding companies, pay high-salaried and often useless officials, pay the cost of high-priced propaganda, and other graft and waste which enters into the rate base of the private power interests throughout every section of the country.

They want to get rid of the T. V. A. yardstick, because it is teaching the American people what electricity should cost the man who uses and pays for it.

The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WOLVERTON] lives at Camden, N. J., a city of 118,000; I live at Tupelo, Miss., a town of less than 8,000. Tupelo has a municipal distribution system that buys its power wholesale from the T. V. A. at an average of about 5.35 mills a kilowatt-hour, while Camden, N. J., is served by the Public Service Electric & Gas Co., a private power company.

As I have shown, electricity was sold at wholesale to a private power company in New Jersey last year at 3.79 mills a kilowatt-hour. The Public Service Electric & Gas Co. can either purchase its power wholesale at that price or manufacture its own power at a cost of not to exceed 4 mills a kilowatt-hour, and could distribute it at the T. V. A. yardstick rates, in effect in Tupelo, as shown in the tables which I have inserted, and make a reasonable profit.

But the trouble is that the Public Service Electric & Gas Co. is burdened with overhead expenses. For example, the president receives a salary of $50,000 a year—about two and one-half times as much as the salary of the Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States. Then there are 10 vice presidents, two of whom receive $30,000 a year each, one receives $19,710, one receives $22,500, one receives $22,725, one receives $24,840, two receive $24,300 a year each, one receives $18,999 a year, and another receives $27,000 a year.

In addition to that, this company has an assistant to the president, who receives a salary of $16,200 a year; a general superintendent, who receives $15,999.96; a general manager, who receives $19,999.92; and an assistant to the general manager, who receives $16,249.92 a year. A general electrical engineer draws $16,666.64 a year, and a general auditor receives $18,000 a year. The superintendent of distribution receives $15,999.96.

In addition to that, this company is controlled by the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, which has the same president who receives an additional $45,000 a year salary as president of the holding company, and also has two vice presidents who are vice presidents of the Public Service Electric & Gas Co., who receive salaries of $39,000 a year each from the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey.

Compare these high salaries with the salaries of the three directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority who receive only $10,000 a year each.

Note that some of these vice presidents of the operating company, that serves Camden, N. J., draw more salary from the operating company than is received by all three of the directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority, and at the same time some of these vice presidents draw additional salaries from the holding company amounting to more than the combined salaries of all three directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

No wonder the people of Camden are overcharged 100 percent for their electric lights and power for all classes of service.

This is a fair sample of the shocking conditions that exist in the private power companies, and the holding companies that control them, throughout the whole country. That is the reason that the private power business has degenerated into the greatest racket of modern times, for which the American consumers of electric lights and power are now paying "through the nose" tributes in exorbitant overcharges amounting to more than $1,000,000,000 a year.

As I said a moment ago, the city of Tupelo, Miss., purchases its power wholesale from the T. V. A. The record shows it is now paying 5.35 mills a kilowatt-hour. Remember that private power companies in New Jersey are buying power, wholesale, at 3.5 mills a kilowatt-hour. In Maryland it is being purchased by them, wholesale, at 2.59 mills a kilowatt-hour, while in New York it is being purchased, wholesale, by private power companies at 2.9 mills a kilowatt-hour.

Yet the city of Tupelo, a small town with a population of less than 10,000, buying power wholesale from the T. V. A., and paying more for it than the average price paid by private power companies, distributes it to the ultimate consumers at the yardstick rates, and after paying all operating expenses, after paying taxes, or money in lieu of taxes, in an amount greater than that paid by any power company in any other city of its size throughout that area—after paying interest on the indebtedness on its distribution system, after paying the installments due on its sinking fund, after setting aside a reasonable amount for replacements and paying itself 6-percent interest on the entire investment in its distribution system—after paying all these expenses, Tupelo's electric system made a net profit of more than $40,000 last year.

In other words, the Tupelo plant purchased a little less than 10,000,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity during last year, for which it paid approximately $50,000. It distributed that electricity to the ultimate consumers at the yardstick rates, paid all of its operating expenses, paid interest on its debts, paid the amount due on its sinking fund, paid in lieu of taxes $12,759.51, which is more than any private power company paid in any city of the size of Tupelo in that area, paid itself interest at the rate of 6 percent on the entire investment in its electric system, and made a net profit of $40,003.19.

Neither the T. V. A. nor the Federal Government has ever subsidized Tupelo's electric light and power system one dollar. Although the system was badly damaged by a cyclone in 1936, the repairs were made at the expense of the system and without outside financial assistance.

Rates in Tupelo have been reduced several times since the first contract with the T. V. A. in 1934. Every time rates have been reduced profits have increased as a result of increased consumption.

In 1932, before the T. V. A. was created, the city purchased its power from a private power company at 17 mills a kilowatt-hour, although the private power company was buying this energy at Muscle Shoals at 1.56 a kilowatt-hour. This power was distributed at the old standard power company retail rates that were in effect throughout that area at that time—with a maximum of 10 cents a kilowatt-hour where we now pay a maximum of 3 cents a kilowatt-hour. The municipal power plant made a profit that year of $27,282.02.

In 1936 the light and power department of Tupelo purchased its power from the T. V. A. at the standard wholesale rates and sold it at the T. V. A. yardstick rates, with an additional surcharge of 10 percent imposed on industrial and commercial consumers, which was permissible under the contract, and after paying all the expenses, taxes, or money in lieu of taxes, sinking fund, and so forth, made a profit of $33,147.05.

Thus it will be seen that the light and power department made more profit when buying its power around 5 or 5½ mills a kilowatt-hour and selling it at a maximum of 3 cents a kilowatt-hour than it did when buying it at 17 mills a kilowatt-hour and selling it at a maximum of 10 cents a kilowatt-hour, because low rates always bring increased consumption and increased profits.

After those 10-percent surcharges were removed, as I have pointed out, the municipal light and power department in Tupelo made a net profit last year of $40,003.19.

In order to dispose of that surplus there were only three courses to be pursued. First, to extend the service; second, to pay it on the debts of the plant; and third, to reduce rates.

No extensions of the service were possible since it has been extended to reach everyone within its jurisdiction. Its funds could not be applied to the debts against the plant for the reason that the bondholders would not accept them, as these bonds are amply secured and the interest rates are adequate.

So the only thing to be done was to further reduce the rates. That reduction was given to the commercial consumers, the merchants, hotels, restaurants, filling-station and office building operators. My prediction is that the net profits next year will increase again because of the increased consumption.

In other words, as I said, reduced rates increase consumption and increase the profits. If private power companies were more interested in service and less interested in the manipulation of stocks and bonds, they could reduce their rates to the standard T. V. A. yardstick levels and make money in every section of every State in this Union.

Now, let us see what the effect of cheaper electricity has been on the ultimate consumers. In 1932 there were 875 residential and 300 commercial consumers in Tupelo. Only 19 percent of these residential consumers operated electric refrigerators, 6 operated electric ranges, and 296 had electric irons, but none operated electric water heaters. Electric house heating in that section was unknown.

Last year there were 1,606 residential consumers of electricity in Tupelo, 90 percent of whom operated electric refrigerators. There were 391 electric ranges, 125 electric water heaters, and 1,816 electric irons. Some of these irons, of course, were in business establishments.

In 1932 the average residential consumption of electric energy in Tupelo was only about 35 kilowatt-hours a month. During the month of January 1939 it was 215 kilowatt-hours a month. Low rates always increase consumption, and also increase the use of electrical appliances.

During the year 1932, when paying the old power-company rates, the commercial consumers in Tupelo used on an average of only about 150 kilowatt-hours a month. During the year 1938, under the T. V. A. yardstick rates, they used on an average of 461 kilowatt-hours a month; and, in addition to that, 28 homes and 5 apartment houses were heated exclusively with electric energy.

In other words, the people of Tupelo are living in an electric age, enjoying the benefits of electricity at rates based upon the cost of generation, transmission, and distribution, which we hope to see spread to the rest of the country.

Now, since it is shown that power generated by hydroelectric plants, or by coal, can be laid down in any community in the United States, wholesale, at cheaper rates than those now paid by the city of Tupelo for T. V. A. power, then, with the proper economy and efficiency in the management of their distribution systems, they can distribute it to the ultimate consumers at the T. V. A. yardstick rates, pay all operating expenses, including taxes, and make a reasonable return on their investments.

So, Mr. Speaker, instead of attacking the T. V. A. yardstick, which, as I have said before, is the greatest weapon ever placed in the hands of the American people for their protection against overcharges for electric light and power the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WOLVERTON], and his associates who signed the minority report, had better join us and help to secure relief from these exorbitant rates for the people of their own States as well as for the people of the whole country.

If the public utilities commission in the State of New Jersey would do its duty it could reduce light and power rates to the T. V. A. yardstick levels to all classes of consumers in every city, town, village, and community in that State without injury. But the trouble is that the average State utilities commission, instead of regulating utilities, seems to be regulated by them and to do their bidding.

Not only could the utilities commission in the State of New Jersey reduce light and power rates to the T. V. A. levels without injury to the private power company, but the same thing could be done in every other State in the Union, and it will be done when the people rise up and demand justice at their hands.

So I admonish the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WOLVERTON], instead of trying to destroy the T. V. A. yardstick, that he join us in trying to extend its benefits to the people he represents and help us lift from the shoulders of the people of New Jersey the exorbitant overcharges they now pay for electric lights and power to the amount of $49,000,000 a year; and that he and his associates join us in extending these benefits to the light and power consumers throughout the Nation, and relieve them of the overcharges they are now paying amounting to $1,000,000,000 a year.

BIRTHDAY OF THE SPEAKER

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, reminded of the birthday of our Speaker by the ovation in the House which followed the tribute paid him on Wednesday, April 12, 1939, by the minority leader, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN], the New York Times printed in its edition for Thursday morning, April 13, 1939, a deserved editorial tribute to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD]. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert this editorial at this point.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

The editorial referred to follows:

[From the New York Times of April 13, 1939]

BIRTHDAY CARD

Speaker BANKHEAD was 65 yesterday. The House took affectionate notice of the anniversary. A graduate of that eminent school, the Rules Committee, he knows his business. His courtesy, fairness, and impartiality are natural. Son of a Senator, brother of a Senator, he was born to politics. He tried in vain to squirm out of his horoscope. He wanted to be an actor. He skipped to Boston with that intention. The family forbade. A daughter of genius carried out and perhaps surpassed her father's early hopes. Most people have forgotten that young Mr. BANKHEAD came to New York to recover from the Boston chill and tried his prentice hand in politics here.

Home called him. Politics took to him. He has been in the House for 22 years, but we don't have to introduce him. Both in opposition and in power, he has made his mark. He is as tolerant as a politician can afford to be. As a legislator, he doesn't talk about things without having studied them adequately. He is a competent Speaker. He is a good fellow. It is always pleasant to see Representatives scrape off their war paint and reveal in the Chamber something of the kindly feeling of the cloakroom. Yesterday anybody could catch the Speaker's eye. The Members recognized the Speaker and told him how much they thought of him.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD, and to include therein a Gallup poll and a description of the necessity for education in the treatment of cancer. This poll shows 90 percent of the people interviewed interested in a bill I introduced for cancer control.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, in behalf of Dr. B. M. Gancy, a distinguished citizen and attorney from the Philippine Islands, who is also a loyal subject to the United States, and whose suit for a declaratory judgment upon his rights as affected by the Philippine Independence Act against the United States was dismissed recently for lack of jurisdiction, I introduce this bill, which is designed to confer jurisdiction upon the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, to hear and determine the claims of Dr. Gancy and to settle by proper court decision two conflicting theories involved in the Philippine-American relation. This is, whether or not Congress has the power to withdraw sovereignty over a territory. I hope that the committee to which this bill is referred will allow Dr. Gancy's request so that this issue may be settled for the general welfare of the parties concerned.

I am speaking in behalf of the people of the United States who do not wish to be dispossessed of valuable property, which in the future, with proper development, will not only furnish a market for our products but will also be of vital importance to the United States as a distributing point for our merchandise to the Orient. This property is the Philippine Islands, and all other Territorial possessions acquired by the United States. No part or parts of the United States or its Territories are for disposal except by unanimous consent of all the States, and in agreement with the people who are to be dispossessed.

I contend that the Seventy-second and the Seventy-third Congresses had no constitutional power to pass the Philippine Independence Act and set up an independent State, as outlined in the constitution for the Philippine Islands:

SECTION 1. The Philippine Legislature is hereby authorized to provide for the election of delegates to a constitutional convention, which shall meet in the hall of the house of representatives in the capitol of the Philippine Islands, at such time as the Philippine Legislature may fix, within 1 year after the enactment of this act, to formulate and draft a constitution for the government of the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands, subject to the conditions and qualifications prescribed in this act, which shall exercise jurisdiction over all the territory ceded to the United States by the treaty of peace concluded between the United States and Spain on the 10th day of December 1898, the boundaries of which are set forth in article 3 of said treaty, together with those islands embraced in the treaty between Spain and the United States concluded at Washington on the 7th day of November 1900. * * *

This is section 1 of the Philippine Independence Act, in which Congress cedes jurisdiction over all the territories ceded to the United States by the treaty on December 10, 1898, together with those islands embraced in the treaty concluded on the 7th day of November 1900. In other words, the Seventy-second and Seventy-third Congresses ceded all this property to the Philippine government without consulting or informing the States of its action. I venture to say that 95 percent of our people are completely ignorant of the loss we sustain in this transaction. It is not only unconstitutional but it is a terrible mistake which should be corrected before it is too late.

I cannot understand what sinister influence impelled the Seventy-second and Seventy-third Congresses to enact this legislation, because it is certainly a blow to the United States.

Farther on in this act I find a paragraph with this language:

When used in this section in a geographical sense, the term "United States" includes all Territories and possessions of the United States, except the Philippine Islands, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, and the island of Guam.

And in section 7:

Until the final and complete withdrawal of American sovereignty over the Philippine Islands.

We find in section 7 (1):

Every duly adopted amendment to the constitution of the government of the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands shall be submitted to the President of the United States for approval.

We do not withdraw from the Philippine Islands. Such clear-cut decision cannot be expected from this administration. The Philippine Independence Act is a misnomer. It will not free the islands or provide independence for the people. It will instead keep them enslaved in our political system and pawns to exploitation. In other words, the Philippine Independence Act makes a political football of the islands, open to exploitation, graft, and other evils which, without doubt, will finally drag us into war.

Our colonial policy is a joke, for being political it becomes an instrument which provides a haven for political patronage and its evils. This is very unfortunate, for under an economical government that understands colonial administration the Philippine Islands would be one of the most productive colonies in the world. The islands would not only be able to sustain themselves but would, in addition to that, pay a profit and be an economical asset to the United States. Under a sound administration these islands can be made an international trading post.

In the Philippine Independence Act, Congress has delegated all power of administration to the President of the United States and his political appointees but furnishes the money as usual—about the only power of Congress which has not been diminished. The strange part of this act is the exclusion of the Philippine Islands, the Virgin Islands, the American Samoa, and the island of Guam, for they are not supposed to be included in the words "United States."

One would almost think that the Philippine Independence Act was drafted by order of Japanese instruction. It would, indeed, be interesting to know the reason for excluding the Virgin Islands, the American Samoa, and the island of Guam in the words "United States." Is it possible that those who drafted the Philippine Independence Act intended to declare the independence of all the islands excluded from the words "United States"?

This act will not provide independence for the Philippine Islands, but will, instead, be destructive to them and a continual hazard to the United States. The act is so drawn that the United States is not released from implication or responsibility, but will, instead, be involved to such extent that it may lead us into war.

We must decide one of two things: Either to declare the Philippine Islands independent and free or to retain the islands as a colony or territory of the United States. The Filipinos may in justice expect to be informed whether they are to be free, to regulate themselves, and become a part of another nation, if they so select, or if they are to be tied by strings to the political party in power in the United States. This is also of the utmost importance to us, and particularly so if we look ahead three or four hundred years.

In the treaty with Spain the United States accepted responsibility for and ownership of the Philippine Islands. We paid $20,000,000 for our oriental bride, and Congress approved and legalized the ceremony. This is a solemn obligation which Congress should not forget, for it is still binding, and Congress cannot now issue a decree of divorce, as it attempts to do in the Philippine Independence Act, without exposing the bride to attack.

Separation destroys friendship, creates animosity, and provokes revenge. We could not criticize the citizens of the Philippines if for protection they would negotiate an alliance with another power, and, being an independent nation, they, of course, would have a perfect right to consummate such pact. The question for us to consider is, How will it affect the United States? The independence of the Philippine Islands will threaten the security of all our possessions in the Pacific, and what will this mean to us? It opens the west coast of the United States to attack from the Orient; it retards economic trade with the Orient, including India, and the islands south of the Philippines, and will in reality terminate in the loss of foreign markets. The danger of this should be recognized now, if we had statesmen in the Federal Government in place of international gigolos.

It is absolutely important that our merchant marine have access to friendly ports and well-protected trade lanes. This is necessary for repair, for supplies, and for harbors of refuge. The Philippine Islands, however, are more than that, because they will serve as a commercial trading center with the Orient and India. Properly prepared, these islands, if retained by us, will provide peaceful harbors for our ships when the rest of the world may be in a turmoil.

The Philippine Independence Act should be studied by those who have the interest of the United States at heart, and I am sure that in it they will find a most impossible and queer instrument for the creation of a new nation, not only in its unconstitutionality but also in its ambiguity. It is a fine example of malignant legislation.

Congress has no power to deprive the United States of property acquired by conquest or by purchase, for such property belongs to the people, and the right of disposal of such property is not within the power of Congress but is instead reserved to the States and the people themselves.

The Constitution of the United States provides for all contingencies, and this is particularly true if we believe in it and are willing to accept it as a concise document in which interpretations must not depend upon a few words, phrases, or paragraphs, but must instead be interpreted on their relation to the body of the instrument itself. As an example, article IV, section 3:

> New States may be admitted by the Congress into this Union; but no new State shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other State; nor any State be formed by the junction of two or more States or parts of States, without the consent of the legislatures of the States concerned, as well as of the Congress.
> The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory or other property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims of the United States or of any particular State.

In the Philippine Independence Act the Seventy-second and Seventy-third Congresses employed the following interpretation as power to set the Philippine Islands free:

> The Congress shall have power to dispose of * * * territory or other property belonging to the United States.

If this were true, this interpretation would allow power to Congress to dispose of anything belonging to the United States, but it is not the actual and true meaning of article IV, section 3. It is, instead, an unfortunate misinterpretation of paragraph 2 of article IV, section 3. In interpretation of the Constitution the interpreter must always have in mind amendment 9:

> The enumeration in the Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

And amendment X:

> The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively or to the people.

Having this in mind, the words "dispose of" refer to rules and regulations respecting the territory or similar property, so that boundaries may be adjusted in such manner that the territory in question may at some time be incorporated in the Union as a State. The meaning of the words "dispose of" is further qualified in the second paragraph in the following sentence:

> Nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to prejudice any claims * * * of any particular State.

The Philippine Islands, including all territories, are properties of the United States in which each and every State has a claim. Congress has no power to dispose of this property unless consent is given by the owners, and they are the 48 States. This is clearly set forth in article IV, section III, paragraph 2.

The most important point at issue, however, is: Congress has no constitutional power to deprive the United States of territories and set such property aside as a new and independent nation.

However, Congress has the power to dispose of territories in such manner that they may become useful as a State in the Union or dispose of them in such manner that they may provide greater protection for themselves or for the United States.

This is the intended meaning of article IV, section III. It is to bring about greater security and protection for the United States instead of insecurity and destruction of the United States.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. O'BRIEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a speech made in Rochester, N. Y., by the gentleman from New York [Mr. REED].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. REED of New York asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA MILK INVESTIGATION

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SHAFER of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, a month ago this Congress passed a resolution authorizing an investigation of the milk situation in the District of Columbia. At that time the chairman of the District of Columbia Committee stated that his Subcommittee on Public Health, of which I am a member, would conduct the investigation and promised that a thorough job would be done.

That is the last this Congress has heard of the investigation. No action has been taken to carry out the wishes of Congress. There has been no meeting of the Public Health Subcommittee of the District of Columbia Committee. It appears to me that unless action is soon taken it might be necessary for this Congress to authorize an investigation of the investigation committee.

Being a member of the subcommittee chosen to make the milk investigation I have undertaken a study of the situation and my findings should not only interest every Member of Congress but the citizens of the Nation as well. I am convinced that the citizens of the District of Columbia and the dairy farmers of the Nation will demand remedial legislation when facts concerning the milk situation in Washington are placed in their possession.

In the first place the milk and cream supply for the District of Columbia is controlled by an act of Congress approved February 27, 1925. There have been no amendments since the act was passed.

There is no doubt in my mind but that it was originally intended by the sponsors of this legislation to create a closed milk market for the city of Washington. As originally drafted the act provided that no milk or cream for any purpose would be allowed to come into the city unless produced in the local milkshed and after inspection and licensing. Before the act was passed, however, wholesale ice-cream manufacturers of Washington discovered what was happening, and by bringing pressure to bear from western creameries brought about an amendment to permit the importation of milk and cream from beyond the local milkshed but limited the use of such milk and cream to the manufacture of ice cream.

On November 4, 1925, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, under authority granted them by the act, promulgated certain regulations. These regulations—28 in number—have not been amended or added to since 1925, except in unimportant details and except to legalize and define ice-cream mix. It is true that an effort was made last year to change the regulations to exclude cream for ice-cream purposes, but the effort was abandoned when several midwestern Congressmen, including myself, offered successful opposition.

So it remains that the regulations and the law of 1925 constitute all of the rules governing milk, cream, and ice cream for the District of Columbia.

Section 4 of the act of 1925 provides that—

> Nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit interstate shipments of milk or cream into the District of Columbia for manufacturing into ice cream: Provided, That such milk or cream is produced or handled in accordance with the specifications of an authorized medical milk commission or a State board of health.

Because the act was originally designed to create a completely closed market for milk in Washington, and because section 4 was inserted in the last moment without any effort to fit it in with the rest of the act, many anomalous situations have resulted.

In this connection western cream may be shipped into the District of Columbia for manufacture into ice cream, provided it is produced and handled as specified in the act, but this same western cream cannot be used for fluid purposes. All cream for fluid purposes must come from locally inspected and licensed farms in nearby Virginia and Maryland.

Now, let us stop and consider the result of this law. Cream in fluid form is largely consumed by adults in coffee and tea. Babies and children are not permitted to drink coffee and tea and babies are not given desserts on which fluid cream is used. They are, however, permitted to eat ice cream.

Now, if the cream from the West is kept out of the fluid channels by health regulations, there must be some definite public-health consideration which keeps it out. It is difficult to find this consideration when it is realized that thousands of gallons of ice cream, made from western cream and uninspected at its source by the District's Health Department, are consumed every month by babies and children of the city of Washington.

There is nothing in the manufacture of ice cream which reduces the bacteria in ice cream except pasteurization before freezing. But this same pasteurization takes place with fluid cream before it is sold for use. The pasteurization of ice-cream mix does not destroy any more bacteria than does the pasteurization of fluid cream.

The Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association, organized under the laws of the State of Maryland in 1922, a farmers' cooperative organization, is composed of approximately 1,300 farmers producing milk in the Washington milkshed. This organization, I am informed, supplies 90 percent of the milk and cream used as such in the District of Columbia.

This association for a number of years has been dissatisfied with the act of 1925 because the act permits the importation of western cream for ice-cream purposes. Until now the association has hesitated to bring the matter to the attention of Congress by asking for an amendment to the law. The association, I am informed, has been fearful that if Congress did learn of the real situation created by the act of 1925 it might change the law, but not to the liking of the association. Therefore the association sought to have the District Commissioners exercise legislative authority to change the law by promulgating regulations and throwing new barriers in the way of western cream coming into the city, even for the manufacture of ice cream. This demand for new regulations presupposes public-health considerations, and such considerations alone.

It would be interesting to know what protection this association desired to give the people of Washington when it proposed health regulations to further close this market to western cream. Perhaps a statement by Mr. Frank S. Walker, president of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association, in his 1937 annual report will shed some light on the subject. Mr. Walker said:

> During the year the District of Columbia Health Department made a ruling that they would not inspect milk for another market. If any of our producers ship to another market, their permit with the Washington Health Department will be canceled. This will make us bring all our cream sales back to the District. We appealed to the health department for assistance, so that we might get a better price for our cream for ice-cream purposes. The regulations now before the commission covering cream for ice-cream purposes is the result of the cooperation of the health department to see that we have fair competition in the sale of our product. The approval of these regulations by the commission is most essential. The Washington market has a satisfactory supply and quality of milk and we hope that it will not be necessary for the health department to give any permits outside of the present production area.

Mr. B. B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer and manager of the association, in his 1937 annual report, said:

> Unfortunately, several excellent outlets for our cream in Pennsylvania were lost during the year, which materially affected our average price. We have been able to secure about $2 per can more for cream in Philadelphia than we can in Washington. But beginning in September we were forced through health regulations to discontinue selling cream in Pennsylvania. Since being cut off from this premium outlet we have been forced to move our cream in the local market. Direct competition of western cream makes it very difficult to bolster cream prices in Washington, as the local market will not pay a premium for extra quality. Your association has been very active in attempting to have adopted a set of cream regulations that will improve the quality of outside cream being shipped into Washington for manufacturing purposes, which, of course, will enable us to sell more of our own cream in the local market at better prices. These regulations have a good chance of being adopted in the early part of 1938.

Again, Mr. Walker, in his 1938 annual report, said:

> In March 1938 Virginia passed a bill regulating the importation of cream into the State. We have been asking the District of Columbia for 2 years to make such a regulation, and so far we have been unable to get any satisfactory regulation to control cream imported into the District for ice-cream purposes. This unlicensed cream is the worst leak that we have on the Washington market, so far as we are concerned. We feel that here we have very unfair competition, and we are hoping that the health department will correct this condition with suitable regulations.

Again, Mr. Walker, in his 1938 annual report to the association, said:

> Under this new arrangement you are receiving premiums on 20 percent more of your milk. This is a very evident recognition of the quality of the milk that you are producing. From the results of the hearing we feel confident that all parties interested want to uphold the hands of the health department in continuing their wonderful work in giving the city of Washington the world's best milk. The producers as a whole are proud of the results they are getting and are even going the limit in bettering their record. We can assure the health department and the consumers a satisfactory supply of this high-quality milk at all times.

In a publication of the association entitled "Washington Milk Market," published in 1938, there is listed as one of the objectives of the association the following:

> Aid in establishment and continuance of health regulations.

Where can there be found more complete evidence of the attempt to use health regulations, to foster and encourage health regulations, for the purpose of erecting trade barriers?

The Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association makes no secret of the fact that it has always tried, and is still trying, to have its economic problems worked out through the use of health regulations without one single thought of public health.

Let us return for a few moments to notice just some of the many anomalous situations created by the Milk Act of 1925.

If you buy a chocolate milk shake in a drug store and you desire it to be extra rich or heavy, or you go to those places where this type of milk shake is made, you will find that a half pint of locally inspected milk and four scoops of ice cream made from western cream are used, and to that is added chocolate sirup, the principal component part of which is western cream, and they are all mixed together into fluid form. In other words, the western cream in this process of making a milk shake is reduced again to a liquid and that liquid contains not only western cream but uninspected skimmed and skimmed condensed milk. It is difficult to see how under these circumstances the closing of a market to western cream for any other purpose than the manufacture into ice cream protects the public health. In this milk shake you are drinking as fluid approximately 40 percent locally inspected milk and approximately 60 percent western cream. It is not difficult, however, to convince you that children are the principal consumers of milk shakes in this city.

Butter may not be manufactured in the District of Columbia from any other than locally inspected and licensed milk, and western cream is excluded from the District of Columbia for manufacture of butter, but it may come into the District of Columbia already made from western cream, or from any other cream, without inspection at the source of the cream or milk used in the making of that butter. A merchant in Georgetown cannot bring western cream into Georgetown for manufacture into butter, but a merchant in Rosslyn, Va., across the river, may buy western cream, manufacture it into butter, and then send it into the District of Columbia without hindrance.

Western cream or milk may not come in the District of Columbia for manufacture into bread, in cakes, in pies, or in candy, but all of these articles of food made outside of the District of Columbia with western cream may come in and be legally sold and consumed by the people of this city. High-grade caramels require a large amount of cream for their successful manufacture. The caramel manufacturers in the District of Columbia must use a high-priced locally inspected cream, but the manufacturers of caramels all over the United States, outside of the District of Columbia, may use any kind of cream which they please, and their candy is shipped here without any regulation. You have all seen caramels on the confectioner's shelf advertised as being dairy made and coming from various parts of the country, but no manufacturer in the District of Columbia would be permitted to make these dairy-made caramels unless he used locally inspected cream, and at a price about twice as high as that for which he could buy it outside of the District of Columbia.

A baker in the District of Columbia is not permitted to use western cream for decorating pies or cakes with whipped cream, but a baker in Bethesda or in Rosslyn, Va., may send pies and cakes decorated with whipped cream into the District of Columbia, and they make the whipped cream out of any kind of cream they choose to buy. An ice-cream manufacturer in the District of Columbia who makes an ice-cream mold may decorate this mold with whipped cream made from western cream, but whipped cream served by a drug store on the top of a sundae as decoration must be made out of locally inspected cream.

An ice-cream manufacturer in the District of Columbia may use western cream, and use it only on condition that it is produced or handled in accordance with the specifications of an authorized medical milk commission or State board of health. No inspection is made by the Health Department of the District of Columbia, and no certification of the soundness of the cattle producing the cream is required, but if a manufacturer of ice cream is located in Bethesda or Arlington, he may not send cream into the District of Columbia until he has furnished the health department with a certificate from a veterinarian that every cow contributing to the supply of cream with which the ice cream is made has been examined within the year by a veterinarian and has been found to be physically sound.

It is difficult for me to understand how this law can be said to have been written and designed in the protection of public health.

The milk law of the District of Columbia does not attempt to regulate the production and handling of evaporated milk or condensed milk, yet every mother and housewife knows the extent to which these products are used in the home. Hundreds and thousands of babies are literally raised on evaporated milk, and there are a hundred different uses for condensed milk and cream, including its use in coffee, in desserts, and to drink. Yet Congress completely ignored these products, and the health officer of the District of Columbia, because of lack of authority, has not and cannot make any regulations concerning its production and handling. The health officer does not know where this milk is produced and does not know where and how it is handled, and no license or permit of any kind is required to ship it into the District of Columbia and to sell it for the fluid consumption of human beings, including babies. Condensed milk is nothing more nor less than whole milk which through a heating process has been reduced in volume with a concentration of the fats and the solids. It ordinarily takes about 4 or 5 gallons of whole milk to make 1 gallon of condensed milk. No rules or regulations are set down for the condensation nor to govern the health of the cows from which this milk comes. There is only one source of milk, whether it be fresh milk or frozen milk, condensed or skimmed milk, or any other kind of milk, and that is from the cow, and a diseased cow cannot produce healthful milk.

When economic conditions become bad, and when the price of milk goes up, the average consumer, but particularly the less-than-average consumer, turns to canned milk in place of fluid milk. Scientists have not found a substitute for fresh milk, and canned milk is not fresh milk, nor does it contain the health-giving qualities of fresh milk. It has neither the flavor nor the chemicals contained in fresh milk, and a great deal of health-giving properties are lost in the condensation process.

If the milk law of the District of Columbia was not designed and intended to protect public health, and to protect public health alone, then what was its purpose? The answer is, unquestionably, that it was designed to meet economic conditions and to protect the local producers of milk by giving them a closed market in the District of Columbia, and a virtual monopoly on the milk and cream used in the District of Columbia. In the hands of the individual farmers this would not be a serious menace to the health of the people of the District of Columbia, but in the hands of an organization of 1,300 farmers it does constitute such a menace, and in practice has proven to be a menace to health by virtue of the high prices charged and the efforts made by this organization, not only to keep the market closed, but to increase the restrictions on the importation of pure clean products in the District of Columbia if they come from any other source than the farmers who belong to this organization. I refer to the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association.

With the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association handling 90 percent of the fluid milk and cream coming into the District of Columbia for use as such, and constantly striving, through all sorts of means, to increase this percentage to 100, and attempting to use health regulations to close the market to all milk and cream coming from farms other than those of the members of this organization, it is not particularly difficult to understand why the price of milk on the Washington market is higher than in any other city in the United States, and why there is less consumption per capita here than in much poorer cities of the country.

If this is not enough to convince any one that a deliberate effort is being made to erect trade barriers around the District of Columbia to the detriment of the consumers, and for the benefit of a small and selfish group of farmers, let us examine the situation just a little bit further and see what we find.

The first thing which appears is the National Dairy Products Corporation. The set-up which this Nation-wide Milk Trust has in Washington is as follows: It owns and operates the largest wholesale and retail fluid milk dairy in the city known as Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy. This dairy supposedly purchases approximately 75 percent of all the milk sold by the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association, and this dairy does over 60 percent of all the milk business in the District of Columbia. In addition to the dairy plant located in Washington, the National Dairy Products Corporation also owns Southern Dairies, a wholesale ice cream manufacturing plant which does the largest ice cream business in Washington. National Dairy Products Corporation also owns and operates a receiving station at Frederick, Md., in conjunction with its fluid-milk business in Washington, where practically all of the surplus milk owned by the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association is handled and processed. It also owns a receiving station at Walkersville, Md., where it gathers milk from various sources for shipment into the District of Columbia for manufacture into ice cream. It is the only dairy dealing with the association which has a receiving station. This plant at Frederick is licensed to ship milk and cream to Washington for fluid uses. I am told that an average of over 15,000 gallons of milk daily went into this plant in 1938. It performs the following functions: Cools and pasteurizes milk, separates cream from milk, condenses milk, makes skimmed milk powder, and manufactures cheese. All surplus belonging to the association is separated at this plant, and the dairy receives the skimmed milk for nothing and holds the cream for the association orders. It receives an allowance for plant loss in handling all surplus milk, and all milk coming into the plant is paid for by the dairy at approximately 2¼ cents per gallon less than the price paid by the other distributors in Washington. The farmers deliver this milk to this receiving station at their own cost. The Frederick plant sells this skimmed condensed, skimmed milk, and other products to the various subsidiaries of the National Dairy Products Corporation. It is estimated that surplus milk handled at this plant for the association during the flush season will run as high as 25,000 gallons daily.

Who gets the benefit of all this? The consumer does not, because the price is not reduced; the farmer does not, as those farmers shipping milk and cream to that plant get 2¼ cents less for that milk than if they shipped to Washington direct. The answer is obvious. When it comes time to change the price of milk, and the terms and conditions upon which the association sells milk to the distributors, it is not difficult to know who has the most say about it and who dictates conditions. Chestnut Farms Dairy is a subsidiary of the largest milk combine in the world, having plants in practically every State in the Union and eight foreign countries, and having subsidiaries which make and sell dairy products and related products of every kind and description. National Dairy Products Corporation owns one of the largest manufacturers of ice cream in the world—Breyer Ice Cream Co. of Philadelphia. One of the essential ingredients in the manufacture of commercial ice cream is condensed skimmed milk, and this the Chestnut Farms Dairy has in abundance at its Frederick plant which it receives from the association without cost.

It is to the interest of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association and the National Dairy Products Corporation to keep this market absolutely closed, and up to the present time they have succeeded admirably in doing so. The only way this situation can be changed is by appropriate legislation by the Congress of the United States.

Stringent health regulations governing the production of milk and requiring a large outlay of money on the part of the farmer, very definitely discriminates against the real dirt farmer, and tends to place production in the hands of a comparatively few so-called farmers who, because of their financial circumstances, are able to operate dairies without doing any work themselves, but by hiring cheap labor. The successful country businessman, lawyer, doctor, generally own farms and produce milk. Because they are able to do so, they build elaborate barns and set standards for the others to follow. In this same class are those who are engaged in breeding cattle for show purposes as a hobby, and sell their milk to fluid milk markets.

All these people can easily meet stringent health requirements, but what of the real dirt farmer who gets up at 4 o'clock in the morning and works like a dog all day long until late at night in order to eke an existence out of his farm? He may produce the cleanest milk, but he cannot get on the fluid-milk markets unless he buys all of the fancy gadgets required by health requirements and used by his wealthy neighbor who may be engaged in dairying merely as a hobby. This dirt farmer, simply because he cannot afford to buy this extra equipment, is compelled to sell his milk to a creamery which makes butter or canned milk. The price he receives for his milk is ridiculously low, and hardly pays for feed for his cows.

City fluid-milk markets are gradually being supplied exclusively by gentlemen farmers who have made their money in various other ways and turned to farming merely because of the natural urge of human beings to get back to the soil. Increasingly stringent health regulations will ultimately place fluid-milk markets exclusively in the hands of this type of farmer, to the almost utter and complete ruin of the small but real dirt farmer.

What is the solution of this problem, and how can this trend toward high prices for fluid milk and control of fluid-milk markets by wealthy producers be stopped? The answer is very simple, and the problem is really not complex.

The first thing is for health departments to get down to brass tacks and honestly and conscientiously calculate just what is essential by way of regulations for the protection of public health alone and to eliminate all the fancy and expensive and silly gadgets and rules which now act as trade barriers and which do not contribute in the slightest to public health. This would substantially lessen the cost of production of milk and would enable more people to buy it. Tremendously larger quantities of milk would go into fluid channels and less into the butter market.

The universal lowering of health regulations governing production of milk to a point where they actually protect public health but do not protect anyone's economic interest would result in a general leveling of prices all over the United States and would permit more small dirt farmers to get on the fluid markets. It would also result in a substantial decrease in the tremendous milk surpluses which now go into butter and create a ruinous condition in the butter market. There would be less canned milk sold and more fresh milk used by the people who need it.

If health departments will not voluntarily cut down their requirements, then it is up to the legislatures to pass laws which will take out of the hands of the health officials much of the discretion and rule-making power which they now have.

In the District of Columbia this is a matter which deserves the serious and thoughtful consideration of the Congress. The Congress of the United States can engage in no better undertaking than to reduce the price of milk in this city to the consumer and to set up for the District of Columbia a model milk law governing the production, handling, and distribution of fresh milk in this city. Cheaper milk can be had in Washington, but it can only be accomplished through a determination on the part of Members of the Congress that a few people are not entitled to a monopoly, and that milk which is produced under decent and sanitary conditions is fit for human consumption even though it comes from places other than the farms within the so-called milkshed of the District of Columbia.

GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 1574) to authorize the attendance of the Marine Band at the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic to be held at Pittsburgh, Pa., from August 27 to September 1, inclusive, 1939.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President is authorized to permit the band of the United States Marine Corps to attend and give concerts at the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic to be held at Pittsburgh, Pa., from August 27 to September 1, inclusive, 1939.

SEC. 2. For the purpose of defraying the expenses of such band in attending and giving concerts at such encampment, there is authorized to be appropriated the sum of $8,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to carry out the provisions of this act: Provided, That in addition to transportation and Pullman accommodations the leaders and members of the Marine Band be allowed not to exceed $5 per day each for additional living expenses while on the duty, and that the payment of such expenses shall be in addition to the pay and allowances to which they would be entitled while serving at their permanent station.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read a third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH]?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, may we have order? This is the gentleman's maiden speech, and we want to hear it.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman from Mississippi and all other Members of the Congress will hear me. We are now $40,000,000,000 in debt. Twenty billion have been created the past 6 years by the party of Jackson, Jefferson, and Roosevelt. So far this year under Mr. Roosevelt, we have gone in the red to the extent of $2,600,000,000—a travesty to America. A committee of the House has reported the Florida ship canal bill, which, if passed by the House, will involve an expenditure of an additional $200,000,000. I hope when the bill comes to the floor of the House that we will not create any more debt for your children and children's children to pay, because of the fact the Government is so badly in debt and because of the folly of spending by the New Deal, it is time to get some common sense. I hope the Florida ship canal will not be built at this time, because it is one of the most ridiculous things I ever heard of by the New Deal to date to spend money. It will involve $200,000,000 of the taxpayers' money to construct this canal. It is almost unbelievable that the Members of Congress will spend these millions of dollars for such an unworthy and unwarranted project.

Mr. RANKIN. That Florida canal is for national defense.

Mr. RICH. National defense nothing. It is "pork barrel." Why were all Congressmen who wanted it given a free trip to Florida with all expenses paid, if it is not "pork barrel" legislation?

[Here the gavel fell.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. YOUNGDAHL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. YOUNGDAHL]?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANGELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include the platforms of the Republican and Democratic Parties for the last 47 years on the subjects of reclamation of arid lands and conservation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. ANGELL]?

There was no objection.

Mr. SECCOMBE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an editorial by R. E. Bennett.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SECCOMBE]?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. STEARNS of New Hampshire. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. STEARNS]?

There was no objection.

Mr. STEARNS of New Hampshire. Mr. Speaker, the very deep interest of thousands of people in my State in the subject of old-age pensions is illustrated by a resolution passed almost unanimously by both Houses of the New Hampshire Legislature for transmission to the Congress. I believe the subject has been receiving full and conscientious hearings before the committee that has been entrusted with consideration of this matter. I sincerely hope the matter will be properly studied and not be made a partisan political football, but considered seriously to the end that a program may be worked out that will be just and fair to all.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. STEARNS of New Hampshire. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include the resolution to which I have referred.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. STEARNS]?

There was no objection.

The resolution referred to follows:

Resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to provide ample old-age security and to insure complete and impartial consideration of the General Welfare Act of 1939

Whereas the principle of old-age security is now fully recognized throughout this Nation; and

Whereas it is becoming increasingly imperative that ample comfort and freedom from economic stress be provided for the aged; and

Whereas thousands of the citizens of New Hampshire believe that the enactment into law of the General Welfare Act of 1939 (Townsend national recovery plan) would accomplish the above purposes and also be of immense benefit to business in general: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of New Hampshire in General Court convened do hereby urge the Congress of the United States to take immediate action designed to solve the problem of old-age security, and to continue and expeditiously to complete full and impartial hearings on the General Welfare Act of 1939; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the President of the United States and to the presiding officers of the legislative branches of the Federal Government; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the United States Senator H. STYLES BRIDGES, United States Senator CHARLES W. TOBEY, Congressman ARTHUR B. JENKS, and Congressman FOSTER STEARNS, requesting them to do all in their power to expedite the purposes of this resolution.

Mr. HARNESS. Mr. Speaker, at the conclusion of the legislative program for today I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HARNESS]?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. ANDERSON of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an editorial taken from yesterday's Star.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. ANDERSON]?

There was no objection.

Mr. McLEAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an address I made before the Alumni Association of the George Washington University.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. McLEAN]?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. THILL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. THILL]?

There was no objection.

Mr. THILL. Mr. Speaker, President Roosevelt, consciously or unconsciously, is giving the American people the "war jitters." Just recently I journeyed to my district, and I was astounded to find that practically every person I met asked me the same question, "Are we going to have war?"

I discovered that this was due almost entirely to the utterances of our Chief Executive on foreign affairs. When the President recently stated, "I'll be back in the fall if we don't have war" he revealed his negative attitude.

When Roosevelt adopted the editorial article in the Washington Post, which included the words, "Nothing less than a show of preponderant force will stop them"—Germany and Italy—he theoretically committed this country to the use of arms. For how else can we effectively show force than by the utilization of our war machine?

Does not Roosevelt realize the temper of the American people is for peace, and they will never approve going to war by fall. Why cannot the President set our minds at rest by proclaiming that he will not urge America to enter another European war.

The remarks of the man in the White House are disheartening to the American people who love peace.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Wednesday next following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore made, my colleague the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. MURRAY] may be permitted to address the House for 20 minutes on the subject of the fur farmers of our country.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN]?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a very fine and illuminating address made by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN] on the subject of cost of production, made last Friday over the Columbia network.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ALEXANDER]?

There was no objection.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein two radio speeches of mine, one on the subject of the foreign-born, and the other on the subject of our foreign policy.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER]?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Speaker, I have introduced a resolution to provide for the issuance of a Stephen Foster memorial postage stamp.

Criticism has recently been leveled at our laxity in according official recognition to America's men of letters, arts, and music. Such recognition usually takes the form of a special postage stamp issue, such as has from time to time been authorized to commemorate outstanding events in our national progress. More than one of our immortal statesmen, explorers, and men of action have decorated a stamp issue with their distinguished countenances—and rightly so. For stamps, though small in size, circulate far, wide, and often, bringing reminders of our great men into the humblest of homes. Indeed, were most of the Nation's leaders to have a choice, while still alive, of their final resting place, it is almost a certainty that they would choose a 1-, 2-, or 3-cent stamp. Greater honor can come to no man. Of course, a few personages have gotten their faces on our currency, but it is appropriate to print stamps in memory of character and achievements. However, the very abundance of stamps may have served to defeat their purpose—not, I hasten to add, as postal adjuncts, but as monuments to our illustrious public servants. Stamps have come to be taken for granted, and seldom get a second glance from buyer, seller, or receiver. Even the philatelists, or stamp collectors, value stamps more for errors in production than for the distinguished portraits on them. And yet no art gallery can be assembled finer than the etchings on our stamps.

With these prefatory remarks, I hope now to make clear the reason why as yet no stamp issue has been authorized in honor of an American composer, painter, or writer. Congressmen usually await the will of their constituents before proposing legislation for any special issues of stamps. Recently a group of citizens saw fit to make contacts for this worthy purpose. On January 18 of this year—1939—a movement was launched which may well end with a special stamp issue dear to the hearts of American music lovers.

On that January day Mr. Andre Kostelanetz, as the head of a committee of distinguished musicians, including Lawrence Tibbett, Deems Taylor, John Erskine, and others, wrote to me. In his letter he explained that I had been selected as the Kostelanetz committee's voice in Congress because the famed Suwannee River flows through the Florida district which I represent. Mr. Kostelanetz suggested that we join forces—his committee representing the musical phase, with myself representing the geographical and nautical interests—so that with our combined strength we might influence Congress or its delegated committee to authorize a special stamp issue honoring Stephen Foster.

As a result of our extensive correspondence, and because of my profound love for Stephen Foster's matchless songs, to say nothing of my eagerness to foster any movement that would redound to the glory of my native Florida, on January 23, 1939, I introduced House Joint Resolution 128, which was thereupon referred to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, where it now rests. Incidentally, I want to take this opportunity to caution my fellow Floridian and House colleague, JOE HENDRICKS, who is a member of the stamp subcommittee, to keep his weather eye on the gentleman from Georgia, Mr. FRANK B. WHELCHEL, also a stamp subcommittee member. The fair State of Georgia has long laid claim to the Suwannee River and may take this opportunity to steal a march on Florida. But, then, I suppose that not even a gentleman from Georgia would flout the evidence of Bob Ripley, who once itemed that the Suwannee is primarily a Florida river; of the atlas, which proves Ripley to be correct; and of the Kostelanetz committee, which selected a Floridian to be its voice in Congress.

I would not have brought this matter into the open at this time, being content to let JOE HENDRICKS handle Florida's and Foster's interests, but for the fact that a certain group, headed by Mr. Jerry Livingston, a Broadway composer, is reported to have invaded Washington with the purpose of getting a stamp issued in honor of Reginald De Koven. Now, by my musical friends I am assured that the late Mr. De Koven was indeed a celebrated composer. More than that, he founded and directed the Washington Symphony Orchestra. So his position in American musical history is rightfully assured. However, when it comes to ranking in the hearts of the American people, I do not hesitate to believe that Mr. De Koven would himself grant first place to Stephen Foster, as would ninety-nine people out of a hundred.

It is true, as Mr. Livingston alleges, that De Koven was a strangely neglected composer, never attaining the popularity of Victor Herbert and other contemporaries. However, from the days of the founding of our great Republic, I doubt if any man of genius endured more hardships, gained less reward, and was more thoroughly neglected than ill-starred Stephen Foster. His tragic life story is too well known to be repeated by me, but his songs are likewise too well known to be defended by me.

Among his other compositions, Mr. De Koven wrote the famed Oh, Promise Me, which at nuptial ceremonies ranks second only to the Wedding March. But, in all seriousness, I maintain that, if and when our Nation sees fit to issue a special stamp honoring composers, there is only one first logical candidate for that honor—Stephen Foster.

The fact that Andre Kostelanetz, usually identified with more complex music, and his committee associates, all of them opera and concert stars, are unanimous in espousing the right of Stephen Foster to have his likeness on a United States stamp—that fact is proof enough that the composer of Suwannee River is worthy of his high honor first.

I urge favorable consideration of my colleagues, and I trust you will join in for passage of House Joint Resolution 128, authorizing the issuance of a special stamp in honor of Stephen Foster.

No river in the world is possessed of greater majesty and beauty than the Suwannee River. Stephen Foster eloquently carried its virtues to the world, and now this stream, its beauty and tradition, are known world wide. In this accomplishment he did subsequent generations of all nations an outstanding service.

His accomplishments have not passed unnoticed by the Florida people. At this time the erection of a suitable memorial to Stephen Foster is being sponsored by the music clubs of Florida, and particularly by the Stephen Foster Music Club. Mrs. W. A. Saunders, of White Springs, is patriotically leading these clubs and other organizations in our State for the establishment of an appropriate memorial on the banks of the Suwannee River in Florida for this noted composer. She is ably assisted in this work by Mrs. Amy Cone Mathers, also of White Springs, Fla., and others. The project will involve local, State, and probably national scope during the process of its establishment.

The printing of the stamp as provided under House Joint Resolution 128 is in keeping with the wide and noble purposes of commemorating the achievements and deeds of Stephen Foster.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address to House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I commend President Roosevelt for his belated peace move, and hope that it will have some effect toward averting war in Europe. However, I do not believe, sponsored by the President, that it will amount to more than a sensational and dramatic gesture. I am afraid that the President's references to totalitarian states as vandal and gangster nations precludes any acceptance of peace overtures from him. If he had not engaged in name calling and hymns of hate, his plea to avert war would have stood a better chance of success.

For over a year President Roosevelt and his Cabinet have denounced Hitler and Mussolini in violent and provocative language. For the first time in our history our foreign policy has been based upon hatred, threats, and attacks on the forms of government and rulers of foreign nations. It is the most amazing departure from American traditions and has created war hysteria at home and hatred abroad.

I am convinced that if President Roosevelt had refrained from meddling in the European situation, by encouraging England and France to believe that we would fight their battles, they would have long ago reached an agreement by peaceful means to protect their own interests. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein excerpts from an article by Roger Babson appearing in a morning paper.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein a statement by the 21 railroad brotherhoods.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, the civilized world applauds and American public opinion unanimously approves President Roosevelt's dramatic plea for world peace. In Europe and Asia the fate of whole nations rests upon the whims of power-mad dictators, hate-inflamed apostles of war and destruction spilling the blood of millions in a crazed orgy of conquest.

Each hour holds the threat of war, starvation, and death. Were this Nation to remain indifferent now, future generations would condemn our abandonment of every principle of humanitarianism and democracy.

President Roosevelt has earned the plaudits of people everywhere. I am surprised that a Member of this House would rise to criticize him. It is to be expected that the Nazi and Fascist imitators in this country would rant against the President's message, but I never expected the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH] to lend himself to their purposes. Let no one imagine I misinterpret his remarks. Knowing him as I do, I realize that they are words politically inspired, not indicating a sympathy with the policies of the dictators, but harmful, because they bespeak an opposition to the President's purpose which is almost entirely confined to the gentleman [Mr. FISH] himself.

President Roosevelt, avowedly determined to keep this Nation out of war unless our life is threatened, is realistic enough, unlike the gentleman from New York, to realize that only by lending the moral support of this country to that of other democracies can the integrity of nations and the peace of the world be preserved. Already we have seen treaties and pledges violated and the pleas of the heads of nations, statesmen, and high church dignitaries coldly ignored. Four nations have already been unwillingly conquered by sheer force. The ruthless march of the dictators, threatening to throw the world into barbarism and savagery, can only be halted by the restraining influence of nations such as ours, determined to have peace, and so notifying the world.

The gentleman from New York speaks for the Republican Party as a political unit grasping for issues, he speaks for some partisan newspapers, and he speaks for himself. He does not speak for the masses, Democrats or Republicans, and in the masses is the strength of our President. Well do they realize that the step he has taken is the highest promise for peace he could possibly give the American people. This extraordinary effort by the President to preserve peace should forever silence those who accuse him of heading the Nation toward war.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address delivered by John Galvin before the meeting of Ohio businessmen in the Mayflower Hotel.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

THE CONSENT CALENDAR

The SPEAKER. This is Consent Calendar day. The Clerk will call the first bill on the Consent Calendar.

AMENDMENT OF THE SOIL CONSERVATION AND DOMESTIC ALLOTMENT ACT

The Clerk called the first bill on the Consent Calendar, H. R. 3800, to amend section 8 (e) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. GATHINGS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. GILCHRIST. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I hope the gentleman will not press that request, because we might as well kill this bill as have it go over again. May 1 is the time by which farmers throughout the Middle West must comply with this law, and if the bill goes over for another 2 weeks the bill is dead. You might just as well object to the consideration of the bill here and now and kill the bill.

I believe this bill is greatly misunderstood. It proposes simply to change the law so the small man, the tenant farmer and the sharecropper, can participate in these payments. If it goes over for 2 weeks, the bill is dead, that is all. I wish the gentleman would withdraw his request.

Mr. RANKIN. All the gentleman has to do is object to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. GILCHRIST. The bill ought not to be betrayed with a kiss here today by asking that it go over. If the gentleman wants to draw his stiletto and stab it to death, he can do it just as well this way as by objecting to it in its entirety.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Arkansas insist on his request?

Mr. GATHINGS. Mr. Speaker, I insist on my request.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I do so for the purpose of asking the gentleman from Texas a question. Is it the purpose to bring up this measure at some time other than on Consent Calendar day if the bill is passed over at this time?

Mr. JONES of Texas. I had hoped that we might have an opportunity to do so. On the other hand, I had hoped that in order to have the measure passed in time for it to be effective this year there would be no objection to its consideration.

As the law stands at present, the only limitation that is placed on what anyone may draw in the way of benefit payments, under the Soil Conservation Act, is $10,000. It also makes no provision for handling the payments where a great group of tenants is involved. It is hoped that this measure, if passed, would protect the tenants.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Let me say to the chairman of my committee——

Mr. JONES of Texas. We do not control the ownership of land in the Congress; that is a matter for the States. But under the terms of this bill there is an absolute limitation of $5,000 that any man may draw on a farm that he is operating himself, even though he owns a great tract of land. There is a further reduction of 25 percent on all he draws over $1,000. In order to protect the tenant, we have this provision in this bill, which I think is very desirable, that if a man owns a tract of land and is using tenants and he divides the payment with the tenants on the basis of the customary division of rents prevailing in the community, the amount the landowner draws in connection with that landlord and tenant relationship shall be exempted from the limitation.

I think this is wise, because otherwise I think a lot of tenants are going to be driven off the land.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. The objection to the consideration of the bill does not come from this side of the aisle today. Several Members here, including myself, have amendments to offer. I think it should be disposed of today, due to the lateness of the season, so that the farmers will know just what they may expect by way of benefit payments; but if gentlemen on the other side are——

Mr. JONES of Texas. The objections probably have come as much from the gentleman's side of the aisle as from this side heretofore, but I think in every instance it has been by those who did not fully understand the purport of the proposed legislation, and I hope the gentleman from Arkansas may be constrained to withdraw his objection to the bill. You know we have had a good many complaints that certain landlords have been disposed to do away with their tenants or to move them off of their lands in order to get the increased payments. I think there are a few human hogs that would take advantage of a Government program that is intended to give the farmer an equal chance in his Government by providing an offset to the tariff system in which he can have no part. I do not propose, so far as I am concerned, to have legislation that will tend to encourage those big producers to take an unfair advantage of the program and get more benefits than they are entitled to. This legislation would tend to protect the man who is farming in this country an average or a family-size farm. There may be a few instances where some man with a large tract of land will be put at a disadvantage, but they are so few and far between as to be negligible, whereas, if this bill is not passed, there are literally thousands of small-type farmers who will suffer by virtue of the failure of its passage. If a man wants to take that responsibility, that is his responsibility, but I want him to understand what he is doing.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, it takes just one objection to the gentleman's request and I demand the regular order. If the gentleman wants to object, he can do so. This is just a request that this bill be passed over without prejudice. If the gentleman from Minnesota wants to object, then the bill comes to the floor for consideration.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi demands the regular order. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas that the bill be passed over without prejudice?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker——

Mr. RANKIN. I have demanded the regular order, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The regular order has been demanded. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas that the bill be passed over without prejudice?

There was no objection.

THE STABILIZATION FUND AND ALTERATION OF THE WEIGHT OF THE DOLLAR

Mr. SABATH, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following privileged resolution (H. Res. 165), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered printed:

House Resolution 165

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of H. R. 3325, a bill to extend the time within which the powers relating to the stabilization fund and alteration of the weight of the dollar may be exercised. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed 7 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion, except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

CONSENT CALENDAR

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the next bill on the Consent Calendar.

CONSTRUCTION OF VESSELS FOR COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 138) to authorize the construction of certain vessels for the Coast and Geodetic Survey, Department of Commerce, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

PAYMENT OF BURIAL EXPENSES, NATIVE EMPLOYEES, SERVING ABROAD

The Clerk called the bill (S. 1523) to authorize the payment of burial expenses and expenses in connection with last illness and death of native employees who die while serving in offices abroad of executive departments of the United States Government.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I object.

AMENDMENT OF AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT OF 1938

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 3955) to amend section 335 (d) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 335 (d) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, is amended by striking out the words "one hundred" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "two hundred."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

REIMBURSABLE FEATURES OF ACT OF JUNE 16, 1933, RESPECTING INDIANS

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 4679) to amend title II, section 208, of the act approved June 16, 1933 (48 Stat. 205–206), to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to adjust or cancel reimbursable features of said act insofar as they apply to Indians, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

NAVY AND MARINE MEMORIAL

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 3234) to provide for the completion of the Navy and Marine Memorial.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $189,634, of which not to exceed $9,850 for architectural fees and $44,384 to the sculptor for the design, professional services, disbursements, and material or so much thereof as may be necessary to be expended under the direction of the National Park Service for the completion of the Navy and Marine Memorial, in accordance with the official plans therefor as approved by the Fine Arts Commission, except that the contract proposal shall not exclude any suitable green granite or stone appropriate for that use, and the discharge of all outstanding obligations with respect to the Navy and Marine Memorial project, including the performance of all uncompleted contracts, except for material not yet furnished.

SEC. 2. All contracts shall be on condition that the work shall be completed within 1 year from the passage of the act.

SEC. 3. The National Parks Service is further authorized and directed to provide adequate drives, parking space, and landscaping to provide for the enjoyment of this memorial by its visitors.

With the following committee amendments:

Line 5, page 1, strike out the entire line beginning with "189,634."

Line 7, page 1, strike out the words "services, disbursements, and materials."

Insert in lieu thereof the following words: "$100,000, said sum to be expended as follows: Not to exceed $5,000 for architectural fees and full satisfaction of all obligations in connection with the original contract between the Navy and Marine Memorial Association and the architect, and not more than $44,384 for the design, professional services, disbursements, materials, and in full satisfaction of all obligations in connection with the original contract between the Navy and Marine Memorial Association and the sculptor, and the remainder."

Line 1, page 2, strike out the words "and the."

Line 2, page 2, strike out the entire line.

Line 3, page 2, strike out the entire line.

Line 4, page 2, strike out the entire line.

Line 5, page 2, strike out the entire line and insert in lieu thereof the words "The National Park Service is authorized to modify the structural details, if necessary, without deviating from the design."

The committee amendments were agreed to; and the bill, as amended, was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

NATURALIZATION OF ALIEN VETERANS, WORLD WAR

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 805) to extend further time for naturalization to alien veterans of the World War under the act approved May 25, 1932 (47 Stat. 165), to extend the same privileges to certain veterans of countries allied with the United States during the World War, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. GORE. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman reserve his objection?

Mr. GORE. No.

AMENDING NATURALIZATION LAWS

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 4100) to amend the naturalization laws in relation to an alien previously lawfully admitted into the United States for permanent residence and who is temporarily absent from the United States solely in his or her capacity as a regularly ordained clergyman or representative of a recognized religious denomination or organization existing in the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

PUBLIC SCHOOL AT WOLF POINT, MONT.

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 961, for expenditure of funds for cooperation with the public-school board at Wolf Point, Mont., for completing the construction, extension, equipment, and improvement of a public-school building to be available to Indian children of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, Mont.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That here is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $50,000 for the purpose of cooperating with the public-school board of district No. 45, town of Wolf Point, County of Roosevelt, Mont., for completing the construction, extension, equipment, and improvement of the public high-school building at Wolf Point, Mont.: Provided, That the expenditure of any money so authorized shall be subject to the express conditions that the school maintained by the said district in the said building shall be available to all Indian children of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, Mont., on the same terms, except as to payment of tuition, as other children of said school district: Provided further, That plans and specifications for construction, extension, or improvement of structures shall be furnished by local or State authorities without cost to the United States, and upon approval thereof by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs actual work shall proceed under the direction of such local or State officials. Payment for work in place shall be made monthly on vouchers properly certified by local officials of the Indian Service: Provided further, That any amount expended on any project hereunder shall be recouped by the United States within a period of 30 years, commencing with the date of occupancy of the project, through reducing the annual Federal tuition payments for the education of Indian pupils enrolled in public or high schools of the district involved, or by the acceptance of Indian pupils in such schools without cost to the United States; and in computing the amount of recoupment for each project interest at 3 percent per annum shall be included on unrecouped balances.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GRANTING PENSIONS AND INCREASE OF PENSIONS TO CERTAIN SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2301, to amend section 2 of the act entitled "An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the War with Spain, the Philippine Insurrection, or the China Relief Expedition, to certain maimed soldiers, to certain widows, minor children, and helpless children of such soldiers and sailors, and for other purposes," approved May 1, 1926.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the present bill before the House proposes to advance the marriage date for veterans of the Spanish-American War from September 1, 1922, down to May 1, 1926. It means that any Spanish-American War veteran who married at any time within 38 years after the war had terminated, his widow will then be entitled to receive compensation. I think this is one of the bad features of some of the veterans' legislation that has been passed by the Congress, in that we frequently allow the marriage date to be changed, and as a result we find that a hundred years after the war has been terminated there are widows of veterans still receiving pensions arising out of service in the war.

As a result of the Revolutionary War, fought from 1776 to 1783, it was my understanding that the last widow died in 1906. In the War of 1812, which ended in 1814, the last soldier died in 1905. There is one beneficiary who is still drawing a pension. I believe the last widow died in November of last year, more than 125 years after the war was over.

From the Indian wars, from 1890 to 1898, there are 2,114 living veterans and 4,663 dependents. In the War with Mexico, 1846 to 1848, there are no living veterans, but there are 195 dependents still on the pension rolls. With the Civil War, fought from 1861 to 1865, we still have 5,048 veterans and we have 64,507 widows, largely because we extended the marriage date of the Civil War veterans down to a period 40 years after the termination of that war.

It is my thought that the marriage date should not be extended. The passage of this legislation means that approximately 2,000 women who married veterans between the years 1922 and 1938 would be entitled to recover compensation. In other words, they married veterans 20 years after the war was over. If he suffered any disability they certainly must have been aware of that disability at the time of marriage. Already 2,000 of them have become widows. In other words, they were married to the veteran 20 years after the war and lived with him less than a period of 15 years and will become permanently attached to the pension rolls under this legislation. I think it is a dangerous precedent. I think the Congress should leave the date in 1922, where it now is, and not establish the precedent to be followed by veterans of the World War. While there are not a large number of veterans of the Spanish-American War, you must remember that in the World War we have over 4,000,000 veterans. If you extend the marriage date for World War veterans over 40 years or more you will be paying for the results of the war not only in 2050, but perhaps 2090. I think it is legislation such as this that does greatest harm to those veterans who are deserving and who are entitled to compensation.

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COSTELLO. I yield.

Mr. SMITH of Washington. The precedent of which the gentleman from California complains has already long since been established in the case of widows of veterans of the Civil War. We have established that precedent in legislation which the Congress has enacted and which is now upon the statute books. This bill, which is very simple and highly meritorious, merely accords to the widows of veterans of the Spanish-American War the same rights and benefits enjoyed by widows of veterans of the Civil War, a precedent which has been recognized by the Congress for many years. The cost of the bill would be comparatively small. The United Spanish War veterans estimate that it could not possibly affect more than 3,500 persons, and would cause an additional cost of $1,000,000. The cost for the first year would probably be much less than $739,000, the estimate of the Veterans' Administration. We purposely fixed the date at January 1, 1938, which is 40 years from the end of the Spanish-American War, the same period as that of the widows of the veterans of the Civil War, so that there would be no inducement or incentive for women to now marry veterans of the Spanish-American War in order to secure those benefits which the gentleman from California seems to fear, which I do not.

The pension to the widow only amounts to $30 per month, which is certainly small enough. These veterans of the Spanish-American War are as much entitled to the companionship and help of a wife as are the veterans of the Civil War at the same period of their lives, and the argument of the gentleman that the veterans of the World War are going to come along and ask for the same relief does not impress me one bit. If it was right and just in the case of the Civil War veterans, it is equally so in the case of the Spanish-American War veterans, and we will take care of the widows of the World War veterans at the proper time. Why must economy always be practiced at the expense of the veterans of our wars and their dependents? When President Roosevelt signed the act in 1935 restoring the pensions to the veterans of the Spanish-American War he reiterated in a statement issued by him at the time the principle and precedent that the Spanish War veterans were to be accorded the same rights and benefits as the veterans of the Civil War. That is all that we are providing in this legislation so far as the widows are concerned and the cost is comparatively small for the good that would be accomplished.

Mr. COSTELLO. So far as the cost is concerned, the gentleman is correct. The first year is estimated at $379,000. The peak of the cost, however, is estimated at approximately $3,000,000. How long it will be before we reach that peak I do not know. I will state to the gentleman that while we have the precedent of the Civil War to rely upon in passing this legislation, we are merely establishing a second precedent so that veterans of the World War will make exactly the same claim. You will make it impossible to break such a precedent. Personally, I do not believe that a woman who marries a veteran 30 or 40 years after the termination of the war is entitled to receive pension benefits. If the veteran whom she marries is suffering a disability, she knows that at the time of marriage and she should get married subject to those conditions and not with the anticipation that she would be entitled to receive compensation for the rest of her days. It is with that thought in mind that I am making these remarks at this time, that unless this precedent of the Civil War is broken, it will be impossible to break the precedent in the future. It becomes more permanently established.

Mr. SMITH of Washington.. The gentleman realizes, does he not, that he is advocating a discrimination against veterans of the Spanish-American War?

Mr. COSTELLO. I am advocating a change in not following the precedent that was established for Civil War veterans.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. COSTELLO, Mr. LEWIS of Colorado, and Mr. LORD objected.

The SPEAKER.. Three objections are heard, and the bill is stricken from the calendar.

LOUISIANA-VICKSBURG BRIDGE COMMISSION

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3224, creating the Louisiana-Vicksburg Bridge Commission; defining the authority, power, and duties of said Commission; and authorizing said Commission and its successors and assigns to purchase, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Delta Point, La., and Vicksburg, Miss.

Mr. MILLS of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as efforts are being made to work out certain amendments to the bill which will remove present objections to the bill, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

SPANISH WAR VETERANS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2320, to provide domiciliary care, medical and hospital treatment, and burial benefits to certain veterans of the Spanish-American War, the Philippine Insurrection, and the Boxer Rebellion.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in addition to persons entitled to domiciliary care, medical and hospital treatment, and burial benefits under the provisions of sections 6 and 17, Public Law, No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, as amended (U. S. C., title 38, secs. 706 and 717) and regulations issued pursuant thereto, as amended, those persons recognized as veterans of the Spanish-American War, including the Boxer Rebellion and Philippine Insurrection, under public laws in effect on March 19, 1933, are hereby included within the provisions of the aforesaid section 6, as amended, and the second proviso of the aforesaid section 17, and regulations issued pursuant thereto, as amended, in the same manner and to the same extent as the provisions are now or may hereafter be applied to veterans of any war as specified therein.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BENEFITS TO WORLD WAR VETERANS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2296, to restore certain benefits to World War veterans suffering with paralysis, paresis, or blindness, or who are helpless or bedridden, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That on and after the date of enactment of this act any World War veterans suffering from paralysis, paresis, or blindness, or who is helpless or bedridden, as the result of any disability, may be awarded compensation under the laws and interpretations governing this class of cases prior to the enactment of Public Law No. 2, Seventy-third Congress, March 20, 1933, subject, however, to the limitations, except as to misconduct or willful misconduct, contained in sections 27 and 28 of Public Law No. 141, Seventy-third Congress, March 28, 1934: Provided, That the language herein contained shall not be construed to reduce or discontinue compensation authorized under the provisions of section 26 of Public Law No. 141, Seventy-third Congress: Provided further, That where a World War veteran dies or has died from disease or injury, and service connection for such disease or injury is established under the provisions of this act, the surviving widow, child, or children, and/or dependent parents shall be entitled to receive compensation at the rates prescribed in Veterans Regulation No. 1 (a), part I, paragraph IV, and amendments thereto: Provided further, That for the purposes of awarding compensation under this act, service connection of disability may be determined or redetermined in any cases where claim has been or is filed by the veteran, widow, child, or children, and/or dependent parent or parents.

SEC. 2. In the administration of the laws granting benefits for service-connected disabilities or deaths, any increase of disability during World War service shall be deemed aggravation in the application of the rules, regulations, and interpretations of the Veterans' Administration.

SEC. 3. Payments under the provisions of this act shall be effective the date of enactment of this act or the date of filing claim therefor, whichever is the later.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COSTELLO: Page 2, line 18, strike out all of section 2.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, section 2 of the bill reads as follows:

In the administration of the laws granting benefits for service-connected disabilities or deaths, any increase of disability during World War service shall be deemed aggravation in the application of the rules, regulations, and interpretations of the Veterans' Administration.

I propose to strike out this section because it states that any increase of disability, regardless of whether the increase of disability was caused by reason of service or not, shall be deemed an aggravation in applying the rules of the Veterans' Administration. I think this is not sound legislation. It seems to me that if there be an increase of any disability a veteran may have because of a disability sustained prior to service, that increase should not be related to his service, it should not be deemed due to his service and should not automatically be considered an aggravation because of service. I have, therefore, offered this amendment to strike this section from the bill.

The probable cost of this legislation has not been estimated because of the difficulty of making such an estimate, but I feel that this particular section should be stricken from the bill. I am not opposing the entire bill, but only this one section which makes the normal increase of a disability become a matter of statutory aggravation which the Veterans' Administration must recognize. There is no obligation on the part of the veteran to prove that the increase in disability was due to his service; on the contrary any increase in disability becomes by law an increase in disability due to service. How we can justify such a provision in this bill is inconceivable, and I therefore am opposed to this section and urge that it be stricken from the bill.

LET HIM THAT IS WITHOUT GUILT CAST THE FIRST STONE

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. COSTELLO].

Mr. Speaker, of all the cruel and inhuman laws that have ever been passed by the Congress of the United States one of the most cruel was the one which singled out World War veterans for punishment because of alleged social misconduct, denied them compensation for 20 years, held them up to public scorn and ridicule, and visited that punishment upon their wives and children.

Large numbers of these veterans were the best soldiers that ever followed a flag, men who went over the top, if you please; men who bared their breasts to the enemies' bayonets, men who asked for no quarter, men who responded to their country's call when they had no voice in the declaration of war; yet because some medical officer or research worker found that in the veteran's blood was evidence, to him, of former misconduct on the part of the veteran, he has been denied compensation, held up to scorn, and contempt and disgrace; and that disgrace has been visited upon his wife and his children to the third and fourth generation.

For years I have been trying to get this misconduct provision stricken out, and I expect to continue my effort as long as I am a Member of this House, and especially as long as I am charged with the responsibilities with which I am now charged, as chairman of the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

Let us see what effect this amendment would have on these men who went to the war and in the course of that strenuous drilling, in the course of the endurance of all those shots or innoculations they gave the veterans, in the course of bayonet practice, in the course of gun-squad drill, in the course of mounted drill, if you please, by men who had never had their hands on a horse before, in the course of their services on the front standing in muddy trenches, going over the top in the face of blinding fire or standing the shock of shells bursting on every hand. If in the course of that strenuous service they broke down, or came back and found themselves unable to carry on, and some doctor in the Veterans' Administration, or elsewhere, found in his blood evidence of social misconduct somewhere, or something that probably could not be accounted for otherwise, they deny him compensation, and would let him go to the poorhouse, even though he may have a perfect war record and been cited for bravery in the face of the enemy. They not only hold him up to scorn, ridicule, and contempt, and besmirch him for life, but, as I said, they visit that punishment upon his wife and his children, even upon his children's children.

The rest of you can do as you please, but I hope you will vote this amendment down. Many of these men are now blind, many of them are paralyzed and utterly unable to care for themselves.

I certainly hope all who vote for this amendment will put yourselves in the position suggested by the Saviour when He said, "Let him that is without guilt cast the first stone."

Mr. Speaker, I hope the amendment offered by the gentleman from California will be defeated. [Applause.]

Mr. VAN ZANDT. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Speaker, the legislation we are now considering very vitally concerns approximately 1,200 veterans of the World War and their dependents. Many of you are familiar with the fact that it was my good privilege to head one of America's great veteran organizations for 3 years, and as a result of that service to my comrades, daily I am in receipt of communications asking why the veteran of the World War is faced with the misconduct clause in existing World War veterans' legislation. Then we receive letters from the wife of the veteran, the children of the veteran, as well as relatives of the veteran, asking why, though he, the veteran, may be disabled from a service-connected disability, is not receiving the benefits similar to other veterans of the World War who suffer from identical service-connected disabilities.

The Veterans' Administration cannot tell the wife, the children, the father, or the mother of the veteran why he is not entitled to these benefits, nor can we who speak for the veteran tell him; but oftentimes the wife, the children, the father, and the mother of the veteran receives in a roundabout way information that the veteran is not entitled to benefits simply by reason of a misconduct. As the chairman of the Committee on World War Veterans mentioned a moment ago, the veterans were taken to France, were placed in camps, away from their mothers and fathers and wives; were subjected to various conditions, and now even though they served their country honorably in time of war, even though a machine-gun bullet drilled their bodies, shrapnel mangled their bodies, and even though they inhalted poison gas, by reason of this misconduct clause they are denied benefits.

Mr. Speaker, I appeal to the Members of this House in the name of the veterans of the World War and the organized veterans to join the veterans in voting down this amendment and support the bill without the amendment.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VAN ZANDT. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. As a member of the Pensions Committee for many years, I became convinced it was costing the Government more in investigations to deny this particular class of pensioners their benefits than the Government saved. I am for this bill.

Mr. VAN ZANDT. I thank the gentleman for his contribution.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. BULWINKLE. Mr. Speaker, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Speaker, when the Veterans' Committee was established in the House of Representatives, we found on investigation that there were any number of cases of men suffering from the so-called social diseases who had paresis, blindness, insanity, and other disabilities incident thereto.

We remembered that when we went into the war any number of young men were taken from their homes. They were told to "do as you please, provided you go to a prophylactic station." Some of these diseases may have been due to their own misconduct. Part was due to the fact that in some instances prophylactic stations were not provided for. I believe in at least three-fourths of the cases through no misconduct of their own this disease was brought upon them. It is one of the most pitiful things we have to contend with to see these men in the hospitals, to see these men suffering from the diseases mentioned, the great majority of them not through any misconduct of their own but from the mere fact that possibly they may have been caused by an innocent contact or by heredity.

This is a harsh and cruel law. In 1924 we provided under an act that they should receive compensation as well as hospitalization. Later on under the Economy Act that law was repealed. I am firmly of the opinion that the Congress of the United States should reenact this bill which comes from the Committee on World War Veterans in order to do justice to these men.

Mr. RANKIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BULWINKLE. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. RANKIN. I realize that no man in the House is better qualified to speak for World War veterans than is the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BULWINKLE]. No man in this House has a better war record than he has, no man in this House saw more service, and no man has been more diligent in looking after the World War veterans. May I ask the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BULWINKLE] if it is not his opinion that a large number, if not a vast majority, of these men who have been thus penalized have not been guilty of the misconduct charged to them?

Mr. BULWINKLE. The gentleman is absolutely right; a very large number from our investigation. I am therefore asking that the amendment offered by the gentleman from California be voted down.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. COSTELLO].

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. FOLGER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a statement from the Honorable Frank W. Hancock.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

THE CONSENT CALENDAR

ADJUSTMENT OF RAILROAD OBLIGATIONS

The Clerk called the next bill on the Consent Calendar, H. R. 5407, to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. KEAN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask a question of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER]. On page 9, line 4, of this bill, there is a provision that for the ratification of the plan there is needed the consent of creditors holding only three-fifths of the aggregate amount of the claims of each affected class. This means that the holders of 40 percent of the bonds under one mortgage may be bound by the action of holders of the other 60 percent. I know the gentleman from Tennessee has taken great pains to draw up a bill which would be fair to all, but I wonder if the gentleman believes this provision of the bill fully safeguards the widows and orphans and other unorganized small minority holders?

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that the gentleman from New Jersey has asked that question, because it relates to one of the important provisions in the pending bill, and I am glad to have an opportunity to answer the question.

The proviso referred to by the gentleman from New Jersey relates to the final confirmation of the plan of adjustment. It is part of the requirement that creditors holding at least 75 percent of the aggregate amount of claims held by all classes of creditors shall assent to the plan of adjustment, and that creditors holding at least 60 percent of all of any one class of obligations shall assent. This means that there must be affirmative vote by at least 60 percent of that class in whom the gentleman from New Jersey is particularly interested; that is, the individual investors, the widows, orphans, and those who are generally not advised about these matters. This provision does not mean that only 60 percent of this class are in agreement or are willing to assent to this plan, but simply means that there must be affirmative action by at least 60 percent. Naturally, in order for 75 percent of the aggregate of all classes to assent, there will be a larger percentage than 75 percent of some of the classes, and for the protection of some of the smaller classes the 60-percent minimum has been provided.

Under the present law, section 77, such a high percentage is not required; as a matter of fact, the assent of only 66⅔ percent of those who vote on a plan is required. Obviously, under section 77, there can be a minority reorganization, whereas under this bill there can be no such thing. For the plan to be confirmed it must be almost unanimous, as a practical matter.

The actual agreement of at least 75 percent of all classes and 60 percent of each class indicates that there is no real opposition to the plan of adjustment. For example, assuming that 40 percent of any class of security holders do not vote on a proposed plan of adjustment, that by no means indicates that they oppose the plan. They may favor the plan, as for instance, fiduciaries, such as guardians, executors, administrators, and trustees who are unwilling to assume responsibility or who think they have no legal power to assent. There are many people who keep their securities in the names of nominees and collect their coupons through banks or brokers and with whom the railroad is in no direct communication. Many security holders show indifference to their investment affairs or procrastinate about making up their minds. Ordinarily those people would vote in favor of any reasonable plan rather than oppose it.

There are also foreign investors scattered all over the globe, persons who are traveling, or who are ill and incapable of assenting. Astonishingly, there are many security holders who cannot be located, and I have been informed reliably that where valuable rights are offered to stockholders of corporations, for illustration, from 4 to 8 percent of those rights are not taken up by the beneficiaries.

On the other hand, there are some who definitely will not act or who oppose the plan either on account of its terms or their personal circumstances. To these and all others, full opportunity is given to be heard, both before the Interstate Commerce Commission and by the three-judge court. Any one person who may feel himself affected by the proposed plan can have his day in court.

The most troublesome group are those not of investor types but who frequently acquire securities at low prices and institute legal proceedings to enforce full payment. Recognizing that the majority have assented or will assent to the plan and in the hope that the railroad wants to avoid receivership, they take full advantage of the situation. The actual number of these people is relatively small, but their influence is large. Many investors favor a plan but do not wish to be imposed upon and refrain from signing an assent for fear of preferential treatment to such a minority.

It should be mentioned that under section 77, although the requisite number of assents to a plan of reorganization may not be obtained, the court, nevertheless, can confirm a plan if the judge is satisfied that it is fair and equitable. No such minority confirmation is possible under the bill now before us, and I have no hesitancy in saying that this bill contains the highest protective provisions ever placed in a bankruptcy act.

It should be said that only two material objections were made to the bill in committee, and one of them was that the percentages required for confirmation of a plan of adjustment are too high. Hon. Jesse Jones, Chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, wrote the committee that he thought that "where as many as two-thirds of all security holders and a majority of each class agree upon a modification or rearrangement of the capital structure of a railroad there should be a legal way of making it effective." However, the committee decided that if error was inevitable they would prefer to err on the side of conservatism, and the higher percentages were adopted after thorough consideration.

Mr. Speaker, I shall be pleased to explain any other phases of the bill, if I can.

Mr. HOBBS. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, is there not a class including a great many persons who hold securities as trustees and who, in order to consent, would have to petition a court? Therefore, the time element involved would tend to prevent such persons from voting in the affirmative.

Mr. CHANDLER. Yes; there are security holders who fall in that category, and the court proceeding under this bill must be completed within 1 year after it is started, unless good cause is shown justifying a brief extension of time.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, although, unfortunately, I am not very familiar with this bill, my understanding of the gentleman's statement before the Rules Committee is that if a railroad is already in a section 77 proceeding it is not possible to work out a composition unless the section 77 proceeding is dismissed.

Mr. CHANDLER. The gentleman from Colorado is correct, and there are very practical reasons for that.

In section 77 proceedings the railroad is placed in the hands of trustees who take over management, control, and operation of the properties. Counsel are engaged, and the railroad undergoes thorough overhauling from the ground up. Under this bill the railroad continues to operate under its own management as usual. No trustees, attorneys, and so forth, are required, and there is no disturbance of employee relationships, or the operation of the railroad by cutting off trains, and so forth. Section 77 proceedings can be involuntary, but proceedings under this bill are voluntary only. Under section 77 payments stop on preexisting obligations of the railroad, and bondholders get no interest. Under this bill taxes, operating expenses, wages, employment contracts, equipment trust certificates, unliquidated claims, and other similar obligations are not affected, and during the pendency of the proceeding, the petitioning railroad must continue to make payments to all creditors affected by the plan of obligations currently payable and equal to the amounts proposed to be paid under the plan, thereby preventing the discontinuance of interest payment, and so forth, as would be the case if the petition were filed in accordance with section 77, or in equity.

Under section 77 the plan of reorganization is worked out after the railroad is in court, and there are many hearings by the Federal courts and also by the Interstate Commerce Commission. In the pending bill the plan is prepared by the railroad and submitted to creditors and stockholders before any proceedings whatever are started, and if the holders of 25 percent of the claims affected by the plan indicate a willingness to go along, the railroad then submits the proposed plan to the Interstate Commerce Commission for careful study in accordance with section 20 (a) of the Interstate Commerce Act. There are other differences which might be mentioned if I had time. Suffice it to say that under the pending bill the procedure is direct and simple, whereas under section 77 it is complicated and sometimes interminable, and I am sure that the gentleman from Colorado will see readily how difficult it would be to merge a section 77 proceeding with a proceeding under the pending bill.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. I can see the difficulty. Nevertheless, the procedure proposed under the pending bill has been received in general with great approval. The difficulty is that you might dismiss the proceeding under section 77 without any assurance that you could work out a composition plan under the provisions of the pending bill.

Mr. CHANDLER. But the beginning of a proceeding under this bill is entirely out of court. If the security holders desire at any time to prepare a plan with the assistance of the railroad itself they can do so, and if they get the requisite number of security holders to assent to such a proceeding, they should be able to dismiss the section 77 case, and complete the reorganization under the new statute. However, they cannot carry through this proceeding with a section 77 proceeding still pending.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. It would be possible, however, to initiate such a proceeding under the pending bill even though the proceedings under section 77 were still pending?

Mr. CHANDLER. Yes; it is possible to initiate such a proceeding because it is initiated out of court.

Mr. MICHENER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, as a matter of fact, hearings were held on this bill and extensive publicity was given to them. Everyone appearing—and many did appear—was for the bill. Organized railroad labor is for it, the owners are for it, the insurance company investors are for it, and the savings-bank investors are for it. All those interested appearing favored the bill, and the committee gave very careful consideration to the whole matter. Is not that correct?

Mr. CHANDLER. That is correct; and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER] took an especially valuable part, may I say in justice to him, in the work on this bill, and has been of great assistance to the Subcommittee on Bankruptcy and Reorganization.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHANDLER. I yield to my colleague on the committee from Alabama.

Mr. HOBBS. Is it not also a fact, in answer to the question of the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. LEWIS], that the railroads that are in process of reorganization under 77 are for the most part so much more involved financially than that class of railroads that this legislation is aimed to benefit that they would probably not be interested in this plan at all?

Mr. CHANDLER. Yes; the gentleman is correct; and may I say that this legislation will be of great benefit to railroads which have not reached the status where they must apply for relief under section 77.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHANDLER. I yield to the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. By my interrogatories of the gentleman I did not wish in any way to criticize but to praise this bill. However, some question has been raised by those interested and who have found so much merit in the pending bill that they are wondering if they might not avail themselves of its provisions, even though they are already, as they express it, "enmeshed in 77."

Mr. CHANDLER. I think it may be possible and quite probable that many railroads now in court in one way or another may be able to work out their problems and then seek relief under this bill if enacted into law. I have the feeling that this bill's usefulness will expand with experience under it.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHANDLER. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska, a member of the committee.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Is it not a fact that this bill provides for voluntary reorganization on the part of railroads which are not hopelessly insolvent with a minimum of court procedure?

Mr. CHANDLER. Right.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. And referring to the question of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. KEAN], is it not true that this bill provides for and requires a greater acquiescence on the part of security holders than is required under section 77, the present law?

Mr. CHANDLER. Correct.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. And to that extent further protects the security holders?

Mr. CHANDLER. That is entirely true.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHANDLER. I yield to the gentleman from Montana.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I want to say to the gentleman that I have received great support for his bill and I favor the legislation, but am wondering how, if at all, stockholders will be affected by this procedure.

Mr. CHANDLER. Stockholders, I think, will gain a distinct advantage in that they will have their investment salvaged, as it were, by working out this proceeding, which will be for their benefit along with the benefit of security holders of the various classes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. In other words, this bill will not only be beneficial to the railroads but to the stockholders as well, and also to the creditors.

Mr. CHANDLER. Yes; and particularly to the people who work for the railroads.

Mr. O'CONNOR. And to the public generally.

Mr. CHANDLER. It will not interfere with the employee relationships and the contracts with the employees of the railroads, or interfere with the payment of taxes and running expenses in the operation of the railroads.

Mr. FLANNERY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHANDLER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. FLANNERY. Is it not a fact that every party who might have an interest, direct or indirect, has approved of this legislation?

Mr. CHANDLER. Yes; it has the approval of every interest.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHANDLER. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. In connection with the question of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, will the gentleman permit me to call attention to the last paragraph of the report which was drawn by the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee and which reads as follows:

> The proposed legislation has the endorsement and approval of railroad owners, railroad employee organizations, railroad managements, investors, newspapers, public officials, and, it is believed, has the sanction of the public generally.

This correctly states the situation, does it not?

Mr. CHANDLER. Yes; it does.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I would like to call to your mind the fact that it was you who first suggested the working out of this bill. You will remember that following receipt of the President's message last year urging Congress to take necessary steps for the immediate relief of railroads you invited to your office the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS], whom we all love and admire, and invited me with him, and you asked the Committee on the Judiciary to begin the study of this question.

We have not undertaken to decide here all of the problems of the railroads. In fact that is not possible in any single statute, but the Committee on the Judiciary has tried to provide a bill whose purpose is to enable railroads which are fundamentally sound as transportation systems but which are handicapped financially by maturing obligations or unnecessarily heavy capital structures, to enter into agreement with their creditors and security holders for the postponement or modification of obligations, and submit such agreements to the Interstate Commerce Commission and then to courts of bankruptcy for hearing and appropriate action by which such agreements are made effective without impairing the normal operations, employee relations, and the permanent stability of the railroads.

Generally speaking, American railroads may be divided into three groups:

First. Those clearly solvent and in position to operate successfully.

Second. Those insolvent and needing complete reorganization as provided by section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act.

Third. Those in temporary financial difficulties and requiring temporary relief but not so involved as to require thorough overhauling of their capital structures.

This bill, if enacted, will make available to the railroads in the third group, and to their subsidiaries and lessor corporations, the bankruptcy power contained in article I, chapter 8, clause 1, of the Constitution of the United States, which permits Congress to establish uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies.

Stated briefly, any railroad desiring to effect an adjustment of certain of its obligations, as well as the modification or postponement of its securities or its capital structures, prepares a proposed plan of adjustment and secures assurances of acceptance of the plan from creditors and security holders having at least 25 percent of the claims affected thereby. Whenever the minimum of 25 percent of the aggregate amount of the claims affected by the proposed plan of adjustment give such assurance, the railroad is authorized to submit the proposed plan to the Interstate Commerce Commission for examination in accordance with the requirements of section 20a of the Interstate Commerce Act. Should all of the requirements of said section 20a be met, the Commission is authorized to issue an order approving the issuance or modification of the securities involved in the plan.

Among the salient provisions of section 20a on which the Interstate Commerce Commission is required to make findings prior to the issuance of the order referred to are:

Such proposed issuance or modification of securities is in the public interest, is consistent with the continuance by the railroad corporation of service to the public as a common carrier, and will not impair its ability to perform such service.

Thereafter the railroad desiring to effect such proposed plan shall obtain assents thereto by its creditors holding "more than two-thirds of the aggregate amount of the claims affected by said plan, which two-thirds shall include at least a majority of the aggregate amount of the claims of each affected class." When such assents are secured, the railroad may file a petition in the United States district court having jurisdiction as provided in the bill, and a special court of three judges is convened to conduct the proceedings relative to such plan, hold hearings, and exercise jurisdiction over the petitioning railroad and its property, although the court does not appoint a receiver or trustee or undertake to control the operation of the carrier.

If the three-judge court, after hearings, be satisfied that the proposed plan of adjustment has been assented to by the requisite percentages aforesaid, and "that the plan is fair and equitable, is in the public interest, affords due recognition to the rights of each class of creditors and stockholders, does not discriminate unfairly in favor of any class of creditors or stockholders, and will conform to the requirements of the law of the land regarding the participation of the various classes of creditors and stockholders," the court shall file an opinion setting forth its conclusions and the reasons therefor and shall enter a decree approving and confirming such plan, provided the plan, as submitted to or as modified by the court, has been accepted by creditors holding more than three-fourths of the aggregate amount of the claims affected by the plan, including at least three-fifths of the aggregate amount of the claims of each affected class.

Upon confirmation of the plan, the decree of the three-judge court is binding on the petitioner and on all the creditors and security holders of the railroad. While the effect of the decree of the court is to establish the plan of adjustment over the possible objection of a dissenting minority of less than 25 percent of all of the creditors and security holders affected thereby, care has been taken that the rights of minority interests shall be properly safeguarded and that due process of law shall be exercised.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is given a maximum of 120 days within which to discharge fully its responsibilities as set forth in section 20a of the Interstate Commerce Act, and the public interest in the proceeding is protected by the finding of the Commission, after hearing, that the issuance or modification of securities as proposed conforms to section 20a. The private rights of creditors and stockholders are protected in the proceedings conducted by the three-judge court, and by its findings as required by section 725 of the bill. Moreover, the plan of adjustment approved by the three-judge court may contain appropriate provisions for the safeguarding of the interests of creditors and others affected by the plan "in all matters of the petitioner's financial policy and operation."

Prompt review of the decision of the three-judge court is authorized by certiorari to the United States Supreme Court.

Mr. Speaker, one further point should be mentioned. This legislation expires in 5 years, and is designed to help meet what we all hope is a temporary condition of hard times for the railroads. The Committee on the Judiciary thought that legislation of a permanent character might have some unfavorable effect on railroad credit, and many of us believe that economic conditions furnish the principal obstacle to railroad reorganization. However, if the time of the law should be extended, that can be done in the light of the experience which will develop within 5 years.

As the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. COLE] wrote me recently about the bill:

Designed, as it is, to facilitate voluntary adjustments between railroad companies and a substantial majority of the holders of their securities with the possible avoidance of long and expensive bankruptcies and the shock to our general business and economic situation of having a number of additional large systems forced into bankruptcy, there would appear no ground for opposition.

The committee has had fine cooperation from all interested parties, and we hope that there will be no objection to the passage of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of July 1, 1898, entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," as amended, is hereby further amended by adding thereto a new chapter, to be designated chapter XV, and to read as follows:

"CHAPTER XV—RAILROAD ADJUSTMENTS

"ARTICLE I—JURISDICTION

"SEC. 700. In addition to the jurisdiction otherwise exercised, courts of bankruptcy shall exercise original jurisdiction, as provided in this chapter, for postponements or modifications of debt, interest, rent, and maturities, or for modifications of the securities or capital structures of railroads.

"ARTICLE II—DEFINITIONS

"SEC. 705. The following terms, as used in this chapter, unless a different meaning is plainly required by the context, shall be construed as follows:

"(1) 'Petitioner' means any carrier as defined in section 20a of the Interstate Commerce Act, including any corporation in equity receivership, petitioning for a plan of adjustment, as hereinafter defined.

"(2) 'Claims' includes debts, whether liquidated or unliquidated, certificates of deposits of securities (other than stock and option warrants to subscribe to stock), including demands and obligations of whatever character made, assumed, or guaranteed by the petitioner.

"(3) 'Debt' shall be considered to include all claims held or owned by 'creditors' as hereinafter defined.

"(4) 'Creditors' shall include all holders of claims, demands, and obligations of whatever character against the petitioner or its property, whether or not such claims would otherwise constitute provable claims in bankruptcy, including the holders of claims made, assumed, or guaranteed by the petitioner.

"(5) 'Securities' shall include those defined in section 20a of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, and also certificates of deposit and all other evidences of ownership of or interest in securities.

"(6) 'Commission' refers to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"(7) 'Adjustment' shall include postponements or modifications of debt, interest, rent, and maturities and modifications of the securities or capital structures.

"SEC. 706. No creditor shall be deemed to be 'affected' by any plan unless such plan proposes a modification of the evidence of debt or other instrument defining the rights of such creditor, or a modification of the security, if any, for the claim of such creditor.

"ARTICLE III—PETITION AND POWERS OF COURT

"SEC. 710. Any railroad corporation not in process of reorganization under section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act which, before or after the effective date of this chapter, shall have—

"(1) Prepared a plan of adjustment and secured assurances satisfactory to the Commission of the acceptance of such plan from creditors holding at least 25 percent of the aggregate amount of the claims affected by said plan of adjustment; and

"(2) Thereafer obtained an order of the Commission, under section 20a of the Interstate Commerce Act, authorizing the issuance or modification of securities as proposed by such plan of adjustment (other than securities held by or to be issued to Reconstruction Finance Corporation), such order of the Commission to include also a specific finding that such proposed issuance or modification of securities is in the public interest, is consistent with the continuance by the railroad corporation of service to the public as a common carrier, and will not impair its ability to perform such service; and

"(3) Secured assents to such plan of adjustment by creditors holding more than two-thirds of the aggregate amount of the claims affected by said plan, which two-thirds shall include at least a majority of the aggregate amount of the claims of each affected class, may file in the United States district court in whose territorial jurisdiction such railroad corporation has had its principal executive or principal operating office during the preceding 6 months or a greater period thereof, its petition averring that it is unable to meet its debts, matured or about to mature, and desires to carry out the plan of adjustment.

"If a receiver of such railroad corporation has been appointed by a court of the United States and is in office, such petition shall be filed in the court having primary jurisdiction in such receivership proceeding.

"A copy of the order obtained from the Commission, as above provided, shall be filed with the petition and made a part thereof.

"SEC. 711. Any corporation which has complied with subparagraphs (1), (2), and (3) of the first sentence of section 710, and in which corporation the majority of the capital stock having power to vote for the election of directors is owned, directly or indirectly, through an intervening medium by any railroad corporation which has filed a petition hereunder, or any corporation which is a lessor of the petitioning corporation and which has complied with the aforesaid subparagraphs (1), (2), and (3) of section 710, may file its petition in the same court in which the petition first aforesaid shall have been filed, and such petitions shall be heard and disposed of in a single proceeding.

"SEC. 712. The petition shall be accompanied by payment to the clerk of a filing fee of $100, which shall be in addition to the fees required to be collected by the clerk under other sections of this act, or any other act.

"SEC. 713. Immediately following the filing of the petition, there shall be convened a special court of three judges in the manner provided by section 266, as amended, of the Judicial Code, and thereafter all proceedings relative to such plan or any modification thereof shall be conducted before such court. Such three-judge court shall be vested with and shall exercise all the powers of a district court sitting in equity and all the powers as a court of bankruptcy necessary to carry out the intent and provisions of this chapter, including the classification of claims at such time and in such manner as the court may direct.

"SEC. 714. The special court, after hearing, promptly shall enter an order approving the petition as properly filed under this section if satisfied that such petition complies with this section and has been filed in good faith, or dismissing such petition if not so satisfied.

"SEC. 715. If the petition is approved by the special court, the said court, during the pendency of the proceedings under this chapter, shall have exclusive jurisdiction of the petitioner and of its property wherever located to the extent which may be necessary to protect the same against any action which might be inconsistent with said plan of adjustment or might interfere with the effective execution of said plan if approved by the court, or otherwise inconsistent with or contrary to the purposes and provisions of this chapter: Provided, however, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to authorize the court to appoint any trustee or receiver for said properties or any part thereof, or otherwise take possession of such properties or control the operation or administration thereof.

"ARTICLE IV—HEARINGS

"SEC. 720. The special court shall fix a date for a hearing to be held promptly after the filing of the petition and notice of such hearing or hearings shall be given to all creditors affected by the plan in such manner as the court shall direct. In such proceeding, the court may allow such interventions of parties in interest as it may deem just and proper, but any holder of securities of the petitioner shall have the right to present evidence and be heard thereon, in person or by attorney, with or without intervention.

"SEC. 721. After such hearing, the special court may approve the plan as filed or modify such plan and approve the same as so modified. If the court shall modify the plan in a manner which the court shall find substantially or adversely affects the interests of any class or classes of creditors, such plan shall be resubmitted, in such manner as the court may direct, to those creditors affected by such modification and shall not be finally approved until after reasonable time, fixed by the court, is allowed for said creditors to be heard thereon.

"SEC. 722. If the United States, or any agency thereof, or any corporation (other than the Reconstruction Finance Corporation) the majority of the stock of which is owned by the United States, is a creditor or stockholder, the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to act in respect of the interests or claims of the United States or of such agency or other corporation. If in any proceeding under this chapter the United States is a creditor on claims for taxes or customs duties (whether or not the United States has any other interest in or claim against the debtor as creditor or stockholder), no plan shall be approved by the court if it provides for the payment of less than the full amount of such claim or provides for any postponement of such payment unless the Secretary of the Treasury shall certify to the court his willingness to accept a lesser amount or agrees to such postponement.

"ARTICLE V—PROCEEDINGS SUBSEQUENT TO APPROVAL OF PETITION

"SEC. 725. If the special court shall be satisfied—

"(1) That, at the time of the filing of said petition as provided in article III hereof, the proposed plan of adjustment had been assented to by not less than two-thirds of the aggregate amount of all claims of the petitioner affected by such plan, including at least a majority of the aggregate amount of claims of each such class;

"(2) That the plan of adjustment as submitted or as modified by the court has been accepted as submitted or as modified by or on behalf of creditors affected by such plan holding more than three-fourths of the aggregate amount of the claims affected by said plan, including at least three-fifths of the aggregate amount of the claims of each affected class;

"(3) That the plan is fair and equitable, is in the public interest, affords due recognition to the rights of each class of creditors and stockholders, does not discriminate unfairly in favor of any class of creditors or stockholders, and will conform to the requirements of the law of the land regarding the participation of the various classes of creditors and stockholders; and

"(4) That all corporate action required to authorize the issuance or modification of securities pursuant to such plan shall have been duly taken;

Said court shall file an opinion setting forth its conclusions and the reasons therefor and shall enter a decree approving and confirming such plan and the adjustment provided thereby, which decree shall be binding upon the petitioner and upon all creditors and security holders of the petitioner; and thereafter the petitioner shall have full power and authority to and shall put into effect and carry out the plan and the orders of the special court relative thereto and issue the securities provided by the plan without further reference to or authority from the Commission or any other authority, State or Federal, and the rights of all creditors and security holders with respect to claims and securities affected by the plan shall be those provided by the plan as so approved and confirmed: Provided, however, That the title of any owner, whether as trustee or otherwise, to rolling-stock equipment leased or conditionally sold to the petitioner, and any right of such owner to take possession of such property in compliance with the provisions of any such lease or conditional sale contract, shall not be affected by the provisions of this chapter.

"The plan of adjustment may contain appropriate provisions whereby the interests of creditors affected by the plan shall be safeguarded in all matters of the petitioner's financial policy and operations.

"SEC. 726. After the special court shall have approved as properly filed a petition pursuant to article III hereof, the special court, from time to time during the pendency of the proceedings hereunder, may enjoin the institution of, or stay, any action or proceeding to enforce any right against the petitioner or its property basis upon claims affected by the proposed plan of adjustment in any court, State or Federal, whether for the enforcement of any such claim or for the appointment of receivers in equity or of the institution or prosecution of a proceeding under section 77 of the Bankruptcy Act or otherwise: Provided, however, That no such stay shall affect any proceeding to enforce any claim which would be required to be paid if the plan of adjustment proposed by the petitioner were then in effect.

"SEC. 727. Unless the plan of adjustment as submitted or as modified shall have been confirmed by the special court within 1 year from the date of filing the petition, the proceedings shall be dismissed unless, for good cause shown, on motion of any party in interest the court shall determine otherwise.

"SEC. 728. Without prejudice to existing rights of all creditors, including those affected by the plan, and as a condition to the approval of any plan by the special court, the petitioner, from and after the filing of the petition with the court and until the making of a final order by the special court approving a plan or dismissing the petition, shall continue to make or tender payment to all creditors affected by the plan of sums currently payable to such creditors equal to the amounts proposed to be paid to such creditors under the plan. If, from and after the filing of the petition with the special court, there shall be any failure to make or tender such payments, the special court, unless there is good cause shown for the failure, shall dismiss the proceedings. In finally approving any plan, the court may make or require to be made such adjustments with respect to said payments or any of them as may be necessary to make the same conform to the provisions of said plan as finally approved.

"SEC. 729. In providing for any such payments the petitioner may require any bond or other security, including interest coupons affected by such payments to be presented to or deposited with a paying agent or depositary named by the petitioner for appropriate stamping to show the amounts and circumstances of such payment.

"ARTICLE VI—TAX PROVISIONS

"SEC. 735. The provisions of sections 1801, 1802, 3481, and 6482 of the Internal Revenue Code and any amendments thereto, unless specifically providing to the contrary, shall not apply to the issuance, transfer, or exchange of securities or the making or delivery of conveyances to make effective any plan of adjustment confirmed under the provisions of this chapter. No income, gain, or profit taxable under any law of the United States or of any State, now in force or hereafter enacted, shall in respect to the adjustment of the indebtedness of any petitioner in a proceeding under this chapter be deemed to have accrued to or to have been realized by such petitioner by reason of a modification of or cancelation in whole or in part of any of the indebtedness of the petitioner affected by a proceeding under this chapter.

"SEC. 736. In addition to the notices elsewhere expressly provided, the clerk of the court in which any proceedings under this chapter are pending shall forthwith transmit to the Secretary of the Treasury copies of—

"(1) Every petition filed under this chapter;

"(2) The orders approving or dismissing petitions;

"(3) The orders approving plans as filed or as modified, together with copies of such plans as approved;

"(4) The decrees approving and confirming plans and the adjustments provided thereby, together with copies of such plans as approved;

"(5) The injunctions or other orders made under section 726 of this chapter;

"(6) The orders dismissing proceedings under this chapter; and

"(7) Such other papers filed in the proceedings as the Secretary of the Treasury may request or which the court may direct to be transmitted to him.

"SEC. 737. Any order fixing the time for confirming a plan which affects claims or stock of the United States shall include a notice of not less than 30 days to the Secretary of the Treasury.

"ARTICLE VII—INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION

"SEC. 740. If, in any application filed with the Commission pursuant to section 20a of the Interstate Commerce Act for authority to issue or modify securities, the applicant shall allege that the purpose in making such application is to enable it to file a petition under the provisions of this chapter, the Commission shall take final action on such application as promptly as possible, and in any event within 120 days after the filing of such application.

"ARTICLE VIII—FINAL DECREE AND REVIEW

"SEC. 745. Any final order or decree of the special court may be reviewed by the Supreme Court of the United States upon application for certiorari made within 30 days after the entry of such order or decree, pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Judicial Code.

"SEC. 746. In the decree approving and confirming the plan the court may require such reports of the action taken by the petitioner thereunder in the execution of the plan as may be necessary to a final disposition of the cause, and in its final decree disposing of the cause the court shall retain jurisdiction in the district court to the extent necessary to protect and enforce the rights of the parties under said plan and the orders of the court thereon.

"ARTICLE IX—SAVING CLAUSE

"SEC. 750. If any provision of this chapter, or the application thereof to any railroad corporation or circumstances, is held invalid, the remainder of this chapter, or application of such provisions to other railroad corporations or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

"ARTICLE X—TERMINATION OF JURISDICTION

"SEC. 755. The jurisdiction conferred upon any court by this chapter shall not be exercised by such court after 5 years from the effective date of this chapter, except in respect of any proceeding initiated by filing a petition under section 710 hereof on or before the termination of such 5-year period."

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CHANDLER: On page 10, in line 20, after the word "property", strike out the word "basis" and insert the word "based."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RELIEF OF SOLDIERS WHO SERVED IN PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 289) for the relief of officers and soldiers of the volunteer service of the United States mustered into service for the War with Spain and who were held in service in the Philippine Islands after the ratification of the treaty of peace, April 11, 1899.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all officers and soldiers of the volunteer service of the United States mustered into service for the War with Spain, who were held to service in the Philippine Islands for service in the Philippine Insurrection after April 11, 1899, and after the conclusion of peace with the Kingdom of Spain, shall be entitled to the travel pay and allowance for subsistence provided in sections 1289 and 1290, Revised Statutes, as then amended and in effect, as though discharged April 11, 1899, by reason of expiration of enlistment, and appointed or reenlisted April 12, 1899, without deduction of travel pay and subsistence paid such officers or soldiers on final muster out subsequent to April 11, 1899: Provided, That no benefits shall accrue under any provision of this act to any person whose claim is based upon the service of any such officer or soldier discharged in the Philippine Islands at his own request.

SEC. 2. Claims hereunder shall be settled in the General Accounting Office, and shall be payable to the officer or soldier, or if the person who rendered the service is dead, then to his widow, children in equal shares (but not to their issue), father, or mother as provided by existing acts relating to the settlement of accounts of deceased officers and soldiers of the Army (34 Stat. 750), but if there is no widow, child, father, or mother at the date of settlement, then no payment on account of the claim shall be made.

SEC. 3. The Comptroller General is authorized and directed to certify to the Congress, pursuant to the provisions of section 2 of the act of July 7, 1884 (U. S. C., title 5, sec. 266), all claims allowed hereunder.

SEC. 4. Application for the benefits of this act shall be filed within 3 years after the date of its passage.

SEC. 5. Payment to any attorney or agent for such assistance as may be required in the preparation and execution of the necessary papers in any application under this act shall not exceed the sum of $10; any person collecting or attempting to collect a greater amount than is herein allowed shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punishable by a fine of not more than $500 or by imprisonment for not more than 2 years, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend in the RECORD at this point in regard to the bill just passed, H. R. 289, and to include statements of United Spanish War Veterans and Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WARREN). Is there objection?

There was no objection.

PHILIPPINE TRAVEL PAY

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, the passage of H. R. 289, for the payment of travel pay to the officers and enlisted men of State Volunteer regiments who served in the Philippine Islands beyond the period of their enlistment in the same sum as was paid to enlisted men of the Regular Army who were discharged in the Philippines, is a performance of the promise which was made by our Government at the time, 40 years ago. It is to be hoped that the bill will now be promptly passed by the Senate and receive the approval of the President so that these veterans may finally receive their just dues.

I insert at this point as part of my remarks certain statements by veterans' organizations relating to the merits of this legislation.

Statement of United Spanish War Veterans and National Tribune, Washington, D. C.:

In the spring of 1898 Volunteer soldiers were enlisted to serve the United States in the Spanish-American War, their enlistments, reading "for 2 years or until the expiration of the War with Spain." Fifteen thousand of these men were sent to the Philippine Islands.

On February 4, 1899, the Filipinos started an uprising against the American forces then in Luzon and our Volunteers there were used to repel their attacks. On April 11, 1899, the treaty of peace between the United States and Spain was ratified and the services of these Volunteers automatically came to a close. But the islands were 10,000 miles away, trouble was in the air, and troops were needed.

In the meantime The Adjutant General of the United States Army had cabled to General Otis, commanding officer of the Philippines, asking if he could reenlist the Volunteers in the islands and use them until replacement troops could be sent over. General Otis cabled back most of them would remain upon the condition that the United States would allow them their travel pay home in cash (this being their just due for Spanish War enlistment) and also transport them back to the States at the end of their extended service period. Our Government proceeded along these lines and General Otis told his officers to so instruct the men. This was done and practically all soldiers remained and, though never reenlisted, fought for from 4 to 6 months longer than their original enlistment called for.

They were brought back to America in the fall of 1899, but Congress had made no appropriation and we were discharged without the promised travel pay. President McKinley, who knew the facts and who was understood to acknowledge this was an obligation of the Government to the Volunteer soldiers, who assassinated before he could accomplish its settlement, and to this day the Government has never discharged its obligation to the Philippine volunteers.

They deserve and ask payment of the money promised and due them for service rendered the United States after April 11, 1899, because:

1. Travel pay was the authorized money promised them for 6 months' reenlistment, the same as other soldiers received whose time had expired and who reenlisted in the Army.

2. Thirty-nine years is too long a time for any just government to withhold payment of an obligation.

3. The War Department received and thoroughly understood General Otis' cablegram of March 16, 1899, and their subsequent action was based upon information furnished in this message.

4. This travel pay was a proposition made by the Government to the soldiers—not a proposition of the soldiers to the Government.

5. Had they refused the Government's own proposition to remain and fight, the United States would have spent many times over the amount of this travel allowance in an effort to regain territory lost by their retirement.

6. The Army officers simply held them to additional service. They did not go through the formality of muster out and remuster in when their original enlistments had expired. Under existing circumstances the procedure would have been physically impossible.

7. The fact that the Volunteers on duty April 11, 1899, were not mustered out and remustered in does not alter the condition. They performed for the Government above and beyond the terms of their enlistment, for which the Government has never made good its financial obligation promised them by the officers in charge in the Philippines.

8. Without the work of these Volunteers in the spring and summer of 1899 the United States would have found herself in a sorrowful plight, a plight that would have cost millions and millions of dollars, many more troops, and the sacrifice of lives untold.

9. The United States received immense benefits from this extended service, payment for which, though promised at the time, was never made.

10. The Government's word should be as binding as the law.

11. The Philippine soldier never questioned the word of his superior officers. When told he would receive the travel pay he believed this statement to be true. This confidence was the enlisted man's right as well as his duty.

12. The Government itself, more than any other organization, should set an example of honesty and integrity in meeting its obligations and upholding the officers of the Army in their promises to the enlisted men.

13. The veterans for years have never demanded or insisted upon payment of this back salary because they have always trusted in the honesty of the United States Government and felt that in due time they would receive what their country owed them.

14. The Government has paid out, and is still spending, hundreds of millions for the needy. This six or seven million dollars, a just and long-overdue obligation, should be paid and charged to the fund for which it is really going—relief.

15. These Philippine veterans now average more than 60 years of age. They are past the age of employment, and many of them are on charity. It is only equitable and right that the Government should do its duty toward them in the evening of their life and in their hour of need.

16. The fact that these soldiers were mere individuals and correspondingly helpless should spur the Government on toward paying its honest obligations.

17. The United States Government has not kept faith, nor can it ever keep faith with the dead, the 30 percent of that great Philippine army who since 1899 have silently passed on to their Maker.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS OF THE UNITED STATES, NATIONAL HEADQUARTERS,
Kansas City, Mo., April 17, 1939.

The Honorable MARTIN F. SMITH,
Chairman, House Committee on Pensions,
House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

Re: Philippine travel pay, H. R. 289.

MY DEAR CONGRESSMAN SMITH: The so-called Philippine travel pay bill, H. R. 289, introduced by you, and recently favorably reported out by the House Committee on War Claims, will very probably be called on the Consent Calendar of the House today.

It is hoped that no objections will be voiced against the adoption of this meritorious bill by the House. This bill would discharge a long overdue promised payment of travel pay, to about 15,000 veterans of the Spanish-American War, who, in response to a plea by President McKinley and the Secretary of War, volunteered to remain in the Philippines, after the termination of that war in order to repel the Philippine Insurrection until the Regular Army could be brought over.

Superior officers directly advised all of these volunteers that if they did remain in the Philippine Islands to take care of the Philippine Insurrection they would be entitled to travel pay and commutation back home, as though they had been discharged and reenlisted, in addition to their actual transportation back home. Those who did insist upon going through the technical paper process of then being discharged did receive their travel pay, and after the completion of service incident to their immediate reenlistment were subsequently transported back to the United States.

It would appear that this moral obligation on the part of the United States to pay such travel pay to these men should now be liquidated, 40 years after the promises to make such payment to them were originally proffered to induce them to remain in the Philippine Islands for the purpose of repressing the Philippine Insurrection.

Your able presentation of this question is indeed much appreciated, and will, we hope, impel Members of the House of Representatives to voice no objection against the passage of this justifiable legislation.

With kindest regards, I am

Respectfully yours,

MILLARD W. RICE,
Legislative Representative.

EMIGRATION OF FILIPINOS FROM UNITED STATES

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 4646) to provide means by which certain Filipinos can emigrate from the United States.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I object.

UNIFORM RULE OF NATURALIZATION OF ALIENS

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 5030) to amend section 4 of the act of June 29, 1906, entitled "An act to establish a Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization and to provide for a uniform rule for the naturalization of aliens throughout the United States."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill go over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ALLOTMENT OF SEAMEN'S WAGES

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 199) to amend section 10 (b), (c), and (d) of the act of June 26, 1884, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 46, sec. 599), relative to the allotment of wages by seamen.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subsections (b), (c), and (d) of section 10 of the act of June 26, 1884, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 46, sec. 599), are amended to read as follows:

"(b) That it shall be lawful for any seaman to stipulate in his shipping agreement for an allotment of any portion of the wages he may earn to his grandparents, parents, wife, sister, or children, or for deposits to be made in an account opened by him and maintained in his name at a savings bank or a United States postal-savings depository subject to the governing regulations thereof.

"(c) That no allotment shall be valid unless in writing and signed by and approved by the shipping commissioner. It shall be the duty of the said commissioner to examine such allotments and the parties to them and enforce compliance with the law. All stipulations for the allotment of any part of the wages of a seaman during his absence which are made at the commencement of the voyage shall be inserted in the agreement and shall state the amounts and times of the payments to be made and the persons to whom the payments are to be made, or by directing the payments to be made to a saving bank or a United States postal-savings depository in an account maintained in his name.

"(d) No allotment except as provided in this section shall be legal. Any person who shall falsely claim to be such relation, as above described, or to be a savings bank or a United States postal-savings depository and as such an allottee of the seaman under this section shall for every such offense be punished by a fine not exceeding $500 or imprisonment not exceeding 6 months, at the discretion of the court."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RENEWAL OF VESSEL LICENSES

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 1784) to amend section 4498 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended, relative to the renewal of licenses of vessels.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4498 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 496), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"A register, enrollment, or license shall not be granted, or other papers be issued by any collector or other chief officer of customs to any vessel subject by law to inspection under this title (R. S. 4399–4500) until all the provisions of this title applicable to such vessel have been fully complied with and until the copy of the certificate of inspection required by this title for such vessel has been filed with said collector or other chief officer of customs: Provided, That the license granted to any vessel, if presented to any collector of customs at any time within 30 calendar days prior to the date of expiration shown thereon, may be renewed by endorsement by the collector of customs for a period of 1 year from the date of expiration shown on the license, if there be on file in the office of the collector at that time a copy of the certificate of inspection required by title LII of the Revised Statutes, which is in force on the date renewal is made."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LICENSES OF VESSELS

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 1786) to amend section 4325 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended, relative to renewal of licenses of vessels.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4325 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 267), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"The license granted to any vessel shall be presented for renewal by endorsement to the collector of customs of the district in which the vessel then may be within 3 days after the expiration of time for which it was granted, or, if she be absent at that time, within 3 days from her first arrival within a district. In case of change of build, ownership, district, trade, or arrival under temporary papers in the district where she belongs the license shall be surrendered. If the master shall fail to deliver the license he shall be liable to a penalty of $10. Such penalty on application may be mitigated or remitted by the Secretary of Commerce."

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PAYMENT OF $15 EACH, RED LAKE BAND OF CHIPPEWA INDIANS

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 3248) authorizing a per capita payment of $15 each to the members of the Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians from the proceeds of the sale of timber and lumber on the Red Lake Reservation.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY, LIGHTHOUSE SERVICE

The Clerk called House Joint Resolution 241, providing for the participation of the United States in the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of the United States Lighthouse Service.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the week commencing August 7, 1939, is hereby designated as Lighthouse Week in commemoration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the enactment by the First Congress of the United States of the ninth act of said Congress, which was approved by President George Washington on August 7, 1789, and laid the foundation of the United States Lighthouse Service by providing that all expenses in the necessary support, maintenance, and repairs of all lighthouses, beacons, buoys, and public piers to render navigation safe and easy should be paid for by the Treasury of the United States. During said week all Government officials are hereby directed to display the flag of the United States on all Government buildings, and are requested in appropriate manner to celebrate the enactment and approval of said act.

SEC. 2. That the President of the United States is hereby requested, by appropriate proclamation, to call attention of all citizens of the United States to said event and to request the cooperation of all citizens, communities, civic organizations, States, municipalities, counties, public agencies, churches, and schools in an appropriate recognition of the devoted, efficient, faithful, and splendid work of the Lighthouse Service for 150 years in the safeguarding of life and property upon the sea.

SEC. 3. That the heads of all departments and independent establishments of the Government are requested to take such steps respectively as each of said heads may deem most appropriate to celebrate said event, to commemorate the work of the Lighthouse Service, to acquaint the public generally with the responsible, devoted, and hazardous work of the said Service, and to express the thanks and gratitude of the Nation to all employees of said Service for the fearless manner in which their work has been performed continuously from the date of the creation of said Service to the present time.

With the following committee amendment:

At the end of the joint resolution add a new section, as follows:

"SEC. 4. That the Commissioner of Lighthouses is hereby authorized to expend, out of any moneys appropriated or allotted for the Bureau of Lighthouses, not exceeding $2,500 for any expenses conected with ceremonies for the celebration authorized and requested by this act, including the printing and issuance of appropriate literature, pamphlets, and programs."

The amendment was agreed to; and the joint resolution as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROMOTION OF NAUTICAL EDUCATION

The Clerk called the bill (H. R. 5375) to promote nautical education, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commandant of the Coast Guard is authorized, in his discretion, when so requested by proper authority, to detail persons in the Coast Guard for duty in connection with maritime instruction and training by the several States and, when requested by the United States Maritime Commission, to detail persons in the Coast Guard for duty in connection with maritime instruction and training by the United States: Provided, That the service rendered by any person so detailed shall be considered Coast Guard duty.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BLAND: Page 1, line 6, after the word "States", insert the words "and Territories."

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLAND. I yield.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I wonder if the gentleman might not use the language which is usually used in this connection, to name the Territories and also include the District of Columbia?

Mr. BLAND. I have no particular objection to that. This question was raised by the Delegate from Hawaii and the Delegate from Alaska, who said that under the law the general term "States" would not include "and Territories," and they asked to have that included.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I know the purpose of the gentleman's amendment. I wonder if the gentleman would accept an amendment to include the District of Columbia as well?

Mr. BLAND. Yes. I have no objection.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment as offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND] be amended to include the words "the District of Columbia."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WOLCOTT to the amendment offered by Mr. BLAND: After the word "Territories" in the amendment offered by Mr. BLAND insert "and the District of Columbia."

Mr. IGLESIAS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the chairman of the committee if he will include Puerto Rico?

Mr. BLAND. I would rather not make it apply to the insular possessions. That can be done later. It is purely to permit these men to go to these nautical schools if they should have any. I would suggest that the Commissioner from Puerto Rico take that up with the Members in the Senate. I do not know just what the effect would be.

Mr. IGLESIAS. Mr. Speaker, I request the House to amend the amendment to include Puerto Rico.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, before the word "Territories" there was the word "and." I would modify my amendment, as follows:

After the word "States", strike out the word "and" where it appears first and insert a comma and "the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment as modified.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BLAND, as modified: On page 1, line 6, after the word "States", strike out the word "and", insert a comma and the words "Territories, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the amendment, as modified, will be agreed to.

There was no objection, and the amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EMIGRATION OF FILIPINOS FROM UNITED STATES

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to No. 91 on the calendar, H. R. 4646. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SCHAFER] objected previously, and upon reading the bill more thoroughly the gentleman informs me he will withdraw his objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It has been the uniform policy of the Speaker not to recognize a Member for that purpose until after the calendar has been completed. If the present occupant of the chair is here at that time, he will be glad to recognize the gentleman from California later on.

The Clerk will report the next bill.

CHANGE OF MASTERS OF VESSELS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 1782, to amend section 4335 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relative to change of masters of vessels.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 4335 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 46, sec. 276) is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Whenever the master of any licensed vessel, ferryboats excepted, is changed, the new master, or, in case of his absence, the owner or one of the owners thereof, shall report such change to the collector residing at the port where the same happens, if there be one; otherwise, to the collector residing at any port where such vessel next arrives, who, upon the oath of such new master, or, in case of his absence, of the owner, that such master is a citizen of the United States, and that such vessel shall not, while such license continues in force, be employed in any manner whereby the revenue of the United States may be defrauded, shall endorse such change on the license, with the name of the new master. Whenever such change is not reported, and endorsed, as herein required, such vessel, if found carrying on the coasting trade or fisheries, shall be subject to pay the same fees and tonnage as a vessel of the United States having a register, and the new master shall be liable to a penalty of $10: Provided, That the Secretary of Commerce may authorize the endorsement of not more than two alternate masters in addition to the one already endorsed on the license, whenever in his judgment the condition of employment of the vessel warrants such action: Provided further, That in the case of vessels navigated within the limits of the harbor of any town or city, except such vessels which are subject to the provisions of section 4417 (a) of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., 1934 ed., Supp. 3, title 46, sec. 391 (a)), the owner or some responsible person acting for the owner who otherwise meets all requirements of the laws of the United States with regard to masters, may be endorsed on the license of such vessel, although not actually employed thereon, in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce: And provided further, That in the case of unrigged vessels which are not required by law to have on board a certificate of inspection, the owner or any responsible person acting for the owner who otherwise meets all requirements of the laws of the United States with regard to masters, may be endorsed on the license of such unrigged vessel although not actually employed on board the vessel.

"SEC. 2. In the case of those vessels on the licenses of which there are endorsed the names of more than one master, the master actually in charge of the vessel shall assume all of the duties and responsibilities imposed by any statute upon masters of vessels, and incur the liabilities provided by any law against masters of vessels during any period in which he is in charge of the vessel.

"SEC. 3. The term 'unrigged vessel' as used herein means any vessel that is not self-propelled."

With the following committee amendments:

On page 1, line 6, before the word "whenever", insert "(a)."

On page 2, line 18, after the word "city", strike out the balance of line 18, all of lines 19 and 20, and insert the words "the name of."

On page 3, line 3, after the word "inspection", insert "the name of."

On page 3, line 9, strike out "sec. 2" and insert "(b)."

On page 3, line 16, strike out "sec. 3" and insert "(c)."

The committee amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

FURTHER RELIEF TO WATER USERS ON UNITED STATES AND INDIAN RECLAMATION PROJECTS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5076, to authorize further relief to water users on United States reclamation projects and on Indian reclamation projects.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to determine as to each United States and Indian reclamation project whether any of the water users' organizations or water users, as the case may be, owing construction charges to the United States on each such project are unable, due to partial crop failure attributable to a water shortage or due to other causes beyond the control of the water users, to pay without great hardship or undue burden the full amount of the construction charges due and payable for the calendar year 1938 and of any unpaid construction charges required to be paid as a condition precedent to delivery of water in 1939. Said Secretary shall base his determinations on such data furnished by water users' organizations and water users and on such investigations and reports by the Bureau of Reclamation and the Office of Indian Affairs as he deems necessary. As to any such water users' organization or water user who according to the said Secretary's determination is unable to pay in full the construction charges due and payable for the calendar year 1938 and any unpaid construction charges required to be paid as a condition precedent to delivery of water in 1939, said Secretary is hereby authorized to grant an extension of time for the payment of such proportion of said charges as in his judgment in each case is just and equitable: Provided, That said Secretary may make any extension granted pursuant to the authority of this act subject to such conditions as in his judgment are desirable in the interest of the United States. The charges so extended shall be paid at such time or times as the said Secretary may determine.

SEC. 2. As used in this act the term "United States reclamation project" shall mean any irrigation project constructed by the United States, or in connection with which there has been executed a repayment contract with the United States, pursuant to the Reclamation Act of June 17, 1902 (32 Stat. 388), or any act amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto; the term "Indian reclamation project" shall mean any irrigation project constructed by the United States under the direction of the Office of Indian Affairs, or in connection with which there has been executed a repayment contract with the United States, pursuant to acts of Congress relating to Indian reclamation projects; and the term "construction charges" shall mean the installments on the principal obligations due each year to the United States under water-right applications, repayment contracts, orders of the Secretary of the Interior, or other forms of obligations entered into pursuant to said Federal reclamation laws, or acts of Congress relating to Indian reclamation projects.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING SECTION 8 (F) OF THE SOIL CONSERVATION AND DOMESTIC ALLOTMENT ACT

The Clerk called the next business, House Joint Resolution 258, to amend section 8 (f) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the joint resolution as follows:

Resolved, etc., That section 8 (f) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(f) Any change in the relationship between the landlord and the tenants or sharecroppers, with respect to any farm, that would increase over the previous year the amount of payments or grants of other aid under subsection (b) that would otherwise be made to any landlord shall not operate to increase such payment or grant to such landlord. Any reduction in the number of tenants below the average number of tenants on any farm during the preceding 3 years that would increase the payments or grants of other aid under such subsection that would otherwise be made to the landlord shall not hereafter operate to increase any such payment or grant to such landlord. Such limitations shall not apply if on investigation the local committee finds that the change is justified and approves such change in relationship or reduction."

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COOPERATIVE AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION WORK

The Clerk called the next bill, S. 518, to provide for the further development of cooperative agricultural extension work.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. DOXEY. Would the gentleman mind stating the reason?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I may say I have had several objections to the bill and those who have objected to it have asked me to do this. They do not happen to be on the floor at the present time. I am merely doing it for them. I hope the gentleman will not object to it.

Mr. DOXEY. If there are objections, we would like to know what they are.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I may say to the gentleman from Mississippi that so far as I personally am concerned, I have no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

INTEREST ON FARM BOARD LOANS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 2179, to ratify and confirm certain interest rates on loans made from the revolving fund authorized by section 6 of the Agricultural Marketing Act, approved June 15, 1929 (46 Stat. 11), and for other purposes.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman from Mississippi give us an explanation of this bill?

Mr. DOXEY. Mr. Speaker, explaining this bill briefly, I may say that it is more or less a matter of bookkeeping.

The Agricultural Marketing Act approved June 15, 1929, provided for loans to be made by the old Federal Farm Board to various corporations, cooperatives, and the Stabilization Corporation. The Treasury Department and the Federal Farm Bureau interpreted that law as providing a maximum rate of interest of 4 percent. It did not provide a minimum rate of interest; yet the bill did make an exception in the case of what were then known as postal savings bonds. Thereupon the Federal Farm Board and the Treasury Department lent money to these various cooperatives and the Stabilization Corporation, some at as low a rate of interest as 1⅜ percent and some lower than 2½ percent. The Comptroller General, under a Supreme Court decision in the case of Baltimore Mail Steamship Co. against the United States, held that, even though the contract stipulated a rate of interest lower than 2½ percent, the Farm Board did not have authority under this law to lend money at a rate less than 2½ percent, that being the rate of interest stipulated on postal savings bonds.

The practical situation is that the Stabilization Corporation has gone out of business. Those cooperatives that were able to pay have paid interest and principal as stipulated in the contract. The Comptroller General, however, is holding the present Farm Credit Administration, which took over the activities of the old Farm Board, responsible for the higher rate of interest; and unless Congress does something to relieve this situation, suits will be instituted, which, in the judgment of most of the members of the committee, would be a vain and futile thing, for they could not collect any rate of interest other than that stipulated in the contract.

Under the opinion of June 1, 1934, of the Comptroller General, however, there is a charge against the present set-up of the Farm Credit Administration even though the Stabilization Board has gone out of business. A number of these cooperatives still owe under their contracts, and the committee felt that the right thing to do would be to enact this legislation for the very purpose that it states, to ratify and confirm certain interest rates on these loans made under the Agricultural Marketing Act approved June 15, 1929.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOXEY. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from Kansas. He is a member of the subcommittee and the full committee and is thoroughly familiar with all these transactions and has given special study to this bill.

Mr. HOPE. Is not this the practical situation, that if we pass this bill we will confirm what the Federal Farm Board did in making loans to a large number of cooperatives at rates of interest which the Treasury Department and the Federal Farm Board understood at that time to be proper rates of interest to charge under the bill, and loans that were made in good faith by the cooperatives, and loans which no one questioned until 1934, 5 years after some of them were made, when the Comptroller General raised the question of whether a proper interpretation had been made of the law?

I ask the gentleman from Mississippi further: If we do not pass this bill, will not the Federal Government be in the position where it will have to bring suit against a large number of cooperative organizations which in good faith have made loans at a rate of interest which everyone understood was perfectly legal at the time?

Mr. DOXEY. The gentleman from Kansas is correct. That is the status. Is any further information desired?

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOXEY. I yield gladly.

Mr. MICHENER. As I understand it, these loans were made in good faith and accepted in good faith, and in the belief that they would be at the lower rate of interest. I have in my State a cooperative that accepted the benefits under the law as it was interpreted by the agency of the Government making the loan. If this cooperative today were to be compelled to pay a rate of interest higher than that which they contracted to pay it might mean bankruptcy. It seems to me the bill is most commendable and that there should be no objection if the Congress is to keep faith with these cooperatives. This bill means just simple justice, and the Committee on Agriculture is to be commended for reporting this bill favorably. I hope there will be no objection.

Mr. DOXEY. The gentleman is correct. The question arises over a difference of interpretation of the law as between the Secretary of the Treasury and the Farm Board, on one hand, and the Comptroller General, on the other.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. DOXEY. Certainly.

Mr. HOPE. The gentleman was a Member of the House when we passed the Federal Farm Board Act, I believe.

Mr. DOXEY. Yes; I was.

Mr. HOPE. And he has been a Member during the intervening time. I ask the gentleman from Mississippi if it is not his best judgment that if we pass this bill we will be doing exactly what Congress intended to do when it passed the Federal Farm Board Act, as far as rates of interest were concerned?

Mr. DOXEY. I certainly think so. Certainly I do not think we intended that the Farm Board should limit the rate of interest to the rate carried by the bonds, which was the basis of the opinion of the Comptroller General.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That interest rates in excess of the rates set forth in notes or other obligations taken by the Federal Farm Board or the Farm Credit Administration for loans made from the revolving fund authorized by section 6 of the Agricultural Marketing Act, approved June 15, 1929 (46 Stat. 11), shall not be charged or collected on any of said loans, whether such loans have been heretofore or are hereafter paid in whole or in part, except that in those cases where a borrower by specific contract has agreed to pay a higher rate of interest, the contract rate shall be charged for the period agreed upon; and the amount of any interest collected in excess of the rates thus set forth or contracted for shall be refunded out of said fund or credited on the borrower's indebtedness.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RELIEF OF SUFFERERS FROM EARTHQUAKE IN CHILI

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5031, a bill for the relief of the sufferers from the earthquake in Chile.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I object.

FOREST PROTECTION FROM WHITE-PINE BLISTER RUST

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 3406, a bill for forest protection against the white-pine blister rust, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That to promote the stability of white-pine forest-using industries, employment, and communities through the continuous supply of white- and sugar-pine timber, the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized in cooperation with such agencies as he may deem necessary to use such funds as have been, or may hereafter be, made available for the purpose of controlling white-pine blister rust, by preventing the spread to, and eliminating white-pine blister rust from, all forest lands, irrespective of the ownership thereof, when in the judgment of the Secretary of Agriculture the use of such funds on such lands is necessary in the control of the white-pine blister rust: Provided, That in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture no expenditures from funds provided under this authorization shall be made on private or State lands (except where such lands are intermingled with those which are federally owned and it is necessary in order to protect the property of the United States to work on those parts of the private or State-owned lands that immediately adjoin Federal lands) until a sum, or sums, at least equal to such expenditures shall have been appropriated, subscribed, or contributed by State, county, or local authorities or by individuals or organizations concerned: Provided further, That no part of such appropriations shall be used to pay the cost or value of property injured or destroyed: And provided further, That any plan for the control and elimination of white-pine blister rust on lands owned by the United States or retained under restriction by the United States for Indian tribes and for individual Indians shall be subject to the approval of the Federal agency or Indian tribe having jurisdiction over such lands, and the Secretary of Agriculture may, in his discretion and out of any moneys made available under this act, make allocations to said Federal agencies in such amounts as he may deem necessary for white-pine blister-rust control and elimination on lands so held or owned by the United States, the moneys so allocated to be expended by said agencies for the purposes specified.

SEC. 2. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated annually, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to carry out the provisions of this act.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

SICK AND ANNUAL LEAVE FOR SUBSTITUTE POSTAL EMPLOYEES

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5479, granting annual and sick leave with pay to substitutes in the Postal Service.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter substitutes in the Postal Service shall be rated as employees and each substitute postal employee in the classified civil service shall be granted the same rights and benefits with respect to annual and sick leave that accrue to regular employee in proportion to the time actually employed. Sick leave shall be computed on the basis of illness or disability incurred during the period of actual employment in the Postal Service.

SEC. 2. The Postmaster General is authorized and directed to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the provisions of this act.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

DETENTION OF CERTAIN ALIENS PENDING PASSPORTS

The Clerk called the next bill, H. R. 5643, to invest the circuit courts of appeals of the United States with original and exclusive jurisdiction to review the order of detention of any alien ordered deported from the United States whose deportation or departure from the United States otherwise is not effectuated within 90 days after the date the warrant of deportation shall have become final; to authorize such detention orders in certain cases; to provide places for such detention; and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mrs. O'DAY and Mr. MASSINGALE objected.

SACRAMENTO GOLDEN EMPIRE CENTENNIAL

The Clerk called the next business, House Joint Resolution 221, authorizing the President to invite other nations to participate in the Sacramento Golden Empire Centennial commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of Sacramento by Capt. John A. Sutter.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the House joint resolution, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States is authorized to invite by proclamation, or in such manner as he may deem proper, foreign nations to participate in the Sacramento Golden Empire Centennial to be held at Sacramento, Calif., from May 1, 1939, to September 10, 1939, inclusive, for the purpose of properly commemorating and observing the one hundredth anniversary of the arrival in California, at the confluence of the American and Sacramento Rivers, of John Augustus Sutter, a Swiss adventurer, and the founding by him, through the establishment of Sutter's Fort, of what is today California's capital city of Sacramento, which establishment and the subsequent development of the region adjacent resulted in the discovery of gold at Coloma, Calif.

SEC. 2. The Government of the United States is not by this resolution obligated to any expense in connection with the holding of such exposition.

The House joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENDING FURTHER TIME FOR NATURALIZATION TO ALIEN VETERANS OF THE WORLD WAR

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 805) to extend further time for naturalization to alien veterans of the World War under the act approved May 25, 1932 (47 Stat. 165), to extend the same privileges to certain veterans of countries allied with the United States during the World War, and for other purposes, No. 65 on the Consent Calendar, which was objected to originally by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GORE].

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER]?

Mr. GORE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, for the benefit of the gentleman from New York, the basis upon which I objected to the bill was that I could see no reason why any special concessions should be made to men who served in the Russian Army or other foreign armies. If the gentleman will agree to an amendment which I have prepared, making this apply only to those who served in the American forces, I shall not object.

Mr. CELLER. I agree.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER]?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subdivision (a) of section 1 of the act entitled "An act to further amend the naturalization laws, and for other purposes," approved May 25, 1932 (47 Stat. 165; U. S. C., Supp. VII, title 8, sec. 392b (a)), shall, as herein amended, continue in force and effect to include petitions for citizenship filed prior to May 25, 1940, with any court having naturalization jurisdiction: Provided, That for the purposes of this act clause (1) of subdivision (a) of section 1 of the aforesaid act of May 25, 1932, is amended by striking out the words "all such period" and in lieu thereof inserting the words "the 5 years immediately preceding the filing of his petition;".

SEC. 2. The provisions of section 1 of this act are hereby extended to include any alien lawfully admitted into the United States for permanent residence who departed therefrom between August 1914 and April 5, 1917, or who departed therefrom subsequent to April 5, 1917, for the purpose of serving, and actually served prior to November 11, 1918, in the military or naval forces of any of the countries allied with the United States in the World War and was discharged from such service under honorable circumstances: Provided, That before any applicant for citizenship under this section is admitted to citizenship the court shall be satisfied by competent proof that he is entitled to and has complied in all respects with the provisions of this act; and that he was and had been a bona fide lawfully admitted resident in the United States for 2 years before the passage of this act.

SEC. 3. The Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, with the approval of the Secretary of Labor, shall prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary for the enforcement of this act.

Mr. GORE. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment which I send to the Clerks' desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GORE: On page 2, line 9, after the word "therefrom", strike out "between August 1914 and April 5, 1917, or who departed therefrom subsequent to April 5, 1917."

Page 2, line 12, after the word "of", strike out "any of the countries allied with."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROVIDING MEANS BY WHICH CERTAIN FILIPINOS CAN EMIGRATE FROM THE UNITED STATES

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 4646) to provide means by which certain Filipinos can emigrate from the United States, No. 91 on the Consent Calendar.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California [Mr. WELCH]?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any native Filipino residing in any State or the District of Columbia on the effective date of this act, who desires to return to the Philippine Islands, may apply to the Secretary of Labor, upon such form as the Secretary may prescribe, through any officer of the Immigration Service for the benefits of this act. Upon approval of such application, the Secretary of Labor shall notify such Filipino forthwith, and shall certify to the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of War that such Filipino is eligible to be returned to the Philippine Islands under the terms of this act. Every Filipino who is so certified shall be entitled, at the expense of the United States, to transportation and maintenance from his present residence to a port on the west coast of the United States, and from such port, to passage and maintenance to the port of Manila, P. I., on either Navy or Army transports, whenever space on such transports is available, or on any ship of United States registry operated by a commercial steamship company which has a contract with the Secretary of Labor as provided in section 2.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of Labor is hereby authorized and directed to enter into contracts with any railroad or other transportation company, for the transportation from their present residences to a port on the west coast of the United States of Filipinos eligible under section 1 to receive such transportation, and with any commercial steamship company, controlled by citizens of the United States and operating ships under United States registry, for transportation and maintenance of such Filipinos from such ports to the port of Manila, P. I., at such rates as may be agreed upon between the Secretary and such steamship, railroad, or other transportation company.

SEC. 3. The Secretary of Labor is authorized and directed to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out this act, to enter into the necessary arrangements with the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy, to fix the ports on the west coast of the United States from which any Filipinos shall be transported and the dates upon which transportation shall be available from such ports, to provide for the identification of the Filipinos entitled to the benefits of this act, and to prevent voluntary interruption of the journey between any port on the west coast of the United States and the port of Manila, P. I.

SEC. 4. No Filipino who receives the benefits of this act shall be entitled to return to the continental United States except as a quota immigrant under the provisions of section 8 (a) (1) of the Philippine Independence Act of March 24, 1934, during the period such section 8 (a) (1) is applicable.

SEC. 5. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated from moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, amounts necessary to carry out the provisions of this act. All amounts so appropriated shall be administered by the Secretary of Labor, and all expenses, including those incurred by the Navy and War Departments, shall be charged thereto.

SEC. 6. No application for the benefits of this act shall be accepted by any officer of the Immigration Service after December 1, 1940; and all benefits under this act shall finally terminate on December 31, 1940, unless the journey has been started on or before that date, in which case the journey to Manila shall be completed.

SEC. 7. Nothing in this act shall be construed as authority to deport any native of the Philippine Islands, and no Filipino removed from continental United States under the provisions of this act shall hereafter be held to have been deported from the United States.

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. KING: Page 1, line 3, after the word "State", insert "or Territory."

Page 3, line 10, after the word "the", strike out "continental" and insert after the word "States" the words "its Territories or possessions."

Page 4, line 3, after the word "from", strike out "continental" and insert the word "the", and after the word "States", insert the words "its Territories or possessions."

Mr. PACE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman explain what this bill has cost the Government under a similar act which is now in force?

Mr. WELCH. This bill is for the reenactment of a law that was in effect for 4 years, up to January 1, 1938.

Mr. PACE. How much has the Government spent?

Mr. WELCH. The Government has spent approximately $186,000. I may say to the gentleman that the money has been well spent. We send these Filipinos back to their island homes and they are not permitted to return. Many of them are on relief, and it is an expense to keep them here.

Mr. PACE. That is one point I had in mind. They can return under the quota system, can they not?

Mr. WELCH. A total of 50, under the Philippine Independence Act, are permitted to return, but they cannot come back for the purpose of seeking employment in this country.

Mr. PACE. What is the effect of the amendment that has just been offered?

Mr. WELCH. The gentleman from Hawaii [Mr. KING] will explain the amendment.

Mr. KING. If I may answer the gentleman's inquiry, the effect of my amendment would be to extend to Hawaii the provisions of this bill with regard to repatriation and also with respect to preventing such persons from returning. In other words, Hawaii wants exactly the same benefit from this bill as the continental United States receives.

Mr. PACE. As I understand, except for the act previously in effect, we are adopting a new practice of paying the expenses of any undesirable person whom we wish to get rid of from where he lives to the port, and then we pay all his expenses from the port to his home. He becomes a charge of the United States from the time he files application to go home until he gets there. The gentleman from Hawaii proposes to extend this privilege to Filipinos in the Hawaiian Islands and other Territories.

Mr. WELCH. The law that has been in force and effect for 4 years permits the repatriation of Filipinos in the continental United States to the Philippine Islands. Upon their arrival there they cease to be a charge against this Government and they cannot return. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Hawaii would seek to have that privilege extended to the Hawaiian Islands and our other Territories under the same terms and conditions as provided in the repatriation acts heretofore passed.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AFFAIRS

Mr. BLOOM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Foreign Affairs may be permitted to sit during the sessions of the House for the remainder of the week.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, have the minority members of the committee been consulted as to this request?

Mr. BLOOM. They have; and they consented to it.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

COOPERATIVE AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION WORK

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to return to No. 103 on the Consent Calendar, the bill (S. 518) to provide for the further development of cooperative agricultural extension work, which was passed over without prejudice at the request of the gentleman from Michigan. I have consulted with the gentleman from Michigan and with the gentleman who had consulted with him asking that the bill be passed over, and they have no objection to its being considered at this time.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Dakota?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to further develop the cooperative extension system as inaugurated under the act entitled "An act to provide for cooperative agricultural extension work between the agricultural colleges in the several States receiving the benefits of the act of Congress approved July 2, 1862, and all acts supplementary thereto, and the United States Department of Agriculture," approved May 8, 1914 (U. S. C., title 7, secs. 341–348), there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of paying the expenses of cooperative extension work in agriculture and home economics and the necessary printing and distribution of information in connection with the same, the sum of $500,000 annually. The sums appropriated pursuant to this act shall be allotted by the Secretary of Agriculture to the several States in such amounts as he may deem necessary, and shall be paid to the several States in the same manner and subject to the same conditions and limitations as the initial payments of $10,000 to each State appropriated under the act of May 8, 1914. The sums appropriated pursuant to this act shall be in addition to and not in substitution for sums appropriated under such act of May 8, 1914, as amended and supplemented, and sums otherwise appropriated for agricultural extension work.

With the following committee amendment:

Page 2, line 5, strike out "$500,000" and insert "$300,000."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HOLMES and Mr. MAAS asked and were given permission to extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. THOMAS F. FORD. Mr. Speaker, last Saturday, April 15, the President forwarded to the dictator governments of Germany and Italy a statement that was at once a friendly invitation and a challenge—a friendly invitation to abandon the road to war which they are pursuing and seek through peaceful means a solution of the problems that are troubling them, as well as a distracted world; a ringing challenge to choose between international anarchy and international comity.

It occurs to me that if the two great nations to whom this document was addressed could be induced to pause for a moment in their wild careers and give due thought to the dire consequences of their actions they might be brought to a realization of the fact that a decent respect for the opinions of mankind might be preferable to the course now being pursued—a course which must inevitably lead to chaos, destruction, and very probably to the blotting out of all that the civilization of centuries has developed in the way of human progress.

For these reasons I rise at this solemn and critical juncture in the history of mankind and appeal to my colleagues on both sides of this House to refrain, if only for the moment, from adverse criticism of the course taken by the Chief Executive, who is, I am convinced, actuated by the highest motives of Christian morality and true patriotism. His desire, like our desire, is for peace. Being, as we are, representatives of a peace-loving people, let us discard politics here and now and unite behind our President in the great Christian cause of peace, a cause so nobly and courageously advocated centuries ago by the greatest peace advocate of all time, the gentle Nazarene, of whom we are, if we are true to our profession of Christianity, the humble but undeviating followers. [Applause.]

ELECTION TO COMMITTEES

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I offer a privileged resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That ANTHONY J. DIMOND, of Alaska, be, and he is hereby, elected a member of the standing committees of the House of Representatives on Naval Affairs and on Military Affairs.

The resolution was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF THE SOIL CONSERVATION AND DOMESTIC ALLOTMENT ACT

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H. R. 3800) to amend section 8 (e) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, with an amendment.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the last paragraph of section 8 (e) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"The total payment that would otherwise be made to any person for any year pursuant to this section shall be reduced by 25 percent of the amount thereof in excess of $1,000. No total payment to any person for any year shall exceed $5,000, but in applying these limitations there shall be excluded amounts representing a landlord's share of a payment made with respect to land operated under a tenancy or sharecropper relationship if the division of the payment between the landlord and the tenant or sharecropper is determined by the local committee to be in accordance with fair and customary standards of renting or sharecropping prevailing in the locality; and there shall also be excluded amounts representing payments to a bona fide cooperative corporation or association, whose members have substantially equal interest therein, and having at least 50 participating members or stockholders, if 75 percent or more of the persons actually engaged in its farming operations are participating members or stockholders of such corporation or association or are children or members of the family of such members or stockholders. In the case of payments to any person on account of performance on farms in different States, Territories, or possessions, the 25-percent reduction and the $5,000 limitation shall be applied to the total of the payments for each State, Territory, or possession for a year, and not to the total of all payments."

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan makes the point of order that a quorum is not present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and forty-one Members are present, not a quorum.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 50]

Anderson, Calif.	Elliott	Kee	Osmers

The SPEAKER. On this roll call 339 Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

Further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MASSINGALE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include in them an address delivered by the Attorney General of the United States at Philadelphia on the occasion of the birthday of Thomas Jefferson.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

AMENDMENT OF THE SOIL CONSERVATION AND DOMESTIC ALLOTMENT ACT

The SPEAKER. For the information of the House, the Clerk will report the title of the pending bill.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. JONES] is recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. HOPE] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, the primary purpose of this bill is to place a limitation on the amount that any one person or any one concern may draw in connection with the soil-conservation payments. Until this year there was no limitation. Effective this year there would be a flat $10,000 limitation. This bill would place a flat limitation of $5,000 on the amount that any one person could draw in connection with a farm that he was operating himself.

It would reduce by 25 percent the payments which he may draw over $1,000. If a total payment would otherwise be $2,000, this bill would reduce the second $1,000 by 25 percent, or, in other words, make a reduction of $250 so that the total would be $1,750. It provides, however, that if the owner operates through tenants or sharecroppers and the payment is divided between the landowner and the tenant in the same proportion that the crop is customarily divided in the community affected, then that part of the landowner's portion shall be exempted from the limitation.

This latter provision is really for the protection of the tenant in the planting of cotton where the tenant furnishes all the equipment. The division is usually one-fourth and three-fourths; that is, the tenant would get three-fourths of the payment and the landowner one-fourth. Where the landowner furnishes everything the division is usually on a half-and-half basis. In the wheat areas the division is usually one-third and two-thirds.

I think it is proper to exempt the landowner when he uses the tenant or sharecropper system, because, whether we believe in that system or not, the primary effect of a flat limitation is to cause the landowner to drive the tenants off the land. So this amendment, if adopted, will serve the double purpose of placing a limitation on the man who undertakes to farm all of his land through hired labor and without the use of tenants and sharecroppers, or who drives those tenants and sharecroppers off his land, and also of protecting the tenant in the share of the payment that goes for the part of the work he does in connection with the production of a crop. It is proper in that particular case for the landowner to have some division. Some people do not think that exemption should be made. I think it should, because if the landowner pays the taxes, sometimes pays the interest on the mortgage on his crops, and takes care of his other expenses, and continues to give employment to these people, I think this would probably be a proper division. If this is not adopted, of course, the limitation remains as it is at the present time.

This particular bill in its substantial effect is the same as the provision which was passed by the House last year. When the bill went over to the Senate they had no such limitation of any kind and we were unable to get them to accept this particular limitation at that time, although some of them who opposed it before, after they have come to understand it, now believe it is a proper limitation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of Texas. For a question; yes.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. The gentleman referred to soil-conservation payments. Does not this also apply to parity payments?

Mr. JONES of Texas. This does not apply to parity payments.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. What would be the situation, then, with reference to parity payments as far as a landlord is concerned in a case where the landlord has many farms, and they are rented out to various tenants? Does the tenant only get the parity payments?

Mr. JONES of Texas. The tenant would get the parity payment on his part of the crops in that connection, under the terms of the general act, but there would be no limitation on the amount where the man did not have tenants unless a limitation was placed on the parity payments.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. As I understand it with reference to parity payments, when the landlord rents his farm to a tenant the landlord will receive his proportionate share of both the soil-conservation payments and the parity payments as a part of his division of the payments made by the Government.

Mr. JONES of Texas. That is correct; but if they do not adopt something of this character, then there will be no limitation at all on soil payments except the $10,000 limitation on the amount that the landowner can draw where he does not operate through tenants at all.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Then it will apply to both the soil-conservation and the parity payments?

Mr. JONES of Texas. This particular amendment will not. However, the parity payments are divided if tenants are used. The difficulty with the parity payments is that where a man operates without tenants the parity payments are not divided.

Mr. PACE. Is not the parity payment determined on whether or not the land is rented for cash rental or crop rental?

Mr. JONES of Texas. Yes; the division follows the contract or the custom in the community. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GILCHRIST].

Mr. GILCHRIST. Mr. Speaker, this bill is in the interest of the small man, the tenant, the sharecropper. Those who are opposed to large payments to land barons—as most of us are—should support this bill, because it cuts down the payments in most cases on the part of the big landowner. In other words, those who are of that thought should support the bill and not assist in limiting the right of the smaller and poorer—economically—class of farmers. The bill is for the purpose of permitting tenants and sharecroppers to join in getting some of this soil-conservation money. For example, in Iowa, we have an insurance company that has a great number of farms, I do not know how many, say, 200. Under the present law they do not permit their tenants to join in getting any of this money. Under this proposed bill the distinct provisions are that the big landowner will not be affected if he permits his tenants or sharecroppers to join and get some of the soil-conservation payments. I have in my pockets letters from county agents, and one says that one big company is charging those tenants out there 35 cents an acre extra, because the landlord cannot get into this program. The man who has 100 or 200 farms makes the poor tenant pay for it. Most of the tenants in Iowa are not cash tenants but deliver a share of the crop as rent to the owner. I suppose at least 90 percent of the rented land in Iowa is paid for by share account, say, two-fifths of the crop. Now these tenants are the men we ought to help. These are the only men who will be helped by this bill. Under the present law the big fellow may get his $10,000, but under this bill he will have to divide that $10,000 with the smaller people. That is the sole purpose of the bill. As I understand it, it is being asked for by farm associations and by men who are acquainted with the way this program has worked out.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERGUSON].

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Speaker, I am sorry the parliamentary situation under suspension of the rules prevents offering an amendment. Had the parliamentary situation been different, I proposed to offer the following amendment, which would have excluded the range program from the $5,000 limitation.

The amendment read as follows:

After the period and before the quotation mark in line 11, page 2, insert the following new sentence: "In case of payments to ranch operators for range-building practices on ranches, reduction will not be made on payments computed for less than $10,000 for any State, Territory, or possession for any year."

The range program is limited to 5 percent of the Soil Conservation funds. The amount expended did not exceed $15,000,000 in 1937, and the amount was about the same in 1938. I want the House to definitely understand that these range payments must be earned through the construction of reservoirs, farms, cleaning out of springs, construction of spreader terraces, and so forth. There is no cash profit to the operator. It requires that all of the money be spent for range-building purposes. This $5,000 limitation will keep several large ranches out of this program. Notwithstanding this fact, I am very much in favor of this bill. It corrects a very grave injustice which exists under the present law. Under the present law, all the agricultural units of a multiple-unit operator must be in the program. With a fixed ceiling on payments, the multiple land operator, such as mortgage companies, insurance companies, and in some cases, States, cannot go into the program because of the limitation of $10,000 in the present bill.

This amendment cuts this limitation from $10,000 to $5,000 but it puts no limit on the amount a multiple land operator may earn if he earns the payment in conjunction with tenants or charecroppers. I sincerely believe that the passage of this bill would place a great many tenants and sharecroppers back on farms because the program and the payments will be attractive enough to the multiple land operator to induce him to join the program in order to receive the benefits. To vote against this measure will encourage and continue the policy of farming with day labor; to vote for it will definitely encourage big land owners and multiple land owners to put tenant farmers and sharecroppers back on the land. I sincerely hope the House will pass this measure.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. REES.]

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I think it is extremely unfortunate that this bill should be brought up under what is known as a suspension of the rules. No one is given a chance to amend it. Only 40 minutes is allowed for debate. Then we vote the bill either up or down. It provides a limitation of $5,000 for a single operator—but for a person or corporation owning several farms the sky is the limit.

As I have said on the floor of this House before, in my opinion, payments made under the Soil Conservation Act are subsidies. A good deal has been said about earning the payments. After all, the payments are made to assist the farmer to carry on because of the extremely low prices which he is receiving for the things he produces. It is suggested today that this measure is intended to make the situation of the farmer more equitable. It does not even touch the fellow who really needs the help.

There are approximately 6,000,000 farm operators in this country. In 1937 approximately 3,600,000 participated under the Farm Act; $315,000,000 was distributed among these farmers. Now, to show the inequality of the plan, more than 1,000,000, or one-third of them, received less than $20 each.

I will put it another way. Half of the farmers who participated in the program got less than $40 each. One million eight hundred thousand farmers received thirty-eight and one-half million dollars. It took $44,000,000 to administer the fund. One-half of our farmers got less of the fund appropriated for them than was paid to those who administered and distributed it. Three million farmers got $107,000,000. Then the other $200,000,000 was distributed among the remaining one-fifth of the farmers.

Since Congress has seen fit to handle the farm situation in the manner it has, it seems to me we ought to take a little more interest in the man who is operating the family-sized farm. Some time ago I introduced a bill in the House that would increase the payments a little to those farmers who are now receiving $20, $35, and $50 each. The bill also provides for a limitation of $2,500 to one operator. It just seems to me that $2,500 is a pretty fair sized subsidy to pay to one operator. We are getting to the place where we have to give a little more consideration to the ordinary average farmer who is trying to get along rather than to pay huge sums to big operators. I hope the time will soon come when the farmer can have a fair price for the things he produces, so he will not be required to accept subsidies from his Government in order to provide a decent standard of living for his family.

I am more convinced than ever that the great problem involved is not so much one of overproduction. It is one of maldistribution and underconsumption. We have too much competition from the outside. The farmer is required to pay too much for the things he needs when compared with the price he is compelled to accept for the products of his land and his efforts. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to say a word in reply to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. REES]. I have a high regard for the gentleman, but I think he will find that his conclusions are not justified from the facts. As a matter of fact, under the present act the first $50,000,000 is paid as extra payments to farmers who draw less than $200; that is, they take $50,000,000 of the fund and apportion it as extra payments among those who would otherwise draw less than $200. Now, as a matter of fact, the amount of money that is drawn by the big farmers has been greatly exaggerated. There are only 385 farmers of the 4,000,000 who get over $5,000. Nearly 95 percent of the fund is paid to farmers who draw less than $500. Ninety-nine percent of this goes to farmers who draw less than $1,000. Only 385 in the whole United States draw more than $5,000. They represent only about two-thirds of 1 percent of the total payments.

The gentleman's figures are taken from those who get very small payments. A great many of those who were paid in small payments were men who would have a very small amount of wheat near the fringe. Near the cotton fringe there are a great many people who grow a little cotton but who grow a great many other crops, and their payments on cotton are small. The same is true of wheat. The same is true of corn. So that the picture is not half so bad as it might be made out to be. This bill does not increase the payments of any man if he is operating his own farm, and trying to operate without tenants and sharecroppers. Remember that more than half the farmers of the United States are tenants and sharecroppers. If this is not adopted many of those will be driven from the soil. I think that would be an inexcusable condition for the Congress to permit to take place.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES of Texas. I yield for a question.

Mr. REES of Kansas. But the fact does remain that more than a million farmers in 1937, about one-third of them, did draw less than $20; is that true?

Mr. JONES of Texas. Oh, that statement is probably correct. There are over 6,000,000 farmers.

I want to answer another statement which the gentleman made. The number of farmers who complied has been increasing every year. Already for this year, notwithstanding the criticism of the program, there are 250,000 more farmers who have indicated their desire to go along with the program than went along last year. Those in charge of administering the program say that 80 percent of the corn and wheat farmers have indicated that they will join the program. Ninety-two percent of the cotton farmers and more than 75 percent of the other farmers who live in the major farm-producing areas will join the program. Indications are that participation in 1939 will be the largest for any year thus far. That is a great compliment to the success of the farm program, notwithstanding the criticism.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN].

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Speaker, I am in thorough accord with the purpose of the amendment, which seeks to give the benefits of this act to tenants and sharecroppers, but I am sorry the legislation comes up in this form, which precludes consideration of amendments to the bill with reference to payments to large owners of farm lands. These owners will receive much greater payments under this amendment than they are receiving at the present time.

I am interested in the family-sized farm and the man who operates it, whether he be a tenant, a sharecropper, or an owner. He is the one who is entitled to the maximum payment that can be given him by the Government as long as subsidies are to be paid rather than the large operator, who has plenty of means and can own large tracts of land.

Mention has been made of the fact that many additional farmers are coming into the program this year. This is true. I do not see how any farmer can stay out of the program this year when the cotton farmer receives between 4 and 5 cents a pound on cotton through soil-conservation and parity payments; when the wheat farmer gets up to 28 cents a bushel and when the corn farmer gets 15 cents a bushel, I do not understand how any farmer would stay out of the program. Most farmers in the country, therefore, who produce the basic crops will be going into the program to get the maximum subsidy payments from the Federal Government. They should do so, and I urge them to do so this year. No one knows how long the Government will be able to pay subsidies to farmers and the other subsidies they are paying at the present time; but as long as the farmers and others have to pay taxes they might as well get all they can out of the program as long as the subsidy payments are continued.

I wanted to offer an amendment to this bill limiting all payments to $2,500. This amendment was adopted the other day in the House by a majority of nearly 100 when I offered it in connection with the agricultural appropriation bill. It showed the overwhelming sentiment of the House to be in favor of restricting the payment of large sums of money so that maximum benefits might be paid to the small family operated farms. We do not want a repetition of what took place under the original Triple A as reported in Senate Document No. 274, which shows hundreds and hundreds of payments of from $10,000 to $1,000,000 made to individual farmers in a single year.

This amendment might bring out a great deal of criticism if adopted today because it does remove the lid on payments to large operators. Provided the large operator rents his farms to tenants there is no limit on the payments that can be made to the farm owner. There is a limit, however, of $5,000 on the amount of payment that can be made to a farm owner who operates his own farm. So there should be no misunderstanding whatsoever about the proposition.

I propose to introduce a bill and hope to have it considered in the House before we adjourn which will limit all benefit payments to $2,500. I am doing this because of my inability to secure consideration of the amendment in connection with the bill before us.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. CUMMINGS].

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I would not have cared to talk on this bill except for the fact that so much misapprehension exists. For the life of me I cannot understand why a man who has been so unfortunate as to own 15, 20, 40, or 50 farms, as some have through the method of foreclosure, should be prevented from coming under this program because he rents that land. He is taking care of his tenants; they get the most of it; he does not get much of it.

There is a great deal of misunderstanding about this bill. I was opposed to this rehabilitation of farmers. You know the bill I mean. They took a class of farmers who could not borrow a dollar at the banks and bought them the full outfit. From figures I secured from the Department, I find that in the district I represent they had lent over $4,000,000. I found further that 25 percent of the money has been paid back, although a lot of it is not due for 3 years. The truth is I was plumb wrong about that class of people that we always thought could not take care of themselves. They are making good.

Do not cripple this bill; do not cripple it with amendments you do not fully understand. This bill does not endanger anybody, but it does take care of the tenants, and they are the ones who need taking care of. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman yields back 1 minute.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE].

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I am anxious that the Members of the House may know just who this big landlord is and how this situation exists.

Mr. Speaker, unless we pass legislation of this character very grave injustice will be done the tenant farmers. In my State of South Dakota the big landlord is the State itself. We attempted to offer the farmers of the State a better credit system some years ago, cheaper interest on farm mortgages; and as a result of that effort today the State of South Dakota owns 7,000 farms. It keeps up the farms, pays interest on 20 millions of dollars in bonds floated to finance the loans—even pays taxes to the counties and schools on these 7,000 farms that it had to take over.

These farms are all operated by renters. It is true that the farmers could come under this program so far as they themselves individually are concerned if they could pay cash rent and thereby become the sole operators. But if the rent in any way depends on the yield or farm income, the landlord becomes a joint operator and he is penalized about 5 to 1 for every farm out of compliance. Now, not enough of the farmers can pay cash rent to make things balance for the South Dakota Rural Credit Board's renters to go into the program.

Just Saturday I received a letter from the director of our rural credit board, saying that he had been obliged to report to the State director of the Triple A program that unless this legislation were passed their 7,000 farms would have to go out of the program. I think the Members understand that if some of a landlord's farms do not comply, the penalty for their noncompliance is assessed against the landlord's other farms. This means in my State not only the insurance farms that are rented on shares but it means also that these 7,000 State renters are taken out of the program and will seek by increased acreages to make up the lost benefit payments.

You talk about the effect on the landlord or the big operator, but unless this bill is passed you will be slapping in the face 7,000 renters who have no other way to come under the program.

In addition to the State-owned farms we have the farms that are rented from insurance companies and others who have extended loans on farms and foreclosed. Nobody who took over a large block of these farms wanted to take the farms over. The Federal land bank did not want to take them over, the State of South Daokta did not want to take them over, the insurance companies did not want to take those farms over, but they have them and they are trying to rent them to people who want to get on their feet again.

If you do not pass this bill, you are slapping those renters in the face. What you think of the Agricultural Adjustment program as a whole is entirely beside the point as far as this bill is concerned. The program is in effect. The general act is the law. If you favor limiting the payments to those who own the farms they operate, or who are able to pay cash rent, you can vote against this bill. But if you favor amending the act so that share renters and sharecroppers can qualify, you will vote for the amendment to the act, embodied in this bill.

The gentleman from Minnesota said he would advise all farmers to come into the program this year, but unless you pass this bill the farmers cannot follow his advice, not if they rent on shares from a landlord with any large number of farms. Many of these men owe money to the Farm Security Administration or other Government agencies. It is good business for the Government to see that they have an opportunity to qualify for benefit payments—but primarily I appeal to your sense of fairness to remove the restriction on multiple farms and let these renters get the benefit of the farm program this year. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. O'CONNOR].

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, may I ask a question of the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Agriculture? In my State we have quite a few large operators of wheat ranches. Regardless of how many acres a farmer farms, is he limited, under the operation of this bill, to $5,000?

Mr. JONES of Texas. He is limited, if he is operating himself and not through renters or tenants. If he uses renters and tenants, either or both, there is no limitation so long as he simply draws his part of the payment. The tenant draws the major portion. It is usually the major portion on account of the division which goes to the tenant.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. LORD].

Mr. LORD. Mr. Speaker, New York State from which I come consists mostly of family-sized farms. No farmer draws anything like $5,000. About the most a farmer can receive in New York State is $200, and that only to the best farmers.

The farmer who really needs soil conservation cannot get any help at all and that is where I find fault with the pending legislation. The little farmer who has 50, 75, or 100 acres is the one who does not have ready money. He is the man who needs the help most, if help it be. He is the man who needs the soil conservation, if any one is to have it, in order to help his farm. But he has to have ready money to buy seed and fertilizer, and does not have the ready money—and fertilizer sells for cash.

I have contended that we should amend this legislation so that the farmers who are in need of help may receive it and not give it all to the man who really can afford to pay for what he has. When they see that some farmers receive $5,000, or an amount larger than that, they think the Government is just simply giving away money to people who do not need it. As I stated before, the ones who need it most cannot get any help at all. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of the time on this side to myself.

Mr. Speaker, under the present law there is a limitation of $10,000 so far as total payments are concerned. That is the only limitation. Two criticisms have been made of this limitation. Some people think it ought to be lower. To meet that criticism, there has been embodied in the present bill a limitation of $5,000 in total payments and a reduction of 25 percent in all payments above $1,000.

The other criticism that has been made of the present law is that in the case of multiple landowners, such as the State of South Dakota or large mortgage and insurance companies that have been compelled to become landowners involuntarily, the $10,000 limitation would prevent their participation. The reason that they cannot or will not participate is because the payments which they would receive are so limited in proportion to the land involved and work required that they feel they cannot afford to come in. If a $10,000 limitation would prevent their participation, then, of course, a $5,000 limitation, as provided in this bill, would prevent an even larger number of multiple landowners from coming into the program.

Of course, the object of this bill is not to take care of the large multiple landowner. The object of the bill is to take care of his tenants, because if the landlord cannot come in then the tenant cannot come in, either. There is no logic or reason why a tenant on one side of the road who rents his farm from the State of South Dakota, or a mortgage company, we will say, should not come into the program because these limitations keep his landlord out, when the man on the other side of the road whe rents his farm from someone else, who owns only one or two farms, gets a payment.

The main purpose of this bill is to make it possible for tenants who happen to be unfortunate enough, if you want to call it that, to be tenants of large landowners to come into the program on the same basis as the tenant who rents his land from a small landowner.

As the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture told you awhile ago, the number of payments over $1,000 is very small. I feel, therefore, that the matter of reducing the limit on payments is a rather immaterial feature of the bill. The main object is to put all tenants, of whom there are almost 3,000,000 in this country, on an equality. Furthermore, by passing this bill we will not only put tenants on an equality with each other but will protect the family sized farms now being operated by tenants.

The tendency in some parts of the country where these limitations have been applied, has been for large landowners to say, "Well, if we cannot come into the program we will just stay out of it altogether and get rid of our tenants." I am sorry to say that situation has occurred in some parts of the country. They are using labor-saving machinery, such as we have today, and it is possible for the large landowners to farm the land themselves through hired help. That is what we want to get away from. If the large landowner gets rid of his tenants and sharecroppers and operates the land himself he is subject to the limitations of the bill. If he farms by tenants he is not. We want to encourage large landowners to farm through tenants. If you want to do that, support the present bill, because that is what it will accomplish. I do not say that this is a perfect bill. In theory at least it seems hard for one to justify any limitation on soil-conservation payments. They are paid to farmers for carrying out certain practices. That being the case why should not the large landowner who carries out the required practices be paid at the same rate as the smaller landowner? The $5,000 limitation will work a hardship on those in the range program as mentioned by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERGUSON]. I recognize, however, the sentiment in the House and in the committee in favor of some limitation, and feel that the present bill is a fair compromise of the very divergent views which exist on the question. Therefore, I favor its passage. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. JONES of Texas. Mr. Speaker, this measure, as my colleague has just stated, will protect the tenants and sharecroppers, many of whom might otherwise be compelled to leave the land. If a man owns land himself, or if a mortgage company or insurance company or a State owns land, they frequently do not want the land because there is expense connected with such ownership. If you place a flat limitation on this payment and make it low and do not permit the landowner to have anything, in desperation he will probably say, "My only recourse is to drive off the land these 50 or 100 or 500 tenants and leave them off the land, and get some machinery and hire seasonal labor." Thus a considerable percentage of the 2,500,000 farmers who are now tenants and sharecroppers will be forced on relief. I believe it would be absurd for the Congress to take such a position.

Mr. Speaker, I ask for a vote on the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BLAND). The question is on the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill as amended.

The question was taken, and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous special order, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HARNESS] is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. HARNESS. Mr. Speaker, I have today introduced a measure which I believe will not only give full satisfaction for a series of gross offenses against the honor and dignity of our armed forces in the last war, but which will also strengthen our hand against possible similar offenses in the future. This measure would preclude the reentry to the United States, under any circumstances, of any person who has fled, or who may in the future flee, from the United States or its possessions as a convicted deserter from our armed forces in time of war.

You have all seen the news dispatches reporting Grover Cleveland Bergdoll's intention to seek reentrance to the United States, and to serve the penal sentence which he fled this country in 1920 to escape. I think we may safely presume, in case he might gain admittance and serve this term, that he will attempt to recover the $500,000 to $600,000 worth of property which was confiscated by the Alien Property Custodian following his flight from the country.

I was moved to offer this measure at this time specifically to insure against this arch-traitor's return to this country under any circumstances. How can there possibly be a place in America for a man who has so flagrantly rejected his American responsibilities, and so violently renounced his American rights? What claim to asylum do his German-born and German-reared wife and children have upon America? My deepest sympathy goes to that woman and those innocent children who must live under the clouds of war which threaten them. But it is exactly the same sympathy which I feel for the millions of other German people who suffer under the iron hand of the war-mad Hitler. The Bergdoll family deserves and should receive nothing from this country which we do not extend to every other person in Germany.

Is it a sudden burst of patriotic fervor and love of country which prompts this traitor to seek reentry to America? Or has he found conditions in Germany so extremely unpleasant that life in America—even in a prison cell—seems preferable? Does the menace of war which hangs over his chosen country alarm him? Do the rigors of the Hitler dictatorship chafe his wastrel, playboy soul?

Obviously, Bergdoll is moved by these latter considerations, for it is impossible to imagine the slightest spark of patriotism stirring in the man who has so consistently hated and reviled America. Remember that Bergdoll was the spoiled, pampered, wastrel son of a wealthy family who grew up with an abiding contempt for law, discipline, and order; and who spent an active youth violating the rights, peace, and security of others. This unbridled libertine seems now to have run athwart an iron-handed regimen which he cannot violate with the same impunity which marked his course in this country.

Remember, too, that Bergdoll has always been accustomed to every luxury that wealth can buy. Even though the Alien Property Custodian impounded his sizeable fortune, his mother's wealth has been, at least until recently, at his command. But the steadily tightening economic vice in which Hitler's course of conquest has been squeezing Germany is probably cutting off the luxuries to which this son of wealth has always been accustomed.

It may even be that his rebellious nature has led him to indiscretions which have invoked the wrath of his overlord. His desire to quit his adopted country may be born of dire necessity. There would, indeed, be poetic justice in the picture of a man fleeing the incomparable freedom of America only to fall into the straitjacket existence which destroys all personal liberties in the Germany of Hitler. As loathesome and revolting as are the Gestapo methods of Hitler, this might be an occasion where we could almost view them with tolerance.

Whatever the reasons which underlie his desire, it is quite natural that Bergdoll should seek to escape the hardships and dangers of existence in Germany. A military prison in America is vastly better than a concentration camp in Germany. And 5 years of penal servitude is a small sacrifice to attain the soft life of ease and freedom which his mother's wealth would assure him in America.

I have spoken of Grover Bergdoll in harsh terms, but I use those terms advisedly. His offenses against this country were not the offenses of the ordinary "conscientious objector" who is sincere and honest in his refusal to bear arms against his fellow men; and who is willing to suffer punishment rather than forsake his principles. This man, Bergdoll, showed no such pacific disposition. The best that could ever be said for him was that he was a reckless, irresponsible youth who was driven by emotional hysteria to the grave offenses he committed against the country which had provided for him so handsomely and treated him so leniently.

The weight of evidence, however, proves that he was contemptuous, truculent—even brutal and vicious; and these offenses were deliberate and premeditated. Consider his record:

At the age of 16, Bergdoll shot at an officer who was attempting to arrest his brother for speeding. Carrying and using lethal weapons was not an accident of youthful exuberance, as later events proved.

At the age of 18, Bergdoll was caught carrying a pistol and a dagger, this time through an arrest for speeding.

In 1912 and again in 1915 Bergdoll was arrested for motor accidents causing injuries to himself and others.

His vicious tendencies further revealed themselves at the age of 19, when he was arrested in 1912 for beating an officer.

Bergdoll had the wealth to indulge every whim. It was natural, therefore, that he should own and fly his own airplanes. He was physically skillful in aviation as he was in driving. But the skill was accompanied by recklessness and complete disregard for the rights and safety of others. Just as he was arrested repeatedly for reckless driving and speeding on the highways, so was he grounded and repeatedly warned for flying dangerously low over Philadelphia and the crowded beaches at Atlantic City. Both planes and motors were extremely undependable in those days, and low flying was extremely hazardous. Any failure over a crowded area might have killed and maimed scores of people. Still, Bergdoll disregarded other people's safety when he flew, just as he ignored their rights and their safety when he drove a car. Repeated warnings and arrests changed his contemptuous attitude not the slightest.

That is the young man as he was up to the entrance of America in the World War. His character was a matter of public record before this time; and his pro-German sympathies were established by the fact that he volunteered his services, his planes, and his resources to the German Army in 1914. The events which followed could have been foretold clearly:

In 1917 Bergdoll fled to evade the draft law. He became a technical deserter at large but avoided capture until January 1, 1920. As a fugitive he repeatedly wrote taunting and derogatory messages in the best gangster manner to Army and civil officers.

After his conviction on the desertion charge, Bergdoll contrived a cock-and-bull story about a large sum of gold which he had buried in the Maryland hills. Upon this ruse he secured leave under guard on the pretext of conducting a search for this purported treasure.

It should be noted that the search was fruitless. That the whole affair was a sham became obvious when he eluded his guards by a prearranged ruse while visiting his mother's home in Philadelphia. He left his guards to answer a faked telephone call and escaped, in company with his chauffeur, Eugene "Ike" Stecher, who was also a deserter from the United States Army.

The circumstances surrounding the escape clearly indicated prearrangement. Furthermore, that escape transpired in such a manner as to throw unjustified but nonetheless serious suspicion upon a number of Army officers and persons in the War Department. Apparently, the written order granting the leave did not include the privilege to visit his mother in Philadelphia. The irregularity surrounding the side visit gave credence to ugly stories of bribery which were cleared only after a congressional investigation.

Thus closes the record of Bergdoll in America. But interesting and enlightening events followed after he found asylum in Germany. Two unsuccessful attempts were made to abduct this traitor and return him to justice in America. Following the first, in 1921, Bergdoll cabled this message to the Philadelphia Public Ledger:

> We captured six Department of Justice agents and threw them in prison. We are safe and sound. See Associated Press reports.

Here again is the gloating Bergdoll. As thoughtless and unjustified as may have been the attempted abduction, the man could not restrain the gangsterlike quirk which drove him to twit the forces of law, even on such a groundless charge. The Department of Justice, of course, refuted the implication that the incident was an official attempt to apprehend Bergdoll.

In 1923, six overzealous Americans made a second attempt to abduct Bergdoll. It was on this occasion that he shot and killed Carl Schmidt and severely bit a second of his would-be abductors.

In 1921, shortly after reaching Germany, Bergdoll applied for German citizenship. The application was refused, and no further authentic information is available on his status thereafter.

There is the record of the man who finally, after almost 22 years, would embrace the American cause and reclaim American citizenship. The evidence needs no comment, except to emphasize the sly cunning and hatred Bergdoll displayed. Not only did he flaunt his disdain as a fugitive and afterward, when he found asylum in Germany, but as a result of the fiasco which started as a treasure hunt and wound up with his escape from this country, he threw a cloud of grave suspicion upon Army officers and War Department officials which threatened their characters and their careers. That the suspicion was groundless merely serves to prove his vicious, subversive cunning.

This traitor offered his services and resources to Germany in 1921. He renounced any possible remaining American rights when he applied for German citizenship in 1921. Under the circumstances, there can be no useful place for him in America now. [Applause.] Neither he nor his family can have any slightest claim upon America.

Millions of patriotic Americans willingly offered their lives for their country, while the enemy-minded Bergdoll fled to safety. Thousands of fine American boys laid down their lives for the flag at which Bergdoll sneered. In simple justice to these men, and to every true American, this Congress should be eager to bar this arch traitor and all others of his stripe. [Applause.]

I feel strongly upon this subject, because I was one of the 4,000,000 men who discharged the duties which this traitor rejected. I spent 2 years in the service—a full year in the trenches opposing the forces which Bergdoll embraced. Because I wore the American uniform in the World War, however, I feel that I reflect the feelings of every other American service man in resenting the affront which Bergdoll committed; and in demanding full satisfaction for that affront.

I urge the adoption of this measure to avenge this grave offense and to strengthen the assurance that such offenses against the honor and dignity of America may never be repeated. [Applause.]

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARNESS. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Have not the Departments held that Bergdoll, the draft dodger, has lost his civil rights? If this be so, how can he obtain a passport to reenter America?

Mr. HARNESS. It is my understanding that the State Department takes the position that Bergdoll has lost his citizenship, but that matter would have to be thrashed out in the courts and would require a long legal battle.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. While Congress is considering the bill which the gentleman has introduced Bergdoll may arrive in this country. Does not the gentleman believe that in view of the fact that this is Consent Calendar day, the gentleman ought to ask unanimous consent for the passage of his bill at this time and serve notice on this draft dodger to keep out of our country?

Mr. HARNESS. I hope the Congress will give immediate consideration to this bill. The bill will probably be considered by the committee tomorrow, and I hope, if the committee makes a favorable report, the House will then take it up by unanimous consent for consideration.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARNESS. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. The gentleman has made a very splendid statement to the House on this matter. May I ask the gentleman what are the provisions of his bill? What is sought to be accomplished by the bill?

Mr. HARNESS. The bill provides that any person heretofore or hereafter convicted of desertion from the military or naval forces of the United States while the United States is at war, and who has proceeded, or who may hereafter proceed, to a foreign country to escape punishment for his offense, shall not be admitted to the United States for any purpose. The thing sought to be accomplished by this measure is to keep Bergdoll and any others like him from returning to the United States. [Applause.]

Mr. FADDIS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARNESS. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. FADDIS. I am very much in sympathy with the gentleman's sentiments toward this arch traitor, but I am very much afraid he will be allowed to land. I wish to express the hope that, if he does land, he will be imprisoned, and that the House of Representatives and the Senate of the United States, and everyone else connected with the Government, or having any interest in the Government, insist that he do his full time in prison, and under no conditions be pardoned, and also that his time be increased by all the penalties the law can heap upon him.

Mr. HARNESS. I thank the gentleman for his contribution, but let me say that if the Congress will consider this bill within the next week we can stop Bergdoll from coming back to this country and will not have to be bothered with him or others of his stripe any longer. [Applause.]

Mr. FADDIS. I shall be glad to vote for the gentleman's bill, and I hope we furnish the world another example of a man without a country.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARNESS. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma. I desire to make the observation that I am in sympathy with the purpose of the gentleman's bill. May I further add that I agree wholeheartedly with the sentiments expressed by the gentleman from Indiana. It is plainly evident that the gentleman has made a very serious and detailed investigation of the activities of this well-known draft-dodger traitor to the Government. As a former service man, I am pleased to join the gentleman in the hope that his bill to bar Bergdoll from America will be enacted by this Congress at an early date.

Mr. HARNESS. I deeply appreciate the observations of the gentleman from Oklahoma. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, today is the opening of the baseball season. One of my constituents, the Voit Baseball Co., of Los Angeles, has sent me half a dozen of their official baseballs, to be presented to the page boys of the House, who are going to wage a desperate fight in their ball games with the Senate page boys. I hope this year the pages of the House will win the pennant.

Mr. LORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KRAMER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. LORD. Mr. Speaker, due to the fact that this is the one hundredth anniversary of the invention of the game of baseball, which was started at Cooperstown, N. Y., in my district, by Gen. Abner Doubleday, I hope the gentleman will consider donating one of those baseballs to the centennial that is to be held in Cooperstown, which I hope the gentleman from California and all other Members of the House will attend.

Mr. KRAMER. I shall be pleased to do so. [Applause.]

Mr. LORD. I wish to thank the gentleman in behalf of Cooperstown Centennial Ball Association.

[Here the gavel fell.]

THE PRACTICAL SIGNIFICANCE OF P. W. A.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD at this point, and include therein a list of the pending non-Federal Public Works Administration projects.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, last year when business was badly in need of revitalization and another depression threatened to engulf the Nation, Congress appropriated a sum of money to be used for loans and grants to cities and States and municipal bodies for public-works projects. The appropriation acted as a "transfusion" to industry and thus to the Nation as a whole. The fact that the "transfusion" was postponed for so long was responsible for the delay in the business upswing, which did not begin to be felt until the latter part of 1938. Immediately after the legislation was enacted, however, and projects put into operation, pay rolls lengthened and orders for materials increased.

Construction of public works has been regarded for many years as one of the more promising means of relieving unemployment in periods of acute industrial depression. Public construction provides jobs when they are needed most, and stimulates employment in the heavy industries by creating a demand for the raw materials used in construction. Moreover, with the purchasing power of the workers, directly or indirectly employed, maintained, the demand for consumer goods is sustained and other parts of the industrial system are kept in motion.

The practical significance of P. W. A. is known to all of you. I need not tell you that we have had nothing more useful to show for our money than the public-works projects of permanent useful character, which have been sponsored by Secretary Ickes as P. W. A. Administrator. There has been no criticism of the P. W. A. program and its benefits are plainly discernible.

While it is easy for critics to point out the inability of P. W. A. to provide large-scale employment, the careful standards established by Secretary Ickes should not and cannot be broken down, and it must be remembered that many hours of employment are furnished indirectly by the program. The main consideration is that in the allotment of public-works funds the amount of labor required for each of the several kinds of public works is of first importance. How can the maximum employment be created with the funds available? Aside from the question of economic and social utility, what are the employment potentialities of projects for flood control, highway construction, reforestation, abolition of grade crossings, slum clearance, public buildings, schools, and soil-erosion control? It is a relatively simple matter to determine the direct labor requirements at the site for each of the several classes of projects, but this is only a partial picture. Many additional jobs are created indirectly by the production and handling of materials needed for the projects.

For that reason Secretary Ickes is to be congratulated for drawing the all-important distinction between socially desirable public works and those undertaken as made-work projects. We can analyze the results of the programs undertaken in the past and conscientiously support legislation to continue the public-works agency.

We know that during the heat of the recent hard-fought political campaign we heard no criticism of public-works projects or of the manner in which P. W. A. has been administered. There must have been a reason for this absence of political attack. In my opinion, this reason was that the Public Works Administration never has been conducted on a partisan basis. Secretary Ickes' brand of public works and politics do not mix.

Another reason for the widespread popularity of the program has been that through P. W. A., States, counties, and municipalities, from the humblest of villages up to the great metropolises, irrespective of their political complexion, have had the opportunity of sharing directly in effecting recovery. They have done this through their own planning and initiative, through the selection of those projects that they considered the most needed and useful and through the expenditure of their own funds.

The P. W. A. construction program has proved workable because it provides employment for men in their own trades, at the same time benefiting the heavy-goods industries. It contributes nothing to the growing dependency of the relief workers on the Government and, on the other hand, encourages men who are on relief to look for work in their own trades and at their own rates of pay.

I advocate that the Public Works Administration be designated for the management of such part of all relief appropriations as may be used for construction work. I maintain that in this manner Congress can insure an efficient and economical construction program and at the same time revitalize business and relieve unemployment. I firmly believe that all public construction should be done by the contract method and through a system of competitive bidding. I believe that construction workers should be given the benefit of labor protection as set forth in the laws of the Nation which is assured them under the P. W. A. basis of operation.

Important decisions respecting work-relief policies confront the Congress at this time. I hope that my recommendations will be given some consideration and thought. The Government's moral responsibility for the welfare of its people must not transcend all considerations of efficiency. We should keep in mind that public funds are a public trust.

I have long held the belief that a majority of the unemployed in this country want jobs in private industry at prevailing wage rates. It has been charged that many of the persons working on Government relief projects would not accept employment in private industry if it were offered to them. I have never been able to find any foundation of truth in this. The people in my district, and they are average American men and women, do not want to accept relief unless they are forced to do so, and those who are employed on relief projects do not want to continue 1 day longer than is necessary. They will accept work in private industry any time it is offered, and if Government can bring industrial health to the Nation, I know we will have no unemployment problem.

P. W. A. has acted as a much-needed "shot in the arm" to industry in the past. It has provided work in private industry for those who would otherwise be forced on the relief rolls.

I am such a dyed-in-the-wool supporter of public works that I believe every reasonable consideration should be given to the suggestion of making P. W. A. a permanent agency of our Government. It goes without saying that a long-range program is necessary. On the basis of experience we must prepare ourselves for the future. A master plan will aid Congress in harmonizing over a period of years what is needed with what can be paid for. It will prevent the spending of public funds haphazardly and illogically.

Congress has in the past enthusiastically endorsed the public-works program. I hope serious consideration will be given to making this a permanent part of our Government for use in times of depression when a financial "transfusion" is most needed to prevent industrial collapse.

I list below a summary of applications for projects, by States, pending before the Public Works Administration as of January 18, 1939, which might be eligible for allotment if additional appropriations were provided:

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by including a radio broadcast on the bill H. R. 2387.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

COMMITTEE ON THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 167

Resolved, That Mr. HARRY SANDAGER, of Rhode Island, be, and he is hereby, elected to the District of Columbia Committee of the House of Representatives.

The resolution was agreed to.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD by including a speech made by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SMITH].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. WELCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD with reference to the bill H. R. 4646, to provide means by which certain Filipinos can emigrate from the United States.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein certain short portions of a bill which I introduced and also a statement entitled "A Program for Monetary Reform," by a number of professors.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. BENDER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, on Saturday, February 25, 1939, it was my privilege, with other members of committees interested in national defense, to witness two demonstrations. During the morning there was a demonstration by the Air Corps at Langley Field and Messick. It was an excellent and most impressive demonstration. Some of us went up in one of the planes, so we could not hear the explosion of the bombs. However, those who were on the ground did hear the explosions, and all of us were impressed deeply with the destructive capabilities of attack from the air. That afternoon we observed a demonstration of antiaircraft artillery at Fort Story, Va., and also saw two rounds fired from a seacoast battery at Fort Monroe. Those firings were also excellent and impressive, and I believe that others will agree that the trip to Virginia was well worth while.

The trip had been planned by General Craig in compliance with a request made by the Military Affairs Committee during the hearings on the President's national-defense message of January 12, 1939. Ever since that trip I have been thinking about the things I saw and trying to couple them with some of the things I heard from witnesses before the committee and things I have read of the hearings before other committees of Congress. My cogitations lead me to wonder about some features of our plans for defense.

For a number of years I have been a Reserve officer in the Coast Artillery Corps. During those years I have learned that one of the principal reasons for fortifying harbors is to preclude the necessity of assigning local defense missions to detachments of our fleet. Thus the entire fleet is enabled to act in unison in the accomplishment of its real mission instead of being withheld from the high seas in order to insure the local defense of our harbors. Harbor defenses also insure protected anchorages for our Navy when in port. There is nothing new in that. Not one of you fail to wonder what it will cost to provide the fortifications necessary to protect a contemplated new naval base. The two thoughts occur simultaneously and subconsciously for the simple reason that we appreciate the necessity of fortifying naval bases. The fortification of naval bases is a principle of defense as old as navies.

In many respects an air force is like a fleet. It constitutes a highly mobile defensive force which is obliged to use offensive means. To be mobile and to act as a unit, it should not be parcelled out for the protection of many localities. It requires bases at which to refuel, rearm, and make repairs.

In some respects an air force differs from a fleet. Unless docked for repairs, a ship is always in its native element—the water—and, if the need arise suddenly, is capable of using its guns for self protection. It is true that naval engagements prefer battle formations which will permit the most effective delivery of fire and obviate the undesirable feature of massed targets for hostile fire. Not so with an air force. It may stay in its native element—the air—only so long as the fuel lasts. After that it must come back to its land or floating bases where, temporarily at least, it is helpless. Thus do air bases and flying fields offer the best targets while filled with planes. It is impracticable to keep an air force in the air continuously. It is obvious, therefore, that air bases should be protected just as are naval bases.

I know of only two methods of providing such protection. One is by the use of airplanes and the other is by fire from the ground. With the speed of all types of planes approaching the same figure, it seems that the defense planes are being seriously handicapped. Add to their inability to overtake their targets the difficulties incident to a pilot finding another plane during darkness and the handicap is multiplied. It would appear that interception and air combat during darkness will be purely accidental.

General Strong, the head of the War Plans Division of the War Department General Staff, told the committee that antiaircraft artillery in Spain was effective. Those of us who have seen these weapons fire can understand why. There is no delay in the delivery of fire from the ground. The projectiles can overtake their targets.

You may feel that I am arguing antiaircraft against aviation. May I state emphatically that such is not my intention. I am convinced that both aviation and antiaircraft artillery are essential to national defense just as are the Navy and and harbor defenses. How big the Navy or the Air Force should be are questions beyond my ability to answer. General Arnold told the committee that we needed the number of planes provided in the bill. He also said that planes lasted about 5 years. Twenty percent for maintenance is quite a lot but, if essential to national defense, I am in favor of it.

What I am trying to do is present certain facts and principles, which I have considered, in the hope that you will think them over and perhaps reach the same conclusions that I have reached. The first conclusion I wish to mention is that antiaircraft protection should be provided for all of our important air-force establishments. I believe you concur in the necessity of providing such protection for naval establishments.

We have been told that the present War Department program for antiaircraft artillery contemplates 34 mobile regiments as a minimum requirement for the continental United States. What will that number protect? Consider our air force and navy establishments. There are some 15 air bases and flying fields; 4 of these—the 3 wing headquarters and the school at San Antonio—should have the protection of at least 2 regiments each. If 1 be assigned to each of the remaining 11, the total requirement for that purpose will be 19. Neglecting ammunition and mine depots, naval air stations, submarine bases, and similar navy establishments, you may count 9 navy yards in the United States. Each should be protected by at least two antiaircraft regiments. If these 18 be added to the 19 for the air-force protection, the total is 37—3 more than the 34 in the present program. This very rough estimate indicates that the present program is too small. Bear in mind that I have included nothing in the way of antiaircraft protection for the field forces, nothing for the protection of manufacturing establishments, nothing for the protection of oil storage, nothing for the protection of metropolitan areas. I am wondering if the War Department has not been too modest in its requests and whether we are doing as much as is possible to provide antiaircraft protection.

Manifestly it would be impracticable to provide sufficient antiaircraft to protect everything. General Craig has stated many times that, in the event of an emergency, there will be numberless calls for antiaircraft protection. I feel that the program for 34 regiments should be enlarged.

Just a few words about the training of the personnel to man the antiaircraft weapons. Having been associated with this type of artillery for a number of years, I can assure you that the problems presented in firing at fast targets capable of moving in three directions are far from simple. The solution of those problems has led to the development of several articles which, of necessity, are quite complicated. The proper use and care of such equipment requires specialists. In the actual firing the sound judgment of those in charge add greatly to the effectiveness. I believe I can say truthfully that antiaircraft is the most difficult of all artillery. The training is necessarily detailed and requires both competent instructors and long periods of time for perfecting the required personnel.

It has been our policy, and a sound one, to charge the Regular Army with instructing the civilian components. To carry out this policy for antiaircraft instruction there are five partially active mobile regiments in the United States. These are located at New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Galveston. To supplement this shortage in mobile regiments, antiaircraft instruction is also given in certain harbor defenses. I have been receiving mine in the harbor defenses of Pensacola.

Practically all active training of the civilian components is held during the summer months. The combined requirements for the training of the C. M. T. C., the R. O. T. C., the National Guard, and the Reserve officers places a very heavy load on the Regular Army organizations charged with the training.

There are about 5,000 Reserve officers assigned to active and inactive antiaircraft regiments. If we assume that each of them has a 14-day active-duty training period each 3 years, it will mean that about 1,700 require training each summer. Quite a heavy load for the existing facilities. The solution, I believe, lies in more Regular Army antiaircraft regiments.

There is no Regular Army antiaircraft regiment in either the First, the Third, the Fourth, the Fifth, or the Seventh Corps Area. In the Fourth Corps Area there are more than 1,000 antiaircraft Reserve officers. If we are to have adequately trained Reserve officers, we should have more regiments in which to train them. All of my investigations point to the need for more Regular Army antiaircraft regiments. They have not been asked for by the War Department, and General Craig has told the committee that it was the plan to organize 19 additional antiaircraft regiments in the National Guard—this to be done gradually. If that is done, there will be 5 partially active Regular Army regiments and 29 National Guard regiments. Such a ratio will aggravate the existing inadequacy of the training facilities. I feel that one reason for not asking for additional men for that purpose was the recognized need for increasing the Panama Canal garrison. That certainly was needed. However, if we are to be trained for the defense of the continental United States, we should start soon to establish the required schools, which in this case are antiaircraft regiments.

From a layman's point of view it would seem that at least half of the active antiaircraft regiments in the United States should be Regular Army organizations. If that be true, then 12 of the 19 remaining to be organized to complete the 34 in the present program should be manned by Regular Army soldiers and the other 7 should be National Guard.

Not a basis for my contention, but as a matter of interest, I would like to quote from a recent issue of a British publication. Under the heading of "Guarding London" appears the following:

> It is of vast relief to know that the A. A. defense of London has been strengthened by the addition of two regular regiments of antiaircraft artillery, withdrawn from Lichfield. There will now be permanent watchers of our air frontier in that locality, and no form of surprise attack can now find us completely off guard. However well trained and eager the territorial A. A. divisions are, and however well equipped, they consist of citizens who are engaged in normal avocations and who cannot drop the tools of their employment to man the guns and such like in the twinkling of an eye.
> But it is in the very nature of air attack that it can come with the suddenness of a chimney gust as a preliminary to the gale which follows on, and for our sky to be unguarded at the moment might augur ill for the city which lies below. Every frontier has its frontier posts, always armed and at the ready, so why should our own air frontier be different?

In the last issue of the magazine Army Ordnance there was a timely article written by an instructor at the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Maj. T. R. Phillips. In the article are quoted notes made by General Mordacq while he was military adviser to Prime Minister Clemenceau. It appears that M. Clemenceau preferred to use planes for local defense rather than antiaircraft artillery. The general finally convinced him of his error. In one of the latter paragraphs of the article the author writes:

> In my opinion, the erroneous conception of antiaircraft defense against which General Mordacq fought so vigorously, still prevails in the United States. But where General Mordacq had one man to convince of the error of his conceptions we have a nation to educate.

This, my first contribution to that education, I recognize as small. But I believe it important for us to think along these lines. [Applause.]

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent leave of absence was granted to Mr. JACOBSON, for 5 days, on account of official business.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

TUESDAY, APRIL 18, 1939

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

We thank Thee, O Lord God, for the glimpse of eternal and unwearied love that peers forth from the shadow of the cross; enable us to give to Thee our unwavering love and heart's devotion. Stir the divinity within us that we may be true to ourselves, to our fellow men, and true to our Heavenly Father. O Spirit of light and truth, teach us Thy holy way in all wisdom; inspire us with that heroism which is the most heroic. Do Thou be with us in every disappointment, enlighten us in every shadow, and know us in every darkness. Heavenly Father, be with our President day by day. Grant that his appeal for peace among all nations, couched in such a human passion, may be felt around the world. Oh, may all problems be met, answered, and solved so that the night of fear shall roll away and peace break on all lands in its full glory. Oh, come, Prince of Peace, and may Thy broken heart heal the breaking heart of the whole human family. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a joint resolution of the House of the following title:

H. J. Res. 224. Joint resolution to authorize the painting of the signing of the Constitution for placement in the Capitol Building.

The message also announced that the Senate had ordered that the Secretary be directed to request the House to return to the Senate the bill (S. 1871) entitled "An act to prevent pernicious political activities."

The message also announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments, in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 4852. An act making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments, in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 5219. An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the foregoing bill, requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. ADAMS, Mr. GLASS, Mr. MCKELLAR, Mr. HAYDEN, Mr. BYRNES, Mr. HALE, and Mr. TOWNSEND to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Vice President had appointed Mr. BARKLEY and Mr. GIBSON members of the joint select committee on the part of the Senate, as provided for in the act of February 16, 1889, as amended by the act of March 2, 1895, entitled "An act to authorize and provide for the disposition of useless papers in the executive departments," for the disposition of executive papers in the following departments and agencies:

Department of Agriculture.
Department of the Interior.
Department of the Treasury.
Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.
The National Archives.
The Tennessee Valley Authority.
Works Progress Administration.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. REED of New York. Mr. Speaker, I also ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting a speech delivered by Mr. J. Edgar Hoover on the Cost of Crime.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

MRS. OTELIA COMPTON

Mr. SECCOMBE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute and to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SECCOMBE. Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure, as well as a privilege and an honor, to have the American mothers' national committee of the Golden Rule Foundation of New York announce a few days ago that Mrs. Otelia Compton, 80 years of age, of Wooster, Ohio, has been selected as the 1939 "American mother." Therefore, as the Congressman from that district, I am both happy and proud to have this distinction come to such a wonderful mother, and unsolicited. Mrs. Compton has an outstanding record as a successful mother, and the choice of this American mother is based on the following factors:

An outstanding record as a successful mother, a standard not fixed by the size of her family but by the character, personality, and achievements of her individual children.

Embodiment of those traits most highly regarded in mothers: Courage, moral strength, patience, affection, kindness, understanding, and home-making ability.

Ability to make friends readily and to meet people easily.

A sense of social and world relationship that has caused her to find time outside her home for civic service.

Mrs. Compton's distinguished sons and daughter are:

Prof. Arthur H. Compton, of the University of Chicago, 1927 winner of the Nobel prize for physics.

Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Wilson M. Compton, lawyer-economist and general manager of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association.

Mrs. Mary Rice, wife of Dr. C. Herbert Rice, principal of Christian College at Allahabad, India, and herself a Presbyterian missionary.

The four children have a total of 31 college and university degrees.

Her husband was the late Elias Compton, who taught philosophy at Wooster College for 41 years.

This great American mother has an honorary doctor of laws degree from Western College for Women "for outstanding achievement as wife and mother of Comptons."

I am positive that the Congress of the United States as well as the entire United States Government join with me in paying tribute to Mrs. Compton for having achieved this high honor, and in her many recent interviews Mrs. Compton has stated that if every man in high position would talk less about war and about this great Government of ours becoming involved in foreign entanglements and give more thought to those in need and the millions of unemployed, this would be a more peaceful and restful country in which to live and raise our children. Therefore may I say to my colleagues that I am positive that this is the spirit of every American mother today as expressed by Mrs. Compton, that "America does not want war." I think this would be sound advice to go by for my colleagues, both in the House and in the Senate, and I am certain should be the feelings of the President of the United States. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. THILL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an editorial from the Milwaukee Journal of April 13, 1939, entitled "Who's War Will It Be?"

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

HISSING IN HOUSE GALLERY

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I have just sent the following telegram to Mr. Lowell Thomas, which is self-explanatory:

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 18, 1939.

LOWELL THOMAS, Esq.,
Rockefeller Center, New York, N. Y.:

As one of your radio fans and admirers I was much amused at your statement last night that my criticism of the President's foreign policy had been extensively hissed in the House gallery. One reporter wrote this up as a sensational story. It is a perversion of the facts, utterly false, and typical of the war hysteria that is sweeping the country. A Communist, crackpot, or other fanatic hissed, which few Members of the House even heard. I would appreciate it if you would in your radio talk tonight read this telegram to show what can happen in these days of war propaganda and hysteria. As for me, I do not propose to give or ask any quarter in my efforts to keep our country out of war. I shall continue the fight both in the Congress and elsewhere to oppose all warmongers and to keep America out of foreign entanglements, military alliances, and foreign wars.

HAMILTON FISH.

SECOND DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 5219) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 5219, which the Clerk will report by title, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk reported the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Chair appointed the following conferees: Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado, Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia, Mr. CANNON of Missouri, Mr. LUDLOW, Mr. THOMAS S. MCMILLAN, Mr. SNYDER, Mr. O'NEAL, Mr. JOHNSON of West Virginia, Mr. TABER, Mr. WIGGLESWORTH, Mr. LAMBERTSON, and Mr. DITTER.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL, 1940

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 4852, making appropriations for the Department of the Interior, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference requested by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Colorado asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 4852, the Interior Department appropriation bill, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk reported the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. There are some very large items of increase in this bill that should be kept down. There is one item of $13,000,000, I understand, new money, as I remember. I wonder if it would be possible to have an understanding that the House conferees will not agree to that item.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I shall answer the gentleman by saying that I shall ask to have appointed as conferees all of the members of the Subcommittee on Interior Department Appropriations; that those members are very much inclined toward economy, and I assume that they will continue that attitude. I cannot promise what they will do.

Mr. TABER. I would hope that if this bill goes to conference that large item of increase, $13,000,000, will be brought back for a separate vote.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. There is no separate item of $13,000,000. There are two $5,000,000 items and some other large items of lesser amounts.

Mr. TABER. Those items should all be brought back, in my opinion, for a separate vote. I shall not ask that as a condition, but I do think that should be done before the House agrees to anything of that kind.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

The Chair appointed the following conferees: Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado, Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma, Mr. SCRUGHAM, Mr. FITZPATRICK, Mr. LEAVY, Mr. RICH, Mr. CARTER, and Mr. WHITE of Ohio.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. GILLIE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and include therein an editorial from the Fort Wayne News-Sentinel on neutrality.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, this is an editorial from what paper?

Mr. GILLIE. The Fort Wayne News-Sentinel.

Mr. RANKIN. On what subject?

Mr. GILLIE. On neutrality.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. GRANT of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and include therein an editorial from the South Bend Tribune.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, including an editorial from what paper?

Mr. GRANT of Indiana. The South Bend Tribune.

Mr. RANKIN. On what subject?

Mr. GRANT of Indiana. On W. P. A. administration.

Mr. RANKIN. I have no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

THE N. L. R. A. SHOULD BE REPEALED—PARTS OF IT, WITH ADDITIONS, REENACTED

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD at this point.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOFFMAN. Mr. Speaker, it is my contention that the N. L. R. A. should be repealed because it is unfair to the employer; that only a few of the very large corporations, only one of the individual employers—Ford—are able financially to resist assaults by a powerful labor organization, aided by the Board; that many employers can be either financially ruined or coerced into collective-bargaining contracts by complaints filed by the Board. But that, to a still greater extent, the individual employee is at the mercy of labor organizations and the N. L. R. B.

Therefore my sympathies are primarily with the underdog, the employee, who needs protection not only against the employer who would treat him unjustly but protection from the labor organization, the labor organizer, who uses the law and the Board to collect tribute in the way of membership fees, dues, or special assessments for services neither rendered nor, if rendered, desired.

REASONS FOR REPEAL

It is my contention that the present National Labor Relations Act should be repealed in order that the Government may dispense with the services of the present personnel which has been attempting to interpret and enforce the act—this because the present personnel charged with the enforcement of the act has been so widely criticized that, whether this criticism be justified or not, there will be a lack of confidence in any decisions that the Board may make.

Decisions of a court, a semijudicial body, or an administrative board in which the public generally has no confidence will not tend either to establish authoritative precedents, invite appeal to its jurisdiction, or promote peace in those groups affected by the law which it is administering.

President Green, representative of some 3,000,000 employees, recently wrote:

> Through decisions clearly in favor of the C. I. O. and against the American Federation of Labor, the Board is working out the destruction of the American Federation of Labor. We do not ask the Board to favor the American Federation of Labor in any decisions rendered. All we have asked is that it be fair and just in its administration of the act and that it apply the act in a judicious way.

PARTS OF THE PRESENT LAW, WITH ADDITIONS, SHOULD BE REENACTED

So much of the present law as has been found to tend toward the accomplishment of the purpose for which it was enacted should be reenacted, with such additions as experience has demonstrated to be necessary to accomplish the original purpose of the act.

FOUNDATION OF ARGUMENT

The argument here presented rests upon the assumption that, to justify its existence, any act of Congress must be fair to all those who are affected by it; that it tend to accomplish the purpose for which it was enacted; that it should not destroy the right of free speech or a free press; that by it no person should be deprived of his liberty or of his property without due process of law.

DEFECTS OF THE PRESENT LAW

It is my contention:

First. That the act is unfair.

Second. That the act does not insure that employees may bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing.

Third. That the act, as interpreted by the Board, deprives individuals of free speech and a free press.

Fourth. That the act, as interpreted and enforced by the Board, deprives the citizen of his liberty and of his property in violation of the fifth amendment.

Fifth. Upon the reenactment of the N. L. R. A. there should be incorporated within its terms the interpretations placed upon the present act by the Supreme Court, insofar as the same will aid in furthering the purpose of the act or in clarifying its terms, including, among others, the following:

(a) A provision that those engaging in sit-down strikes and the unlawful destruction of property lose their status as employees and need not be reemployed nor compensated for wages not earned after the commission of such acts (N. L. R. B. v. Fansteel Metallurgical Corp., decided February 27, 1939, 83 U. S. (L. Ed.), 469).

(b) A provision that, when the employer and the employees' representatives have negotiated for a reasonable length of time, or where the positions of the parties are so diametrically opposed that there appears to be no reasonable hope of a compromise, the requirement as to collective bargaining has been satisfied (N. L. R. B. v. Columbian Enameling & Stamping Co., decided February 27, 1938, 83 U. S. (L. Ed.) 480; N. L. R. B. v. Sands Mfg. Co., decided February 27, 1939, 83 U. S. (L. Ed.) 488).

(c) A provision that the Board has no authority to inflict a punitive penalty upon the employer, except as that penalty is explicitly defined and imposed by the language of the act itself (Consolidated Edison Co. v. N. L. R. B., decided December 5, 1938, 83 U. S. (L. Ed.) 131; 305 U. S. 197).

(d) A provision that the Board has no authority to invalidate a contract entered into between an employer and representatives for collective bargaining selected by a majority of the employees (Consolidated Edison Co. v. N. L. R. B., decided December 5, 1938, 83 U. S. (L. Ed.) 131; 305 U. S. 197).

(e) That findings of fact by the Board will not be sustained unless they are supported by "evidence which is substantial, that is, affording a substantial basis of fact from which the fact in issue can be reasonably inferred" (N. L. R. B. v. Columbian Enameling & Stamping Co., decided February 27, 1939, 83 U. S. (L. Ed.) 480; Consolidated Edison Co. v. N. L. R. B., decided December 5, 1938, 83 U. S. (L. Ed.) 131; 305 U. S. 197).

(f) There should also be a provision, although the Supreme Court has not passed upon this proposition, that the unit from which representatives for collective bargaining are to be selected should be limited to one employer in one locality and shall be embraced within the limits of the municipal corporation in which the employees are working.

1. THE ACT IS UNFAIR

The act is unfair in that while its purpose is declared to be to lessen the causes of labor disputes affecting or burdening interstate or foreign commerce, and that while there can be no such disputes without opposing parties or interests, the act itself seeks only to further the interests of one of the disputants, in this case only those employees favored by the Board. This is shown by the fact that it in no instance defines or punishes or attempts to prevent any unfair labor practice on the part of an employee, labor organizer, or union official.

It does not prevent an employee or a labor organizer, a union official, or a union from making, either by speech or in writing, unfair, untrue statements, harmful to the employer and to other employees and other labor organizations, prior to or during the progress of a labor dispute.

The act, as interpreted by the Board, declares it to be an unfair labor practice for an employer to give any advice whatsoever to an employee as to the advisability of joining or not joining a labor organization.

It does not prevent one of the disputants speaking freely, truthfully, or falsely about the other, while, as interpreted, it punishes the other disputant for making any statement, no matter how truthful, about his adversary.

It prohibits coercion, intimidation, on the part of the employer. It does not prevent like practices by employees, union organizers, union officials, or unions.

The act is unfair in that it permits the Board to make orders, decisions, and certificates harmful to the employer, and on occasion to some employees, in representation cases, which are in their effect final, but which are not so regarded by the courts and from which there is no appeal (Harris v. National Labor Relations Board, 100 Fed. (2d) 197, decided by the Supreme Court on February 27, 1939, 59 S. C. R. 584; American Federation of Labor et al. v. National Labor Relations Board, decided by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia on Feb. 27, 1939).

The act is unfair in that it permits the Board to make orders in complaint cases which are harmful to the employer and which may on occasion accomplish the desired result and from which there is no appeal, for the reason that no application is made by the Board to the court for their enforcement (Harris v. National Labor Relations Board, 100 Fed. (2d) 197, decided by the Supreme Court on Feb. 27, 1939, 59 S. C. R. 584).

An illustration of this is found where the Board makes an order requiring the employer to refuse further recognition to a particular union.

The act is unfair in that it permits the Board to subject an employer unnecessarily to costly litigation.

If a final order be made in a complaint case and the Board appeals to the court for an enforcement of that order, or if the employer or a person intervening appeals to the court for the modification or the vacation of such final order, the Board may then withdraw its final order and proceed anew, and employer and any intervening parties may again be subjected to another hearing (In re National Labor Relations Board (Republic), 304 U. S. 486; Ford Motor Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 83 U. S. (Law Ed.) 229; 59 U. S. S. C. 80).

Nor has the Court as yet decided how many times the Board may vacate its final order when the validity of that order is challenged in court. It will be interesting to learn just how long this procedure of vacating final orders after a long period of time, during which employer, employees, and union have been at the mercy of the Board, can be continued.

The practice of permitting the Board to make a final order, to ask for its enforcement in the circuit court of appeals, and then to permit the vacation of that order which it had made, permit the Board to proceed anew and, for all that we know at this time, make another final order, again ask for its enforcement, and again, when challenged in the court, once more ask that the order be vacated, will eventually tax the patience of the people if not of the courts.

The courts are not responsible for that provision of the law which permits such practice. We here in Congress are.

The act is unfair in that it permits the Board to make an order which is not a final order and from which there is no appeal, but which forces the employees to bargain collectively through representatives not of their own choosing. An illustration of this is found where the Board, with or without coercion, induces the employer to enter into an agreement which is either a collective-bargaining agreement or which designates the representatives for collective bargaining (Harris v. National Labor Relations Board, 100 Fed. (2d) 197; 59 S. C. R. 584).

That the act is unfair and tends to defeat the purpose for which it was enacted is evidenced by the statement of Joseph A. Padway, general counsel for the American Federation of Labor, who, in arguing the case of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers in the Supreme Court on October 17, 1938, said:

> One would imagine by the position taken by the Board that section 7 was an absolute guaranty to all employees to self-organization. One would imagine that every employee under section 7 has the absolute right to freedom of choice in respect to representatives for the purpose of collective bargaining. Nothing can be further from the truth.

That the act is unfair is further evidenced by the testimony of one of its sponsors. Quite recently the A. F. of L. issued an official statement, in which, after stating—

> The American Federation of Labor is the friend of the National Labor Relations Act. We sponsored it in the beginning. We helped draft it. We contributed largely toward its enactment into law. It was really an American Federation of Labor measure, a primary part of our legislative program—called upon the Members of Congress to stand by that organization in obtaining an amendment of the law, because the law, as interpreted by the Board and the courts, was being used to destroy the rights of the employees represented by the A. F. of L.

Specific instances of the unfair results which have occurred because of the enforcement of the law will be found in an article by William Green, published in the issue of Liberty dated March 18, 1939.

It is my judgment that the unfair provisions of the act, of which the A. F. of L. complains, will be remedied by the repeal of the act and the enactment of H. R. 4990.

2. THE ACT DOES NOT INSURE THAT EMPLOYEES MAY BARGAIN COLLECTIVELY THROUGH REPRESENTATIVES OF THEIR OWN CHOOSING

One of the methods employed by the act to diminish the causes of labor disputes affecting or burdening interstate or foreign commerce was to declare by section 7:

> Employees shall have the right * * * to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing.

That such is not the result of the act, let me again quote the statement of Mr. Padway:

> One would imagine by the position taken by the Board that section 7 was an absolute guaranty to all employees to self-organization. One would imagine that every employee under section 7 has the absolute right to freedom of choice in respect to representatives for the purpose of collective bargaining. Nothing can be further from the truth.

Representing as he does the organization which, in turn, represents between three and four million employees; having as he has had, a wide experience in labor litigation; knowing as he does the practical workings of the act; familiar as he is with the decisions of the Board; and being a lawyer of ability whose integrity has never been questioned, his testimony should be entitled to great weight.

Decisions of the circuit courts of appeals and of the United States Supreme Court show conclusively that employees can be deprived of bargaining collectively through representatives of their own choosing.

Representatives for collective bargaining are selected under section 9 of the act, which gives the Board authority to designate the unit, or, more accurately speaking, the election district, in which such representatives are to be chosen, and permits the Board to hold elections or to "otherwise" determine those who have been selected as representatives for collective bargaining in such unit or election district.

Cases arising under this section of the statute are known as representation cases. Under this section, the Board may make orders, findings, issue certificates, determining the election precinct or district and designating or certifying who was elected in those districts as collective bargaining representatives.

From the orders, findings, or certifications so made by the Board under this section there is no appeal, for the reason that such order, finding, or certification is not a "final order" (Combustion Engineering Co., Inc., v. National Labor Relations Board, 95 Fed. (2d) 996; United Employees Association v. National Labor Relations Board, 96 Fed. (2d) 875; New York Handkerchief Co. v. National Labor Relations Board, 97 Fed. (2d) 1010; Unlicensed Employees Collective Bargaining Agency of the Marine Department of Sabine Transportation Co. of Dover, Del., Inc., v. National Labor Relations Board, decided Nov. 12, 1937, by Circuit Court of Appeals, Fifth Circuit (unreported); Commercial Telegraphers Union v. J. Warren Madden et al., decided Nov. 18, 1937, by Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia (unreported), Supreme Court decision on Dec. 6, 1937, 302 U. S. 654; American Federation of Labor, International Longshoremen's Association, and Pacific Coast District International Longshoremen's Association No. 38 v. National Labor Relations Board, decided Feb. 27, 1939, by Circuit Court of Appeals for District of Columbia; Harris v. National Labor Relations Board, 100 Fed. (2d) 197, certiorari denied, U. S. Sup. Ct., Feb 27, 1939, 59 S. C. R. 584).

This being the situation, the Board may arbitrarily make a finding that the election for representatives for collective bargaining shall take place in a certain area; be held in certain units, either plant, craft, or employer.

The election having been held, the Board may, and has in at least one case which reached the Supreme Court, disregard the result of that election.

The Board has been able to deprive the members of an independent union which represented the majority in a unit designated by it of the right guaranteed by section 7.

In the Harris case, the Board designated as the bargaining unit for the employees of the American Cyanamid Co., which had two plants at Bound Brook, N. J., the employees of both plants, although in one plant—that of the Calco Chemical Co.—there were employees belonging to the Calcocraft and to an A. F. of L. affiliate, while in the other plant the employees were members of the A. F. of L.

The election, held in both plants, resulted in a majority of the employees in both plants declaring in favor of the Calcocraft union as the bargaining agent. Nevertheless, the Board continued in force the agreement of settlement with the A. F. of L. affiliate and the employer, by virtue of which the Board issued an order requiring the Calco Chemical Co. to withdraw recognition from the Calcocraft union, which represented a majority in the Calco Chemical Co., a majority in both plants, and to bargain collectively as to the employees of both plants with the A. F. of L.

The result of this decision was that a majority of the employees in the Calco Chemical Co. were deprived of their right to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing.

An appeal to the circuit court of appeals and later to the Supreme Court of the United States upheld the right of the Board on the theory that no "final order" having been made the Court was without jurisdiction to review the action of the Board (Harris v. N. L. R. B., 100 Fed. (2d) 197; 59 S. C. R. 584).

On the west coast the Board designated as the bargaining unit or election precinct all that territory extending from Canada on the north to Mexico on the south. It included in this one unit the ports of Portland, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and 25 smaller ports. "The decision united in 1 unit some 200 or more employers" and the Board "found that C. I. O. organizations represented a majority of the employees of the whole."

The employers accepted the certification without question and made a collective bargaining contract in which the C. I. O. was recognized as the exclusive representative of all west coast longshore employees.

A petition for rehearing by the A. F. of L. affiliates having been denied, that organization appealed to the court, the substance of the claim being, as stated by the court:

> In ascertaining the appropriate representative of the men the Board ignored the identity of separate employers or of separate ports and extended the employer unit to include the entire Pacific coast, with the result that the rival union was designated and certified as the sole representative, in consequence of which its own union was "put out of business" and its members obliged to become members of its rival and deal with the employer either exclusively through it or not at all. In short, that by reason of the Board's decision to enlarge the "unit" to embrace about 25 separate ports and the acceptance of its decision by the employers, a situation has arisen as the result of which a so-called closed-shop contract may be entered into which will require petitioner's members, even where they predominate in a particular locality or business, to join the other union or possibly be displaced from their employment by members of that union.

In holding that it had no jurisdiction, the court said:

> So that what happened was precisely what in a proper case the act designed should happen, but, as we have seen, with the result that petitioner, in the localities in which its members constituted a majority, was, if the Board's decision as to the representative unit is valid, deprived of the very thing which petitioner insists it was the purpose of Congress to secure and protect (American Federation of Labor et al. v. National Labor Relations Board, decided Feb. 27, 1939, by Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia).

3. THE ACT, AS INTERPRETED BY THE BOARD, DEPRIVES INDIVIDUALS OF THE RIGHT OF FREE SPEECH AND A FREE PRESS

The first amendment to the Constitution provides that—

> Congress shall make no law * * * abridging the freedom of speech or of the press.

On the 8th of April 1937, Richard Frankensteen, a C. I. O. organizer, perhaps relying upon this constitutional guaranty, made the statement in Detroit:

> Henry (meaning Ford) will either recognize the union or he won't build automobiles.

About the same time John L. Lewis, according to the public press, said, with reference to Ford recognizing the union:

> Henry Ford will change his mind or he won't build cars.

The Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of DeYoung v. Oregon (299 U. S. R. 353), held that the Communist, under this amendment, had the right to speak freely and to write freely his thoughts advocating the overthrow of our Government—the legislative, the executive, and the judicial branches thereof.

The Labor Board, however, in a case against Henry Ford, held that he was guilty of an unfair labor practice when he advised his employees in substance that they need not join any union in order to obtain or hold a job with the Ford Motor Co.

It seems that it was proper for Frankensteen and Lewis to announce publicly and through the press that Ford could not conduct his business unless he recognized the C. I. O., while Mr. Ford is denied the right guaranteed by the first amendment of informing his employees that, in order to work in the Ford Motor Co., they need not pay tribute to Lewis or his organization.

The case in which Mr. Ford was convicted of this unfair labor practice was appealed, and later the Board was permitted, through a decision of the United States Supreme Court, to withdraw its decision for the purpose of taking further proceedings.

Further proceedings were had and it was found that all of the charges of unfair labor practice against Mr. Ford and the Ford Motor Co. were without foundation, except the one relating to section 8 (1) of the act. This charge was that the Ford Motor Co. had made available to its employees at the Chicago plant certain pamphlets which contained an expression of the respondent's attitude toward union activities and its employees' membership therein.

This charge, if sustained, denies to the Ford Motor Co. and to Henry Ford the right given to Communists and apparently to all others who do not fall within the provisions of the N. L. R. A.—the right to freely speak and write their thoughts.

The original decision of the Board finding Mr. Ford or the Ford Motor Co. guilty of an unfair labor practice was in direct conflict with the doctrine laid down in National Labor Relations Board v. Union Pacific Stages (99 Fed. (2d) 153).

Nevertheless, after the withdrawal of its original order, the trial examiner, who certainly must know the attitude of the Board, again found the company guilty of an unfair labor practice because it had circulated the pamphlets known as "Fordisms."

It is somewhat ironical that in this same case the U. A. W. A., in its issue of Saturday, June 5, 1937, printed a cartoon depicting Henry Ford as a Hitler, with a pistol within range; that, on the first page of the Wednesday, August 11, 1937, issue of the United Automobile Workers' newspaper, it printed another cartoon, showing a convict escaping from prison and calling to a motorist, "Quick, Buddy; Henry wants me."

The Board has one rule for Ford and the Ford Motor Co.; another for the U. A. W. A., which would coerce workers into joining the U. A. W. A.

In the case of the National Motor Bearing Co., Inc., of Oakland, Calif., it was held that, where a foreman secured from the public records photostatic copies of the registration papers showing that one of the organizers for the C. I. O. was a Communist, and circulated them among other employees, the employer was guilty of an unfair labor practice. This decision denied to the foreman, to the company, the right to inform fellow employees of the character of the man who was attempting to induce them to join the organization which he represented.

On the 1st day of June 1937, it was my privilege, notwithstanding the fact that the N. L. R. A. was in force and the N. L. R. B. was functioning, to speak in the hall of the House of Representatives concerning communistic activities within the C. I. O. organization. That speech was afterward reprinted and illustrated by the Constitutional Educational League.

In the Muskin Shoe Co. case (No. VC 141), of Westminster, Md., the Board held that the circulation of the republication of this speech, with illustrations, by an employee on company time and company property was an unfair labor practice on the part of the employer—a denial of the right of free speech.

A finding was made by Trial Examiner Hugh C. McCarthy in his intermediate report dated June 24, 1938, in the proceedings pending before the National Labor Relations Board, seventh region, in the matter of Cooper, Wells & Co. and American Federation of Hosiery Workers. Paragraph 14 of the findings contained this statement:

> The witness, Felton Dobbs, testified that the general chairman of the independent group distributed throughout the mill a booklet, which was introduced in evidence, entitled "Communism's Iron Grip on the C. I. O."

The introduction of this booklet was objected to by the company's attorney for the reasons, among others, that it not only had no bearing on the issue involved in the hearing but that it nowhere appeared that there was any connection between the respondent company, or any of its officers or employees, and the writer of the speech.

Under the previous holding of the Board the circulation of the speech by an employee was an unfair labor practice.

The Board has repeatedly held that the employer has no right to express his views to his employees as to the merits of any particular labor organization or as to the advisability of joining or not joining such an organization.

Some idea of the views of Mr. Madden, Chairman of the Board, on the right of an employer to advise an employee will be found by reference to pages 1575 and 1576 of the subcommittee hearings on H. R. 7343. Mr. Madden was asked, in substance, if an employee went to an employer and attempted to discuss organization activities, the formation of a union, or to seek advice as to affiliation with any labor organization, or whether he should join one union or another, what position the employer should take. Mr. Madden replied:

> I have no doubt whatever as to what I would advise an employer to do in those circumstances. I would advise him simply to say to his man—and you will note Mr. Madden says "his man," not "the employee" or "the worker"—"I'm sorry, but the spirit of this law asks me to keep my hands off your organization affairs."

Even though an employer and an employee have grown old with the business; even though they may have been friends for 30 or 40 years, each dependent upon the other for his failure or his success in life, the employer must remain silent on what may on occasion be a most vital question affecting the future of both.

If the employer has no right to express his views as to any labor organization to an employee, he certainly has no right to advise an employee that he shall not circulate a speech made in Congress, a pamphlet or a news item which reflects upon a certain organization.

How then, this being true, can the employer prevent an employee, who desires to make the employer guilty of an unfair labor practice, from accomplishing that purpose by circulating a speech antagonistic to a union which is endeavoring to organize the employees in that particular plant?

Under the Muskin Shoe Co. and the Cooper, Wells & Co. cases, if the employee circulates such a speech on company time, on company property, the employer is guilty of an unfair labor practice. If the employer forbids such circulation, the employer is guilty of an unfair labor practice because he has interfered with the right of the employees freely to join a labor organization.

So construed, the act is in violation of the first amendment. Followed logically to the end, what would be the ruling if, in a strife-torn city like Flint, Mich., where a strike was in progress; where there were threats, coercion, intimidation, and violence, a minister, whose salary was paid in part by the employer, arose in his pulpit on the Sabbath Day and, in prayer, asked that God protect the city from the lawless acts of those who had invaded it?

Following the reasoning in the three cases above cited, the employer who contributed to the upkeep of the church, to the payment of the minister's salary, would be held guilty of an unfair labor practice if the minister told a congregation of employees that the intimidation, the violence, the rioting, the civil strife was wrong, and asked God's help in ending it.

Absurd, you say? But reason it out for yourself.

Certainly, under the above decisions, no employer could escape conviction of an unfair labor practice if he asked, in a paid advertisement of his daily newspaper, for the support of citizens who were opposed to lawlessness brought to their community by invading pickets.

The decisions of the Board and of the examiners are absurdities.

4. THE ACT, AS INTERPRETED, DEPRIVES THE CITIZEN OF HIS LIBERTY AND OF HIS PROPERTY WITHOUT DUE PROCESS OF LAW, IN VIOLATION OF THE FIFTH AMENDMENT

The denial of the citizen's right to work is a denial of his liberty. As the worker earns his bread by his daily toil, the denial of his right to work is a deprivation of his property.

As a union has the right to enter into a contract with its members, obligating them to pay membership fees, dues, and special assessments to it, it is privileged to create a contract, and a contract is a property right.

By the act, as interpreted by the Board, members of one union, employees, as has been pointed out in the Harris case and in the American Federation of Labor Longshoremen's case, were deprived of their right to work unless they paid membership fees and dues to a rival union.

In the Harris case, this interpretation of the law was upheld by the Supreme Court, that Court ignoring entirely the claim that, as so interpreted, the act was unconstitutional.

In the Longshoremen's case, the Circuit Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia held that the A. F. of L. contracts with its members might be destroyed by the Wagner Act, in conjunction with the Norris-LaGuardia Act, that there was no remedy under the Wagner Act and that the remedy was by an independent suit in equity.

Two other cases sustain the proposition that, because of the provisions of the N. L. R. A. and the Norris-LaGuardia Act, neither the employer nor the employee can successfully, through the courts, enjoin either employees who belong to a rival or pickets who never worked for that employee, and who do not represent employees working in the plant involved, from depriving employees of their right to work or prevent such pickets from destroying the employer's business.

Where the employer entered into a contract with majority representatives for collective bargaining and a minority, by acts of violence and intimidation, prevented the majority from working, with the result of closing the employer's factory, so that he could not carry out his contracts, the court held that the employer was not entitled to injunctive relief (Lund v. Woodenware W. U., 19 Fed. Supp., 607).

In that case the Court said:

> Plaintiff presumably is correct in his position when he avers that, under the terms of the Wagner Act, he cannot bargain collectively with the representatives of the minority and, if he assumes to do so, he may be guilty of unfair labor practice. But the determination of his course in dealing with his employees is nevertheless not for the courts.
> The difficulty with the assumption of jurisdiction herein on the theory that plaintiff's case arises under the Wagner Act is due to the very apparent fact that the right that the plaintiff seeks to enforce is not created either expressly or impliedly by the Federal statute in question; but by this proceeding he seeks to read into the act certain rights on behalf of the employer to proceed in a court of equity, which Congress studiously refrained from giving to the employer.

In Blankenship v. Kurfman (96 Fed. (2d) 450) the plaintiffs were employees selected by a majority, without employer domination, and were negotiating a contract with the employer. They attempted to work but, as a result of violence and threats by members of a rival union, they abandoned their jobs. Their contract had been negotiated and consummated in accordance with the N. L. R. A.

The Court held, under the authority of New Negro Alliance and other cases, that it was a case involving a labor dispute and the employees were not entitled to protection by injunction. The Court said:

> And we find no provision in the act which can be construed as intending to create rights for employees which can be enforced in Federal courts independently of action by the National Labor Relations Board. Consequently, we hold that the contract in the instant case between the plaintiffs and their employer did not by force of the National Labor Relations Act create a right in the plaintiffs which was secured to them "by the Constitution or laws of the United States." Consequently, the alleged unlawful interference by the defendants with the plaintiffs' contractual rights did not give a cause of action of which a Federal court would have jurisdiction, in the absence of diversity of citizenship.

Both these cases were cited with approval in Fur Workers Union against H. Zirkin & Sons, Inc., decided March 27, 1939.

Union Premier Food Stores v. Retail Food C. & M. Union (98 Fed. (2d) 821) is authority for the proposition that, where an employer agreed to enter into a collective-bargaining agreement with the representatives of four striking picketing unions and a rival union claimed to represent a majority of the employees and invoked action on the part of the National Labor Relations Board, which assumed jurisdiction and filed charges of unfair labor practices, the employer was entitled to an injunction preventing picketing where it was engaged in the selling of perishable commodities and the picketing was destroying the business, the theory of the circuit court of appeals being:

> That no labor dispute was involved in the case since the disputants were the unions, and that it could not be thought that Congress, under the National Labor Relations Act, intended to permit the destruction of the business of an employer who stood ready to obey any orders of the Board under the act when issued.

But since the decision in the Shinner and the New Negro Alliance cases and the decision in the case of Donnelly Garment Co. v. International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union (99 Fed. (2d) 309), regardless of the statement in the Union Premier Food Stores case "that it could not be thought that Congress, under the National Labor Relations Act, intended to permit the destruction of the business of an employer who stood ready to obey any orders of the Board under the act," the destruction of the employer's business is one of the things which the act does not prohibit; and the employer is without remedy in certain cases, unless he can bring himself within the exceptions of the Norris-LaGuardia Act, which in many cases he cannot do.

A still later case decided by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia on the 27th day of March 1939—Fur Workers' Union et al. against Fur Workers' Union No. 21238 and H. Zirkin & Sons, Inc.—is authority for the proposition that unless the employer and the employees can bring themselves within the exceptions required by the Norris-LaGuardia Act, the employees cannot by injunction protect themselves against the destruction of their right to work; the union cannot prevent activities which destroy its source of income; and the employer cannot prevent the loss of his business.

In that case, H. Zirkin & Sons, Inc., had for long been engaged in the business, in the city of Washington, as a retail dealer in ladies' clothing, including fur coats. It employed 11 fur workers. One struck; later he was joined by another, both belonging to a C. I. O. affiliate. The 9 others obtained a charter and became an affiliate of the A. F. of L. and were recognized as exclusive representatives for collective bargaining for all the fur workers then in Zirkin's actual employ.

The two C. I. O. striking employees called to their aid pickets who were not employees. Of the picketing the court said:

> The purpose of the picketing was to coerce Zirkin's and its fur-worker employees to violate the agreement entered into with the appellee union and to cause Zirkin's to rescind its recognition of that union. The persons picketing Zirkin's place of business were disorderly in their conduct, made assaults and attempted assaults upon the fur-worker employees at Zirkin's, intimidated and coerced them by threats of bodily harm, and interfered with customers of Zirkin's while they were entering or leaving the business establishment.

The court, quoting from Lauf v. E. G. Shinner (303 U. S. 323), said:

> The controversy, rather, seems to be a unilateral one with the sole object of coercing appellee to compel its employees to join the appellant union in order that it may represent the employees in their dealings with the employer. Appellants seek to accomplish that result by picketing and damaging the employer's business.

The court further said:

> The argument is that unless injunction can issue in such a situation, the employer may well, for lack of other remedy, see his business destroyed, because neither union may be interested in applying to the National Labor Relations Board for an election and certification, and the employer is not under the present terms of the National Labor Relations Act given a right to invoke the jurisdiction of the Board to investigate and determine by election proceedings the appropriate bargaining unit and the agency reflective of the will of the majority of the employees.
> And it is clear also that in the absence of a remedy for the employer the dispute may proceed indefinitely for lack of an invocation of jurisdiction of the Board by the competing unions.
> It is clear further that in such a situation there is no remedy for the employer under the National Labor Relations Act. That act makes no provision for invocation of the election and certification powers of the Board by an employer. The result is an inequality before the law as between an employer and employees in this particular, namely, that while the employer has a substantive right to carry on his business, he lacks a legal remedy for protecting the same against injury through the struggle of competing unions, even though he be indifferent as to the choice of his employees between them; whereas the employees, in respect of their substantive rights of self-organization and collective bargaining, are afforded a protective remedy under the election and certification powers of the Board.

The argument of hardship "must be addressed to Congress in respect of the possibility of an amendment of the National Labor Relations Act in such manner as will give to employers a right to invoke the jurisdiction of the Board for a settlement of disputes concerning rights of representation."

The Supreme Court has held in Labor Board v. Jones & Laughlin that the onesidedness of the act is a matter of congressional policy which does not invade constitutional limitations.

It is true that the Supreme Court, speaking through Justice Brandeis, in Myers v. Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation (303 U. S. 41, 48, 49) said:

The grant of that exclusive power is constitutional because the act provided for appropriate procedure before the Board, and in the review by the circuit court of appeals an adequate opportunity to secure judicial protection against possible illegal action on the part of the Board. No power to enforce an order is conferred upon the Board. To secure enforcement the Board must apply to a circuit court of appeals for its affirmance. And until the Board's order has been affirmed by the appropriate circuit court of appeals no penalty accrues for disobeying it. The independent right to apply to a circuit court of appeals to have an order set aside is conferred upon any party aggrieved by the proceeding before the Board.

* * * * * * *

The order of the Board is subject to review by the designated court, and only when sustained by the court may the order be enforced. Upon that review all questions of the jurisdiction of the Board and the regularity of its proceedings, all questions of constitutional right or statutory authority, are open to examination by the court.

But this statement must be read with other decisions of that Court in mind and with the decision in American Federation of Labor and others against National Labor Relations Board, decided by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia on February 27, 1939, where the court said:

Accepting, as we must, this restrictive definition (of a final order) and applying it to the case at hand, we hold that, though the decision here was required by the act to be made, and to be made on the evidence and argument after judicial hearing, and though it was definitive, adverse, binding, final, and in this case struck at the very roots of petitioner's union and destroyed its effectiveness in a large geographical area of the Nation, it was not an order, because the act did not require it to be made in the language of command, and hence is reviewable, as was held in Shields case, supra, and in Utah Fuel Co. v. National Bituminous Coal Commission, — U. S. — (decided January 30, 1939), only in an independent suit in equity commenced in a district court.

It is all very well for the Court in this case to say that the order is reviewable, as was held in Shields v. Utah Idaho Central Railway Co. (83 U. S. (L. Ed.), 170), and in Utah Fuel Co. v. National Bituminous Coal Commission (83 U. S. (L. Ed.), 402); but it will be noted that, in the first case, while the Court said, speaking through Chief Justice Hughes, that, while review of the order of the Interstate Commerce Commission might be had in a Federal district court, as the authority to make the order "was validly conferred upon the Commission, the question on judicial review would be simply whether the Commission had acted within its authority"; and the decision in the Utah Fuel Co. case, while holding that the equity jurisdiction of the Federal district court extended to a judicial review through the medium of an injunction of an order of the National Bituminous Coal Commission, it further held that, Congress having granted authority to the Commission, the Commission had the right to provide for the disclosure of confidential information contained in reports required by the act and affirmed the decision of the district court dismissing the bill for an injunction.

If the employees, whose right to work is being denied by mass picketing; if the union, which is being destroyed in the same manner; if the employer, whose business is being wiped out by the picketing, cannot appeal, as they cannot under the N. L. R. A., from an order which is not "final," each will, in many cases, when he seeks the aid of a court of equity, be denied relief, because of the provisions of the Norris-LaGuardia Act and the decisions of the United States Supreme Court in New Negro Alliance v. Grocery Co. (303 U. S. 552), and Lauf v. E. G. Shinner & Co. (303 U. S. 323), on the ground that they cannot bring themselves within the exceptions set forth in that act.

The result is that while the Norris-LaGuardia Act remains in force, while the provisions of the N. L. R. A. remain as they are, an individual employee, a union, an employer may each be deprived of his property, of his liberty.

Three cases showing that this contention is correct are the Zirkin case, the Longshoremen's case, and the Harris case. In each of these cases the courts held that under the Wagner Act there could be no appeal, no review, for the reason that there was no "final order."

If judicial review is sought by an independent suit in equity, as suggested in the Longshoremen's case, the injured party, employee, union, or employer will be met by the argument and by the decisions in the Utah Fuel Co. and Shields cases that, the N. L. R. A. being constitutional (Labor Board v. Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, 301 U. S. 1), Congress having given the N. L. R. B. authority to determine the unit and certify representatives for collective bargaining and the Board having acted within the scope of that authority, its decision must be sustained.

Such must be the result unless the Court is prepared to hold that the N. L. R. A., as so interpreted, is unconstitutional, because, as so interpreted, it is contrary to the fifth amendment.

Fifth. Upon the reenactment of the N. L. R. A., there should be incorporated within its terms the interpretations placed upon the present act by the Supreme Court, insofar as the same will aid in furthering the purpose of the act or in clarifying its terms, including, among others, the following:

(a) A provision that those engaging in sit-down strikes and the unlawful destruction of property lose their status as employees and need not be reemployed nor compensated for wages not earned after the commission of such acts.

(b) A provision that when the employer and the employees' representatives have negotiated for a reasonable length of time, or where the positions of the parties are so diametrically opposed that there appears to be no reasonable hope of a compromise, the requirement as to collective bargaining has been satisfied.

(c) A provision that the Board has no authority to inflict a punitive penalty upon the employer, except as that penalty is explicitly defined and imposed by the language of the act itself.

(d) A provision that the Board has no authority to invalidate a contract entered into between an employer and representatives for collective bargaining selected by a majority of the employees.

(e) That findings of fact by the Board will not be sustained unless they are supported by "evidence which is substantial; that is, affording a substantial basis of fact from which the fact in issue can be reasonably inferred."

(f) There should also be a provision, although the Supreme Court has not passed upon this proposition, that the unit from which representatives for collective bargaining are to be selected should be limited to one employer in one locality and shall be embraced within the limits of the municipal corporation in which the employees are working.

To aid in the purpose, in the lessening of the causes of labor disputes affecting or burdening interstate or foreign commerce, H. R. 4990 has been introduced in the House.

Its passage will in a large measure secure to employees the rights set forth in section 7, protect employers, and in no way injure labor organizations whose sole purpose is to see to it that the worker is at all times made secure from oppression on the part of employer or labor racketeer.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Speaker, on yesterday I asked and was granted unanimous consent to extend my own remarks to include an address by a former Member of this House, Hon. Edward C. Eicher. The Public Printer has informed me that it is a little in excess of that allowed a non-Member of Congress. I ask unanimous consent that I may put that in the RECORD in its entirety, notwithstanding the estimate of the printer.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, let me say to the gentleman that this is a question that must be settled by the Joint Committee on Printing. If it exceeds four pages——

Mr. HOUSTON. It does not exceed four pages.

Mr. RANKIN. Well, what is the objection to it?

Mr. HOUSTON. It is three and a quarter pages; between a third and a quarter over what is allowed a non-Member of Congress.

Mr. RANKIN. Would it be possible to eliminate a portion of it so as to bring it within the rule without having to go to the Joint Committee on Printing?

Mr. HOUSTON. I think it would take the meat out of the speech.

Mr. RANKIN. I will say to the gentleman that I am not going to object, of course, but getting by that Joint Committee on Printing is quite difficult. Unless the gentleman can eliminate certain portions of Mr. Eicher's address, I am afraid he is stymied.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that rule 10 of the Joint Committee on Printing provides that—

> No extraneous matter in excess of two pages in any one instance may be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD by a Member under leave to print or to extend his remarks unless the same is accompanied by an estimate from the Public Printer of the probable cost thereof.

In this instance the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. HOUSTON] has stated that the address of Mr. Eicher will exceed two pages and that he has received an estimate from the Public Printer of the probable cost thereof as required by the rule of the Joint Committee on Printing, so that all that is now necessary is to again secure permission from the House by unanimous consent to print the address in the RECORD.

Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. PACE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and include an article by David L. Babson.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL, 1940

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I was detained at my office, but on coming here I find the Interior Department appropriation bill has been passed by the Senate and a conference has been asked. The Senate has added millions of dollars to that appropriation bill when this Congress has spent now more money than we will receive in taxes in 1940. A dreadful situation; and more appropriation bills to follow. I want to say to the conferees on the part of the House when they go into conference, if they are going to agree to everything the Senators want when they passed that bill without a record vote, without even a copy of the bill in the Senate at the time they were passing the bill——

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to call the attention of the gentleman from Pennsylvania to the fact that under the rules of the House he is not permitted to refer to any action taken in the Senate of the United States.

Mr. RICH. May I continue for 1 minute more?

The SPEAKER. The Chair cannot recognize that request for more than 1 minute at this stage of the proceedings.

Mr. RICH. Has my time expired?

The SPEAKER. Not yet.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to disobey the rules of the House, but I do want the House of Representatives to try to cut down expenses and hold them within our income. If we do not, we are going to wreck this Nation. It is about time the House of Representatives took some action on these expenditures, and I hope the Speaker will help us in trying to do that. [Laughter and applause.]

The one item in that bill that the Senate included I want to speak at length about, and under the privilege of extending my remarks I wish to insert the following:

THE JEFFERSON NATIONAL EXPANSION MEMORIAL IS ONLY A REAL ESTATE UNLOADING SCHEME

Mr. Speaker, I trust the name of democracy and the memory of Thomas Jefferson and the western pioneers will not be stained by an approval of this amendment by the House.

So that the Members may be more fully informed about this proposed memorial, let me introduce the following brief summary of facts:

(1) St. Louis now has a memorial to Thomas Jefferson and the Louisiana Purchase located in beautiful Forest Park, a tract of over 1,300 acres.

(2) The promoters of this second memorial in St. Louis represented the Federal Government had approved the project and the St. Louis plans for the memorial, which were to include museums, lecture halls, a small harbor for pleasure craft, a large underground space for the storage of automobiles, and other recreational facilities. None of these are now contemplated.

(3) The project was represented to the people of St. Louis as having the agreed sanction of the Government and a pledge of $22,500,000 in Federal funds. This later turned up to be not the facts.

(4) The people of St. Louis were given an opportunity to vote bonds for an improved national park or plaza, but not the acquisition and preservation of historic sites. The cost was to be $30,000,000.

(5) The special bond-issue election of September 10, 1935, in St. Louis was backed by the promoters. It was later revealed by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch that fraud existed in each and every ward in which the bond issue carried. There was plenty of ghost voting and ballot-box stuffing.

(6) The only funds available to the project are $6,750,000 allocated from the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of April 8, 1935, by Executive order and $2,250,000 contributed by the city of St. Louis, proceeds of bonds issued and sold in the face of fraud and corruption.

(7) The appellate court of the District of Columbia has held in the case of Franklin Township, N. J. v. Tugwell et al. (No. 6619, May 18, 1936) the act of 1935 constituted an unlawful delegation of powers to the President and was unconstitutional. This decision has not been challenged.

(8) This project is now being carried forward under the provisions of the Historic Sites Act of August 21, 1935, by the National Park Service. There has never been a congressional appropriation for it. Neither has the Congress authorized the acceptance of the contribution of $2,250,000 proceeds from the sale of the tainted bonds, which was made by the city of St. Louis.

(9) The historic sites named by the President were: The Spanish Colonial Office; the Government House; Old French Cathedral of St. Louis; place where Laclede and Chouteau established the first civil government west of the Mississippi River; the place where Lafayette was received by a grateful people; the place where the Santa Fe, the Oregon, and other trails originated; the place where Lewis and Clark prepared for their trip of discovery and exploration; the courthouse in which the Dred Scott case was tried.

(10) The real facts about these sites are:

The Spanish Colonial House and the Government House were one and the same, and have long since been torn down and removed from the original site, which is now occupied by a printing plant.

The old French Cathedral of St. Louis is still standing, but cannot be acquired under the provisions of the Historic Sites Act.

The place where Laclede and Chouteau established the first civil government is on the levee in St. Louis, now public property and incapable of being exactly located.

The place where Lafayette was received by a grateful people is also on the levee, and incapable of being improved in any manner whatsoever to show that Lafayette had anything more to do with the making of history there than did Pontiac or hundreds of famous Indian chiefs. Pontiac went to his death in Cahokia across the river from St. Louis.

The Santa Fe trail originated near the site of Old Franklin, Mo., where the steamboat Independence ran aground on a sandbar in 1821. The traders were forced to abandon the river and continue overland to Independence and Westport—near what is now Kansas City, Mo. Old Franklin is 150 miles from St. Louis.

The Oregon Trail and the Pony Express originated and started from St. Joseph, Mo., which is 260 miles from St. Louis.

Lewis and Clark prepared for their expedition and departed on their journey from River DuBois, now Wood River, Ill. This fact is revealed by the journal of Floyd in the Library of Congress.

The courthouse where the Dred Scott decision was handed down is on grounds donated perpetually for court purposes. The building is in almost irreparable state. The city of St. Louis is asking the Federal Government to shoulder the burden of their own neglect.

Mr. Speaker, the river-front area in St. Louis is not entirely a slum area. Not over 50 persons reside there. The area is mostly devoted to commercial and industrial uses. At the time this promotion started there were two concerns operating in the area that had commercial ratings of over a million dollars. In 1935, according to a survey conducted by the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, the buildings in the area were occupied by 290 separate firms, who did an annual business exceeding $60,000,000. Of these firms, 134 had a total capital investment of $12,610,500. Does the House believe it a contribution to relief or recovery—yes, of economy—to force these firms to move? And I am advised that several will move from St. Louis forever when that day comes.

Now, one added word about the election frauds in St. Louis. In 1936 the St. Louis Post-Dispatch was awarded the Pulitzer Prize in journalism for their exposures of the corruption which existed there. These exposures showed the Dickmann machine in St. Louis were closely following the pattern of the Pendergast machine in Kansas City. More than 46,000 ghost voters were found to have in some mysterious manner gotten on the poll registers. Ballot boxes were stuffed, names were forged on the precinct poll lists, and other irregularities took place. The corruption has never been denied by any St. Louisan. It is accepted as the inevitable result there of the Dickmann machine.

Mr. Speaker, there is something more important than the $6,750,000 carried in this amendment to be considered—that is a principle. This amendment should not be approved. If the House does approve it, it will undoubtedly be interpreted by the people of the entire country as an approval of Pendergastism, Dickmannism, and machine politics at its worst. Let us have courage to halt this iniquitous scheme and allow the memory of the fraud and corruption behind this St. Louis bond-issue election to fade out with the memorial in the eternal shadows.

Mr. Speaker, there may be some who will defend this memorial on the assumption it is a work-relief project.

Permit me to assure you that such is not possible with the funds that have been contributed and allocated for the project so far. Appraisers working under authority of the district court in St. Louis have already arrived at valuations totaling $6,379,069 for 38 of the 40 blocks in the memorial area.

Already more than one-half of the St. Louis contribution has been spent to maintain a staff of 104 technicians and advisory experts, who are now working in St. Louis preparing plans for some kind of a memorial. The moneys, which you are asked to reappropriate, at best would not begin to pay the expenses of wrecking the buildings on the site. Next year and for many years thereafter you would have the St. Louis promoters on the heels of Congress dogging their footsteps for more and more money.

The time to economize is now. Let us put an end to the fear, the suspense, and the uncertainty that hangs over these St. Louis businessmen. Let us put an end to the wild dreams of these memorial promoters by allowing the unexpended funds appropriated for relief and work relief to revert to the Treasury of the United States and there be available to relieve human misery and human suffering, of which I am reliably informed there is still plenty in St. Louis and other parts of Missouri.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RANKIN. Having listened again to the daily speech of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH], I call his attention to the fact that you will never get out of this difficulty, you will never balance the Budget, you will never get this Nation out of debt on the present price levels.

Until we have some readjustment of our financial system so as to give us currency expansion to raise commodity prices to their normal level in order to increase the income of the average individual as well as the national income, we are not going to get out of this condition.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. I yield for a question.

Mr. RICH. If the gentleman, with all his energy, would spend as much time trying to get the Government out of business as he spends trying to get the Government into business, we would work ourselves out of this condition in a hurry. We would help the businessmen, we would help the farmers, we would help the laborer, we would help everybody in this country; but you are not going to help them by trying to put the Government into all kinds of business.

Mr. RANKIN. The gentleman is helping himself out now; he is on his way out unless something is done along the line I have indicated. [Applause.]

Mr. RICH. Do not fool yourself, my boy.

Mr. RANKIN. I am not.

[Here the gavel fell.]

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and thirty-one Members are present, not a quorum.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 51]

Bell	Culkin	Fulmer	McReynolds
Blackney	Curley	Geyer, Calif.	Mitchell
Bolles	Dingell	Gifford	Osmers
Bolton	Ditter	Hart	O'Toole
Brewster	Drewry	Hartley	Owen
Brooks	Durham	Hawks	Peterson, Ga.
Buck	Eaton, N. J.	Hennings	Risk
Buckler, Minn.	Edmiston	Kennedy, M. J.	Rockefeller
Buckley, N. Y.	Elliott	Kerr	Satterfield
Cannon, Fla.	Engel	Lesinski	Sullivan
Cluett	Evans	McDowell	Sweeney
Cole, Md.	Fay	McGehee	Tinkham
Crosser	Folger	McLeod
Crowther	Ford, Leland M.	Mansfield

The SPEAKER. On this roll call 376 Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

By unanimous consent, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House the following message from the Senate of the United States.

The Clerk read as follows:

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
April 17, 1939.

Ordered, That the Secretary be directed to request the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the bill (S. 1871) entitled "An act to prevent pernicious political activities."

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the request will be granted.

There was no objection.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

Mr. LEA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce may sit during the session of the House today.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent that the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce may sit during the session of the House today. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LEA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce may have until 10 o'clock tonight to file its report on the bills, H. R. 5379, to amend the act entitled "An act to prohibit the movement in interstate commerce of adulterated and misbranded food, drugs, devices, and cosmetics, and for other purposes," approved June 25, 1938, and H. R. 5762, to amend the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. RICH, Mr. CARLSON, Mr. RANKIN, and Mr. SABATH asked and were given permission to revise and extend their own remarks.

Mr. H. CARL ANDERSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD a joint resolution of the Legislature of the State of Minnesota memorializing the Congress of the United States to enact legislation relieving the farmers who gave their notes for feed and seed loans during the drought years 1933 and 1934, from cash payment thereof.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

THE STABILIZATION FUND AND ALTERATION OF THE WEIGHT OF THE DOLLAR

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 165.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of H. R. 3325, a bill to extend the time within which the powers relating to the stabilization fund and alteration of the weight of the dollar may be exercised. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed 7 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, does the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES] desire any time on the rule?

Mr. MAPES. Yes; we would like to use some time.

Mr. SABATH. If the gentleman desires time I yield him one-half of my time, namely, 30 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution makes in order the so-called stabilization bill, H. R. 3325, which provides for the extending of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund until June 30, 1941. It also extends the Thomas amendment passed in 1933 which permits the purchase of newly mined domestic silver.

Under the bill made in order by this rule no new power is granted to the President, it merely extends the time during which the authority vested in the President may be exercised to June 30, 1941.

This legislation, Mr. Speaker, has been acclaimed by all outstanding economists, banking and industrial leaders as of inestimable benefit to our export trade. The $2,000,000,000 fund is being used to establish the foreign exchange value of the dollar; namely, for the purpose of preventing undue fluctuations. Through the operations of this fund we have been able to meet the intrigues of foreign countries and to obtain a leading position in the export trade of the world. It is generally known, Mr. Speaker, that most foreign countries abandoned the gold standard in 1932. This has forced our Nation to establish the stabilization fund. Today only the United States and one other commercially important country, I believe it is Belgium, are on the gold standard.

The stabilization fund and the power given to the President places us in a most favorable and advantageous position. Without these powers at the disposal of the President we would be at the mercy of foreign nations because of their floating currencies or exchange controls which they can alter at a moment's notice, the power to do so being vested in the executive branch of the government of those countries. Great benefits to the United States have accrued through the operation of this fund and there is a general demand for the extension of this authority. The President of the United States, the Secretary of the Treasury, and all outstanding industrial leaders urge its extension. The only objection comes from speculators and some Republicans who have no better plan, who seem to be only capable of criticism, the same kind of criticism they have had for every beneficial law enacted under the Roosevelt administration.

The rule is a liberal rule, and I may say that the Republican Members have not objected seriously to the rule.

All they desire is plenty of time to talk. Well, the Rules Committee gave them plenty of time to talk.

This rule provides for 7 hours of general debate. When general debate is concluded, the bill will be considered under the 5-minute rule, and the gentlemen on that side will have additional time to talk. This should be sufficient for the Republicans to try to becloud the issues or to make little Republican capital, although I feel it will not benefit them in any way, as the country in general is fed up with their destructive activities.

In their desperate efforts the Republicans are trying to get the country to forget the underlying reason for the enactment of this legislation. They are trying to get the country to forget the conditions which existed on March 4, 1933, when President Franklin D. Roosevelt was inaugurated. The Republicans recognize—yes; must admit—and surely know that when President Roosevelt was inaugurated one-half of the values of property, including stocks and bonds, in the United States was gone, and all due to Republican misrule. At that time sixteen to eighteen million people were out of employment, and those who were fortunate enough to be employed were only on half time or less. Women were receiving $3 to $4 a week and men $1 a day.

Banks, business houses, and insurance companies were on the verge of bankruptcy. The farmers in 1933, when President Roosevelt was inaugurated, were receiving about 25 cents for a bushel of wheat, 15 to 17 cents for a bushel of corn, rye, or barley, while hogs and cattle were selling at 2½ cents a pound.

Those were the conditions which faced President Roosevelt and a Democratic Congress on March 4, 1933. Those are the conditions that my Republican friends are trying to have the Nation forget. Therefore they desire plenty of time to talk on the pending bill in the hope that they may be able to becloud the main issue. They will talk a lot of nonsensical stuff and detract from the benefits derived or brought about by the Stabilization Act; they will make a lot of charges and accusations not founded on fact in the hope that people may forget the unfortunate condition President Roosevelt inherited from the Republicans that forced the enactment of this great piece of legislation.

Mr. Speaker, every day on the floor of the House the Republicans make certain accusations against the Democratic Party and the administration because of existing unemployment. As I said before, and I repeat today, it was the Republican administration that was responsible for the unemployment then, and it is the Republicans who are responsible for it now. If the Republican Party and the interests which that party represents had cooperated with President Roosevelt, there would be no unemployment today.

Mr. KNUTSON. Yes?

Mr. SABATH. I agree with the gentleman. I am glad he agrees with me.

Mr. Speaker, it was extremely fortunate that the President possessed the courage, the foresight, and the intelligence to recommend the gold-reserve legislation, and it was equally fortunate that the House passed it. Only the determination and the great courage of the President made this possible. It has helped and aided us to recapture and reestablish our foreign trade, which was nearly gone. Today we are leading the world, due to this legislation, and we have recaptured the trade that was lost under a Republican administration. Under this prudent legislation, recommended by the President and passed by a Democratic Congress, in which I am glad to say that some of the Republicans joined with us in 1933 and 1934, we have nearly $15,000,000,000 of gold in our Treasury. I do not know how many billions of silver we have.

May I say right here that I have been informed that later on the charge will be made by some Republican Members that the Government has lost or will lose a tremendous sum of money so far as the purchase of silver is concerned? I say that the Government will not lose anything on the purchase of the silver. The intent originally was to aid the West, aid the mining industry of the United States to employ thousands and thousands of the unemployed miners. I am satisfied that as soon as Japan is driven out of China, and I hope that may be soon, China will be again put in the position to buy and trade with us as in years gone by. From that time on the steady flow of silver over there will increase and the Government will sustain a profit instead of a loss.

A similar charge may be made so far as gold is concerned. Personally I am not alarmed, because we own today 66 percent, or two-thirds, of all the gold in the world. This makes the United States strong and powerful financially. It also helps commercially and will safeguard American interests in the future. The fears entertained by the gentleman from Pennsylvania mean nothing. All that we need is cooperation. I am sure that many Republicans with whom I have served for many years would be glad to cooperate if they were left alone and not ruled by sinister interests which control them and their actions. If it were left to their own good judgment, I know they would cooperate again as they have in the past in extending this legislation, thereby maintaining the advantageous position that we enjoy today throughout the world.

Mr. Speaker, I feel there can be no real opposition to the extension of this $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund. It has not cost the Government a single dollar. If anything, the Government has a profit. The only people who are opposed to this extension are the speculators, because under this law they are precluded from gambling with the American dollar in foreign countries. Today our dollar is stronger than any other in the world and I hope this condition will continue. It is the duty of all the Republicans to join hands with us if they have the interests of the country at heart in agreeing to this rule and in the final passage of the bill as reported by the splendid committee that has worked industriously for days—yes, weeks—so as to bring it before you. May I also call attention to the fact that the bill provides that in addition to reporting to the President it is necessary to report to the Congress every year with reference to the activities so far as this fund is concerned?

Mr. Speaker, may I ask how much time I have used?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has used 20 minutes.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield now?

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. THORKELSON. I would like to ask this question: If there is $2,000,000,000 in the gold stabilization fund? Is that right?

Mr. SABATH. Yes.

Mr. THORKELSON. There is $1,800,000,000 left. There is $200,000,000 lost some place. Where is it?

Mr. SABATH. No; nothing has been lost.

Mr. THORKELSON. Yes, it has. There is only about $1,800,000,000 in it now.

Mr. SABATH. There is $2,000,000,000.

Mr. THORKELSON. According to the Treasury, there is $1,800,000,000 left.

Mr. SABATH. I will say this to the gentleman, that I never have devoted the amount of time or study to the reports that the gentleman from Montana appears to believe I have. Still I do know, and the gentleman from Montana does not, that there has been no loss.

Mr. THORKELSON. What are you talking about it for, then?

Mr. SABATH. Wait a second; I am talking from actual facts.

Mr. THORKELSON. But you have not studied it. How can you talk from facts if you have not studied it?

Mr. SABATH. It did not require any special study on my part to know that there has been no loss. The facts as I do know them convince me of that, and I can only assume that the gentleman speaks from misinformation or just to hear himself talk.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I ask this question to be helpful.

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman as a rule asks questions that are intelligent. I am delighted to answer the gentleman.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I believe section 3 of the act is intended to continue the Silver Purchase Act.

Mr. SABATH. It is.

Mr. WOLCOTT. This section reads:

The second sentence added to paragraph (b)—

And so forth—

is further amended to read as follows: "The powers of the President specified in this paragraph"—

Are continued, and so forth. That paragraph in the existing law reads:

Nor shall the weight of the gold dollar be fixed in any event at more than 60 percent of its present weight.

In that paragraph I fail to find any reference whatsoever to the Gold Purchase Act or title III of the Agricultural Act. I wish the gentleman would give some consideration to that, so if he wants to continue the Silver Purchase Act or if the committee wants to continue the Silver Purchase Act the legislative counsel will correct that inconsistency in the act.

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman, as usual, has asked an intelligent question. He is entitled to that information. I will say this to the gentleman, without going into details and depriving the chairman of the committee of the opportunity of explaining the particular provisions, because I know that no changes have been made by the President in the last 4 years, and from what I understand no changes are anticipated for the future. This bill in no way increases the President's powers as given him under title 10 of the Gold Reserve Act of 1934. It merely extends those powers to June 1941.

Mr. THORKELSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield again?

Mr. SABATH. No.

Mr. THORKELSON. Oh, take a chance, will you?

Mr. SABATH. Not to you. If you would ask an intelligent question, I might. Please do not disturb me any more. Mr. Speaker, within the next few days I expect we will hear the ever-recurring Republican charges that we are headed for inflation. That charge was made first in 1934 when the Gold Reserve Act was passed. No inflation has taken place, however. President Roosevelt, well aware of the criminal inflation of 1928 and 1929, is opposed to inflation now. He did not avail himself of the provisions of the Thomas amendment, although I personally believe that it should have been done. That amendment permits the issuance of currency up to $3,000,000,000, and surely we have enough gold and silver behind it to warrant issuing that amount. It might have the good effect of forcing banks to bring back their hoarded money to the channels of legitimate business, and that would be well worth while. I would like to remind the House that the President never abused the powers granted him up to this time, and any charge that he will do so in the future can only be the political cries of those who oppose him in everything he does.

Yesterday, Mr. Speaker, my colleague from Texas [Mr. DIES] informed me that he would speak in opposition to this rule and the bill. I am now advised that the ranking Republican member of the Rules Committee [Mr. MAPES] is allowing him time to follow me on the floor today. The gentleman from Texas is a convincing speaker. I only regret that so many times he is wrong. However, it will be interesting for me to hear the remarks of the gentleman, whom we all remember as strongly advocating this Gold Reserve Act originally in 1934, and twice since. It is unfortunate that the gentleman has been so often led astray these past months, but I know that other Members will understand the underlying bitterness prompting him, and vote according to their own individual dictates. [Applause.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES].

Mr. DIES. Mr. Speaker, it is important that we understand what the real issue is which is presented by this bill. The issue is not the devaluation of the gold dollar, nor the devaluation of the silver dollar, nor the purchase of silver, nor the issuance of silver certificates based either upon the cost value or upon the statutory value, nor the fixation of the relationship between the two metals. The issue is not, as some of my esteemed friends from the silver States seem to think, the continuation of the purchase of domestic silver, because under the Silver Act, which is permanent legislation, the Treasury Department has ample authority to purchase both domestic and foreign silver at such prices as they see fit.

The issue involved here is whether or not we shall continue the most extraordinary power that has ever been vested in any President since the beginning of this Republic. In order to illustrate how much power is involved in this continued delegation of authority, let me point out that if the President of the United States saw fit under this act he could increase the supply of money by $9,500,000,000, and through the process of inflation he could levy a tax upon the wages of every worker in the United States, or, if he saw fit, he could deflate and fix the relative value between gold and silver 16 to 1 or 64 to 1, or at any other ratio he saw fit.

I therefore maintain, Mr. Speaker, that the time has come in this country when emergency powers given at a time when the country was in great distress should be terminated and the constitutional duties of this Congress to coin money and to regulate its value should be resumed [applause], for I am persuaded to believe that the processes by which people lose their liberties are not sudden: They are gradual, they are insidious, they work slowly through increasing delegation of power on the part of legislative assemblies to executive departments.

It is said that the President will not exercise this tremendous discretion. If this be true, Mr. Speaker, then why are we asked to continue this power until 1941?

There is no objection to the stabilization fund or to its operation as long as is necessary. The President has already devalued the dollar, and all the power in reference to gold devaluation in this bill amounts to only 9 percent, but under the terms of this bill there is suspended over the heads of American labor and business the most tremendous power—the power to reach into the pockets of the workers and to decrease their wages or the power, on the other hand, to deflate and increase the purchasing power of the dollar. He has the power to put into circulation more money than the total amount that we have today. We should not assume that when we delegate authority the President will not use it. This is not our power. It is the power of the American people, and you and I have no right to delegate to the President such far-reaching authority as this upon the pretext that the emergency continues to exist.

I maintain, Mr. Speaker, that the people of this country are vitally interested in Congress exercising its constitutional power. I maintain that the greatest danger that faces this Republic is the practice of continuing emergency powers from year to year until, finally, you will have a President, whether Democrat or Republican, who has more power, economically, than the rulers in Europe, for the man who has the discretion to put into circulation $9,000,000,000 has more real power than the man who has an army of 1,000,000 men behind him. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. DIES. I conclude my observations with this simple suggestion. If we propose to legislate on monetary matters, then why should not the Coinage, Weights, and Measures Committee come here with a bill? If it is proposed to remonetize silver what is it that keeps the Congress of the United States from facing its responsibilities? If it is proposed to devalue silver or to revalue it to the extent of $2.58 an ounce and issue $9,000,000,000 of certificates based upon it, then what is it that we lack in courage and responsibility to meet the issue ourselves?

If it is necessary to further devalue the gold dollar, what reason is there that the House of Representatives, elected by the people of this country, shall not exercise its constitutional duty, but with cowardice, with political expediency, begging the issue and sidetracking the facts, are we to delegate to the President vast discretionary powers on the assumption that there is an emergency in Europe? If we are going to use that argument I can say to you that you will be delegating vast discretionary authority for the next 100 years, for as far back as history goes Europe has always had emergencies. She has been in a state of emergency, with ceaseless quarrels and feuds, from the very beginning of her recorded history, and I do not propose, Mr. Speaker, as one humble Representative of this great body, by my vote, to continue to clothe with such imperial powers Franklin D. Roosevelt or any other man, be he the greatest man in the Republic, the most popular man, or the wisest—I do not propose by my vote to transfer the rights of my people to one man, whether he be benevolent or otherwise. [Applause.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. TAYLOR].

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I agree with the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Rules, the dean of the House, in his statement that this is a stabilization bill with the accent on the "stab." It is a stab in the heart of the constitutional prerogatives of this great body, in which we as Representatives ought to take pride and guard with the most vigilant jealousy. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to this rule and voted against it in the Rules Committee because I am opposed to the resolution which it harbingers.

In my opinion, the power of the President to fix the monetary content of the dollar has been one of the most serious deterrents to economic recovery in this country. It has operated as a Damocles sword which has intimidated business to the extent that business could not know what the value of the dollar might be from one day to another.

Mr. Speaker, today we have two theories of dollar valuation. We have the domestic dollar and the foreign dollar. The domestic dollar must be evaluated according to one thesis and the foreign dollar another. This legislation was enacted in 1934 in the first instance, supposedly to meet an emergency. A year later its sponsors, at the behest of the administration, came back and asked that its life be extended, contending that the emergency had not abated. Two years later the same group returned again and requested another lease of life for this legislation, claiming that the emergency still existed; and today we find them returning for the third time and insisting on a stay of execution on the ground that the emergency still prevails.

Well, my friends, I would like to know when an emergency ceases to be an emergency and becomes a condition. We have had more varieties of emergencies under the New Deal than Heinz had canned products. A new emergency is born every day and new crackpot legislation must be provided to take care of it. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I wonder when and were this travesty will end, and when sanity will return to the Congress?

Away back in the "horse and buggy" days Justice Marshall warned the American people that the power to tax was the power to destroy. To translate that axiom into New Deal phraseology it means that the power of the purse is the power to dominate. By the time we shall have paid in taxes for all the New Deal experiments, and especially their monetary experiments, the United States Treasury will be completely exhausted, if not destroyed. Make no mistake about that. We are paying a few international bankers and speculators $35 per ounce for gold now, but before all of this sleight-of-hand money manipulation is put to an end we will not have 17 cents left to buy an ounce of our Colorado gold.

The present administration came in power on the pledge, among other things, to drive out the money changers. I am now fully convinced that the senior Senator from Virginia, the former Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, knew what he was talking about when he said:

> We haven't driven out any money changers, we have only changed bankers.

So, instead of the House of Morgan we have changed to Kuhn, Loeb & Co., of which I am told the venerable father of the present Secretary of the Treasury is a major partner.

Again, Mr. Speaker, since coming in power this administration made, among many others, a pledge that if any of their experiments failed they would be the first to make acknowledgment and recommend a change. I would like for the majority leader or some other representative new dealer to tell us how much longer the American people will have to wait for the first confession. If the last November election did not mean anything else, it was a mighty strong hint that several admissions were in order. Oh, ye experimentators, ye crystal gazers, ye brain trusters, ye New Deal exponents. How long will you continue to impose upon our credulity and abuse our patience? [Applause.]

It has been generally understood that our distinguished President was bequeathed a million dollars to play with until he learned the value of money. If he failed to learn anything about money with a million to play with, what right, pray tell me, has Congress to expect him to learn any more about the value of money with two billions to play with? I hope he is not buying any more German marks or putting us into the slot-machine business.

Mr. Speaker, before we permit the President or anyone else to buy any more gold, Congress should find out who owns the fifteen-odd billion dollars of gold the Government claims to own. There are a good many authorities who contend that Uncle Sam has given I O U's in the form of gold certificates or receipts for this money; has returned some of it to Mother Earth, and trusted the Federal Reserve banks to hold the balance of it—until and if. But no one seems to know—and how can they know?—until the Supreme Court decides just who does own all of this precious metal. Until that is decided we will not know who is to benefit by the mark-up or suffer the loss when the day of reckoning comes.

I am in favor of amending this bill to give the President and the bankers until January 1, 1940, to make up their minds that Congress will exercise its constitutional prerogatives after that date so far as money is concerned. And in the meantime Congress should give some constructive thought to the Andresen amendment, or consider the feasibility of establishing a $35-per-ounce price for gold the world over, provided foreign nations will agree to permit us to credit their war debts with the mark-up of $14.33 and help maintain the future price at $35.

This is the only chance we have to lessen the war debts of our former allies and the best way to begin to stabilize world trade. No nation and no individual can be expected to trade with any degree of confidence or normalcy until they know the price of international exchange or money.

In 1929 and 1930 foreigners crashed our markets and put this country in a tailspin by withdrawing their gold. It seems to me that any prudent man would learn a lesson from that experience. However, we are in that same predicament today. Europe, or the so-called gold countries, have billions checked here today, either in vaults or in stocks and bonds purchased at a 40-percent discount. If we fail to protect ourselves now and fear vanishes from the minds of Europeans, and this gold is recalled, God only can help Americans and America's credit.

Mr. Speaker, when will Congress realize that this New Deal "brain trust" money scheme is all a nightmare and come out from under this mania of spending and lending and playing with millions and billions of dollars of gold that a hundred and thirty million American souls vitally depend upon?

I shall offer an amendment to extend the President's money powers as heretofore granted until January 1, 1940. If my amendment is defeated, I shall vote against this bill. In the meantime I hope every Member of the House will read the minority report of the House committee. It is constructive and illuminating and points out the danger signals in this program of congressional capitulation of its constitutional function. [Applause.]

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, when is an emergency not an emergency, and how long can an emergency last? This bill proposes to continue the authority of the President over money, which was given him by the Gold Reserve Act approved June 30, 1934, over 5 years ago, as an emergency matter. The life of the original act was for 2 years, with a provision which authorized the President to continue it by Executive order for 1 year, which he did. Congress subsequently extended the act for 2 years, and this bill proposes to extend it to June 30, 1941, or a total period of 7 years and 5 months.

What will be the effect of this bill if passed? At the risk of repeating some thoughts which have already been expressed, I shall attempt to point out what it seems to me the bill does and what it does not do. It does not provide for the devaluation of the gold dollar. It does not provide for the devaluation of the silver dollar. It does not fix the gold content of the gold dollar nor the silver content of the silver dollar. It does not continue the silver purchase plan which has been followed by the Secretary of the Treasury in purchasing silver produced in the United States at excessive prices. It does not fix the ratio between gold and silver. It does not provide for the unlimited coinage of gold and of silver. It does not provide for the issuance of silver certificates to the tenders of silver for coinage and against silver held by the Treasury. It does not provide that the weights of subsidiary coins shall be reduced or adjusted so as to maintain the old parity between the standard gold and the standard silver dollar.

It does not affirmatively do any of these things, but it delegates to the President power, in his discretion, for another 2 years to do any one or all of them as he sees fit. Does the Congress want, by the enactment of this legislation, to continue the uncertainty and fear which have paralyzed business during the last 6 years, or does it want to encourage investment and promote business? How can anyone expect business to recover under prevailing conditions and the state of mind of the investing public? Probably every Member of Congress has had one or more friends say to him at one time or another, "I wish I were out of business. If I were only out of business, I would not start any new business. I am only carrying on the business I have in an attempt to save something out of what I have spent a lifetime in building up." That is the state of mind of the people of the country now. This bill, if enacted into law, will tend to continue that feeling.

It is unnecessary for me to say that my name was not among the seven that a distinguished economist a few years ago said knew something about the money question. However, I have taken occasion to look over the hearings before the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures on this bill. I want to quote from the testimony of one distinguished witness who appeared before the committee, because what he said expresses my own conviction about this legislation.

I quote from page 146 of the hearings:

I am strongly of the opinion that the power of the President to further devalue the dollar should be allowed to lapse. To continue this power implies there are good reasons for further devaluation, or that we are still involved in some sort of an emergency, or that we are ready to engage in currency warfare.

The fear that other countries might reduce the value of their currencies is no excuse for the continuation of these powers. We should not be willing to sacrifice the welfare of our people in order to ape unsound financial practices elsewhere. In the early 1920's the dollar stood firmly anchored to gold at a time when the German mark and Russian ruble were tobogganing to zero, at a time when the British pound was far below par, and the French franc was falling. The fact that we did so gave confidence to our own people and confidence to the world. It did not hamper business development. In fact, the recovery from the 1920–21 depression, when the European economic system was chaotic, was very rapid.

To devalue again would be to give a further stimulus to gold production and to increase the gold deluge. New so-called gold profits would be created. Our already redundant monetary supply would be further augmented.

The refusal to continue these emergency powers should be coupled with other actions in order to make for a well-rounded and developed policy.

As the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES] said, this bill ought to be sent back to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures, and that committee, or the Committee on Banking and Currency, ought to report back to the House a comprehensive measure on this question of money.

I desire to quote now from another distinguished economist, Mr. John T. Flynn. The following appeared in one of his daily letters in the newspapers a few days ago. After discussing this stabilization fund and the power of the President to devalue the gold dollar further, he says this:

This whole gold-buying policy and its implications have filled businessmen and investors with a feeling that the President is not through fiddling with money yet.

Moreover, the presence of this vast gold hoard, they believe, and with justice, to be pregnant with possibilities of inflation. The fear of inflation always is a deadening influence upon the long-term investment. The paralysis of long-term investment is the chief cause of the long-delayed arrival of sound recovery.

If business is to be appeased, the Congress must do it. The defeat of this bill would be an encouragement to the investing public and have a wholesome effect. Its passage will continue the discouragement and uncertainty under which business has labored for these many years. I am opposed both to the rule and to the bill. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I only have one other speaker, so I request the gentleman from Michigan to use the balance of his time.

Mr. MAPES. The gentleman from Michigan has no further requests for time at this time.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOMERS], chairman of the committee.

Mr. SOMERS of New York. Mr. Speaker, it is not my desire at this time to address myself to the merits of this bill. I should rather confine myself for the moment to a plea for consideration under the rule.

I have been very astounded, as I sat in this Chamber and felt that the intelligence of the membership of this House was being insulted by individuals in this House, asking them to vote or to kill the measure upon a pun, or to kill the measure because of the prejudice of one individual against the President of the United States.

Gentlemen, you have before you for consideration an important piece of legislation. I will not say it is the most important piece of legislation you will consider this year. Some may say that. Nevertheless, it remains that this is an important piece of legislation, affecting the lives of every man, woman, and child in the world. You cannot approach this thing lightly. You cannot condemn it because of a pun, clever as it may be, nor can you be swayed by personal prejudice. You are dealing with a question that involves directly every legislative act that we have ever passed in the last 5 years. Your committee in considering it and the majority members of your committee consulted the minority members. They reached an understanding with them in regard to this rule. It was a Republican request for a period of 7 hours of debate. We granted that and that I think they deserved. Therefore I will ask you, fellow Members, in good faith, to support this rule, to hear the debate, to listen to such arguments as we are prepared to unfold, not to be swayed by name calling, and then vote your conscience, according to your understanding. [Applause.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts) there were ayes 120 and noes 90.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 209, nays 147, not voting 74, as follows:

JAPANESE FISHING

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, I have introduced two bills today, one to amend section 166 of the immigration laws, to restrict certain alien seamen from landing in the United States; the other to amend section 221 of the Shipping Act barring certain aliens to participate in benefits thereof.

Both of these bills pertain particularly to the Japanese seamen whose activities were brought to my attention during the investigation of which I served as chairman of the subcommittee to investigate un-American activities.

During the month of August 1934, at a hearing at Los Angeles, Calif., which I conducted with other members of the committee, a witness appeared before the committee whose name was Lail Kain. His testimony disclosed that alien Japanese were operating fishing crafts, their vessels ranging in size from 35 to 125 feet and a capacity up to 250 tons deadweight, with a cruising radius of three to ten thousand miles. Several of these vessels were then being constructed and Mr. Kain exhibited blueprints which showed that the vessels were being constructed so that they could anchor in mid-ocean and their fishing compartments could be replaced by five or six torpedoes.

These vessels were also provided with high-powered radio receiving and sending equipment, with Diesel engines developing 4 to 550 horsepower. Although these vessels were operating in the disguise of innocent fishing craft they were in reality operating for sinister purposes.

Under the Undocumented Motor Boat Act of 1918 it required that certain numerals prescribed by the Department of Customs be carried on the bow of the vessels but these numerals were transferred to a license plate which merely hung over the bow and could be changed at any time in mid-ocean. Under the present law no registration of ownership or of the crew is required. The amendment I am offering proposes that no such vessel shall be permitted to operate by aliens unless the owner, or owners thereof, shall be American citizens, or owned by a corporation, none of whose directors, stockholders, officers, employees, lessees, or charterers shall be prohibited by law from becoming an immigrant to the United States or a United States citizen, and within 24 hours before the sailing or shipping of such vessel it shall be required that all of such crew be registered with the Department of Customs and Commerce and that no such employees may be changed or substituted without giving notice to the Department of Commerce and Customs of such change of such employee or seaman.

A report of the findings of the committee was made to the Department at the time of the conclusion of the hearings which later resulted in the indictment of five Japanese and some American citizens, the case being brought to trial in September 1938, and the defendants Genkichi Koish and Gilbert C. Van Camp pleaded nolo contendere to a violation of the section of the United States Code as charged in the indictment and were fined over $7,000, and in lieu of forfeiture of the craft paid in addition thereto a fine of $38,000. Apparently the United States Government made a bad bargain in permitting forfeiture of this amount in lieu of the vessel.

These Japanese fishing craft are again busy at work and just a few days ago my attention was directed to an article in the magazine Ken, issues of April 6 and 13, respectively, which has given a great deal of publicity to the manner in which these Japanese fishing craft are operated.

Once an alien Japanese is on a boat, there is no restriction whatever to prevent him going ashore when his ship anchors in an American port. A Japanese or any other alien seaman does not even need an identification card. The usually strict immigration laws are very lax on alien seamen. The law provides that the master of the ship report within 60 days any alien seaman who leaves the vessel. An alien Japanese could leave a fishing boat in San Diego, for instance, go where he pleases for 59 days, and return to his boat without the master being required to report his absence.

Japanese secret agents can land in the United States as fishermen, attend to their work, and return to their boats without even a record of their having entered the United States. If the captain does not wish to report any such "seaman," even if he does not show up after 60 days, no one is the wiser unless the secret agent is picked up. Or an agent can enter on a visitor's visa for 6 months and probably get another 6 months' extension with no one checking on his activities during his stay.

This massing of Japanese naval and military men as seamen off the Pacific coast to fish is really for the purpose of fishing, but they are not fishing for fish. They have reached a point where they are absolutely dangerous to the safety of this country, and the time has come when we must protect our shores against any such operations as are now going on. These facts are easily established, as on many occasions in the past our metropolitan papers of the Pacific coast and elsewhere have given the matter wide publicity, and it has been most vividly brought to the attention of the departments by reputable citizens. A law should be immediately passed, and I hope that the committee to which these bills are referred will grant immediate hearings, because even the hostile publications in the magazine Ken and in other metropolitan papers have not put an end to this, nor have the convictions and payments of fines had any effect.

The Pacific Coast Guard has given a great deal of attention to their fight against the unlawful operation of Japanese fishing boats, but the law as it stands today gives the alien seaman a wide range in remaining in the United States, regardless of what his motive may be.

The Department of Justice has settled too generously, but under the present law had no other alternative. I know, Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, that the Department of Justice has been most persistent in its attempts to eradicate this danger, but the law was wholly inadequate. The amendments I propose will implement the law so that the objective of the Department of Justice may be carried out. [Applause.]

EXTENDING TIME WITHIN WHICH POWERS RELATING TO STABILIZATION FUND MAY BE EXERCISED

Mr. SOMERS of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3325) to extend the time within which the powers relating to the stabilization funds and the alteration of the weight of the dollar may be exercised.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 3325, with Mr. MCCORMACK in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. SOMERS] is recognized for 3½ hours and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. REED] is recognized for 3½ hours.

Mr. REED of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 20 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I wish to take this opportunity to express to the chairman of the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures the deep appreciation of the minority members of this committee. During all of the hearings held upon this legislation he, although the author of the bill, gave to the minority members every consideration and courtesy we could have expected, and we deeply appreciate it.

Mr. Chairman, today we have before us for consideration a bill which, if enacted, will extend for 2 more years the operation of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund and continue the power in the President and Secretary of the Treasury to control it. We likewise have before us in the same bill a proposal to grant for 2 years authority in the President to devalue the gold and silver dollar.

The first duty of this body in considering any legislation whatsoever is to turn to the authority by which we ourselves are permitted to function. That authority is the Constitution of the United States. Section 1 of article I of that document says:

> All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States.

Section 8 of the same article, in enumerating the various legislative powers, says:

> The Congress shall have power to coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, and fix the standard of weights and measures—

And the section concludes with the phrase—

> and to make all laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers and all other powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any department or offices thereof.

It is to these sections of the fundamental law, therefore, that we must turn to determine in our own minds our authority to enact the legislation now pending before us.

Section 2 of H. R. 3325—the pending bill—continues in the President until January 15, 1941—unless he shall declare the existing emergency ended before that date—power to devalue both the gold and silver dollar; to fix the ratio between gold and silver at any point that he may determine; to provide for the unlimited coinage of gold and silver; to issue silver certificates to the tenderers of silver for coinage and also against silver held by the Treasury and to reduce the weights of subsidiary coins so as to maintain the parity of such coins with the standard silver dollar and with the gold dollar. These powers are not specifically enumerated in the bill before us but are contained in section 12 of the Gold Reserve Act of 1934. The wording of that act is significant. In it the President is authorized to fix the weight of the gold and the silver dollar "at such amounts as he finds necessary" to stabilize domestic prices or to protect foreign commerce against depreciated foreign currencies; to provide for the "unlimited" coinage of gold and silver, or in the event that our Government enters into an agreement with any foreign government establishing a ratio between the value of gold and other currency issued by the United States and by such foreign government, "the President may fix the weight of the gold dollar" in accordance with the ratio so agreed upon; and such gold dollar, the weight of which is so fixed, "shall be the standard unit of value." This in spite of the plain language of the Constitution that Congress, and Congress only, shall have the authority to coin money and regulate the value thereof. Delegation of legislative power from the lawmaking body to the Executive has ofttimes been condemned by the courts. The fate of the A. A. A. and N. R. A., where "delegation ran riot," is too fresh in the memory of most of the Members of this House to require further comment.

> That Congress cannot delegate legislative power to the President is a principle universally recognized as vital to the integrity and maintenance of the system of government ordained by the Constitution.

These were the words of Mr. Justice Harlan in the case of Field v. Clark (143 U. S. 649, 692), wherein this eminent jurist cites with approval an opinion of Judge Ranney, of the Supreme Court of Ohio, who said:

> The true distinction is between the delegation of power to make the law, which necessarily involves a discretion as to what it shall be, and conferring authority or discretion as to its execution, to be exercised under and in pursuance of the law. The first cannot be done; to the latter no valid objection can be made (Cincinnati, Wilmington & Zanesville Railroad v. Commissioners, 1 Ohio Stat. 88).

How then can we reconcile this judicial construction by the highest court in the land, which holds as unlawful the delegation of power to make a law which necessarily involves a discretion as to what it shall be, with the wording of the statute we are today asked to continue in force for another 2 years? I refer to such words as these, "The President may fix the weight of the gold dollar"; that its weight and that of the silver dollar may be fixed by him "at such amounts as he finds necessary"; and that the gold dollar's weight having been fixed by him it "shall be the standard unit of value." Can anyone seriously contend that exercise of such powers are merely administrative and that no discretion is required to be exercised by the Chief Executive?

In the Legal Tender cases (79 U. S. 457), I quote from Mr. Justice Strong:

> Whatever power there is over the currency is vested in Congress. If the power to declare what is money is not in Congress, it is annihilated.

And again in the same case Mr. Justice Field declared:

The power to coin money as already declared by this Court is a great trust devolved upon Congress.

These are great truths uttered by great constitutional lawyers but particularly applicable to the issues involved in the pending bill were the words of Mr. Justice Clifford:

Power to fix the standard of weights and measures is evidently a power of comparatively wide discretion but the power to regulate the value of money authorized by the Constitution to be coined is a definite and precise grant of power, admitting of very little discretion in its exercise.

I know it will be contended that the Congress has heretofore delegated power to the Interstate Commerce Commission, for example, and that such action has received the approval of the courts. The Interstate Commerce Commission, however, is not part of the executive branch of the Government, but an independent agency set up by Congress and, in fact, can be said to be an arm of the legislative branch of our Government. Its creation was authorized by paragraph 3 of section 8 of article I of the Constitution, which provides that Congress shall have power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States and with Indian tribes; and by paragraph 18 of section 8, which gives it the authority to make all laws necessary and proper for carrying into execution the powers theretofore granted and all other powers vested in the Government or any department or offices thereof. That delegation, however, would have been invalid if Congress had not at the same time presented a rule of action and by legislative enactment set forth definite procedure to be followed by the Commission in the finding of facts upon which the fixing of rates upon railways must be based. Likewise in 1927 in the case of Hampton & Co. v. United States (276 U. S. 394) the Supreme Court upheld the flexible tariff law because Congress had by that act merely determined that the tariff rate should represent the difference between cost of production at home and in foreign nations and then prescribed a method by which it must be determined by the President. After so finding, the President merely made a proclamation and the mandate of Congress became effective.

The most recent judicial pronouncements relative to delegation of legislative authority were in 1934 and concerned the National Recovery Act. The first opinion was that of Panama Refining Co. v. Ryan (293 U. S. 388) and was based on the construction of section 9 (c) of the act, which authorized the President to prohibit the transportation in interstate and foreign commerce of petroleum and the products thereof produced or withdrawn from storage in excess of the amount permitted to be produced or withdrawn from storage by any State law or authorized officer or commission thereof. In commenting on this statute, Chief Justice Hughes said:

Section 9 (c) does not state whether or in what circumstances, or under what conditions, the President is to prohibit the transportation of the amount of petroleum or petroleum products produced in excess of the State's permission. It establishes no criterion to govern the President's course. It does not require any finding by the President as a condition of his action. The Congress, in section 9 (c), thus declares no policy as to the transportation of the excess production. So far as this section is concerned it gives to the President an unlimited authority to determine the policy and to lay down the prohibition or not to lay it down, as he may see fit.

And later on in the decision he says:

The Congress manifestly is not permitted to abdicate or to transfer to others the essential legislative functions with which it is thus vested. * * * The Constitution has never been regarded as denying to the Congress the necessary resources of flexibility and practicality which will enable it to perform its function in laying down policies and establishing standards while leaving to select instrumentalities the making of subordinate rules within prescribed limits and the determination of facts to which the policy as declared by the legislature is to apply. But the constant recognition of the necessity and validity of such provisions, and the wide range of administrative authority which has been developed by means of them, cannot be allowed to obscure the limitations of the authority to delegate, if our constitutional system is to be maintained.

If 9 (c) were held valid it would be idle to pretend that anything would be left of limitations upon the power of the Congress to delegate its lawmaking function. The reasoning of the many decisions we have reviewed would be made vacuous and their distinctions nugatory. Instead of performing its lawmaking function, the Congress could at will, and as to such subjects as it chose, transfer that function to the President or other officer to an administrative body. The question is not of the intrinsic importance of the particular statute before us, but of the constitutional processes of legislation which are an essential part of our system of government.

Later on in 1934, in the famous Schechter case (295 U. S. 495), the National Recovery Act was declared unconstitutional in its entirety, principally because of its delegation of legislative power.

The legislation before us today seeks to retain in effect one of the so-called emergency laws passed in 1934. The parent act transferred, or attempted to transfer, broad discretionary legislative powers to the Executive, where they did not and do not now belong. The act of the President in devaluing the dollar was purely legislative. When he did so he made law. He regulated the value of money, and will continue to do so until June 30 of this year.

Will Congress again abdicate and again bestow upon the Executive its own "separate, distinct, and continuing powers" that "may be exercised by him from time to time, severally or together whenever in his judgment the expressed objects of the law may require," or will it assert its own prerogatives and say to the American people, "In your Constitution you reposed in us the duty to coin money and regulate its value. We will be faithful to that trust. From henceforth it will be our responsibility, our judgment, our discretion that shall be exercised. We will take back that which rightfully belongs to us. We will permit this unwarranted, unlawful, unconstitutional abdication of 1934 to die a natural death on June 30 of this year, and surrounded by blocks and bars of gold and silver, with speculators and international bankers as chief mourners we shall, in the manner practiced in ancient Egypt, give it a decent and permanent burial in the hills of Kentucky?" [Applause.]

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REED of Illinois. I yield.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Is it the gentleman's contention that we are following the provisions of the Constitution and the provisions of the Federal Reserve Act in increasing the value of gold?

Mr. REED of Illinois. I would not discuss the Federal Reserve Act in regard to this particular section of the Constitution. I do say, however, that we are not following the Constitution in the enactment of this particular legislation.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Particularly the gentleman does not believe we are following the Federal Reserve Act in devaluing gold.

Mr. REED of Illinois. No; I do not. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. REED of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I yield 25 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SMITH].

DEVALUATION

Mr. SMITH of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, "devaluate" is somewhat more delectable than debase. Angell, in his Story of Money, says:

Up to the time of Nero the denarius was found to contain 99 percent of pure silver. * * * The denarii of the latter part of this reign contained from 5 to 10 percent of alloy.

This was simply a surreptitious way for him to take silver from the coin and give him an unearned profit. This has always been referred to as debasement, or coin clipping. Our Government reduced the content of the gold coin, just as Nero did, but call it "devaluation." It should be noted that Nero, as well as all the ancient coin clippers, pocketed only the clippings and left the main part of the coin to the people. Our Government clipped the coin and then stuck both pieces into its pocket.

King Henry VIII, who is often referred to as one of the arch coin clippers, evidently was completely sold on the idea that a nation should not allow foreign countries to clip their coins without clipping its own. Judging by his official protestations, Old Henry was not a slouch either when it came to setting the public stage for a favorable reception for his money tricks. Here is the way he said it and what he said:

Henri VIII, by the Grace of God, King of England and of France, Defender of the Faith, Lord of Ireland, to the Most Reverend Fathers in God, etc. etc. Forasmuch as coins of moneyes, as well of Gold and of Silver, be of late daies raised and inhaunced both in the Realm of France, * * * and the other parts unto higher prices than the virypois weights, and finenesse and valuation of the same, * * * finding finally no manner of remedy to be had at their hand, have by matured deliberation determined, That our coins and moneyes * * * shall be by our Officers of Our Mint from henceforth made at such finenesse, lay, standard and value as may be equivalent, correspondent and agreeable to the rates of the valuation inhaunced and raised in outward parts, as is afore specified:

You see from this, Henry was not only a good lover but also a smooth clipper. Of course, the old fox, in talking things over with his faithful subjects, likely did not discuss with them any "profits" that he received by "making his coins agreeable to the rates of the valuation inhaunced and raised in outward parts."

In his argument before our committee to continue the authority to debase the gold dollar, Mr. Morgenthau likened his control of the gold of the world to that of a "powerful navy."

This power is a weapon in reserve which is needed for the protection of American interests. In the monetary field it is as important as a powerful navy in the field of defense against armed attack.

If Mr. Morgenthau understood the principles of money, he would not have attempted such an inept comparison. There is no conceivable likeness between the control of the gold which he now has and a "powerful navy." Indeed, they are so unlike that they serve rather to contrast each other. True each possesses power. But the likeness ends there. The question is, Power to do what? To protect the lives and weal of our people or to destroy these? There is power in the red blood cells of the human body, consisting of the carrying of oxygen to all the tissues and taking away from them waste in the form of carbondioxide, which makes life for us possible. Their home is within the blood vessels. Outside the blood vessels they have no use. If too many cells leave them, the body becomes anemic and sick and may die. The standard of weights and measures also has "power," if you wish to call it that. It can operate only in the markets and consists in giving assurance to buyer and seller of full measure. If taken out of the markets, it could do only harm.

Precisely so with gold money. Its "power" to serve mankind is its use in the markets as the standard unit of value and the pledge for the fulfillment of contracts, and in these only. Just as the red corpuscles can serve no useful purpose outside the blood vessels, and the standard unit of measure can serve none outside the markets, so gold money has no "power" for good whatsoever unless it is in free circulation in the channels of trade and commerce.

This attempted comparison and his statement that "this power is a weapon in reserve" is extraordinary. Just what does he have in mind? Is he thinking of the benevolent use gold coins have in the markets in making contracts possible, in guaranteeing value for value, and thus assuring equity between traders? Is he thinking of gold coins in free circulation, serving to provide the greatest amount of employment, and securing to the masses the fruits of their labors and an equal participation in justice?

Or does he have in mind some sinister and malevolent use to which he believes he can put his pile of gold?

"This power is a weapon in reserve." The term weapon is defined in the dictionary as "any implement of war or combat, as a sword, gun," and so forth; "any means that may be used against an adversary."

Since when has the complete deprivation of the people of a nation of all their gold money and the monopolizing of the bulk of the gold of the world under a dictatorship become an implement of war, or a means to be used against an adversary? We must go back to the Pharaohs, who alone owned the treasure and the masses were not permitted to possess any of it. Then, true enough, the treasure was a powerful weapon in the hands of the king, but mostly against his own people in keeping them in subjection and slavery.

Just what adversary does Mr. Morgenthau have in mind against whom he feels he might be compelled to use his "weapon"? The only reference he made to this point to our committee was that if any foreign nation should debase its money, he could act quickly and debase ours too. This is precisely what he testified to before our committee. However, he called it by the more pleasing name "devaluation." We must have a gold dictatorship as a weapon to match the debasements of other nations.

The "power" of this unheard-of control of the gold of the world is the power to destroy our God-given right to work and the hope of our youth. It is the power to destroy the commerce and trade of the world, to stir up strife between nations and embroil them in war with each other. It is the power to force our own Nation into war.

It has, as I shall show later, destroyed the contract in the United States, which is the basic cause for the continued great unemployment, the increasing poverty and despair throughout our land. It is the basic cause for the rapid growth of the lecherous bureaucracy and the regimenting of our people.

It has already produced its ruinous effects upon other nations. With the silver-buying policy, which is a part of the gold program, by draining the silver out of China it convulsed her into a serious depression, making her vulnerable to Japanese attack. Thrice the Chinese Government prayed to our Government for relief, but in vain. It is well known that our silver-buying policy caused serious trouble in Mexico. For a time it forced her off the silver standard. Undoubtedly this was, in a measure, responsible for Mexico's expropriation of American property.

By draining the gold and silver out of other nations it forced one after another of them to take drastic action to keep its coins from being melted down and exported. This is one of the most serious things that can happen to any country. Mr. Morgenthau must know these conditions have taken place. By disorganizing world trade, it is hurting England, France, and the Scandinavian countries. England is suspicious, which is evidenced by her insistence upon the insertion of a clause in the reciprocal-trade agreement which permits her to voluntarily withdraw. Mr. Morgenthau should also know the gold monopoly is interfering with and disrupting our whole tariff structure. It is at cross purposes with the reciprocal-trade agreements. It is one of the principal causes of the unsettled conditions of Central Europe.

The cornering and monopolizing of the world's gold by the rulers of our Nation is causing the peoples of other countries to look upon us as the arch Shylock. It is causing them to hate us. Why should it not?

If Mr. Morgenthau had likened his gold control to our Navy taken out of the ocean and buried in the ground in Kentucky, his simile would have been in the right direction, but would have fallen far short of suggesting all of the injurious effects it must have upon us if it is allowed to continue. If not ended, it will destroy both our Nation and Navy.

In nearly every argument Mr. Morgenthau used to justify his monopolistic control of the gold he gives himself away. In a letter to Senator WAGNER he argues that the higher price paid for gold is not the cause of the great influx of the yellow metal into this country. He also says it is not because "an ounce of gold" has "a significantly higher purchasing power over American internationally traded goods than over foreign goods." But in his argument before the committee for a continuation of the power to debase the gold dollar, he argued this was necessary "to defend the position of this country in world trade."

Now certainly he cannot have it both ways. The high price of gold is the debasement of the gold dollar. They are of necessity one and the same. Since we buy gold only with commodities, Mr. Morgenthau involves himself in a serious contradiction. What he really says is that debasement of the gold dollar, which is the same thing as the high price of gold, increases our export trade, but that the high price of gold, which is the same thing as the debasement, does not increase our export trade.

In the long and wordy letter to Senator WAGNER, Mr. Morgenthau put forth great effort to show that the artificially high price that he is paying for gold has nothing to do with its influx into this country. He said other nations offer the same price. Remarkable. Since he is bidding $35 an ounce, would it be expected other nations could buy it for less? Would anyone sell it for less than $35 an ounce if they could get that for it? Can you imagine Mr. Morgenthau, if he had a wallet of gold with which he wished to part, selling it for $25 an ounce when he could get $35 for it?

He cites Belgium as having "a fixed price for gold for 2 years, yet her reported gold holdings are no higher than they were 3 years ago."

It is strange Mr. Morgenthau should select Belgium for a comparison. I understand Belgium is on the true gold standard. All her currency is convertible into gold coins at the option of the holder. There are no restrictions on gold shipments. There is little restriction on foreign exchange transactions.

Belgium's price of gold corresponds with the natural price level of her commodities. That is, it is the convertibility that actually fixes her gold price.

In our country gold does not function domestically. We have an altogether different internal dollar from that of the gold dollar. There is no convertibility of our domestic dollar, and therefore no possible opportunity for establishing a gold price except artificially. This point is very important. Mr. Morgenthau is careful to talk all around it. Let him answer the question directly, Would an excessive amount of gold flow into this country if convertibility were established?

France has no law directing her to buy gold. She does not establish an artificial price for it. Private persons may possess it. The poor in France may possess several hundred dollars in coins without going to prison for it.

The British Empire has a different system than ours. They have a free gold market. Private individuals may convert their property or paper currency into gold bullion. They may freely buy and sell gold.

No other country but ours uses gold to bid up the world price of silver in an endeavor to buy all the white metal in the world. I know of no other country, except possibly Russia, that makes it a crime for a poor man to possess a few dollars in gold. Only a few countries like Russia use their gold exclusively in foreign trade and withhold its use altogether from their internal economy.

After all, the proof is in the pudding. In 1936 Italy "devalued" the lira 35 percent. This reduced her national debt from $8,500,000,000 to $5,500,000,000. Russia "devalued" the ruble 75 percent, which reduced her debt from $12,000,000,000 to $2,800,000,000. Russia, France, and Italy alone, by "revaluing" their currencies in 1 year, made a reduction in their combined debt of about $18,000,000,000.

Debasement of 40 percent netted the Treasury a "profit" of $2,800,000,000. Further debasement to the limit allowed by law would net another $1,400,000,000 "profit." If undertaken, this would give Mr. Morgenthau the "power" of two navies instead of one.

I have been unable to find anywhere in history that debasement of the standard unit of value did any good. On the contrary, historians have uniformly down through the ages pictured the evil and disastrous effects of debasements of money.

The Earl of Lauderdale, in the House of Commons, in referring to past debasements, May 25, 1819, said:

> Every such instance of reduction was a fraud on the people; and it was remarkable, in looking back to those periods when such deteriorations were established, that they were uniform periods of discontent and turbulence.

Lord Treasurer Burleigh, when a movement was on foot to debase the coin, told the promoters of the scheme that they were worthy "to suffer death for attempting to put so great a dishonor on the Queen and detriment and discontent upon the people."

Queen Elizabeth referred to the debased state of the coins which she inherited as a "monster."

Once a government starts tinkering with its standard unit of value there is no telling where the end may be. The first mistake leads to others, and then still others, until all is confusion. We now see this before our very eyes.

The Treasury has bought in the last 5 years 1,900,000,000 ounces of silver at an average price of 59 cents an ounce, at a total cost of $1,112,000,000. At the present world price of 43 cents an ounce the Treasury has paid a subsidy, or has lost, 16 cents an ounce, or $304,000,000. When the Treasury started the silver-buying program silver was selling on the London market at 24½ cents an ounce. If the Treasury's artificial price of silver were discontinued and the metal allowed to find its value in an open market, it would probably not be worth more than 24½ cents, and likely much less. But even at this price the Treasury has paid a subsidy, or lost, 34½ cents an ounce, or $655,000,000 on the silver purchased.

The Treasury bought 1,535,659 ounces of foreign silver at an average price of 53½ cents an ounce, at a cost of $821,557,000. At the present world price of 43 cents an ounce the Treasury paid to foreigners a subsidy of 10½ cents an ounce, or $161,244,000. At 24½ cents it paid a subsidy to foreigners of 29 cents an ounce, or the sum of $445,341,000.

The Treasury bought, in round numbers, 253,000,000 ounces of silver from domestic producers at an average price of 73 cents an ounce, or at a cost of more than $184,000,000. At the average world price of 59 cents an ounce, the Treasury paid a subsidy to domestic producers of 14 cents an ounce, or more than $35,000,000. At the present world price of 43 cents an ounce it paid a subsidy of 30 cents an ounce, or nearly $76,000,000. At 24½ cents an ounce the Treasury paid domestic producers a subsidy of $122,000,000.

The amount of silver monetized is 928,000,000 ounces; at $1.29 an ounce, produced $1,200,000,000 silver certificates. At 59 cents an ounce, the average price paid, the Treasury took a write-up profit, or tax, of 70 cents an ounce, or 120 percent, amounting to more than $649,000,000. At the present world price of silver of 43 cents an ounce the Treasury, domestic producers, and the silver speculators have taken a write-up profit of 86 cents an ounce, or 200 percent, amounting to $798,000,000. At 24½ cents an ounce they exacted a write-up profit from the American people of 104½ cents an ounce, or 420 percent, amounting to $969,760,000.

Silver monetized, $1,200,000,000. Eighty-five percent of all taxes are paid by the working people and the poor. At 59 cents an ounce these groups paid the Treasury 120 percent profit, or $552,000,000. At the present world price of silver of 43 cents an ounce, they paid 200 percent profit, or $678,000,000. At 24½ cents an ounce, which is perhaps more than silver is worth, the people earning their living by the sweat of their brows paid the Treasury, domestic silver producers and the silver speculators, a profit of 420 percent or $842,400,000.

Fiat currency expansion possibilities: Except for the inconsequential redeemability of silver, all our currency is now fiat. The Chief Executive now has authority to issue an additional four and one-half billion dollars in silver certificates. At the rate silver is being imported he can issue annually an additional billion. Under the Thomas amendment he can issue three billions of greenbacks and three billions more of fiat Federal Reserve notes. Or he can issue immediately eleven and one-half billions of fiat money. There are more than $7,000,000,000 of so-called gold certificates held by the Federal Reserve banks as excess reserves, against which it is possible to issue $18,000,000,000 in fiat Federal Reserve notes. If the Executive were to debase the gold dollar to the limit allowed by law, three and one-half billions more of fiat Federal Reserve notes could be issued. At the rate gold is being imported an additional $3,000,000,000 in fiat Federal Reserve notes could be issued annually. Or a total of twenty-four and one-half billion fiat Federal Reserve notes can be issued against the so-called gold certificates held by the Federal Reserve banks. This makes a total of $36,000,000,000 of fiat money that can be printed and put in circulation. Professor Beckhart, who testified before our committee, estimated that deposit liabilities in member banks can expand by $140.000,000,000. This, I submit, is monetary chaos.

The three graphs you see on the chart, if read well, point the way to a real diagnosis of America's present plight. The line between the two red disks represents the increase in deposits in member banks from 1932 to 1938. The heavy, black line represents the annual amount of commercial loans outstanding from 1919 to 1938. The red line represents the annual amount of new capital invested during this same period.

Although the amount of deposits are the highest in history, $36,211,000,000, and although interest rates are the lowest, the amount of loans outstanding is only $13,208,000,000. Deposits increased from $24,803,000,000 in December 1932 to more than $36,000,000,000 in December 1938, or 45 percent. Loans during the same period decreased from $15,204,000,000 to $13,208,000,000, or 7.8 percent. The average amount of new capital invested, as shown on the graph, from 1919 to 1930 was three and one-half billion dollars. The average amount of new capital invested annually in the last 6 years was $664,000,000, or approximately 19 percent of that of the former period just mentioned.

What is wrong here? Why is the dollar we use not demanded for loans and new capital? It is being contended by those who defend the present monetary state that our dollar is a good dollar. They cite as proof that our domestic dollar is accepted at its face value at home, as well as in foreign countries. Nothing could be further from the truth.

Can it be possible that those who argue this way do not know that there are two entirely different kinds of dollars in use? Do they not know that the dollar we use domestically is an altogether different kind than the one used by foreigners? Do they not know that our domestic dollar is not convertible into gold, that the other dollar is convertible into gold? Do they not know that foreigners accept our paper dollar at its full face value because it is fully convertible into gold? Can it be they do not know we accept it at its face value because we are compelled by law to do so? Do they not know that inconvertible paper money has never in a single instance been accepted at its face value by any people except under compulsion?

Citing the fact that the dollar is accepted at its face value by all foreign countries proves nothing more than that it is convertible into gold at its face value. What it would be accepted for or whether it would be accepted at all by foreigners if it were not convertible into gold is quite another matter. Surely no one is going to deny this. We are compelled to search elsewhere for a test of the quality of our domestic dollar. We must confine our investigation entirely to our own domestic markets, for it is here only that it is being used.

Why is there no demand for the dollar we use domestically in the lending and new capital markets? It never was as cheap as it is now, and there are more dollars stacked up in the banks for sale than ever before.

What has happened to our economy to cause people to suddenly stop borrowing and lending for present and future spending? The trouble is not hard to find. What is back of the dollar? Gold? No. The only thing back of it is whatever it happens to buy when it is spent. The lending and borrowing of dollars for commercial purposes and new enterprises requires the execution of long-term contracts. But that kind of contracts cannot be made unless they are valid contracts. People who lend their money out must have reasonable assurance they will receive in return the same value when the promise to pay comes due. Up to the present time, since social organisms have been formed, such assurance has been possible only when the payment in contracts was specified in terms of the standard unit of value. But the United States both de jure and de facto has no standard unit of value for domestic use. De facto it does have one for international use, that of gold.

Surely it is not going to be contended that the inconvertible paper dollar we use domestically is a standard unit of value. When in all the history of the world was such paper money ever recognized as a standard unit of value? Never.

What, then, is the meaning of all this? Nothing less than that the contract in the United States has been destroyed. It is not a question of whether business wants to or does not want to revive. It cannot. It is stopped by the insurmountable physical barrier of not being able to make contracts, especially long-term ones. Who is suffering most from the effects of this? The farmers, the wage earners, and the poor. Ten million able-bodied men with ten or fifteen billion dollars worth of labor for sale but no market, because the contract is destroyed. For the same reason, farmers have billions of dollars' of farm products which they must sell way below the cost of production. Whatever else may be necessary to restore prosperity in the United States, the one thing that must be done first is to restore the standard unit of value, which is gold. We must recoin the gold money and return it to the people. Until that is done demoralization and disintegration of our industry must continue.

Those who argue we cannot do this now, that our gold would all run away into foreign countries, that it would produce a shock, and so forth, are not telling us anything new. Those arguments have been used in every suspension of specie payments that has ever taken place. The only thing that will happen is exactly what always happened when nations came to their senses and returned to specie payments; namely, contracts will again be written which will permit the wheels of industry to turn and reemploy the millions who are idle and give them bread instead of a stone. [Applause.]

Mr. SOMERS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. MURDOCK].

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Mr. Chairman, a few moments ago, when the chairman of the committee in charge of this bill was making his speech, he spoke of the fact that silver producers in America might be put on the dole if the silver mines were closed. I interrupted him to say that I have evidence to the effect that all over the West, particularly in the State of Arizona, there are silver mines that are now producing or have been producing, but which, because of the lower price now that is being paid, are barely on the edge so far as working is concerned. Some of them have closed down.

I mentioned the fact that out on the desert near Chloride, Ariz., there are some workings of which I have pictures showing a typical small silver mine in the State of Arizona. I have in my hands some of these pictures.

Here is one showing a little camp that is not much more than a hole in the ground, but "there is silver thar." Here is pictured a little shack which has marked on it "$15 house" and beside it there is a $1,500 automobile. The man who sent me this stated that if we caused to operate the little silver mines throughout the West, the workers will buy automobiles, radios, refrigerators, and all those things produced in the manufacturing centers of the East. I point to another picture which shows a little larger silver mine, but with most of the physical equipment evidently in the 15 or 20 automobiles and trucks which you see standing about.

The writer makes quite a point of this contrast. He said, "Silver security or social security?" In this letter Mr. Tipton, of Chloride, Ariz., says:

CHLORIDE, ARIZ., April 12, 1939.

Hon. JOHN R. MURDOCK,
Congressional Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Thanks for the copy of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD which you sent me recently.

No doubt the East still feels they are in some way subsidizing silver. We have subsidized many different industries, as well as farming, in our time. It seems we also subsidized Europe to the tune of thirty-eight billions in the past 40 years. Now, in the silver bill it seems to me we are not subsidizing the mines but ourselves. I mean all of us that have merchandise or services to sell gain quite handsomely by seeing the mines operate to their full capacity.

Last month the Tennessee mine here shut down. There were 150 men thrown out of work. Most of them went on social security or on relief of one kind or another, and a few of the better miners got jobs elsewhere. All this because of the drop in price of silver to 64.64 from the higher price level in force last year. They lost money for some 10 months and then quit. You can judge what will happen to this camp if the price goes below our present figure. It will be another ghost town, with 500 men thrown out of work.

If it were possible to do so, this little town could have taken over the mine and, with the estimated profit on the supplies both for the mine and the men, could have made up the deficit of $300 per month and kept going along. This would have still left a profit on the $22,500 pay roll spent in this community. Naturally, we have no machinery to handle such a scheme. But collectively, from a Government viewpoint, this can be done in the form of a silver bill that will actually be subsidizing ourselves. We subsidize ourselves to business prosperity, and the East gets a great share of this prosperity, as shown by the pictures I am enclosing for your use.

Please continue the good work, or we will have more ghost towns, more relief, more social security, etc.

Sincerely,

A. R. TIPTON.

They received in these silver camps up to January 1, 1938, 77 cents per ounce for their silver. The present price is 64 cents up to June 30, 1939. If we do not pass this bill, the price will go lower. I regret that the price was dropped 13 cents at the beginning of 1938.

This man says that most of the workers, 500 in this small camp, will be thrown on relief if the mine closes down. He states further the mine will close down, as others have already done, if the price of 64 cents per ounce or better is not maintained.

I want to ask in all fairness, Mr. Chairman, whether it is not better to cause these men to dig into the bowels of the earth and bring forth the white metal which from before the time of Abraham has been money than to close the mines and put these men on the dole? These men are getting wealth from the earth. They are helping our monetary system. Some gentlemen on the other side of the aisle talk as though they were merely pulling boulders out of a hole and being paid taxpayers' money for doing so.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I am sorry; I do not have time.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. I should like to ask a question right there. What is the cost of production per ounce of silver in the mine to which the gentleman has referred?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I am sorry; I do not have time to yield. I wish I had more time.

I want to get at the kernel of this matter. All over the West mines have been closed down in the year 1939 because the price of silver dropped from 77 cents an ounce to 64 cents an ounce. I believe in all seriousness we ought to encourage these men in this field of production. This price is not properly a subsidy, but if it were, it would be better and cheaper than to carry these miners on relief.

Now, I wish to go into a matter which was broached by the gentleman who preceded me. One gentleman talked about the unconstitutionality of the present legislation. I wonder if the gentleman has read the Constitution of the United States. I have read it. In article I, section 8, there is the following clause:

> Congress shall have power to coin money and regulate the value thereof.

I wish to ask the gentleman who preceded me whether he wants Congress to fix the value or whether he wants the American banking system, the bankers of this country, to fix the value of our money.

Mr. Chairman, we have been derelict in our duty by not taking back to the Congress of the United States the constitutional power which the framers of the Constitution gave to our hands. [Applause.] We should have taken it back. We have for more than 100 years increasingly permitted the banking interests of this country to furnish our money, and at a great cost. From 1863 to 1920 we have had some sound bank currency, but even national-bank notes were inelastic.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Will the gentleman estimate how many of the gentlemen who applauded one of his latest remarks really meant by their applause that the Congress and the people of America should have the right to issue their own money, and how many of them really had in mind that we should leave this power in the hands of the banking system where it now rests?

May I further ask, Does the gentleman believe it is possible to return to the gold standard without surrendering completely the control of the volume and value of our money to the private banking interests, which inevitably will monopolize the gold?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I do not believe that it is possible or just to return to the former gold standard. I am not willing to surrender further the control of our money system to the banking interests.

Now, Mr. Chairman, just a little sketch of our American money history. We started out with both gold and silver as a basis for our money. Congress was given power to coin money and the States were forbidden to make anything but gold and silver a legal tender in payment of debt, so says the Constitution.

We permitted the banks 100 years ago to furnish us a new kind of money, paper currency, "wildcat" bank notes. You recall that the panic of 1837 was caused by this country being flooded by "wildcat" bank notes. In those days the banks controlled our money with a vengeance, and look what calamity came upon the country as a result of it. We had practically no governmental paper money until the days of the Civil War. A sound-money man, S. P. Chase, Secretary of the Treasury at that time, was very reluctant to have us issue greenbacks, but as a wartime emergency they were issued. I know they did depreciate, but being wisely limited, they served a useful purpose through all these years. I wish to say to my friends I am as much of a sound-money man as any man on the left-hand side of the aisle.

For many years following the Civil War there was a conflict between two kinds of paper money, greenbacks on the one hand and national-bank notes on the other. Remember, those national-bank notes were issued based on a bonded, interest-bearing debt. After the War between the States many men, I think the poor class of the country, said, "Why should we pay interest on bonds? Why should we perpetuate a national debt in order that we may have a peculiar kind of money?"

There was an insistent demand, especially on the part of the Greenback Party and the farmers, that we pay off our national debt, our bonds, with greenbacks. That was never done. The Nation went right on paying taxes to pay interest on bonds to have bank notes. We still have the $346,000,000 of greenbacks issued in the Civil War days, and have them to this very hour. The marvel is that we do not have more. I am not contending for flooding this country with greenbacks; and I must say that, in my judgment, Franklin D. Roosevelt is not an inflationist.

I have heard today a fear expressed of reposing too much power in the President and in the Secretary of the Treasury, or in continuing that power. Look at what Franklin D. Roosevelt might have done under the act passed early in his administration. He was given the power to devalue the gold dollar to the extent of 50 percent. He has not done that. He has devalued the gold dollar to the extent of only about 40 percent.

He was given the power to remonetize silver at any ratio he might see fit. He has not done that. He was given the power to cause to be issued by Executive order $3,000,000,000 in greenbacks. He has not done that. He was given power to bring about the issue of $3,000,000,000 in Federal Reserve notes. He has not done that. How can any man, in view of the history of the past 4 or 5 years, say that the President of the United States is apt to go crazy on this matter of inflation with that record before him?

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. Was not the giving of the power to devalue the gold content of the dollar and the exercise of that power due to the necessity of meeting similar actions by foreign countries and to protect ourselves?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. That is true. The chairman of the committee made a splendid presentation of that matter. In view of the fact that Great Britain has an equalization fund now larger than our own stabilization fund, we had to have that power in order to protect our foreign trade. Other countries have the same provisions. We must meet them with the same equipment. I do not anticipate that the President of the United States would think of using the further power to devalue the dollar, say, to the extent of 9 percent, which would be his if we pass this bill, except in case the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund is inadequate. I do believe the chairman of the committee was exactly right in saying we must take care of any future eventuality; and to do so, somebody must have that power. For that reason, with full confidence in the man who has not used one-tenth of the power he was given 4 or 5 years ago, I would continue that power in his hands.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I yield to the gentleman from Idaho.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. A lot has been said about a subsidy to the silver miners. Is it not a fact that all mining companies pay a large income tax and other taxes to the Government on their operations?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Yes; they certainly do. They constitute just that kind of business—and most of them are small business units—which we all profess to want to help. Mines, like many other lines of business, help to make up the economic foundation of many Western States. But in the Rocky Mountain States mining is basic and vital. Talk about removing fear and restoring confidence. One way to do that—and I want to do just that for all business—one way to do it for the mining West is to pass this bill.

The gentleman who just preceded me was quite vehement. He talked about robbing the American people to pay somebody. He talked about a subsidy for silver. Now, just what have we done? We have bought silver at about 60 or 70 cents per ounce. No matter where we keep that silver, it is not sterile, it is at work through its paper representatives—silver certificates. We have put that into the monetary system at $1.29 an ounce. Who gets the benefit? The American Government gets part of it through seigniorage profits, and stagnant business gets a stimulus through these new silver certificates.

The gentleman who preceded me talked about former kings who used to fleece their subjects by debasing the coinage. He says we have a gentler term for it—we merely speak of devaluation—but I want to tell you that in the days when kings, like old Henry VIII, changed the coinage they pocketed the difference, but when we change the coinage the Government of the United States pockets the difference for the benefit of all of us, instead of a few of us. Where did that $2,000,000,000 in this stabilization fund come from?

It is a part of the monetary gain to the Treasury of the United States because of the devaluation of the dollar 40 percent. We might have reduced our debt in that amount if we had seen fit, but, instead of doing so, we saw fit to put that sum in the hands of the Secretary of the Treasury so that he might take care of our foreign trade, as he has done.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I will be very glad to yield.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Is it not a fact that almost all the mining companies pay about 30 percent of their income to the Government in some form of taxation?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. As I said before, mining is basic in the West, and while I am not competent to say exactly, I think probably the gentleman is correct.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. And, as a matter of fact, the metal that is produced in this country and used for money increases the Government's taxable income, whereas metal produced in other countries does not?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. In the little town of Chloride, Ariz., 500 men have been working. Some 150 of them are not working now because we dropped the price of silver.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I will be glad to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. Would the gentleman have any objection to an amendment which would provide for the continuation of the Government purchase of domestic silver and the discontinuance of the purchase of foreign silver, and suppose we raised the domestic price to 77 or 80 cents?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Now, are you enticing me? [Laughter.]

Mr. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN. No; not at all, because we have purchased nearly 2,000,000,000 ounces of foreign silver and only a small quantity of domestic silver.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I am more interested in the domestic silver, of course, but I am not competent to say about foreign silver, because I do not have all the facts at my command in regard to foreign trade. I do want this purchase of domestic silver to continue, because a large proportion of our West depends upon the price of silver. You understand that the great copper-mining camps of the West have silver as their byproduct, and I know of great camps like Superior, Ariz., where the silver which they produce is their cream or profit.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I will be glad to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. Would not the gentleman agree that so far as the purchase of foreign silver is concerned, it is primarily a measure taken in order to stimulate foreign trade with the nation from which it is bought? It gives those nations American exchange and thus helps Americans who have goods to sell to them.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I have heard a good deal about stimulating foreign trade and exchanging cotton for foreign silver, but that, of course, is another proposition.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. May I ask the gentleman a further question?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I will be very glad to have the gentleman do so.

Mr. VOORHIS of California. A great deal has been said about sound money. From the standpoint of the people of the United States, does not the gentleman agree that sound money is money that maintains a constant value in terms of the commodities that our people produce and buy?

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. That is a correct definition, as I see it.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SOMERS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. In conclusion, let me say to the Committee that I, too, want a stable dollar, not a rubber dollar. I want one that is of constant purchasing power, one which the investing public may use with some sense of security. If we will but make a wider use of both gold and silver, as the fathers directed us to do, we shall be less dependent upon our banks. I recognize the importance and need of banks in our complex industrial society to facilitate exchange and to perform other vital economic functions, but not to perform the sovereign function of supplying and controlling the Nation's money.

I am convinced that we can have a Government-controlled money; and not only do I think we can have such, but I think it is our constitutional duty as the national lawmaking body to see that we do have it and not depend on any small set of businessmen—the banks, for instance—to furnish us that money. That is the thing for which I plead, in a national sense, more than for my own silver-producing State, though, as you know, I have a strong local interest in that silver-producing State. [Applause.]

Mr. REED of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I yield 8 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH].

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I listened with interest to the chairman of the Committee on Rules [Mr. SABATH] this morning when he gave credit to the Democratic Party for the rise in agricultural prices and the promotion of trade because of the passage of the Gold Reserve Act back in 1934. The Chicago Tribune a few days ago in its main editorial has this to say:

GOVERNMENT REGULATION OF BUTTER

Butter last week sold at the lowest price since 1933, and before 1933 butter had not reached the price levels except on one occasion in the present century.

That is typical of the agricutural prices at the present time. Wheat is selling around 67 cents, corn around 47 cents, and cotton at 8½ cents. When the Gold Reserve Act went into effect we were shipping between eight and ten million bales of cotton abroad. Now we are selling around 4,000,000 bales, and probably only three and a half million this year. Nevertheless, the gentleman from Illinois has claimed credit for these almost all-time low levels for agricultural products as a result of the passage of the Gold Act. What actually has this Gold Reserve Act done for the American people? When we went off the gold standard, we had $4,000,000,000 worth of gold. By going off the gold standard and depreciating the dollar we increased that by $2,800,000,000 more, or a total of $6,800,000,000 of gold. Since that time we have bought from foreign lands $8,000,000,000 of gold at $35 an ounce. Seventy percent of that gold is produced in the British Empire, and a large part of it is produced in South Africa at around $18 to $20 an ounce.

We pay the British Empire $35 an ounce for this gold, almost twice the cost of production. In my humble opinion, this $16,000,000,000 gold fiasco is the most incredible act and the most fantastic act under the New Deal. We have turned the American people into a milch cow, to be milked by foreign nations. We have erected a golden calf to worship, which is of no more use to us than was the golden calf set up in the time of Moses. We pay double the price for gold from foreign lands, which is dug out of the ground in South Africa, and we bring it over here and we bury it again in the ground out in the State of Kentucky, where we have almost $16,000,000,000 of gold. It feeds nobody. We cannot eat this gold. It clothes nobody. It helps nobody to get a job. It houses nobody, and yet every day this gold rush to America continues. We are the Santa Claus of the world; we are the angels to the gold-producing nations of Africa and to such nations as Soviet Russia, Australia, and Canada, and for those countries like England, France, and Holland, who have unloaded their large gold reserves on us at $35 an ounce.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. For a brief question.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. The gentleman speaks of burying the gold. How much gold was in actual circulation during the Harding, Hoover, and Coolidge administrations?

Mr. FISH. I have told the gentleman. We had $4,000,000,000 worth of gold, ample gold to stay on the gold standard. We were on the gold standard in those days.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Did the gentleman see any gold in circulation?

Mr. FISH. The gentleman and myself or anybody else could then go to a bank and get a dollar in gold in exchange for a paper dollar whenever he wanted it, but confidence was such that the American people did not want the gold. Our money was backed up by an ample gold reserve, and I say to the Republican Members of the House that there is no reason in the world why we should not put this hoarded gold back in circulation, which is now buried in Kentucky, and let people go to the banks and get gold as they did under the Republican administration. I doubt if they would withdraw one billion out of the fifteen and a half billions.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. Yes.

Mr. SCHAFER of Wisconsin. Does the gentleman think it is about time that Congress stopped being a rubber stamp for both President Roosevelt and Secretary Morgenthau and the international bankers, and stopped playing Santa Claus to the international bankers' associations in other lands?

Mr. FISH. I say to the gentleman, that President Roosevelt and the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Morgenthau, are the two men responsible for this gold fiasco. They are its sponsors. They have a bear by the tail and they do not know how to let go. They do not know what to do with this gold today. They cannot sell it, and we are acquiring more and more gold. When I spoke on this subject 2 years ago, we had over 50 percent of the gold of the entire world, hampering and undermining world trade, because there was not sufficient foreign exchange to carry it on, a most unhealthy and unnatural situation.

Today we have almost two-thirds of the gold in the world, and if we continue this fantastic scheme of buying foreign gold at $35 an ounce when it is produced at $10 an ounce in Soviet Russia and $18 or $19 an ounce in Africa, we will have 75 to 90 percent of the gold of the world by 1940. Then what will gold be worth? Then those nations without any gold will say, "We have no more use for gold. We must have another medium of exchange." We will have no more use for gold as a monetary value. We will then be holding most of the gold in the world, and it would not be of any more use than holding so much iron. It would not be as much use as holding tin. We cannot afford to continue to monopolize and hoard gold, as it will lead to financial chaos and to world economic disaster.

We on the minority side have a perfect right to ask, "What do you propose to do with this gold? Are you going to continue to buy foreign gold at $35 an ounce?"

I am not opposed to buying American-produced gold at $35 an ounce. I am not opposed to subsidies for our own gold and silver producers. Great Britain owes us $5,000,000,000 in war debts, and we have already given her two and a half billion dollars more in profit on gold that we have purchased from her subjects. Her whole armament program can be paid for out of the profits they make by our inane policy of buying their gold at twice the cost of production. It is such things as that to which I object, of squandering our resources to buy gold from foreign nations at an artificial and arbitrary price, enriching them and impoverishing ourselves.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. FISH. Yes; I yield.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Is it not true that during the World War we sold silver which we had piled up in the country since 1878 at a profit?

Mr. FISH. I do not want to talk about silver, because that is a mere flea bite. That is as nothing compared to this fantastic gold-buying and hoarding program by the New Deal theorists. One amounts to millions; the other amounts to billions.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. REED of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISH. No; I cannot yield any more.

The issue before us in this House, however, is not the gold issue. The main issue today and the question when we vote upon this bill is whether the Congress wants to continue to relinquish its right to control and regulate the value of the dollar. The issue is, whether we will take back from the President some of the monetary powers we have already conferred on him and restore representative government in the United States. That is the main issue. The Silver Act permits the President to buy from the domestic and home producers silver at a certain price. We empowered the President to buy our silver at a price higher than the prevailing price on foreign markets. The stabilization fund is not involved. We Republicans are not opposing continuation of the stabilization fund. We do not like its secrecy. We think it is un-American. We want a proper and adequate audit of the stabilization fund. We want reports made every 6 months or so to the Congress of the United States, with an adequate audit of the stabilization fund. The main issue is to restore to Congress the control and regulation of the value of money, and to take that power back from the President which he now has, to reduce the price of the dollar from 59 cents to 50 cents. Already there is fear and dread throughout the land. We have idle capital, idle wealth, and idle manpower. If you want to put that idle wealth and idle capital together to provide employment for our idle wage earners, we must restore confidence and do away with the fear that now exists by taking back from the President this power to devalue the dollar which tends to create business uncertainty and to continue these unstable conditions and fear in America. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. SOMERS of New York. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. MCCORMACK, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill H. R. 3325, had come to no resolution thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

Leave of absence was granted to Mr. BLAND, Mr. HART, and Mr. WELCH for April 19 and 20 to attend a meeting of the Board of Visitors of the Coast Guard Academy.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MARTIN J. KENNEDY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an editorial appearing in today's Herald-Tribune.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend the remarks I made in the Committee of the Whole today and to include therein a letter, a portion of which I read.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 19, 1939

The Chaplain, Rev. ZeBarney T. Phillips, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Thou who alone art holy and hast written Thy law in our hearts that we might have discernment and knowledge of that which is good: Grant to us, we beseech Thee, the guidance of Thy spirit, that we may cherish and follow the truth as revealed in the life of the Son of Man and obey that which speaks to us with authority in our higher moods, that, fashioning our lives by His life, we may contribute by our action and influence to the bettering of the world and to the happiness of others.

Forgive, dear Lord, our misspent days, our vain complaints, our too feeble interests in the progress of mankind; and grant that from this day we may redeem the time in purer, finer service, content only in the faith that Thou art leading us and teaching us the while, and that in this way we shall come through the night to the dawn, to a city that hath foundations, to a city of light which Thou hast prepared for Thy faithful children. Grant this our prayer for the sake of Thy dear Son, Jesus Christ. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Monday, April 17, 1939, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

R. 5219) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in certain appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and for prior fiscal years, to provide supplemental appropriations for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1939, and June 30, 1940, and for other purposes, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado, Mr. WOODRUM of Virginia, Mr. CANNON of Missouri, Mr. LUDLOW, Mr. THOMAS S. MCMILLAN, Mr. SNYDER, Mr. O'NEAL, Mr. JOHNSON of West Virginia, Mr. TABER, Mr. WIGGLESWORTH, Mr. LAMBERTSON, and Mr. DITTER were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4852) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes; asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado, Mr. JOHNSON of Oklahoma, Mr. SCRUGHAM, Mr. FITZGERALD, Mr. LEAVY, Mr. RICH, Mr. CARTER, and Mr. WHITE of Ohio were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message further announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 961. An act for expenditure of funds for cooperation with the public-school board at Wolf Point, Mont., for completing the construction, extension, equipment, and improvement of a public-school building to be available to Indian children of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, Mont.; and

S. 1574. An act to authorize the attendance of the Marine Band at the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic to be held at Pittsburgh, Pa., from August 27 to September 1, inclusive, 1939.

PREVENTION OF PERNICIOUS POLITICAL ACTIVITIES

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, I ask leave to withdraw the motion entered by me on the 17th instant to reconsider the vote by which Senate bill 1871, to prevent pernicious political activities, was passed on Thursday last.

I further wish to say for the information of my colleagues that I have conferred with the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH], and he and I have reached an understanding as to section 9 of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the withdrawal of the motion? The Chair hears none, and the motion is withdrawn.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I merely wish to say that, as the Senator from Pennsylvania has stated, he and I did confer at length on yesterday concerning this measure. As I stated on the floor day before yesterday, it was not my thought or belief at any time that section 9 related to policy-making officials such as the members of the President's Cabinet, and I am perfectly willing that policy-making officials should be excluded from the provisions of section 9 and will be glad to assist in working out the proper amendments to bring about that end.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The motion to reconsider having been withdrawn, Senate bill 1871, which has been sent back to the Senate in compliance with its request, will be returned to the House of Representatives.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. MINTON. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS] is unavoidably detained from the Senate.

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], and the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LUCAS] are absent on important public business.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY] are members of the Board of Visitors to the Coast Guard Academy, and therefore are necessarily detained from the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-six Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

SENATOR FROM ILLINOIS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the credentials of JAMES M. SLATTERY, of Illinois, appointed a Senator to fill the vacancy caused by the death of James Hamilton Lewis, late a Senator from the State of Illinois, which were ordered to be placed on file and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF ILLINOIS,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Springfield, Ill.

To the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES:

This is to certify that pursuant to the power vested in me by the Constitution of the United States and the laws of the State of Illinois, I, Henry Horner, the Governor of said State, do hereby appoint JAMES M. SLATTERY a Senator from said State to represent said State in the Senate of the United States until the vacancy therein, caused by the death of the Honorable James Hamilton Lewis, is filled by election, as provided by law.

Witness His Excellency our Governor, Henry Horner, and our seal hereto affixed at Springfield, Ill., this 14th day of April A. D. 1939.

[SEAL] HENRY HORNER, Governor.

By the Governor:

EDWARD J. HUGHES,
Secretary of State.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE DURING ADJOURNMENT

Under authority of the order of the 17th instant,

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, was received on April 18, 1939, by the Secretary of the Senate.

The message communicated the information that the House of Representatives had passed without amendment the following bills of the Senate:

S. 961. An act for expenditure of funds for cooperation with the public-school board at Wolf Point, Mont., for completing the construction, extension, equipment, and improvement of a public-school building to be available to Indian children of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, Mont.; and

S. 1574. An act to authorize the attendance of the Marine Band at the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic to be held at Pittsburgh, Pa., from August 27 to September 1, inclusive, 1939.

The message also communicated the information that the House had passed the bill (S. 518) to provide for the further development of cooperative agricultural extension work with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further communicated the information that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolutions, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 199. An act to amend section 10 (b), (c), and (d) of the act of June 26, 1884, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 46, sec. 599), relative to the allotment of wages by seamen;

H. R. 289. An act for the relief of officers and soldiers of the volunteer service of the United States mustered into service for the War with Spain and who were held in service in the Philippine Islands after the ratification of the treaty of peace, April 11, 1899;

H. R. 805. An act to extend further time for naturalization to alien veterans of the World War under the act approved May 25, 1932 (47 Stat. 165), to extend the same privileges to certain veterans of countries allied with the United States during the World War, and for other purposes;

H. R. 1782. An act to amend section 4335 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relative to change of masters of vessels;

H. R. 1784. An act to amend section 4498 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended, relative to the renewal of licenses of vessels;

H. R. 1786. An act to amend section 4325 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended, relative to renewal of licenses of vessels;

H. R. 2179. An act to ratify and confirm certain interest rates on loans made from the revolving fund authorized by section 6 of the Agricultural Marketing Act, approved June 15, 1929 (46 Stat. 11), and for other purposes;

H. R. 2296. An act to restore certain benefits to World War veterans suffering with paralysis, paresis, or blindness, or who are helpless or bedridden, and for other purposes;

H. R. 2320. An act to provide domiciliary care, medical and hospital treatment, and burial benefits to certain veterans of the Spanish-American War, the Philippine Insurrection, and the Boxer Rebellion;

H. R. 3234. An act to provide for the completion of the Navy and Marine Memorial;

H. R. 3406. An act for forest protection against the white-pine blister rust, and for other purposes;

H. R. 3800. An act to amend section 8 (e) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended;

H. R. 3955. An act to amend section 335 (d) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938;

H. R. 4646. An act to provide means by which certain Filipinos can emigrate from the United States;

H. R. 5076. An act to authorize further relief to water users on United States reclamation projects and on Indian reclamation projects;

H. R. 5375. An act to promote nautical education, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5407. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto;

H. R. 5479. An act granting annual and sick leave with pay to substitutes in the Postal Service;

H. J. Res. 221. Joint resolution authorizing the President to invite other nations to participate in the Sacramento Golden Empire Centennial commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of Sacramento by Capt. John A. Sutter;

H. J. Res. 241. Joint resolution providing for the participation of the United States in the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of the United States Lighthouse Service; and

H. J. Res. 258. Joint resolution to amend section 8 (f) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED

The message also communicated the information that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled joint resolution (H. J. Res. 224) to authorize the painting of the signing of the Constitution for placement in the Capitol Building, and it was signed by the Vice President.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4852) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for other purposes, requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. HAYDEN. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the conference asked by the House of Representatives, and that the Vice President appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. HAYDEN, Mr. MCKELLAR, Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, Mr. ADAMS, and Mr. NYE conferees on the part of the Senate.

WAGE AND HOUR DIVISION, DEPARTMENT OF LABOR (S. DOC. NO. 64)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting an amendment to the Budget for the fiscal year 1940, in the text of the appropriation for the Wage and Hour Division, Department of Labor, for the administration of the Fair Labor Standards Act, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

SOLICITATION BY MAIL OF PROCUREMENT OF DIVORCES IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Postmaster General, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to prohibit the use of the mails for the solicitation of the procurement of divorces in foreign countries, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of Puerto Rico, which was referred to the Committee on Claims:

Concurrent resolution to petition the Congress of the United States and competent authorities to promote legislation appropriating reasonable compensation for the Puerto Rican laborers who rendered services at various places in the United States in the year 1918 in war industries

Whereas in 1918 expeditions of Puerto Rican laborers were organized which went to various places in the United States to engage in war industries; and

Whereas these expeditionary laborers cooperated with the American Government at a time when it was involved in the World War; and

Whereas the Government of the United States has rendered assistance to the soldiers who went to the battlefield, and to their families; and

Whereas these manual laborers and intellectuals have not been compensated for the disinterested services rendered by them: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the house of representatives (the Senate of Puerto Rico concurring):

First. To petition the Congress of the United States and competent authorities to promote adequate legislation for reasonable compensation to the expeditionary laborers who went to various places in the United States in 1918 to engage in war industries.

Second. To petition likewise that such legislation be made extensive to their needy families.

Third. That a copy of this resolution be sent to the presiding officers of the two Houses which form the Congress of the United States, to the President of the United States, to the Resident Commissioner for Puerto Rico in Washington, and to the Governor of Puerto Rico.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following joint resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, which was referred to the Committee on Immigration:

Joint Resolution 1

Joint resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States of America to provide for the issuance, by the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the United States Department of Labor, of certificates of citizenship to all persons residing in the Territory of Hawaii who are citizens of the United States and who apply for such certificates and present due proof of such citizenship

Whereas, through the cooperation of the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the United States Department of Labor, provision has been made in subdivision E of rule 11 of the Immigration Rules and Regulations for the issuance of certificates of citizenship to citizens of the United States who are bona fide residents of the Territory of Hawaii; and

Whereas said subdivision E of rule 11 requires that the applicants for such certificates of citizenship must show that they actually intend to depart temporarily from the Territory of Hawaii and the officers of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, acting under said rule 11, refuse to issue such certificates or to investigate claims of citizenship unless the applicants show to the satisfaction of the Immigration and Naturalization Service that they are about to travel to continental United States or other parts of the world; and

Whereas such certificates are not issued unless the applicants contemplate such travel, and there is danger in the case of such citizen as are not contemplating immediate travel, that the necessary proof of their birth in the Hawaiian Islands, or other facts necessary to establish their citizenship in the United States, will be lost by death or removal from the Territory of Hawaii of witnesses who can testify to such facts or otherwise; and

Whereas the certification of the citizenship, upon due application and proof being made therefor, is a matter of vital importance to the young citizens of oriental ancestry in the Territory of Hawaii, and if provided for will tend to produce greater security and satisfaction in such citizenship and will tend to create better and more loyal citizens of the United States: Now, therefore,

Be it enacted by the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii:

SECTION 1. That the Congress of the United States of America be, and it is hereby, urgently requested to provide by appropriate and adequate legislation for the issuance of certificates of citizenship of all persons residing in the Territory of Hawaii who are citizens of the United States and who apply for such certificates to the Immigration and Naturalization Service of the United States Department of Labor and furnish due proof of such citizenship, regardless of the intention on the part of such applicants to travel or not to travel in the immediate future.

SEC. 2. That duly authenticated copies of this joint resolution be transmitted to the Delegate to Congress from Hawaii, the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Labor of the United States, and each of the two Houses of the Congress of the United States of America.

SEC. 3. This joint resolution shall take effect upon its approval.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, which was ordered to lie on the table:

Senate Concurrent Resolution 11

Be it resolved by the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii (the house of representatives concurring), That the Congress of the United States of America be, and it hereby is, respectfully and urgently requested so to amend the Adams-Ellender bill (S. 69), as to remove therefrom the unfair, unjustified, and wholly un-American discrimination against the Territory of Hawaii in the changes in sugar allotments proposed in the bill; and be it further

Resolved, That certified copies hereof be forthwith forwarded to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States, the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Agriculture, Senator WILLIAM H. KING, chairman of the Joint Committee on Hawaii, Senator MILLARD E. TYDINGS, chairman of the Senate Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, and to the Delegate to Congress from Hawaii.

The VICE PRESIDENT also laid before the Senate a telegram in the nature of a petition from Mrs. Mattie Jacobs, of Tulsa, Okla., praying for the adoption of liberalizing amendments to the H. O. L. C. Act, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

He also laid before the Senate a letter in the nature of a petition from Omicron Chapter, Kappa Beta Pi International Legal Sorority, Washington, D. C., praying for the enactment of the so-called Sheppard bill, being the bill (S. 1610) to prevent discrimination against graduates of certain schools and those acquiring their legal education in law offices in the making of appointments to Government positions the qualifications for which include legal training or legal experience, which was referred to the Committee on Civil Service.

He also laid before the Senate a letter in the nature of a memorial from Local No. 326, Oil Workers International Union, of Rodeo, Calif., remonstrating against amendment of the National Labor Relations Act, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate a letter in the nature of a petition from the Chicago (Ill.) Woman's Aid, favoring the enactment of the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 67) to amend the Neutrality Act, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also laid before the Senate memorials of sundry citizens of Utica, N. Y., remonstrating against the enactment of the so-called Pittman neutrality resolution, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also laid before the Senate a letter from Emory E. Smith, consulting engineer, of San Francisco, Calif., relative to scrap iron and steel and the operation of the Neutrality Act, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also laid before the Senate petitions of sundry citizens of Alabama and New York, praying for the enactment of the so-called Wagner-Van Nuys-Capper antilynching bill, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution of the board of directors of the Baltimore (Md.) Association of Commerce, favoring the return of the United States frigate Constellation to Baltimore, which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. BONE presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Washington, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. VANDENBERG presented a petition of sundry citizens of Clare County, Mich., praying that the average cost of production be granted the American farmer, plus a fair profit, on all products produced by him and consumed within the United States, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. MEAD presented a resolution of the Central Civic Association of Hollis, N. Y., favoring the adoption of liberalizing amendments to the Federal Home Owners' Loan Act, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

He also presented a resolution of the city council of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., favoring the location of a new veterans' hospital at Saratoga Springs, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HOLT presented a resolution of Labor's Nonpartisan League, of Marion County, W. Va., favoring the enactment of the so-called "Oppressive Labor Practices Act of 1939," which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a petition of approximately 3,000 citizens of Parkersburg, Wood County, W. Va., favoring the enactment of legislation to prohibit the advertising of alcoholic beverages by press and radio, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. WILEY presented a resolution of the Common Council of Milwaukee, Wis., favoring adequate appropriations for river and harbor improvement work, particularly at the port of Milwaukee, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a resolution of the State Conservation Commission of Wisconsin, favoring the enactment of legislation to extend the temporary Coast Guard service on Madeline Island during the open season of navigation in lieu of any permanent service at the present time, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a resolution of the Common Council of the City of Sheboygan, Wis., favoring the adoption of the so-called Ludlow resolution providing a referendum on war, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented the following joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin, which was ordered to lie on the table:

Assembly Joint Resolution 48

Joint resolution memorializing Wisconsin Members in the Congress of the United States to exert every effort to secure for Wisconsin additional allotments for Works Progress Administration

Whereas the latest available figures show that there are in Wisconsin 18,082 cases certified by the relief department employable for Works Progress Administration; and

Whereas said cases are unable to be placed on Works Progress Administration due to lack of sufficient funds; and

Whereas said cases are now on direct relief costing the several counties of the State an average of $64 per case per month, or $1,157,248 per month; and

Whereas the foregoing situation is overburdening the Wisconsin property taxpayer, causing innumerable tax delinquencies and loss of property: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the assembly (the senate concurring), That this legislature memorializes Wisconsin's Members in the Congress of the United States to use every effort to secure additional allotments for Works Progress Administration so as to take employables off direct relief.

Resolved further, That properly attested copies of this resolution be sent to all Wisconsin Members in both Houses of Congress of the United States.

FOREIGN POLICY OF THE UNITED STATES—PRESERVATION OF PEACE

Mr. CAPPER. Mr. President, I feel it my duty at this time to present to the Senate what I believe is a fair cross section of the sentiment of the American people in regard to the foreign policy of the United States, especially in reference to the disturbed conditions in the Old World. These petitions are from Beloit, Larned, and Peabody, Kans.

In the past month I have received some 700 or more petitions to the Congress from Kansas and other western farm States. Some of the petitions were signed by three or four persons, others carried signatures running into the hundreds. They come from farmers and from residents of the small towns of America. I believe they give an accurate index of how a great majority of the people feel about the United States taking action which might embroil us in another European war. They are overwhelmingly against the United States taking any part in Old World conflicts. I myself feel the same way about it.

The letters I receive and the petitions which I intend to offer for reference to the Committee on Foreign Relations are almost unanimous in condemning the policies and actions of the dictator nations, especially the ruthless barbarity of the Japanese conquest of China. But they show an even more nearly unanimous agreement that the United States cannot hope and has no business to attempt to police Europe, Asia, Africa, or to settle the age-old boundary-line disputes in those continents. They are opposed to loans by the United States to belligerent nations. They are opposed to the sale of munitions of war to warring nations. Most of them are in favor of the war-referendum amendment to the Constitution, though the sentiment on this is not unanimous. They want the profits taken out of war.

They want peace—and they want peace by peaceful means.

I am going to read one of the petitions and ask that it be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations. It reads as follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

Earnestly desiring to save the Nation and its people from being drawn unnecessarily into foreign wars in which we ought not to be embroiled, we, the undersigned, petition your honorable body to:

Strengthen, not weaken, the Neutrality Act;

Mind our own business and keep out of foreign wars, follow the sound foreign policy laid down by Washington of avoiding foreign entanglements and alliances;

Stop all loans or credit advances to foreign governments at war;

Enact effective legislation to take the profits out of war;

Keep our battleships and soldiers out of foreign war zones;

Stop all shipments of war supplies to Japan or any other nation engaged in war;

Submit to the people for early ratification the war-referendum amendment, which would return to the people the sole power to declare or engage in war, except when an attack or a threatened attack is made upon the United States or any of its Territories or upon any nation in the Western Hemisphere by a nation or nations outside the Western Hemisphere.

Mr. President, in conclusion, I ask unanimous consent to have a few of these letters I have received on this subject included at this point as part of my remarks. They are typical of hundreds of others from farmers that have reached me in the past week protesting against this country going into a foreign war.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The letters presented by the Senator from Kansas will, without objection, be printed in the RECORD, and the petitions will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The letters presented by Mr. CAPPER are as follows:

LITTLE RIVER, KANS., March 28, 1939.

Hon. Senator CAPPER:

I have lived in this locality all my life (60 years), and I am well acquainted with thousands of people in central Kansas. I do not know of anyone who would not gladly sign this petition. I did not have the time to see more than the names enclosed, but again I will assure you that you cannot find any of your constituents who would favor our country taking part in any foreign wars. We still feel the effect of the World War. What would our Nation be today if we would have stayed out of the worthless conflict?

I want to take this opportunity to thank you for the great interest you are taking in the welfare of agriculture. I have farmed all of my life and have made a bare living, but I have a wife and five children that I am proud of. Have we accomplished anything in this world if we should sacrifice our children for the sake of boundary troubles in other countries? I say again, let our country take care of our own troubles at home.

Yours very respectfully,

VICTOR SWENSON.

BLUE MOUND, KANS., March 27, 1939.

Senator ARTHUR CAPPER,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I would like to add my voice in approval of giving the people of the United States a chance to vote on the question of whether or not our country should go to war. I think it should be put to the people and the people alone; they are the ones most vitally concerned. Of course, the exception would be in case our country is attacked. But the all-important question of war or not war should be left up to the people.

Sincerely,

MRS. A. J. BRADLEY
(Mother of five young sons).

FORMOSA, KANS., April 3, 1939.

DEAR SENATOR: We are very anxious over the war situation. We have two boys, one just old enough. He might have to go, so we are all back of you in your efforts to keep us on our own side of the waters. You have an interest in our prayers at all times. May God bless you in all you do in His cause.

As ever,

Mr. and Mrs. C. V. WARREN.

SEBASTIAN, TEX., March 31, 1939.

Mr. ARTHUR CAPPER,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: I have been a subscriber of your good weekly for a number of years.

I notice the subject, You Can Help Stop War. Instead of writing the amount of details, I made the subject brief, covering the subject so the voters may easily understand its meaning without doubt in their minds, and started among the citizens of our town and vicinity for their signatures and got the enclosed sheets filled, as you see, who were greatly pleased to sign. Only a few refused, not giving an intelligent reason for it.

I could have gotten some more names if I had taken more time, but I thought you would like to get these soon. This is a small town, but the people are loyal, you see.

May I have the honor of a reply as to whether you receive this or not, also what you think of it.

Yours very truly,

S. A. CLEVENGER.

WILMORE, KANS., March 29, 1939.

Senator CAPPER.

DEAR SIR: Please do everything you can for our peace amendment. We don't want war by any means. We want our blessed United States to steer clear of all European messes. Our Bible forbids us to go to war, and this is our only hope for a better life after this. I am a mother of three fine boys, and these are honest and God-fearing young men. And we do not believe in taking lives of others. Just let the men overseas fight their own battles. They got in the mess; now let them settle it! Please vote for peace, which I am sure you will.

Mrs. JAKE LEMON (a mother).

FORDYCE, NEBR., March 25, 1939.

Senator ARTHUR CAPPER,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Was just reading the Capper's Weekly and saw the petition about foreign wars.

The part which says mind our own business, this is very good in foreign wars and also in all business. If everyone would mind his own business, no matter how small the business, maybe we would not need fear wars or any other trouble.

Yours truly,

ZENO O. SUING.

HUMBOLDT, NEBR.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT AND CONGRESS: I am signing this paper and praying you to do all in your power to help keep peace. Let the other countries fight their own battles. They have been doing it. Let them continue until something can bring them to their senses. Let us protect our own country, but don't send our boys over there to help them. We did not start it. We bless our President and Congress for what it has done. God help keep us in peace. The following are a list of names that want peace.

Yours truly,

SILAS BOYD and ADDA BOYD.

GOLDEN, COLO., March 31, 1939.

Mr. ARTHUR CAPPER,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: When I received your Capper's Weekly and read the petition in regard to war, I thought I would see how the people felt in regard to it, so I circulated it among some of my friends and found they averaged about 98 percent. Just attend to our own business and keep out of war. I am a farmer.

Yours truly,

ERVIN SCHRACK.

WANETTE, OKLA., April 1, 1939.

Mr. ARTHUR CAPPER,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: I endorse every word on petition. Enclosed names I got in 1 hour. Not one failed to sign. You have hit the nail on the head in wording that petition.

Your friend,

J. H. TULLY.

Hon. Senator ARTHUR CAPPER,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. CAPPER: I sent you a list of names last year on the vote of the people. Could do the same, but as I don't drive the car it is hard for me to get around. But I could get all the names again that I sent you before. And please, dear Senator, do all you can. Also Senator REED, work for peace, as we mothers are heartbroken to think and worry is almost sickness to us. Our young boys, how we love them. Do we have to go through with it again? Have our Government keep out of foreign affairs. Our Government is spending us poor now. What else does he want? Is there no limit to him? We are depending so much on our Senators.

One of the worried mothers,

Mrs. MATT SLEDER, Niles, Kans.

QUINTER, KANS., March 31, 1939.

DEAR SENATORS AND CONGRESSMEN: We are heartily in accord with you on this vital question of war. I don't think we have any business meddling over there. I do think we have enough to look after here at home. We are praying and hoping we don't have to send our sons over there. I think it is up to you Senators and Congressmen to settle all these things and are hoping you will.

Mr. and Mrs. HARRY LINES.

ROLLA, MO., March 27, 1939.

Senator ARTHUR CAPPER,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Herewith please find the petitions with signatures to the bill introduced by Senator A. CAPPER and some fellow Senators.

In the name of these people I am thanking you very much for the splendid service you are rendering for this country, and want to say we are 100 percent with your sentiments on domestic and foreign affairs. Dear Mr. CAPPER, you wrote in your weekly, issue March 25, we should not be taking sides in affairs in Europe that we cannot understand nor hope to settle.

Now, here is a fact, Mr. CAPPER. I have a positive conviction, hardly any man in Europe could picture the situation better than you did, and there is no question that all the trouble abroad has been caused fundamentally in the unjust treaty at Versailles, and if old boundary lines are reestablished peace can be effected.

Respectfully yours,

CARL HERTFELDER.

PEABODY, KANS., March 24, 1939.

Mr. ARTHUR CAPPER.

DEAR SIR: Am enclosing the petition that we cut from Capper's Weekly (which we have taken since I was a small girl) and I and all my people surely agree with you on the subject of war. I wish I could send you a petition with at least 10,000,000 names on it against war. I feel that we should keep our lip absolutely out of affairs in Europe or "across the pond" anywhere, and that one boy's life is worth more than all our possessions over there or all the money we might make from munitions, etc. We also feel our own country is in no condition for war. We will do very well if we do not have conflict between our own people in our own country in a very short time, and I think President Roosevelt is working everything for his and his family's interests in more ways than one, both politically and financially. Everything for his own selfish ends so that he may become more powerful. And if we do go to war, we must not say one word of criticism against Germany, as I feel that we should feed our 1,000,000 undernourished children instead of using our money for war. It will be another great waste. One would think we had had our fill of waste in our United States in the last 6 years.

Sincerely, your friends,

Mr. and Mrs. FRANK C. CARNEY.

DISTRIBUTION OF RELIEF FUNDS—WAGE RATES

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I present certain telegrams from mayors of Michigan cities regarding the pending public works and relief measure introduced by the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], which I ask to have printed in the RECORD, and appropriately referred.

There being no objection, the telegrams were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DETROIT, MICH., April 18, 1939.

Senator VANDENBERG:

Reference Senate bill No. 1265. Respectfully request that you act to prevent discrimination on wage rates as between States. Distribution should be on basis of need instead of population.

Mayor JOHN L. CAREY, Dearborn, Mich.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., April 18, 1939.

Hon. ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG,
United States Senator:

Grand Rapids objects to Byrnes bill, Senate 1265; particularly same wage rate Nation-wide. Also object to proposed 33½ percent city contribution; past year's average 11 percent. Taxpayers will not bond for W. P. A. type projects.

GEORGE W. WELSH, Mayor.

DETROIT, MICH., April 18, 1939.

Hon. ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

Strongly protest Senate bill 1265, which would apportion all W. P. A. funds on basis of population and unemployment without any reference to different wage rates between States. Distribution of dollars instead of jobs leads to grossly unfair allocation among cities and States such as Detroit and Michigan where wage rates higher than in other sections of Nation. Bill would also require 33⅓ percent city contribution to W. P. A. projects, which would of course end W. P. A. as far as Detroit is concerned. Sincerely urge negative vote on this measure.

RICHARD W. READING,
Mayor of Detroit.

KALAMAZOO, MICH., April 18, 1939.

ARTHUR VANDENBERG,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

I urge you to give serious consideration to Senate bill 1265, which has to do with W. P. A. set-up. My objection to this bill is that it only considers welfare load and population. Does not give consideration to geographic location, which has a wide variation in labor rates. I believe this bill will discriminate against the industrial areas of the United States, and will naturally help to complicate relief where it is mostly needed. Please accept this merely as a suggestion from one who probably knows less about the condition than you do.

E. S. CLARK, City Manager.

PETITION—REVENUE FOR MUNICIPAL TREASURIES OF THE VIRGIN ISLANDS

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, I present a petition addressed to the Congress by a delegation from the Virgin Islands, composed of Hon. Lionel Roberts, member at large, municipal council, St. Thomas and St. John; chairman, municipal council, St. Thomas and St. John; vice chairman, Legislative Assembly for Virgin Islands; and Hon. Frederick D. Dorsch, chairman, municipal committee of St. Croix, and so forth; and Hon. Joseph Alexander, member, municipal council of St. Croix, and so forth; and Hon. Ralph Paiewonsky, member of municipal council for St. Thomas and St. John, and so forth; and Hon. Jacques M. Schiffer, member at large, municipal council of St. Thomas and St. John, and so forth; requesting the Congress to pass certain legislation; also statements from each of the petitioners supporting the petition.

I ask that the petition be printed in the RECORD and that the statements of the delegation be referred to the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs of the Senate for appropriate action.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the petition will be printed in the RECORD, and the statements mentioned by the Senator from Maryland will be referred as requested by him.

The petition presented by Mr. TYDINGS is as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 18, 1939.

PETITION TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES

Whereas heretofore, and on the 19th day of November 1938, and the 21st day of November 1938, respectively, the Legislative Assembly of the Virgin Islands of the United States, the duly constituted legislative branch of the government of the Virgin Islands of the United States, did resolve and petition the Congress of the United States as follows:

Resolution to petition the Congress of the United States to permit all internal-revenue taxes collected on liquors and articles arriving from the Virgin Islands into the United States to be credited to the municipal treasuries of the government of the Virgin Islands

Be it resolved by the Legislative Assembly of the Virgin Islands of the United States in session assembled:

1. Whereas all liquors and articles produced in the Virgin Islands and transported to the United States are subject to the Federal internal-revenue tax provided in the United States Code, title 26, section 1470 (February 24, 1919, ch. 18, sec. 1304, 40 Stat. 1142); and

Whereas it is provided by title 26, section 1463, "Deposit of internal-revenue collections: All internal revenue collected in and for account of the Philippine Islands shall accrue intact to the general government thereof and to be paid into the insular treasury (June 17, 1930, ch. 497, sec. 301, 46 Stat. 686)"; and

Whereas it is also provided by United States Code, title 26, section 1430, subsection (c), "Deposit of internal-revenue collections: All taxes collected under the internal-revenue laws of the United States on articles produced in Puerto Rico and transported to the United States, or consumed in the island, will be covered into the treasury of Puerto Rico (March 2, 1917, ch. 145, sec. 9, 39 Stat. 954; May 17, 1932, ch. 190, 47 Stat. 158)"; and

Whereas the basic industries of the Virgin Islands are the production of rum and sugar and the revenues derived from these two items would greatly enhance the rehabilitation of the Virgin Islands and their self-support: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Legislative Assembly of the Virgin Islands of the United States in session assembled, That the Congress of the United States be, and is hereby, petitioned to enact legislation to authorize the deposits of all internal-revenue collections on liquors and articles produced in the Virgin Islands and transported into the United States to accrue intact and to be paid into the municipal treasury of that municipality of the Virgin Islands where the articles were manufactured and from where they were shipped; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this petition be forwarded to the President of the Senate, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Secretary of the Department of the Interior, the Secretary of the Treasury, chairman of the Senate Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, and chairman of the House Committee on Insular Affairs.

Thus passed by the Legislative Assembly of the Virgin Islands of the United States, St. Thomas, November 19, 1938.

FREDERICK D. DORSCH, Chairman.
PAUL E. JOSEPH, Secretary.

RESOLUTION

Whereas the Territory of Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, and other sugar-producing areas enjoy the benefits of the Sugar Act of 1937, with particular reference to the sugar-processing tax; and

Whereas the sugar producers of the Virgin Islands constitute the largest source of municipal revenues for the maintenance and operation of the government of the Virgin Islands and represent the main wealth-producing industry in the Virgin Islands; and

Whereas recent and severe droughts and other climatic conditions over which we have no control have given a serious blow to this most hazardous industry; and

Whereas the return of the sugar-processing tax to producers in the Virgin Islands would greatly aid in the rehabilitation of the sugar industry: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Legislative Assembly of the Virgin Islands in session assembled, That the Congress of the United States be, and is hereby, petitioned to enact legislation to authorize the return to producers in the Virgin Islands of the sugar-processing tax collected on sugar exported from the Virgin Islands of the United States and to make applicable to the Virgin Islands all the benefits of the Sugar Act of 1937; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be forwarded by the chairman of the legislative assembly to the President of the Senate, Speaker of the House of Representatives, Secretary of the Department of the Interior, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Agriculture, chairman of the Senate Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, and the chairman of the House Committee on Insular Affairs.

Thus passed by the Legislative Assembly of the Virgin Islands of the United States, St. Thomas, November 21, 1938.

FREDERICK D. DORSCH, Chairman.
PAUL E. JOSEPH, Secretary.

Whereas the respective municipal councils of St. Thomas and St. John, and St. Croix, did, on or about the 31st day of January 1939, elect members of the said legislature delegates to the Congress of the United States to present justifications demonstrating absolute necessity and urgency for congressional enactment of the premises contained in the foregoing resolutions; and

Whereas we, Lionel Roberts, Frederick D. Dorsch, Joseph Alexander, Ralph Paiewonsky, and Jacques M. Schiffer, the duly elected representatives of the people of the Virgin Islands, on behalf of the people of the Virgin Islands did request the Honorable WILLIAM H. KING to introduce in the Senate on March 3, 1939, Seventy-sixth Congress, first session, S. 1685, and the Honorable Ross COLLINS to introduce an identical bill in the House on March 6, 1939, Seventy-sixth Congress, first session, H. R. 4773, which Senator KING and Congressman COLLINS did so introduce, and entitled:

"A bill to authorize the appropriation to the government of the Virgin Islands of the United States of taxes collected under the internal-revenue laws of the United States on liquors and other articles imported into the United States from the Virgin Islands; the return to the producers in the Virgin Islands of the benefit payments on sugar imported from the Virgin Islands to the United States under an act of Congress known as the Sugar Act of 1937; and also the repeal of the export duty on sugar in St. Croix, V. I."

Wherefore come your petitioners and respectfully pray the Congress of the United States to enact such legislation as introduced and above quoted, upon and for the reasons presented by the members of this delegation as justifications therefor and as hereinafter contained.

For the people of the Virgin Islands of the United States.
By the Virgin Islands delegation to Congress.

LIONEL ROBERTS, Chairman.
FREDERICK D. DORSCH.
JOSEPH ALEXANDER.
RALPH PAIEWONSKY.
JACQUES M. SCHIFFER, Counsel.

AMENDMENT OF BANKHEAD-JONES FARM TENANT ACT

Mr. AUSTIN. I introduce for appropriate reference a bill to amend section 3 of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be received and properly referred.

The bill (S. 2200) to amend section 3 of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, in connection with the bill I have just introduced, I wish to make the following explanation:

The bill corrects a defect in the operation of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act.

Section 4 of that act made it mandatory that the money appropriated for making loans to enable borrowers to pay for farms, and for necessary repairs and improvements thereon, should be distributed among the States on the basis of farm population and the prevalence of tenancy.

There are a few States, including the State of Vermont, where the proportion of farm tenancy is low. In those States no help can be given to a farm family which has the title to, but is about to lose, the home farm for the lack of refinancing.

The proposed amendment would remedy the defect in the act which was not intended, and would allot a certain percentage of money under the Farm Tenant Act for use in those States where the class who ought to be helped are not farm tenants, but who are equally as needy as farm tenants.

It is understood that the States particularly affected are Vermont, New Hampshire, Minnesota, and Wisconsin.

The amendment would not require any additional appropriation. It does not change any of the provisions of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act. It would make possible the writing down of the debts of the applicants and the lowering of the burden of interest. Those who could borrow are farmers personally occupying and operating family farms, as defined in the act. Also, they must be unable to refinance their mortgages from any other Federal agency or federally incorporated lending institution.

One of the chief benefits of the act is the encouragement of thrift and diligence and intelligent planning for farm management.

DONATION OF LIBRARY BY THE PRESIDENT FOR THE PRESERVATION OF EXECUTIVE PAPERS

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the Senate will recall that a few weeks ago the President announced that he was donating to the public his library and all his public papers, together with a portion of the Hyde Park estate. The purpose of the President is most laudable and unusual. His object is to preserve for all future generations his public papers, dating back to his tenure of office as Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and probably even back to his service in the Legislature of New York, extending down to the present, and so long as he shall hold office. It seems to me that that act on the part of the President has set a high mark in making available to the people the papers and records with respect to events in which he has taken part. Certainly the donation of a portion of the Hyde Park estate to the public in order to establish a library for the benefit of the American people is a very notable and worthy act on the part of the President.

Legislation is necessary in order to consummate the purpose of the President. I am introducing a joint resolution to accomplish that purpose. It is desirable that the joint resolution receive very early consideration. I wish to introduce it and have it referred to the Committee on the Library, so that that committee may take action.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be received and referred to the Committee on the Library.

(See S. J. Res. 118, by Mr. BARKLEY listed under the appropriate heading.)

HOUSE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS REFERRED

The bills and joint resolutions received from the House of Representatives on April 18, 1939, by the Secretary under authority of the order of the Senate of the 17th instant, were severally referred to committees, as indicated below:

H. R. 289. An act for the relief of officers and soldiers of the volunteer service of the United States mustered into service for the War with Spain and who were held in service in the Philippine Islands after the ratification of the treaty of peace, April 11, 1899; to the Committee on Claims.

H. R. 199. An act to amend section 10 (b), (c), and (d) of the act of June 26, 1884, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 46, sec. 599), relative to the allotment of wages by seamen;

H. R. 1782. An act to amend section 4335 of the Revised Statutes of the United States relative to change of masters of vessels;

H. R. 1784. An act to amend section 4498 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended, relative to the renewal of licenses of vessels;

H. R. 1786. An act to amend section 4325 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended, relative to renewal of licenses of vessels;

H. R. 5375. An act to promote nautical education, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 241. Joint resolution providing for the participation of the United States in the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of the United States Lighthouse Service; to the Committee on Commerce.

H. J. Res. 221. Joint resolution authorizing the President to invite other nations to participate in the Sacramento Golden Empire Centennial commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of Sacramento by Capt. John A. Sutter; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE

Mr. NEELY. Mr. President, the bill (S. 294) granting a pension to William Runyon, and the bill (S. 1202) granting a pension to Edward L. Pinney, were erroneously referred to the Committee on Pensions. I ask unanimous consent that that committee be discharged from the further consideration of both bills and that they both be referred to the Committee on Finance.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Committee on Pensions is discharged from the further consideration of the bills referred to by the Senator from West Virginia, and the bills are referred to the Committee on Finance.

PUBLIC WORKS AGENCY AND AMENDMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

Mr. BYRNES, from the Special Committee to Investigate Unemployment and Relief, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 2202. A bill to establish a Public Works Agency (Rept. No. 301); and

S. 2203. A bill to amend certain sections of the Social Security Act (Rept. No. 302).

Mr. LODGE submitted minority views on the bill (S. 2202) to establish a Public Works Agency, which were ordered to be printed as a part of Report No. 301.

Mr. DAVIS submitted individual views to accompany the bill (S. 2202) to establish a Public Works Agency, which were ordered to be printed as a part of Report No. 301.

Mr. MURRAY submitted individual views to accompany the bill (S. 2202) to establish a Public Works Agency, which were ordered to be printed as a part of Report No. 301.

Mr. MURRAY submitted minority views to accompany the bill (S. 2203) to amend certain sections of the Social Security Act, which were ordered to be printed as a part of Report No. 302.

ESTABLISHMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS AGENCY—AMENDMENTS

Mr. LODGE submitted an amendment, and Mr. Murray submitted several amendments intended to be proposed by them, respectively, to the bill (S. 2202) to establish a Public Works Agency, which were severally ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

AMENDMENT OF SOIL CONSERVATION AND DOMESTIC ALLOTMENT ACT

Mr. WILEY submitted an amendment in the nature of a substitute intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3800) to amend section 8 (e) of the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENTS TO AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. PEPPER submitted amendments intended to be proposed by him to House bill 5269, the Agricultural Department appropriation bill, which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed, as follows:

On page 86, between lines 11 and 12, insert the following:

"Emergency erosion control, Everglades region: For carrying out engineering operations and other erosion-control measures (including fire control and irrigation construction work to eliminate fire hazards) in the Everglades region of Florida, $1,000,000."

On page 86, line 13, strike out "$23,645,584" and insert in lieu thereof "$24,645,584."

REENROLLMENT OF SENATE BILL 828—AUXILIARY NAVAL VESSELS

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I submit a concurrent resolution and ask for its immediate consideration. It is somewhat of an emergency matter. It is very brief and explains itself.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The concurrent resolution will be read.

The legislative clerk read the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 14), as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, requested to return to the Senate the enrolled bill (S. 828) to permit the President to acquire and convert, as well as to construct, certain auxiliary vessels for the Navy; that if and when the said bill is returned by the President, the action of the Speaker of the House of Representatives and of the Vice President in signing the said bill be deemed to be rescinded; and that the Secretary of the Senate be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed, in the reenrollment of the said bill, to make the following correction, viz, on page 2, line 25, of the engrossed bill, strike out the figures "769" and insert in lieu thereof "768."

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, the language expresses the purpose of the resolution. It is to correct a citation in the original act.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the concurrent resolution was considered and agreed to.

INVESTIGATION OF VIOLATIONS OF RIGHTS OF LABOR—LIMIT OF EXPENDITURES

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH (for himself and Mr. DOWNEY) submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 126), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Whereas a subcommittee of the Committee on Education and Labor, acting pursuant to Senate Resolution 266, authorizing an investigation of violations of the rights of free speech and assembly and undue interference with the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively, initiated an inquiry of vital concern to the people of the States of California, Oregon, and Washington, which it was unable to complete because of lack of funds; and

Whereas there has been widespread public demand for the continuance of the work of the said subcommittee as evidenced by action taken by the National Grange, the American Federation of Labor, the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and numerous other organizations, urging an appropriation of additional funds for the use of the said subcommittee; and

Whereas the Associated Farmers of California, Inc., in a telegram to Senator HIRAM JOHNSON dated April 4, 1939, inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on that date, asked for an opportunity to be heard concerning any charges affecting it which might arise out of such inquiry: Therefore, be it

Resolved, That the limit of expenditures under Senate Resolution 266, Seventy-fourth Congress, second session, agreed to June 6, 1936, under Senate Resolution 70, Seventy-fifth Congress, first session, agreed to February 17, 1937, under Senate Resolution 154, Seventy-fifth Congress, first session, agreed to August 12, 1937, and under Senate Resolution 266, Seventy-fifth Congress, third session, agreed to May 18, 1938, to investigate violations of the right of free speech and assembly and interference with the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively is hereby increased by $100,000.

ADDRESS BY SENATOR GUFFEY AT UNIONTOWN, PA., JEFFERSON DAY DINNER

THE TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY—ADDRESS BY SENATOR MEAD

[Mr. MCKELLAR asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a radio address delivered by Senator MEAD on the subject The Objectives and Accomplishments of the Tennessee Valley Authority, which appears in the Appendix.]

LETTER FROM THOMAS R. AMLIE AND THE PRESIDENT'S REPLY THERETO

[Mr. SCHWARTZ asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD the letter addressed by Hon. Thomas R. Amlie to the President, under date of April 7, 1939, with reference to the withdrawal of his nomination to be a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the reply of the President thereto, which appear in the Appendix.]

ADDRESS BY HON. EDWARD C. JOHNSTON TO BRAZILIAN PUBLISHERS

[Mr. SCHWELLENBACH asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a radio address delivered by Hon. Edward C. Johnston, vice president of the Western Newspaper Union, to publishers of Brazil, on August 31, 1938, which appears in the Appendix.]

FOREIGN AGGRESSORS—ADDRESS BY REV. CHARLES E. COUGHLIN

[Mr. LUNDEEN asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a radio address on the subject Foreign Aggressors, delivered by Rev. Charles E. Coughlin on April 16, 1939, which appears in the Appendix.]

HELL'S CANYON—ARTICLE BY RICHARD L. NEUBERGER

[Mr. MCNARY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article by Richard L. Neuberger entitled "Hell's Canyon, the Biggest of All," published in the current issue of Harpers Magazine, which appears in the Appendix.]

NO WAR FOR US—EDITORIAL FROM FARM JOURNAL AND FARMER'S WIFE

[Mr. BONE asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article from the May 1939 issue of Farm Journal and Farmer's Wife, entitled "No War for Us," which appears in the Appendix.]

DEATH OF COL. JOHN JACOB ASTOR IN THE TITANIC DISASTER

[Mr. SMATHERS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article from the Atlantic City Press of April 12, 1914, and a letter from E. A. Higbee, relating to the death of Col. John Jacob Astor in the sinking of the Titanic, which appear in the Appendix.]

T. V. A. INVESTIGATION—PERSONAL STATEMENT

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

For several years I have been unjustly and falsely assailed by a man by the name of Cassidy, who says he is an engineer and was a colonel in the Army. Some time ago, probably a year or so ago, I made up my mind that I ought to reply on the floor of the Senate to some of his insinuations, inasmuch as his charges against me were of a nature that referred to my official action here. So far as I knew, however, these charges were not made publicly, or to other Members of the Senate. At that time I brought over to the Senate Chamber some correspondence, and thought I would speak on it; but after reflection I thought perhaps I ought not to bore the Senate with troubles that were more or less personal, although they did refer to my public duties here as a Senator; so I gave up the idea.

Recently, however, since the investigation by the joint committee of the T. V. A., facts have come to my knowledge which conclusively demonstrate to me that this man Cassidy has been carrying on a similar campaign with members of the investigating committee, and particularly with the chairman of the committee. I never heard anything about it until the investigation was all over, when the chairman of the committee, I presume moved by a sense of fairness which led him to believe I ought to see this correspondence, gave me the letter Cassidy had written to him and also to one of the employees of the joint committee engaged in making the investigation.

Mr. President, I deem it a duty that I owe to the Senate, and perhaps to the country, to do what I am about to do. It is an unpleasant duty, one that I have never before been called upon to perform. It is unpleasant because necessarily, since the man about whom I am going to talk is not a Member of the Senate, he will not enjoy the privilege of replying on the floor of the Senate to anything I may say. I desire to say, however, that I see several members of the joint committee doing me the honor of listening. I want to say particularly to those members of the committee, whether they be friends or foes of the T. V. A. or of me, that if I say anything which in any way, directly or indirectly, deviates from the truth in referring to the committee, to which I shall refer in the latter part of my remarks, I want them to rise here and now, and call my attention and the attention of the Senate to anything they deem erroneous or untrue.

Mr. President, this man Cassidy, ordinarily known as Colonel Cassidy, on January 28, 1935, wrote a letter directed to me, from which I wish to quote.

This letter is written on a letterhead as follows:

J. Edward Cassidy. M. Am. Soc. C. E., consulting engineer, 815 Fifteenth Street NW., Washington, D. C.

Another part of the letterhead says:

Power developments.

Everything from Mr. Cassidy that I shall quote from has that letterhead, with the exception of the location of the office. Sometimes it is located on Vermont Avenue NW., sometimes in Wilmington, Del., and I think at one or two other addresses.

It would be wearisome and, for the point I now want to make, unnecessary if I should read all of these letters. I have all of them, however, and I will put any one or all of them in the RECORD at the request of any Senator, or submit either these letters or any others contained in this bundle of correspondence to any Senator or to any committee desiring to examine them.

In the letter of January 28, 1935, after discussing some other questions not material to the point, Mr. Cassidy said:

> Later on, in 1934, I had prepared a very detailed program and estimates for the operation of the nitrate plants (and phosphoric-acid plants) at Muscle Shoals, and based on my investigations both in this country and abroad I showed Dr. H. A. Morgan and Dr. H. A. Curtis where fertilizer could be produced under my program with a saving of 46 percent to the farmer. I spent nearly 2 weeks at Knoxville going over details with these men on the assurance from Dr. H. A. Morgan that my services would be utilized as consulting engineer—

Do not forget that. That will occur a great many times—> on the chemical phases. In addition to laying all my figures before them, I was asked to turn over to Dr. Curtis and Professor Woolrich my views and estimates on the General Joe Wheeler Dam, which I did. I outlined a number of important changes over the Army engineers' plans in the Joe Wheeler Dam, and, incidentally, these are all being carried into effect in the construction now going on. I also gave them cost estimates, as the figures they were using were wrong, and, following turning over my figures, they used these estimates in publicity and calculations since that time.

When I left Knoxville October 2, 1934, Dr. H. A. Morgan said that the Board would pass on my retention as consulting engineer on the chemical end, and that I would hear from them on the 12th of that month, as he would put through the program I had outlined at the meeting on that date, and that I would be retained as consulting engineer. I did not hear from Dr. Morgan by wire or phone, as he promised, on the 12th, and not until I had written a couple of letters did I receive about two lines around October 28, stating that the Board had decided they were not in position to offer me the appointment. You see, they had gotten data and estimates—which have been used in toto—which they could not have gotten without paying thousands of dollars for same and could not have gotten them then, for there is no other engineer in this country that had spent $20,000 of his own money studying the whole question, including two trips to Europe for that purpose. It appeared to me, from the way things were done, that Dr. Morgan had assured me that I would be appointed consulting engineer in order to get the information he knew I had, and, having gotten it, he was through. That was contrary to the opinion I had formed of Dr. Morgan on the occasions I had met him, but his action without a word of explanation has seemed quite queer to me.

A couple of months after this had occurred I received a written statement from a man in the Knoxville office (who is not now with the T. V. A.) stating that as soon as it had been known that I was there with a big fertilizer program and had convinced Dr. H. A. Morgan that my program was sound, you were reached by long-distance phone and told what was going on and that you had better get down there and stop it. This statement further said that you came to Knoxville immediately after that and stayed there until after the Board had their meeting on or about October 12.

This man (in his sworn statement) said he heard you use this language to Dr. A. E. Morgan.

Now he is quoting from the alleged affidavit, which quotes me as follows:

"Dr. Morgan, you have got to stop that plan for making fertilizer in quantity immediately, and under no circumstances is Colonel Cassidy to be appointed to a position where he can force the issue."

That is the end of the quotation.

This is the first time I have had occasion to comment to you on the information that was sent to me voluntarily. I will say that I received somewhat similar information from an entirely different source to the effect that under no circumstances was I to be appointed in any capacity because of my interest in the production of fertilizers.

For days I went over my figures and estimates with Dr. H. A. Curtis, and he could not find any flaws in my calculations for I had been conservative in making them.

Frankly, I have never been able to fathom your bitter opposition to the production of fertilizer at Muscle Shoals under which the farmer would benefit greatly. The Wilson Dam was made possible by the National Defense Act of 1916, which provided for the manufacture of nitrates for explosives in time of war and fertilizer in time of peace. The House of Representatives would never have passed the appropriation bills of 1922 to resume construction of the Wilson Dam had it not been for a country-wide use of the slogan "Cheap fertilizer for the farmer." Even up to 1930 there was only a difference of 2,000 tons of nitrogen per annum between the proposal of the American Cyanamid Co. and the ideas of the Military Committee of the House. The House of Representatives, when it approved the Tennessee Valley Act of 1933 (the conference report), was under the impression that the nitrate plants and attendant phosphoric-acid plants were to be operating fully. Only three men in the House knew different, and these were the three House conferees—who did not tell the House what had been understood in conference.

Mr. HILL rose.

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator from Alabama was then in the House of Representatives, was then a member of the Military Affairs Committee, afterward its chairman, and he was in the conferences which were held. I should be glad to have the Senator from Alabama interrupt me now, if he desires, and to have him state whether this statement of Colonel Cassidy is true or false.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KING in the chair). Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. HILL. I wish to state that the statement of Colonel Cassidy is absolutely false. The conferees representing the House, of whom I was one, made it absolutely clear to the House of Representatives, both in their report to the House, as required under the rules of the House, and in the debate which took place on the floor of the House, that the nitrate plant and the phosphate plant contemplated were not to be operated at full mass production, but that there were to be only experimental fertilizer operations under the bill.

Mr. NORRIS. I thank the Senator from Alabama. I now proceed with Colonel Cassidy's letter:

In 1933 and 1934, I spent months and months checking up raw materials and every phase of the chemical ends in the T. V. A., and with my studies in Germany, France, and other countries in the previous years, my estimates of production and distribution were sound.

When I found that the T. V. A. had played me false in order to get my data, I proceeded to file patent applications on every phase of the nitrate and phosphoric acid equipment which I had outlined to Dr. H. A. Morgan, Dr. Curtis, and Professor Woolrich, and I have been keeping in close touch with the use that is being made of my plans. The plans I had worked out would not have crippled the fertilizer people, but they would have benefited. I went over my ideas and figures with some of the large fertilizer people and they agreed that not only the farmer but the fertilizer industry would be benefited by such a program.

Apropos of the plan to kill off any operations of the chemical plants, the appointment of Dr. H. A. Curtis would naturally be interpreted as furthering that idea. As a member of the Coolidge Muscle Shoals Committee, Dr. Curtis most emphatically emphasized the idea that Government operations at Muscle Shoals could only result in failure, and gave his reasons. Notwithstanding his standing as a chemist, it does not seem that a man who was convinced that nothing but failure could result from Government operation was the man to make a success—if such was contemplated.

At the bottom of the letter, written in Colonel Cassidy's own handwriting—and I have seen so much of it that I am familiar with it—is the following:

Have just been advised that Judge Grubb, of the United States district court, has issued a subpena duces tecum for all the minutes of meetings of T. V. A. directors.

The letter is signed:

Yours very truly,

J. EDWARD CASSIDY,
Consulting Engineer.

Mr. President, that description of Mr. Cassidy appears after every signature he wrote, "Consulting Engineer." I want the Senate to remember that.

I can draw only one conclusion from Mr. Cassidy's attack on me. I knew of no reason why it should be made. I was entirely innocent of the things with which he charged me. The charges were entirely false. But he wanted a position with the T. V. A., and he did not get it. Since he has been rejected, I have in conversations asked the members of the board about the matter, and, briefly, they said that they thought he was a little bit "off," a conclusion I had reached, and which Senators will reach if they will be patient and listen to the correspondence, from which I shall now quote.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. DAVIS. I am quite in accord with the statement the Senator makes. I would not know this gentleman if he came into the Senate Chamber at this moment, but I notice from a statement in the Pearson-Allen Merry-Go-Round that he is supposed to have advised with the minority in writing their report on the Tennessee Valley matter. I may say to the Senator that practically all the members of the committee received letters from Mr. Cassidy, and three letters came to my office on three different days in August, when I was not in the office. In looking over my files I have found that they were received and filed.

The able Senator from Nebraska may be interested in knowing that when the minority members were discussing the preparation of their report they never even considered Mr. Cassidy. The report was written by the minority and, speaking for the other members of the committee, I am sure he had nothing whatever to do with it. From the information I received from several sources I believed that the farther away we kept from him the better off we would be.

Mr. NORRIS. I think the Senator was wise in entertaining that opinion.

Mr. DAVIS. That was the decision of the minority. So I think the statement the Senator has made is quite correct.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, this letter came to my office when I was overburdened with correspondence, and it was read to me by my secretary. I told my secretary to answer it, and to say that all the allegations about what I had done were absolutely groundless. On January 31, my secretary answered the letter, as follows:

Col. J. EDWARD CASSIDY,
815 Fifteenth Street NW., Washington, D. C.

DEAR COLONEL CASSIDY: I wish to acknowledge receipt of your letter to Senator NORRIS under date of January 28.

Any information which may have been given to you even though it be in a sworn statement to the effect that Senator NORRIS took any part whatever in the meeting at Knoxville to which you refer is absolutely false.

That was signed by my secretary.

Later on, when I got time, I reached the letter, and answered it myself, on May 17, 1935, as follows:

Col. J. EDWARD CASSIDY,
815 Fifteenth Street NW., Washington, D. C.

DEAR COLONEL CASSIDY: My secretary has called to my attention your letter of January 28. In this letter you say you received a sworn statement from someone, whose name you do not give me, setting forth, among other things, that he was in Knoxville, and that I had used certain language in talking to Dr. Morgan in regard to you. I wish you would send me this affidavit, or a copy of it, or, at least, send the man's name to me.

It is entirely and wholly false. I have not been to Knoxville; I used no such language attributed to me; and, in fact, I know absolutely nothing about anything set forth in this affidavit.

Evidently the Tennessee Valley Authority had in their employ at that time a spy, purposely planted there by enemies of the Authority for the purpose of furnishing information, even though it be false, which would be injurious to the Tennessee Valley Authority.

I hope you will help me to expose this man who has resorted to absolute falsehood in order to injure the Tennessee Valley Authority and, perhaps, to injure me.

Yours truly,

G. W. NORRIS.

Mr. President, I was acting in the best of faith. I supposed that Colonel Cassidy at that time had such an affidavit. I supposed, of course, that someone had furnished him with an affidavit containing the false charges that he had set forth in his letter to me. In view of the fact that he had sent me information to the effect that he had in his possession sworn testimony, an affidavit, making serious charges against me, all of which were untrue, all of which were unfounded, I submit to men of honor that when his attention was called to the fact that the one against whom the charges were made claimed that the affidavit was absolutely false, if Colonel Cassidy had been an honest, a just man, he would have tried to help me expose the man who made the false affidavit. My letter is confined only to that one proposition.

I shall now read Colonel Cassidy's letter written in reply to mine. It is dated May 19, 1935. That was 2 days after I wrote my letter. He then wrote me a long letter in which he goes into the matter of his troubles with the T. V. A., emphasizing his ability and his experiences all over the world as a great engineer, but does not give me the information for which I asked in my short letter written 2 days previously. His letter is written on the same letterhead as the previous letter which I read.

James E. Cassidy, M. Am. Soc. C. E., Consulting Engineer

Yours of the 17th instant referring to my letter of January 28 is received, and I do not think it advisable at this time to supply a copy of the affidavit you refer to, inasmuch as there will in all probability be one or more civil suits against the T. V. A. at a later date in connection with patent rights.

Was he trying to scare the T. V. A.? Did he think that if he gave me information with respect to certain threatened suits for violation of patents, I would convey the information to the T. V. A.? Was that the object of his long harangue? Or was he moved in part by the fact that the T. V. A. had turned him down for the position of engineer in the chemical works, and was he trying to get even with men who had in his imagination done him that injury? But he failed to give me any further information in regard to the false affidavit.

Relative to patent rights, I protested most strongly when the T. V. A. bill was under consideration, to the language inserted in the bill regarding the use of patents. Under the language of the bill there is only one course open to anyone not an employee of the T. V. A., and that is a lawsuit when patent matters are involved.

I note you did not make the statement attributed to you, and that you also say you "have not been to Knoxville." The period referred to in the affidavit was in October 1933, and which is probably an earlier date than you had in mind in writing. The Knoxville papers carried an account of a visit from you at the period referred to, and also published an address you made or at least were supposed to have made. This was between the 7th and 12th of October 1933. I do not find the clipping—

Very well; he cannot find the clipping.

I do not find the clipping at this time, but as I recall it was the Knoxville Journal from which the clipping sent me was taken.

I could read the whole letter, but it goes on in the same way, telling his troubles. Let me read a little more of it:

About September 20, 1933, I went to Knoxville after various correspondence and personal interviews with Dr. H. A. Morgan and Dr. H. A. Curtis. I had started a study of the Tennessee Valley in 1919 while I was executive officer of the Corps of Engineers following my return from France, and have continued those studies ever since. I made two extended trips to Europe to study the electrochemical industry, with particular reference to the operation of nitrate plants, phosphoric-acid plants, and the extraction of potash from Georgia shales. In 1932 and 1933 I made very elaborate studies of the improvements in nitrate plants Nos. 1 and 2.

And so he goes on. His letter has nothing to do with the affidavit. He merely writes and tells what he has done and how great a chemical engineer he is.

Further on in his letter he writes:

I prepared designs for changes in plant No. 2 which would make the operation of that plant quite profitable, and the cost of the changes were shown in the general brochure I prepared and submitted to the President-elect on January 20, 1933.

The bond issue afterward written into the T. V. A. Act came from that brochure.

Mr. President, I think I know something about that act, and the various trials and tribulations which have beset it from the beginning to the end. The writer of the letter is trying to show that he had been in consultation with the President of the United States, that he gave his ideas to him, and that his ideas were all put into the T. V. A. law. According to his story, he prepared the law. So far as I know, he did not have any more to do with its preparation than the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DANAHER] had to do with it.

My detailed studies showed conclusively that complete, balanced fertilizers could be made at Muscle Shoals—

And so on.

When I went to Knoxville in September 1933, I had all of this data with me, and after a rather extended conference with Dr. H. A. Morgan, he stated that I would be retained as a consulting engineer.

That is the same story he told in the other letter which I read. I shall convince Senators that the writer is really crazy on the subject he discusses. He did not answer the question I asked him in my letter. He repeats over and over again what took place between him and Dr. Morgan, after I had told him I knew nothing about it.

He stated that I would be retained as a consulting engineer on the chemical ends, and asked me to go over in detail with Dr. H. A. Curtis and Professor Woolrich the details of the program I had worked out. I spent 10 days there going over every detail of changes, costs, etc., and Dr. Curtis reiterated more than once that it was Dr. H. A. Morgan's intention to retain me as consultant. When I left there on October 2, 1933, the understanding was that Dr. Morgan would wire me as soon as the next meeting of the Board was held, about October 12. (The testimony in the Ashwander case shows the meeting was held October 13, 1933.) It was after I had written two or three letters of inquiry that on October 28 I received a couple of lines saying that the Board had decided that they could not make the appointment, or words to that effect.

The point that I desire to make is that this was done after they had extracted all of my data, estimates, etc., under the assurance that I would be retained on the work. I also made a rather lengthy memorandum of changes I held necessary on the Wheeler Dam, and the estimate of the cost. These estimates of cost have been used since that time, and the changes I laid out have been incorporated.

Of course, I know nothing about that, but the chances are a thousand to one that there is absolutely no truth in that statement.

On September 28 I had about 20 minutes' talk with Dr. A. E. Morgan in his office in the Sprankle Building, and in the course of our talk he asked me if I was not more interested in the chemical than the power end, and I stated that I was. He then stated that they had not figured on anyone being used at all phases of the project. I had been recommended, it seems, from more than one source as the chief engineer of the whole project by reason of my wide experience and long familiarity with the Tennessee Valley problems, and that the project had been split into three parts, with Dr. H. A. Morgan handling the chemical end. After leaving his office I made a written memorandum of a remark he made—A. E. Morgan—and my recollection was that after the fertilizer matter had come up he said: "We do not expect to do much along that line. You know Senator NORRIS does not want fertilizer made." That was the exact expression, as I remembered it and made a note of it at that time.

I have not talked with Dr. A. E. Morgan about the matter. I do not suppose he feels friendly toward me at this stage. However, I should be very glad to have the question submitted to him. In my opinion, he never made such a remark, because he would not have been justified in making it from anything he ever heard from me either directly or indirectly.

Later on I received a newspaper clipping and the affidavit already referred to. You are incorrect in assuming that the man who sent me this information was a "spy." The business of the Tennessee Valley Authority is public business, as the funds it uses are funds secured by taxation, and there are certainly no secrets about the conducting of the business, and while someone might make a statement which is not true, that should not qualify him as a spy. I cannot conceive of any operations in the Tennessee Valley Authority which must be concealed from the public which foots the bills.

After getting the benefit of these data I had acquired at a large expense over a 14-year period and then the failure of the T. V. A. to carry out the arrangement under which these data were secured, I immediately took steps to cover all my designs and plans by patent applications. I have never questioned the full intention of Dr. H. A. Morgan to carry out the arrangements under which I supplied the data which had cost me dearly, and do not think now that it was his fault that I was "chiseled."

My information is that the data secured from me were turned over to the Stone & Webster Engineering Corporation who received a cost-plus contract without competition, and under which the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for May 8 and 9, 1935, shows they were heavily overpaid.

I have been interested primarily in the carrying out of two things: (1) The provisions of section 124, National Defense Act, approved June 3, 1916 and (2) the carrying out of the promises made in 1922, under which the work of building the Wilson Dam was authorized by Congress. There was one condition, and one only, on which the funds for building the Wilson Dam were appropriated, and that was "cheap fertilizer for the farmer." Had it not been for that promise, there would be no power dam at Muscle Shoals today.

You will recall that on the night of March 3–4, 1921, both the House and Senate turned down a $10,000,000 item in the sundry civil bill for resuming work on the Wilson Dam.

During all these years when leasing propositions were up, there was never any question but what the provisions of the National Defense Act of 1916, and the promises made me when the dam was authorized in 1922, that the plants would be operated in the time of peace for production of fertilizer for the benefit of the farmer. I know it to be an actual fact that in 1933 had the House of Representatives known that the project was to be turned into solely a power project and the fertilizer project abandoned, the bill would have been defeated. The House debates on the adoption of the conference report show this to be a fact.

Neither Dr. Curtis nor anyone else could pick any flaws in my estimates and plans for fertilizer production, either in 1933 or now.

My plans and estimates and furnace designs have been used, and, as I said before, under the T. V. A. Act only one remedy is available, and that is by lawsuits. I do not know that you ever read my detailed data at the time the bill was under consideration, but I protested most strongly against the patent language in the bill.

I have gone into the details of this matter quite at length, but have felt that it was necessary to present the full picture as I see it.

Yours very truly,

J. EDWARD CASSIDY,
Consulting Engineer.

My letter simply had only one object, and that was to be informed as to who the mysterious person was who made the false affidavit about me. In answer to my request Mr. Cassidy again goes over the story of how he was wronged, his patent rights stolen, and he not given the job which had been promised him.

In answer to his letter I wrote him, as follows:

MAY 21, 1935.

Mr. J. EDWARD CASSIDY,
815 Fifteenth Street NW., Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. CASSIDY: I have your letter of May 19. You go into a rather detailed explanation of your deliberations with Dr. H A. Morgan, formerly president of the University of Tennessee and now a member of the Board of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

I do not know why you go into this detail with me. I know nothing about this controversy. I have had nothing to do with it; I cannot follow all the details of all the contracts and all the deliberations of the Tennessee Valley Authority. If I did, I would not be able to do anything else. I do not know why you lay this before me.

It seems you are very much dissatisfied because Dr. H. A. Morgan did not employ you or give you a position with the Tennessee Valley Authority. I know nothing about your consultations with Dr. H. A. Morgan. The members of the Board of the Tennessee Valley Authority do not call upon me when they are attempting to employ engineers or experts. If your arrangements with him have been unsatisfactory, I do not know why I should be taken into the picture in any way. If you made any contract with him which is legal and binding and want to sue the Tennessee Valley Authority on it, I must certainly have no objection.

The only point in this controversy which interests me is the fact that you set out in your letter of January 28, 1935, in rather detailed form an affidavit which you claim to have in your possession coupling me up with the controversy. I wrote you that this affidavit was false. I asked you to supply me either with the affidavit or a copy of it, and to give me the name of the man who made it. This you refuse to do. If you are moved by lofty motives and have in your possession an affidavit concerning what I have said and done, it seems to me you would respect my request and let me know who it is who makes this affidavit, especially when I have told you in writing that what you have said is contained in the affidavit is absolutely false and without any foundation whatsoever.

If you persist in covering up this evidence, which you have been informed is untrue, and which has no foundation in fact, it seems to me you yourself are guilty of trying to influence the situation by an affidavit regarding me which I have told you is untrue. If you are moved by upright and honorable motives, you should at least be fair enough to give me the name of the man and a copy of his affidavit.

Because Dr. H. A. Morgan has refused to give you employment, which you say he promised you, is no reason why you should join in the present effort which is being made by private power companies to completely block the Tennessee Valley Authority in carrying out the provisions of the law under which they are acting. That is especially true, since you now have a denial of the truth of the affidavit on which you are apparently relying for the purpose of discrediting the Tennessee Valley Authority. In your letter of May 19 you still persist in your contention that I was in Knoxville at the time, that I made a speech there, and you offer this as supporting evidence that I probably made the statements alleged in the affidavit now in your possession.

What was your object in telling me the contents of this affidavit?

If you relied upon the affidavit when you wrote me, then you must conclude, having received my answer, that either the affidavit is false or that I am telling you a falsehood in my letters. If the man who made this affidavit is not a coward and has not falsified, then what objection can he have to publicity being given to his affidavit? Do you expect, in giving the contents of this affidavit in letters to different people, to have an influence on the situation? Can you honorably do this when you are informed, to begin with, that the affidavit is untrue?

You now have in your possession an affidavit. You are concealing from me the name of the man who made it, even after I have told you that the affidavit (if it exists) is not true. You refuse either to give me a copy of the affidavit or to tell me who made it. If you have been deceived by an affidavit, you should be the first man to clear up the situation by giving me the name of the man who made the affidavit, even if you still persist in refusing to give me the affidavit or a copy thereof.

In your letter of January 28 you quoted to me what you say is the sworn statement of a man who was in the Knoxville office of the Tennessee Valley Authority, but who was not, at the time of your letter, an employee of the Tennessee Valley Authority. I judge from your letter, therefore, that the sworn statement was made by a man who was employed by the Tennessee Valley Authority, but who, for some reason unknown to me, either resigned or was discharged from such employment. I call on you now, as an honorable man, to furnish me the name of that individual, and to send me a copy of his written statement which you say was sworn to and which I have therefore designated in my letter as an affidavit. I have said to you that, in my opinion, judging entirely from your letter, this man was probably a spy. It may be, as you say in your second letter, that he was not a spy; but it is at least true, from your letter, that he was in the employ of the Tennessee Valley Authority at the time his sworn statement says I was in Knoxville and used certain language to Dr. A. E. Morgan, to the effect, among other things, that you should not be given employment by the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Very truly yours,

G. W. NORRIS.

That was the second time I had called upon him in writing to send me the contents of that affidavit and the name of its author. He comes back with a third letter, in which he still refuses to give the name.

Mr. DANAHER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SMATHERS in the chair). Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Connecticut?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. DANAHER. Did he ever bring the lawsuit to which he referred?

Mr. NORRIS. Not so far as I know. I have never made any inquiry, but I have an idea that he never did bring the lawsuit, and has no cause for a lawsuit, although I know nothing about that.

Mr. DANAHER. Then I say that the senior Senator from Nebraska has certainly convinced me he treated the man fairly.

Mr. NORRIS. I thank the Senator.

The next letter is written on the letterhead of this man:

James E. Cassidy (M. Am. Soc. C. E.), consulting engineer, 815 Fifteenth Street NW., Washington, D. C., May 27, 1935—

I will not read all the letter, but I will say to the Senate that he goes over the same old story again. He cannot get over the idea that he has been injured or ruined, and he continually refers to his illustrious ability and how he has been all over the world studying and managing the building of great dams and other engineering works.

DEAR SENATOR NORRIS: You expressed a wonder as to why I wrote you in such detail, and in this connection would say that I did so merely to give you a clear picture. Regarding the affidavit referred to and which you say is untrue, a statement which I will not question as to the whys or wherefores as to the arrangements for my not being retained as consulting engineer on the chemical end of the T. V. A. is a matter of complete indifference to me. With two members of the T. V. A. Board completely dominated by the Fertilizer Trust, I quite well realize that anything in the chemical line will simply be a joke.

In one letter he was going to sue them for infringing on his patents, but in the letter from which I have quoted he says they are not going to do anything about fertilizer anyway.

Mr. President, I have read the first paragraph of that letter. I ask unanimous consent that the entire letter be printed in the RECORD as part of my remarks at this point in my address.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUGHES in the chair). Without objection, the letter will be printed in the RECORD.

The letter is as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 27, 1935.

DEAR SENATOR NORRIS: You expressed a wonder as to why I wrote you in such detail and in this connection would say that I did so merely to give a clear picture. Regarding the affidavit referred to and which you say is untrue, a statement which I will not question as to the whys or wherefores as to the arrangements for my not being retained as consulting engineer on the chemical end of the T. V. A. is a matter of complete indifference to me. With two members of the T. V. A. Board completely dominated by the fertilizer trust, I quite well realize that anything in the chemical line will simply be a joke.

It took 16 months to get a response relative to the matter in question. Just after receiving the unsolicited affidavit, I wrote you November 1933 advising that such a document had been received. No answer whatever was received, and in going over some papers a little more than a year later I ran into the copy of the letter written you, and that was what led to my writing you on January 28, 1935.

In two letters written me, by direct implication, you accuse me of being a tool of the Power Trust, and in fact everybody that has anything to say about the operations of the T. V. A. are so labeled. If you will only look back over the voluminous data I submitted to you during the working out of the T. V. A. legislation, you will see that this is a fallacy. You will also recall that it was on a presentation of mine that the President ruled the Wilson Dam-Cove Creek transmission line should be included. As I stated in the House Military Committee hearings a few days ago, I have never been employed by the Power Trust or any of the holding companies now existing. Many years ago I planned certain power plants for companies which are now out of existence. My work for a decade and a half has been in a consulting capacity and has not been for the power people, but as consultant to other engineers, and to financial interests. Incidently, where I have approved 1 project, I have disapproved 10.

There is unquestionably two schools of thought in the T. V. A. proposition that are opposed to each other—the Power Trust and the Fertilizer Trust. The House of Representatives in 1933 passed a balanced bill which was neither power nor fertilizer, but a balanced one between the two. The Senate wrecked the bill, and when the final bill was adopted in conference, it was the Fertilizer Trust bill out and out. The National Defense Act of 1916 was scrapped, and the slogan of "Cheap fertilizer for the farmer" which resulted in Congress authorizing the construction of the Wilson Dam in 1922, was also discarded.

Your letters also directly imply that I am opposed to the T. V. A. entirely. That is a mistaken idea. If the T. V. A. had carried out anything like the provisions of H. R. 5081, as passed by the House, I would have had no objections to it. I have been interested in the Tennessee Valley since 1915 when I went there to look into the possibility of a large steel development for European interests.

Nothing would please me better than to see an orderly development of the great natural resources in the whole Tennessee Valley along the lines I laid out in my tentative report in 1928–29 covering a $300,000,000 expenditure over a 20-year period, but that is something that cannot be realized until the T. V. A. organization is entirely recast. No orderly development can accrue under a regime of theorists who are attempting to set up a regimented, socialistic state which transcends State lines, State rights, and the rights of the people. Incidently, the 1928–29 report referred to was for private and not governmental development.

I have more than 265 pages of data I prepared for you, the House Military Committee, and the White House, while the T. V. A. bill was being worked out in 1933, and this data certainly shows no partisanship on my part either to the Power Trust or the Fertilizer Trust. I wanted a proper piece of legislation enacted, whereas the resulting legislation was an abortion.

In a letter written to the chairman of the Military Committee of the House the day after the conference report was adopted, I pointed out the bad features of the bill and showed clearly that it was full of vulnerable points subject to attack on ordinary as well as constitutional legal grounds. The T. V. A. bills which were tabled by the House Military Committee a few days ago lay themselves open to attack on many more grounds than the original act.

The statements made by the T. V. A. directors and others seem to indicate that the T. V. A. must not be subject to any legal or other restrictions and that it is above the Constitution. With the attack on the Comptroller General I presume the United States Supreme Court will also be attacked when the decision is rendered in the Ashwander case, for I do not think there is any question but what Judge Grubb's decisions will be upheld in toto. The decisions in the Schechter case, and the Frazier-Lemke Act, today are also pertinent to the T. V. A. Act as originally written, and much more so if the recent amendments should be added.

The accusation of being a tool of the Power Trust does not appeal to me in the least. If the T. V. A. Directors instead of considering themselves above the Constitution and everything else would clean house and get down to earth and drop the idea of establishing a communistic state in the Tennessee Valley, there would be less criticism.

Yours very truly,

JAMES E. CASSIDY,
Consulting Engineer.

Mr. NORRIS. Now comes my reply to that letter:

JUNE 5, 1935.

Mr. J. EDWARD CASSIDY,
815 Fifteenth Street NW., Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I have your letter of May 27. In this letter you go into a long harangue about the Tennessee Valley Authority and how it was brought about and how, according to your letter, you had perhaps more to do with its enactment into law than any other person. I am not going to argue this question with you. I do not believe what you say; in fact, I think I know something about the trials and tribulations of the Muscle Shoals legislation myself; but, according to your letter, I had no part in it and most of the burdens were upon your shoulders.

You get away from what I have asked you, and that is to send me a copy of that affidavit or written statement which you say quotes me as making certain assertions in regard to your appointment by the Tennessee Valley Authority to a position. I have twice written you that the affidavit is false; I have twice told you there is absolutely no truth whatsoever in the statement. In your former letter you quoted the statement from that affidavit, as follows:

"This man [in his sworn statement] said he heard you used this language to Dr. A. E. Morgan: 'Dr. Morgan, you have got to stop that plan for making fertilizer in quantity immediately, and under no circumstances is Colonel Cassidy to be appointed to a position where he can force the issue.' "

I have written you twice that this statement is false, and instead of complying with my request to give me a copy of the affidavit and name the man who wrote it, you continually decline to do so and go off into a long tirade about what you believe ought to be done in the Tennessee Valley.

I say to you now that I do not believe you have any such affidavit. I think you have made it out of the whole cloth, and I challenge you now, if you have such an affidavit, to produce it. If you are an honorable man and have in your possession such an affidavit, you will give me the name of the man who made it and send me a copy, at least, of the affidavit itself. If you do not have such an affidavit, then that part of your letter to me was absolutely false, and you are guilty, for some reason unknown to me, of an attempt to maliciously state something which is not true.

Very truly yours,

G. W. NORRIS.

Mr. President, that concludes the correspondence I had with Mr. Cassidy about that affidavit. I think it shows up the man. I dislike to use the only word that will apply to him, but, Mr. President, it is charitable to say of this man

Cassidy that he is crazy; in any event, if he is not crazy, he is the most outrageous and malicious prevaricator that ever drew the breath of life. He is not entitled to sit with honest men; he is not entitled to participate in any deliberations for any honest or honorable purpose. A man who will try to vilify another in a matter so important as that, who will try to use his position to interfere with officers in carrying out their duty under the law, is not fit to associate with honorable men or to be in respectable society.

But I thought I could overlook that. I thought perhaps this was the right thing for me to do, and I said nothing about it. Time went on, and after the investigation of the joint committee of the T. V. A. was finished, the chairman of that committee, the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], moved, I suppose, by a sense of honor and honesty, submitted to me a letter he had received purporting to set forth what I had been attempting to do, all of which was false, all of which was untrue. I find this morning that the Senator from Pennsylvania said on the floor of the Senate that he also was the victim of letters from the same man, and I doubt not that all members of the committee, under such circumstances that there could be no publicity, as would be the case in the public meetings of the committee when letters and affidavits could be put in the record without my knowing anything about it, received damaging letters, the same as some of those I am going to read, which the chairman of the committee has submitted to me.

After I had called his attention to the falsehoods, without any cause, so far as I know, he has continually gone over and over again the charges against nearly everybody, but against me in particular, because he did not get a job, for which I was not even indirectly responsible. Not knowing that he had applied, not knowing that the committee had declined to give the position to him, not having had any consultation with anybody, I was ignorant of all those facts; yet he charges it all to me. He says, in effect, that I dominated the appointment of this committee; that the committee could not do anything without consulting me; that they could not appoint an investigator, an attorney, or anybody else without my consent; and that if anybody employed by them did anything which I thought was wrong, they would stop it—all of which is as false as hell; all of which is without foundation, and cannot emanate from a mind, from a heart or a soul that has any honor within itself.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. HILL. I happen to know that this man Cassidy leveled all sorts and kinds of charges against the late Representative from South Carolina, Mr. McSwain, when he was the chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs of the House of Representatives. I also know that the charges leveled by him against Mr. McSwain were without any foundation or any scintilla of basis, and that they were false, just exactly as the charges Mr. Cassidy leveled against the Senator from Nebraska are false.

Mr. NORRIS. I thank the Senator from Alabama. I should like to say, before I read some of these letters, that while the Senator from Alabama was the ranking member of the Military Affairs Committee of the House, and Mr. McSwain, of South Carolina, now dead, was chairman of the committee, of course I had very, very many consultations and conferences and conversations with the chairman of the committee. We very often met and talked over things. For a while Cassidy was supposed by him and supposed by me to be honest, although I had reached the conclusion that he was so egotistical, he thought so much of his own ability, that he could hardly associate with ordinary human beings. He was always telling us about himself and his attainments, and he became a bore to me, and he became a bore to Chairman McSwain. I happen to know, from many conversations with Mr. McSwain, that he finally reached the same conclusion that I reached about this man.

But let us read a biography of this man Cassidy. Here is one, Mr. President, a glowing account of his life, written by himself, on his professional stationery.

He starts in on this biography in the third person, but after only a few paragraphs he goes right over to the personal pronoun "I," and that runs through the rest of the biography. It is long; it will be tedious; but, as I understand the question I am trying to discuss, we cannot fully understand it unless we read this biography, written by Cassidy himself, giving his own estimate of himself. In that way we shall be able to get somewhat of an idea of the man. We shall see when we read it that the probabilities are that many of his statements are inaccurate, and I shall be able to show that some of them are absolutely unfounded and absolutely without any significance whatever.

The heading is:

J. Edward Cassidy, M. Am. Soc. C. E., consulting engineer

In this communication he has changed his address. The address I have been reading so far was on Fifteenth Street; but this is "1300 Vermont Avenue NW., Washington, D. C."

Condensed professional record of James Edward Cassidy, consulting engineer.

I suppose he could not write his name unless he put "consulting engineer" after it. I have never seen it without "consulting engineer" following it, and I have seen it hundreds of times.

Born September 1, 1880, at French Lick Springs, Ind.

Graduate of common and high schools and preparatory school for the West Point Military Academy, but was prevented from entering the Military Academy (1898) by reason of a protracted illness from typhoid and pneumonia fever.

Took a special course in civil engineering at Indianapolis, Ind., along lines which are now termed "schools of applied science and school of application." This engineering course covered the same engineering studies as are comprised in the civil-engineering course of the Purdue University, La Fayette, Ind.

After a year's railroad engineering work became technical adviser and chief engineer for a group of three men—

I wish the Senate would listen to this story about the three men.

After a year's railroad engineering work—

He had just 1 year's experience. He was not a graduate of any engineering college, or anything of the kind; but he had had a year's experience on the railroad in engineering work, he says—became technical adviser and chief engineer for a group of three men with large interests—

He does not say who they are. You will find that all through everything he says. He carefully shields what he says behind such statements as "It is reported to me," or "I have reliable evidence," or "I have affidavits from an honorable man whom I have known and respect." He never gives the name, he never quotes the circumstances, so that anything can be identified—for a group of three men with large interests in many countries, and whose personal fortunes aggregated $55,000,000.

Now he commences with "my." This biography is written so far in the third person. Now it is the first person, and continues in that way for the rest of his story:

My work for these people took me into many countries and in close contact with the operation of many and varied forms of industry. It was in this connection that I was present at the first commercial fixation of atmospheric nitrogen in Norway 28 years ago, and where I initiated my studies along these lines.

For 10 years, and until these three men died in rather close succession in a period of 4 months, I handled all of their problems which not only included the study and often the complete redesign and reconstruction of industrial works in which they were largely interested, but the complete reorganization of industries where I considered it necessary or advisable. The decision as to what was to be done was left to me, and never were my conclusions questioned, although the expenditures often involved many millions of dollars.

Among the many and varied industries which I was called on to deal with were the design and construction of large clay-working plants in Indiana, oil, gas, and coal projects, mining and timber projects in Central and South America—

He is down now in Central America and in South America.

Investigation and studies of irrigation works in the western part of the United States and in India.

This man has been in India; he has studied irrigation works over there.

a complete study and report on the Manchurian Railways—

He has been over in China and has investigated and reported upon the railways over there.

Asbestos mining in Rhodesia, South Africa—

You see, he is down in South Africa now, all for these three men, all within 10 years, all without any preparation except working for a railroad for a year.

and numerous other lines of industries in this and other countries.

In my arrangements with these people, it was definitely understood that it was a legitimate part of my work to visit at their expense and make studies of any plants or industries in any part of the world where there were new developments being made in any line of industry with which their investments were concerned, and in this way, I became familiar with the industrial organization of the larger industries of many countries of the world. As I did not work for these people on a salary basis, but on a basis of charging whatever I considered adequate for the work performed, I was free to engage in such other work and to accept such commissions as I might choose, though they were kept advised at all times as to where I could be reached. There was never any differences between us in connection with my charges, and on more than one occasion $5,000 to $10,000 was added to the amounts I had charged, and this was done quite voluntarily on their part.

So he got tips of $5,000 or $10,000 as an ordinary occurrence.

My work in foreign countries often involved some very delicate situations in dealing with the heads of governments of other countries. The industries and activities covered in the course of this work aggregated more than a billion dollars.

Not only engineering, but statecraft. In all parts of the world he came in contact with the heads of governments. He had to deal with them.

I was in the engineering and construction division of the Panama Canal for more than 3 years (under all three chief engineers) finally being forced to leave there by attacks of chagres (exaggerated malaria) fever—my work there being in the matter of heavy excavation, and in the construction of the Canal locks.

What conclusion can we draw from that? He says, "I was in the engineering and construction division of the Panama Canal," and that he served under all three engineers, that he was one of the engineers who built the Panama locks. I want Senators to remember that assertion, because when I get through reading what he said he did in connection with the Panama Canal, I shall show his actual connection with the Panama Canal, and Senators will be surprised.

I then established the J. E. Cassidy Engineering Co., and the Foster Construction Co. with offices in New York City and Newark, N. J., for the design of engineering works and construction of same, including bridges, power projects, etc. In addition to being the head of both corporations, my wide experience resulted in my services being utilized very often as consulting engineer to other engineers, corporations, and financial interests. A number of power projects, both in and out of this country, were studied and reported on both as to the engineering and economic features and potentialities. An excellent business had been built up in both the engineering and construction phases when the United States entered the World War. As I had been examined for a commission in the Engineer Reserve Corps under the National Defense Act, and of which section No. 124 is the basic legislation under which the nitrate plants at Muscle Shoals came into existence, and had a commission pending some months before war was declared, as soon as we could do so after the declaration of war, my associates and myself went on active duties in the Engineer Corps and the construction service of the Army. I served as an officer of the Corps of Engineers for 3½ years, first at Washington Barracks, D. C., then as chief engineer of the Seventy-sixth Division at Camp Devens, Mass., and then in command of the Corps Engineers of the First Army Corps in France. For "exceptionally meritorious and conspicuous services" in command of the engineers of the First Army Corps throughout all of the series of battles later known as the Meuse-Argonne battles, I received a citation from the commander in chief of the American Expeditionary Forces, a personal letter of thanks, a silver star, and the Order of the Purple Heart.

So Pershing knew about this man. Pershing could not have won the war if he had not been there, and Pershing sent him a personal letter of thanks. He does not set that out. Of course, that may have happened; I do not know. I was not there. I cannot dispute it. But the probabilities are that nothing of the kind ever occurred.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUGHES in the chair). Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. HILL. Does the Senator know whether or not Colonel Cassidy has requested that his war record not be given to anyone, and not be disclosed to anyone?

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; I shall take that up just as soon as I get through with this correspondence.

On my return from France, and after mustering out my regiment, I was ordered to Washington for duty (April 24, 1919), and shortly after reporting was made executive officer of the Corps of Engineers, War Department, and remained on that duty until I left the service, December 31, 1920.

On leaving the service, I did not reconstitute the engineering and construction companies, but have since engaged in consulting engineering work, as well as some complete investigations and designs, among which is a $50,000,000 hydroelectric project in Brazil, South America—

He was down there building projects which cost $50,000,000—

studied and planned for British interests, and which involved some very interesting problems, one of which was the transmission of power 675 miles as the nearest principal market was that distance from the project. The transmission of power was planned for 300,000 volts. Up to date no transmission of power this distance has been accomplished though there are neither mechanical nor technical difficulties involved in doing this, the only problem involved being the economic one.

While a favorable report on this project has been prepared, it has been held up pending a better stabilization of the political Government of Brazil as the existing conditions in Brazil were foreseen some years before the trouble actually broke.

Included in the projects on which I have been consultant, a number have been in this country and other countries, one of which is an international problem—not the St. Lawrence—as it affects both the United States and Canada.

A considerable amount of publicity and legal litigation has arisen in the past 2 or 3 years in connection with a power development planned by the Appalachian Power Co. on New River in Virginia. The legal contest between the Federal Government and the rights of the State of Virginia is now passing through various courts on the way to the United States Supreme Court, where the question of the right of the Federal Government to exercise control over State waterways, not involving navigation, must be decided. Twenty-six years ago, before the Federal Water Power Act was enacted, I planned and designed a power project at this same site; but owing to the difficulties involved in the financing of power projects in those days the plan was not carried out. The same problems presented in this case apply to certain of the Tennessee Valley projects; though others, such as Cove Creek on the Clinch River, do not come within the scope of the New River project, as the Cove Creek Reservoir project—Tennessee River navigation project started more than 50 years ago—on the Clinch River is an important factor in the matter of Tennessee River navigation, and for that reason comes within the scope of the Federal Government without question.

While serving as executive officer of the Corps of Engineers, War Department, I became interested in the Muscle Shoals project—1919—and studied all phases of it from the private files of the Engineer Department. For the past 13 years I have continued my studies of the whole project and have kept in close touch with all hearings and studies by various commissions. For the past 15 months I have devoted practically all of my time to studies of the Tennessee Valley project, both as to the potentialities and to the organization of the operations.

When the President-elect made his visit to Muscle Shoals in January 1933 he had before him a brochure I had prepared for him summarizing all of the various problems involved. Annexes were prepared to this brochure from time to time, and the existing legislation was formulated largely on the data covered by the original brochure and the annexes. In each case where differences have arisen between the legislative bodies, and the Chief Executive has been called on to decide the matter, the recommendations made in my brochure and annexes have governed the final action.

So, after all, he is the man—though we never knew it before—who studied and put into legislative form and solved all differences between the President and the Members of the House over what afterward became the Tennessee Valley Act, which he is now trying to destroy.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. HILL. Of course, no man in all the world has a more intimate knowledge of the writing of the Tennessee Valley Authority Act than has the distinguished Senator from Nebraska. He has been well and truly referred to from time to time as the "father" of that act. He knows that Colonel Cassidy had nothing whatever to do with the writing of the act, or with anything in connection with bringing together any of the different viewpoints which arose while the act was being written. Is not that correct?

Mr. NORRIS. That is correct so far as Colonel Cassidy is concerned. I myself do not make any assertions with respect to the matter, but the idea that Colonel Cassidy desired to convey is that, as a matter of fact, he furnished the President of the United States with the evidence. He nowhere narrates that he ever saw the President or had a conversation with him, but the implication is quite clear from what he says that before the President did anything he first consulted Colonel Cassidy.

In view of my recognition as an authority on Tennessee River problems, I was commissioned by New York banking interests to formulate a program for the industrial development of the Tennessee River Valley, and the preliminary studies were well developed (in 1928 and 1929) when the financial crash came. My studies and preliminary program involved an investment of $300,000,000 in an orderly program over a period of 20 years, and this sum had no connection with the $130,000,000 already expended by the Federal Government. In general, my program was the construction (as needed) of 10 dams to provide power for the development of natural resources found in the ores, clays, stone, etc., throughout the Tennessee Valley—through electrochemical and electrometallurgical processes. Under this project, no power was planned for sale as a utility as it was considered to be of a great deal more value to the people of the district and to the country when used to develop the natural resources. This project did not include the existing governmental plants in view of the fact that the basic legislation under which all of the existing plants came into being by reason of the National Defense Act, approved June 3, 1916, definitely reserved the ownership and operation of these plants to the Federal Government. Had the financial crash of 1929 not happened this large project would have gone forward.

That is one great loss which no one ever heard of before that came to us as a result of the financial crash.

In my studies of the Tennessee Valley project it has been necessary to give full consideration to the electrochemical developments not only in this country but abroad, and it has cost me around $3,000 to fully inform myself on just what has been done in Germany and other European countries in the production of nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash.

In the past 13 years my studies of the Tennessee Valley problems have cost me unlimited time and an expense of around $20,000, none of which has been carried by any person or concern other than myself, so that I have been an absolutely free agent in the use of the data accumulated. * * * I placed at the disposal of the Senate and House committees, as well as the White House, such use of my data as they might see fit, and my personal services in an advisory capacity were available to these agencies at any and all times—being, in fact, the "unofficial and unremunerated technical adviser," as aptly stated by Chairman McSwain, of the House Military Committee, to all three of these agencies. The chairmen of the committees will bear tribute to the value of my assistance in the framing of the legislation now enacted into law. My efforts were wholly nonpartisan, as I had no ax to grind and represented no one industry, concern, or corporation. My actions were voluntary and were accepted and used to the fullest extent.

Of course, I ought to have known something about all of that but, unfortunately, I did not, Mr. President. I know that Colonel Cassidy wrote volumes to me and everyone else connected with the subject, as the pile of letters before me will indicate. But Colonel Cassidy became a bore; he became a nuisance around the office. I had a different opinion of him when first I knew him and always desired to be courteous and fair to him, as did Mr. McSwain, of the House committee.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SMATHERS in the chair). Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. HILL. As the distinguished Senator from Nebraska knows, I served on the Committee on Military Affairs of the House of Representatives for some 12 or 13 years, and during most of that time Colonel Cassidy was a bore and a nuisance to that committee and to the individual members of that committee. He was not only a terrible nuisance to the Senator from Nebraska, but he was a terrible nuisance, I know, to the chairman of the House committee, Mr. McSwain, to me, and to other members of the committee. He would write out all kinds of memorandums, many of them absolutely irrelevant to the subject about which he was supposed to be writing, and then seek to force himself and his views on the committee and on the individual members of the committee. He was always trying to get some job or some position for himself. He not only sought with every power at his command to become employed by the Tennessee Valley Authority but thereafter, when the House of Representatives authorized the House Committee on Military Affairs to make an investigation of the War Department, and more particularly the purchase of matériel and aircraft by the War Department, Colonel Cassidy became very much outraged because Representative McSwain, the then chairman of the committee, and the committee, would not employ him as a special investigator at a nice salary.

Mr. NORRIS. I thank the Senator.

I read further:

The chairman and other members of the House Military Committee which handled the Muscle Shoals or rather the Tennessee Valley legislation, have fully recognized the value of my technical advice and assistance, and have placed the utmost confidence in my recommendations.

In view of my knowledge of all phases of the problems involved and in recognition of my assistance in formulating the necessary legislation, the House Military Committee has felt that my services would be most valuable to the people of the country in connection with the working out of the great problems involved, and through the chairman [Mr. McSwain] and the ranking majority member of the committee [Mr. HILL], have strongly urged that my services be utilized by the Authority as Chief Engineer of the whole project. They fully realize that the House and Senate committees and the White House have utilized my knowledge, experience, and specific studies of the Tennessee Valley problems to the fullest extent in enacting legislation, and as these agencies which control the funds and the legislation dealing with the whole project have accepted me as their technical adviser, it seems to be their opinion that the continuation of this capacity to the agencies they have established to carry the project into effect would be of great value to the project.

Under the legislation enacted, there are many special phases, such as apply to the social and domestic lives of the people of this district, but the background of the project rests on the industrial and economic phases, and it is on these particular features that my wide experience and 13 years specific studies of the Tennessee Valley problem are applicable.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, did I understand the distinguished Senator to read from the letter that Colonel Cassidy said that Mr. McSwain and I had urged him for the position of chief engineer of the Tennessee Valley Authority?

Mr. NORRIS. That is what he said.

Mr. HILL. That statement is without any foundation at all. It is absolutely false. I never urged him for chief engineer. I never urged him for any position. For that matter, I have never asked the Tennessee Valley Authority or urged the Tennessee Valley Authority to appoint anyone to any position. As the Senator from Nebraska well knows, the law prohibits any political recommendations or anything of that sort to be made in connection with the Tennessee Valley Authority. The statement is absolutely without foundation.

Mr. NORRIS. I thank the Senator. Of course, before the Senator denied the charge, I knew the statement was without any foundation.

Mr. President, I have finished reading Colonel Cassidy's autobiography. It will be noted that he gives his war record in it. He practically says to us that he won the World War, and the poor commanding officer of the American Expeditionary Force, knowing so well that it was Colonel Cassidy who brought the war to a successful conclusion, wrote him a letter of thanks for the great victories coming to the American armies.

Colonel Cassidy tells what offices he held.

After I had read his autobiography, Mr. President, I thought I should like to find out what his Army record was, so I took up the matter with the War Department, and, lo and behold, this is what I found:

On March 27, 1934, Colonel Cassidy wrote a letter to the War Department objecting to his war or medical record being given to anyone without his permission. I did not know that a man could do that. I had supposed that when a Senator wanted to obtain any of the records of the War Department he would be able to obtain them. However, I was unable to obtain any information in regard to his record because Colonel Cassidy had written a letter and said that such information must not be given to anybody. So, his record, outlined by himself, must stand without any denial. He will not let it be denied. If he has the record which he claims, if he has performed the services which he claims, if he received a letter from the commanding general of the Amercan forces as to his great assistance in the victorious war, if he wanted to be fair to his fellow citizens way down beneath him, he would let us see that letter; he would let us examine his glorious military record which brought victory to our arms.

Another side of his biography relates to what he did on the Panama Canal. One cannot read his statements without being imbued with the idea that he built the Panama Canal as well as other great works. I thought I could obtain information on that subject, and, as a matter of fact, I did. I communicated with the chief officer of the Panama Canal, in Washington, and called for Colonel Cassidy's record. On April 5, 1939, I received from that official a letter giving Colonel Cassidy's record. According to Colonel Cassidy's tale, he served for more than 3 years in the engineering department, giving the idea that he was associated with the engineers, and that he helped build the great locks of the Panama Canal. Here is the letter directed to me by the Chief of the Panama Canal office:

Reference is made to your telephonic request of today for the record of James Edward Cassidy, as an employee in the construction work on the Panama Canal. There is no record of James Edward Cassidy, but there is given hereunder a transcript of the service record of Edward Cassidy as an employee of the Isthmian Canal Commission on the Isthmus of Panama, as it is thought that he may be the person whose record you desire.

I presume it is the same person. This is what it says:

Employed as a clerk, $1,200 per annum, December 17, 1905.
Promoted to $125 a month, June 1, 1906.
Resigned, December 28, 1906.
Reemployed as foreman at $125 a month, November 15, 1909.
Promoted to $150 a month, February 7, 1910.
Resigned, March 12, 1910.
Mr. Cassidy was born in Indiana—

That is what he says in his autobiography.

and in 1905 he stated he was 25 years of age.

Yours respectfully,

H. A. A. SMITH, Chief of Office.

Perhaps Senators have computed in their own minds how long he served. He said more than 3 years. From the figures given me by the Panama Canal office I calculate that his first service as a clerk was 1 year and 11 days. His reemployment, in which he finally received $150 a month in the construction part, was 3 months and 24 days. I think it is fair to say that that constitutes his service on the Panama Canal. So he did not dig it after all. Hereafter General Goethals and some others will probably receive some credit for that great work.

Mr. President, this presentation has been tedious. It seemed to me that the object I had in view made it necessary for me to read the autobiography in full. It gives the best side of his story, because it was written by himself. I never knew a man on earth who could praise himself more highly or readily than Mr. Cassidy. According to his theory he won the war. According to his theory he built the Panama Canal. According to his theory he devised the Tennessee Valley Authority Act and built all the structures which were built under that act.

We now come to the second phase of what he has been trying to do, which induces me to make the remarks which I am about to undertake.

Colonel Cassidy wrote a letter to Mr. Heffernan. I never saw Mr. Heffernan more than once in my life that I remember. He was secretary to the joint investigating committee. Mr. President, here is Colonel Cassidy again trying to obtain a job with the investigating committee. To do it he again goes over many of these stories, telling what a wonderful man he is, what great experience he has had, and how fair he is going to be.

However, he did not get the job. He blames me for that. I had no more to do with it than had the Senator from Oregon, who probably never heard of it. I did not know anything about it. I have never had a conversation with any member of the committee about Mr. Cassidy or anybody else getting the job in question. I never urged anyone for the job. If that statement is not true, I call upon members of that committee who may now be listening to me to rise and say so.

Colonel Cassidy wrote the following letter to Mr. Heffernan on August 14, 1938:

MY DEAR MR. HEFFERNAN: In an article on the hearings of yesterday on the T. V. A. in today's New York Times it is stated that on the return of the chairman the first of the week you will take charge of the accounting and auditing work of the committee. It also mentions that various Government agencies will be asked to furnish personnel and mentions the securing of accountants from the Department of Justice, but does not mention the Comptroller General. As the Comptroller General has had something like an average of 10 auditors working on the T. V. A. accounts, it seems to me that it would be an excellent stroke if you could get a couple of G. A. O. men for this work as they are quite familiar with what has been going on. There is no time left to make a general audit so it will be necessary to concentrate on certain features.

Mr. Cassidy asked Mr. Heffernan to get the General Accounting Office to make the investigation. He does not say in this letter that the General Accounting Office, though perhaps not mentioned in the resolution, was really one of the organizations which the committee was going to investigate. Its work had been admittedly unsatisfactory, and its work is severely criticized by the majority report of the committee.

I proceed:

I would like to suggest that, when you go to Washington, that you go to the General Accounting Office and see Mr. Tulloss, who is in charge of the field auditors. If his reaction is all right, the formal move for securing two or three of his T. V. A. auditors could be initiated.

The last complete audit that was made was for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, this audit being completed in May 1935, and I extracted from this 394-page audit 25 pages of irregularities which kicked up quite a fuss on Capitol Hill, and incidentally resulted in the passage of amendments to the T. V. A. Act, which were put through for the purpose of preventing further complete audits. The original section of the T. V. A. Act requiring annual audits by the Comptroller General was drafted by me.

Mr. President, Mr. Cassidy had no more to do with the amendatory act than the man in the moon. It was a Senate bill which passed the Senate, went to the House, was amended in the House, and went to conference. The Senator from Alabama [Mr. HILL], who now sits before me, was one of the conferees. We worked in conference for weeks and weeks. It looked as though we never could agree, but finally we did. Never once in all that conference was Colonel Cassidy mentioned or spoken of by any member of the conference committee.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. HILL. As a member of the conference committee representing the House of Representatives, I wish to say that the Senator from Nebraska is absolutely correct. Colonel Cassidy had no more to do with what transpired in the conference or with the conference report which came out of that conference than did the man in the moon.

Mr. NORRIS. I thank the Senator.

Reading further:

There are certain phases of the T. V. A. in which the expenditures, etc., have been purposely muddled so that hardly anything short of a complete audit will show what has been done. One in particular is the operations at Muscle Shoals, where fertilizer and other activities are so lumped together and mixed up in the annual reports that they mean nothing. The report for June 30, 1937, is silent on the town of Norris, as a lot of fuss was kicked up about this when I uncovered a bunch of irregularities in the audit in May 1935.

I have in my possession some 60 pages of what purports to be verbatim—

Now he is getting to me, and this is one of the things which I think justify my taking the floor on this occasion:

I have in my possession some 60 pages of what purports to be verbatim reports of certain conferences held by Senator NORRIS, this being furnished to me from sources which I believe to be authentic; and if this is correct, it explains a lot of things, among which is the appointments made by the committee. These reports include a list of committee members NORRIS has stated he controls, the names of the members being given.

Mr. President, this man says that he has information that I made a statement that I controlled certain members of the investigating committee and gave their names. Although it is not directly charged but is charged from information which he thinks is reliable, what effect will it have upon the members of the committee? That kind of thing was going on without my knowing anything about it, these letters being sent to various members of the committee. I do not know what he said in letters to other members of the committee, but in this letter he charges me with claiming that I controlled the committee. That is as false as anything that was ever told by fiend or devil. There is no truth in it. If he has any such evidence, let him produce it, let him bring it forward. He says he has it from very reliable sources. I deny it; I say it is totally false; I say it is a lie; there is no truth in it; there is no foundation of truth for it, and it seems to me that I am entirely justified in defending myself against secret charges and insinuations. I defy any committee to put him on the stand and let him tell where this information is, what it is, and who says it. It is a lie from end to end. This egotistical person who is making these claims cannot substantiate them anywhere, even before an enemy. I will let him pick his own committee, if he will pick it out of this Chamber, and let them investigate any charges of that nature.

These reports include a list of committee members NORRIS has stated he controls, the names of the members being given. The purported data also includes the flat assertion that no committee appointments would be made without his approval, and that no one would be allowed to be appointed on the committee staff who had any particular knowledge of the T. V. A., and that no investigators except those who could be controlled would be appointed; also that if any investigators should get on to dangerous subjects they would be stopped.

I know nothing about that. He has gotten it out of thin air. He sent such statements by mail to members of the investigating committee, whom he blames in other letters for being appointed because I suggested it. That is another falsehood. I did not know him; I was not asked about him; I offered no evidence about him; I knew nothing about it.

Reading further:

One of the purported conferences was held on April 28 with D. E. Lilienthal and J. B. Blandford.

Mr. Blandford is general manager of the T. V. A., and Mr. Lilienthal is a member of the Board. It seems, according to this man, that a conference between us three was held. He has all the information. He knows just what we talked about. He knows the conspiracy that was entered into. I do not know how he got any such information. If we ever had a conference, I have no knowledge that Cassidy was anywhere hiding behind the furniture or under the bed. He must have been there, because he says he has the evidence; he knows what I said; he knows what Lilienthal said; he knows what Blandford said.

As they both know me by sight, and as they saw me in Senator DONAHEY'S office, it appears that my name was specifically mentiond for this reason, and NORRIS assured them that as a majority of the committee was controlled by him, there need be no fear of my having an active part in the investigation. In view of subsequent developments, the accuracy of this purported report seems to me to be established. Without any fear of it being controverted in any way, it must have been evident to every member of the committee—

Now he is coming to the investigating committee and is giving them a little lecture. He says:

Without any fear of it being controverted in any way, it must have been evident to every member of the committee that I was the outstanding authority on the T. V. A. subject, and if a majority of the committee had been imbued with the idea of getting to the facts, my services would have been indispensable, and the fact that the appointees of the committee in key positions were selected from people who knew nothing about the T. V. A. also is pretty clear proof of the authenticity of the purported reports of these conferences.

Again we see what a mountain of egotism this man is. He was the only man in the world who could do this work; he was not appointed; therefore it was my dirty work that prevented his appointment. I appeal to the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. SCHWARTZ], who was a member of that committee. I wonder if he remembers when I saw him; I wonder if he remembers any time when I told him what he had to do; I wonder if he can tell the Senate of any occasion when I said to him that I did not want Cassidy appointed or that I wanted this man appointed or I did not want that man appointed?

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I take occasion to remark that the Senator from Nebraska never spoke to me about any feature of this case at any time when it was under investigation. He never spoke to me about Mr. Cassidy or about anything else.

Mr. NORRIS. I thank the Senator.

Cassidy says further:

I was never interested in the investigation from the point of remuneration—

He is speaking now about himself—for I considered then and now that the legal pay for personnel services is limited to $300 per month, as has been the case in every other investigation I have had a hand in, except when by specific act the Congress has made a definite provision otherwise.

Three years ago in the joint committee on investigation the loss of the dirigibles Akron and Macon, the joint committee counsel, Joseph H. Choate, was limited to $300 per month, and had 10 percent taken off that by the operation of the economy act. I have—

Listen to this. This man is trying to tell what a great sacrifice it would have been, after all, if he had been appointed chief investigator of the committee, although he complains all the way through these letters because he did not get that appointment. He says:

I have a newspaper syndicate contract (which I have held in abeyance since the resolution was passed) for a minimum of 20 articles which call for more than three times as much as I could have expected from the committee had not NORRIS, through his control of the majority of the committee members, been able to block my connection with the investigation.

So, after all, I did him a financial favor. He had a syndicate of newspapers, and he will have something to say about that further on in his correspondence.

When the committee was organized, I had already sent three articles (eight full newspaper columns) to the syndicate, and three more have gone in since. I had not contemplated releasing any for publication until at least eight had been filed, so that I would not be rushed after the publication had once started. I have held up making any release until I see what the committee does, and if the results are what Senator NORRIS insists on—a farce—the releases will be made as I have plenty of data on file to deal with every section of the resolution.

Was that a threat to the committee? What was it for, if it was not a threat? He says, in effect: "I have a contract with a syndicate of newspapers; I am going to write, in fact, I have already written part of certain articles about this investigation. I have held them up to see what the committee is going to do. I want to be your chief investigator." He says in another paragraph, "These articles, eight of them, already prepared and sent in to the newspapers, are waiting for my telegram of release. I am going to release them if the committee does not appoint me chief investigator."

Can you not draw that conclusion? Is there any other conclusion that you can draw? What difference does it make to the committee how many newspaper articles he had? What difference does it make, so far as this investigation goes, how many syndicated articles he is going to prepare, or has prepared? But he says in this letter:

The articles have gone forward. I will release them or I will suppress them, depending on what action this committee takes.

You may draw your own conclusion. And this is the man who, without cause, without reason, but with lying falsification, is carried away into the dreamland of uncertainty by his imagination regarding his own abilities and his own knowledge.

Reading further:

It seems to me to be quite clear that if the majority of the committee had not wanted to block a real investigation, they would have wanted someone in key positions who knew what it was all about.

That is Cassidy, according to his own story.

Yours very truly, James E. Cassidy, consulting engineer.

Now another letter, Mr. President. I should be glad to print in full all of this correspondence. All of it would be interesting, but I do not want this speech to be monotonous. I am not going to read all of the letter. I am going to read only extracts from it, unless some member of the committee wants to put the whole letter in the RECORD, or have me read all of it.

This letter is written to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY] under date of April 7, 1938:

Hon. VIC DONAHEY, United States Senator, Washington, D. C.

The letterhead is just the same, except that he has a different office:

James E. Cassidy, M. Am. Soc. C. E., consulting engineer, P. O. Box 213, Wilmington, Del.

He is over in Delaware now, when he writes this letter:

Hon. VIC DONAHEY,
United States Senator,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: As an outstanding, if not the outstanding, authority on the subect of the Tennessee Valley by reason of detailed studies of the whole project over a period of 22 years—

It was only 13 years awhile ago, but now it is 22 years—

it is probable that my name will come before your committee either as chief investigator or an investigator of the technical phases. A number of the phases which are required to be investigated are highly technical in nature, such as power rates, chemical operations, and power dams, and can only be dealt with properly by technical experts.

He goes on. Let me read some of this:

Before going into other matters, would say that the two subparagraphs of the T. V. A. Act which deal with the power of removal of directors were framed by me.

That is not true. I believe that is one thing of the T. V. A. Act that I did that was accepted by the committee; and I never heard of Colonel Cassidy being remotely connected with it or mentioned about it in any way.

Further on in this letter to the Senator from Ohio, Mr. Cassidy says:

During the framing and consideration of the T. V. A. legislation I "gravitated" between the House Military Committee, the White House, and Senator NORRIS's office.

There you have him. Here are three places—the White House, the House Military Affairs Committee, and my office—and Mr. Cassidy himself says that he gravitated between the three. He was the pendulum that brought harmony out of chaos. He was so intimate with the President, the chairman of the committee, and the other members of the committee that he was the general who brought them forth into a pleasant land, in loving embrace, in entire agreement.

The Senate gave little consideration to the bill, as there were rarely ever more than half a dozen Senators in the Chamber while the bill was under consideration.

I suppose there were such times. I have seen that happen in the case of very important bills.

Everything that took place in the line of verbal discussions, I confirmed in writing and a copy went to Senator NORRIS, the Military Committee, and the White House, so I have a file of 2,000 to 3,000 pages of correspondence dealing with the evolution of the legislation.

I have no doubt that Mr. Cassidy probably has such a file. Every time something was done, he would write to somebody and tell them he did it, just as soon as he found out that it had been done; and a year from that time he would call attention to his memorandum, showing what he had accomplished at a prior date.

When President Roosevelt went to Muscle Shoals—

Now he is telling that old story over again. In these letters that I have from him he has told it dozens and dozens of times.

When President Roosevelt went to Muscle Shoals on January 20, 1933, before he was inaugurated, he had with him as a sort of Baedecker, a brochure of mine on Muscle Shoals which had been prepared on my studies which had then taken place over a period of 18 years, and most of the salient features in that brochure were written into the act. This brochure was supplemented from time to time, and for which I received the hearty thanks of the President many times.

Further on in the letter he says:

I have spent about $2,500 in my studies of this whole territory since I started on it in 1915, and I spent 6 months straight in 1933 and 1934, and the $2,500 that cost me came out of my pocket. I have never asked nor received a thin dime from any person or agency for my work, and I am a free agent in every sense of the word. I am decidedly interested in assisting in ascertaining to what extent the provisions I worked on so diligently in the framing of the T. V. A. Act, have been carried out.

* * * * * * *

There is no one in or out of the T. V. A. that has the fund of information I have on the subject by reason of my 22 years' study, and by the part I played in formulating the T. V. A. legislation, so it is quite logical that I should have an active part in the investigation.

There is another plea for a job; and when he does not get it, how the men who had the power to give it to him are then criticized and condemned. Then he heaps ridicule and condemnation upon them, because they permitted themselves to be controlled by me. I am always the one to blame.

Here is another letter written to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY]. It comes under the same heading:

James E. Cassidy, M. Am. Soc. C. E., consulting engineer.

This is from Wilmington, Del., under date of April 23, 1939:

Hon. VIC DONAHEY,
United States Senator,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR DONAHEY: Sometime ago I wrote you relative to my taking an active part in the T. V. A. investigation either as chief investigator or as chief investigator of the technical phases, and since that time the committee has been completed. The probabilities are that you will be selected as the chairman of the committee, and in view of that fact, I am handing you herewith a letter addressed to the chairman of the committee, and in case you should not be selected as chairman, I will appreciate it if you will hand it to whoever is selected.

Further on he says:

When the committee organizes, unless someone like myself is placed at the head of the work of investigation, who by long study of the project is an expert on T. V. A. matters, the committee will really be forced to mark time while "fishing trips" are gone into.

Another plea for patronage:

With my 22 years study of the Tennessee Valley, and as a framer of the larger part of the T. V. A. Act (and I mean by this the act as passed by the House), together with detailed investigations made in the T. V. A. at my own time and expense since the T. V. A. started to function, I could submit at once a program for the necessary organization and the agenda for the committee to consider as a working program. There is not going to be any too much time between now and January 3, 1939, for the committee to do the work devolving on it, and that is why it is important that the chief of investigation be someone who can start right from the tap of the gong.

* * * * * * *

I have acted as technical adviser in many House committees on an unofficial status for the past 33 years or so, and know all the ins and outs of the game.

* * * * * * *

I will be at the Willard Hotel in Washington Tuesday and Wednesday of next week (April 26 and 27) on some other matters, and if there is anything you would like to go over with me, * * * I will make an appointment. I will be glad to come down at any other time on advice to that effect.

He speaks of the syndicated newspaper articles again in an earlier part of the letter:

The syndicated newspaper article which I referred to before, came from the group dominated by Senator NORRIS and his associates on the T. V. A. Board—being "inspired," and the evident idea is that the committee can be induced to go into a campaign to discredit Dr. A. E. Morgan, and that when this is done the committee will let the thing drag along without making a real effort to investigate the administration and operations.

In writing, at the bottom of the dictated letter, he says:

I have contacted other members of the committee, among whom are—

Then he mentions Members of the House of Representatives.

Yours very truly,

JAMES E. CASSIDY,
Consulting Engineer.

Here is another letter to the chairman of the joint committee on T. V. A. investigation, written on the letterhead, as follows:

James E. Cassidy, M. Am. Soc. C. E., consulting engineer

He has several offices printed on this letterhead, Sheffield, Ala., Washington, D. C., and Wilmington, Del.

DEAR SIR: As the chairman of the Joint Committee on the Investigation of the T. V. A., you are somewhat in the nature of being between the rocks of Scylla and Charybdis, for if any pet corns of either the "pros" or the "cons" get tramped on, bias and favoritism is going to be charged.

He knows that from his own experience. He has done it so often he knows that will happen. He continues:

By reason of the fact that the writer started a detailed study of the Tennessee River Valley 22 years ago, and drafted the main features of H. R. 5081, as passed by the House of Representatives, and later on personally spent a lot of time in the Tennessee Valley looking into the administration and operations of the T. V. A., there is no one better fitted to handle the work as chief investigator, or at least as investigator of the various phases which involve highly technical matters.

During the work of preparing the T. V. A. bill the writer acted in the capacity of coordinator between the House Military Committee, Senator NORRIS, and the White House—

Repeating the same thing he said in another letter—

and in working out the provisions of the bill, in addition to lengthy discussions, all of which were confirmed in writing with copies to each of the three agencies, differences between the House and Senate were handled by me.

On November 11, 1932, a few days after the election, a memorandum on the Muscle Shoals project was handed Governor Roosevelt, by one of his campaign managers, and for which I received his personal thanks. Following this I prepared a brochure with certain charts and maps, and when President-elect Roosevelt went to Muscle Shoals on January 20, 1933, he had this brochure with him as a sort of Baedecker. Again, I had the warmest personal thanks for this brochure. From time to time, following the President-elect's visit to Muscle Shoals, I submitted to him annexes elaborating on the original plans, and I followed certain of the President's suggestions, or rather instructions, in dealing with the matter.

I will not read all of the letter. He makes various charges against me as he proceeds with it. Later on he said:

I have never asked nor received a single dollar from any power group or other agency opposed to the T. V. A., so I have no strings on me whatever.

He is pleading now to be appointed chief investigator, Senators understand. He wants to convince the chairman of the investigating committee that he is honest and that he has not been in the employ of the Power Trust, or anything of the kind.

As an outstanding, if not the outstanding, authority on Tennessee Valley problems, I have earned the right to act in the capacity of chief investigator, or at least the chief of the technical investigation phases, especially in view of framing a large part of the act.

I have on file copies of all of the documents I have referred to and hundreds of others besides. As I have worked out a general plan of organization of the investigation for the purpose of seeing whether or not the funds provided were sufficient, as chief investigator or investigator of the technical phases, the work could be initiated at once on an orderly program.

Prior to the enactment of the investigation resolution (S. J. 277) the writer had arranged with a large news syndicate to write a series of 20 articles dealing with the T. V. A. and its operations, at $225 per article—

That was quite a sum of money for this poor investigator who was hunting for a job.

each one to consist of not less than two columns of newsprint. Three of the 20 articles had already been delivered, but, pending the existing situation, I have not released them for publication, and will not do so in case I take part in the investigation, as such a release would not be ethical.

"If you do not employ me, I may give the release. If you do give me a job, I will forget it all." That is what this great man, who won the war and built the Panama Canal, wants to do.

I will be glad to come to Washington at once and go over this matter if desired.

Yours very truly,

JAMES E. CASSIDY,
Consulting Engineer.

He kept on after the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY]. This appointment had not been settled when the letter I am about to read was written. There was still hope that this man, who had been working for corporations which gave him jobs paying five and ten thousand dollars at a time, and thought nothing of it. This man, who took from these three men active control of various enterprises all over the known world, and part of the world that was not known, and handled a business which amounted to more than a billion dollars, was trying to get a job with the investigating committee. He spent $25,000 of his own money getting information about T. V. A. and the Tennessee Valley, and now he was hunting for a job, and he said, "I have some articles written, and for 20 of them I will get $225 apiece. Eight or nine of them have already been written and sent in, but they are awaiting release from me. If you get me a job, they will never be released. If you do not get me a job, they will be in the newspapers before you know it. So you had better give me a job."

But notwithstanding all those threats, notwithstanding the terrible possibility of being exposed, the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY] did not give him a job. He took his chances. He took his life in his hands and he said to Mr. Cassidy, "I do not want you." Senator DONAHEY knew Colonel Cassidy was not honest. Senator DONAHEY knew that he could not have such a man on the pay roll. Senator DONAHEY knew that Colonel Cassidy was prejudiced and biased. Senator DONAHEY knew that Colonel Cassidy did not know one-thousandth of what Cassidy thought Cassidy knew, and we have Senator DONAHEY to thank for turning this man Cassidy down notwithstanding all these letters of self-praise.

Here comes Cassidy again. He writes on the same sort of letterhead:

James E. Cassidy, M. Am. Soc., C. E.
Consulting Engineer

MAY 19, 1938.

Confidential.
Hon. VIC DONAHEY,
United States Senator, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR DONAHEY: I attended the committee meeting of the T. V. A. yesterday and I was very much impressed with the desire of the committee members to get at the real facts. I am writing this letter to you as a Senator, not as the chairman of the investigating committee, as it deals with a very delicate subject.

And here is what it is:

After the T. V. A. was organized in 1933, complaints in person and by mail poured into the Military Committee of the House and because, as he put it "being the President's baby." Chairman McSwain did not want to take official cognizance of these complaints, so he asked me to act as his "complaint department" which I did, and which by the way was gratuitous.

He digresses every once in a while in his letters to say "I did it without money." Or "I did not get anything for it."

Mr. President, after reading so many statements of that kind I cannot help but become suspicious. When a man has no visible means of support, when he says he has spent thousands of dollars of his own money to obtain information on various subjects, and he does everything for nothing, I cannot help but wonder how he manages to live. I cannot help but wonder how he exists. In nearly every other sentence he says, "I did thus and so without being paid for it." I do not know that he did get paid, but in some way Colonel Cassidy had to receive money for doing all these various things.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. MEAD. I ask the Senator to yield at this moment because I have been asked to assume the chair. Before doing so I wish to make the statement that I also served on the committee investigating the Tennessee Valley Authority, and during all the time of my service I never received a communication from the distinguished Senator from Nebraska. He never in any way tried to influence my decision as a member of the committee. The statements that are made by this man Cassidy, so far as they apply in my case, are in my judgment outrageous and are unworthy of the consideration of any man of integrity or fairness.

I wish to say further that I appreciate this opportunity to pay tribute to the distinguished Senator from Nebraska for his uniform fairness in all matters. I do not believe that Colonel Cassidy's charges will in any way injure the Senator from Nebraska, because of his splendid standing and his well-known fairness.

Mr. NORRIS. I thank the Senator.

I continue to read from Mr. Cassidy's letter:

I dealt with all of the complaints, coming in in the last half of 1933, the year of 1934, and over half of 1935, and in view of this fact, I was personally flooded with complaints sent direct to me. One month in 1934 I received 936 letters direct on this subject.

Here is the rather delicate subject I want to bring to your attention, and I suggest that you ask Dr. A. E. Morgan personally about this, and after his answer, it might be that you would want to bring the subject into the committee. I had reports and complaints from many sources to the effect that no sooner was the T. V. A. Act passed than Senator NORRIS set himself up as dictator—

So I am getting into a pretty high class now, Mr. President—

And that he was continually forcing his views on the T. V. A. directors, and one of the things attributed to him was that after H. A. Morgan had arranged to go ahead and operate Nitrate Plant No. 2, it was stopped dead by orders of Senator NORRIS. That information came to me from inside the T. V. A. organization. I am also informed that the break between Dr. A. E. Morgan and the other directors really came about in this way—

Mr. President, I wish briefly to comment on that statement. It is like all his other charges. He always covers them up with a veil of secrecy.

I had reports—

He said—

and complaints from many sources.

He had complaints that came into the T. V. A. organization itself that I set myself up as a dictator, and that I was continually forcing my views on the T. V. A. directors. One of the things he attributes to me was that after H. A. Morgan had arranged to go ahead with nitrate plant No. 2, I stopped it.

Of course, Mr. President, it is difficult, it is tiresome to keep on denying assertions and charges that have come out of a clear blue sky. It is difficult and embarrassing to say over and over again, "This is another lie. This is another falsehood, a statement without any foundation, direct or indirect."

Mr. President, there is nothing to it, absolutely nothing to it, and I defy Colonel Cassidy or anyone else to produce anyone who will testify to what he alleges in his letter. No person exists who can so testify. Such alleged information cannot be obtained. It is an impossibility to produce such testimony. Colonel Cassidy's statement is a falsehood, and he knows it to be a falsehood. Colonel Cassidy has been careful to cover up his charges without giving the name of anyone so that an investigation could be conducted.

I have illustrated to the Senate the foolishness of trying to get an admission from Colonel Cassidy by letter as to who made the charges against me. I read correspondence between him and me at the beginning of my address today. In my letters on three different occasions I demanded of Colonel Cassidy that he disclose the name of the man who he said had sworn to certain alleged facts, statements which I alleged to be false and groundless. In no instance did he divulge the name. Anyone who will do as Colonel Cassidy did in that respect is a dishonorable man, he has no honor about him, he is not fit to live in an honorable society. Any man who tries to besmirch the character and reputation of another by sneaking, lying, false insinuations, the authorship of which he refuses to disclose, and refuses to give any evidence on the basis of which the charges might be investigated, if anyone desired to make such an investigation, is a dishonorable man.

Colonel Cassidy makes various charges against me in that same letter, which I will not take time to read. The letter is signed "James E. Cassidy, consulting engineer."

Here is another letter with the same heading:

James E. Cassidy, M. Am. Soc. C. E., consulting engineer, Wilmington, Del.

Also an office at Washington and one at Sheffield, Ala. This letter was written by Colonel Cassidy to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY] as chairman of the investigating committee. I notice a notation on the letter. The Senator from Ohio referred it to someone for investigation, so I presume the allegations in the letter have been investigated by the proper authorities. I shall not read all of the letter. I shall read only parts of it. I am not omitting parts of it because they are not important. They are all of about the same importance, so far as I can see. Charges against me are contained in the parts which I shall omit, as well as in the parts which I shall read:

When a man completely reverses himself almost overnight, it is certain that there is an answer to it, and that is just what Senator NORRIS did. You will recall that I referred to this before. It was Senator NORRIS who killed the nitrates program which I had "sold" to Dr. H. A. Morgan in September 1933.

Again Mr. Cassidy goes out of the way to pluck out of a clear sky, where there is not a semblance of anything, a falsehood from beginning to end. Any man who knows my attitude for the past 20 years, while the T. V. A. Act was in various stages of enactment, knows that I went away beyond what my own people thought I ought to do in trying to obtain cheap fertilizer for the farmers of America. I know I did. I now believe in cheap fertilizer for the farmers as fervently as I ever believed in it. I think it is one of the great things to be accomplished by the T. V. A. Before the act was passed, and during the time of its consideration, I stated that it was the greatest experiment ever undertaken in the history of the world to bring about cheapening of the manufacture of fertilizer for agriculture. So when Colonel Cassidy makes this charge, as he makes it over and over again, he falsifies the record. He tells what he knows to be untrue; and he could have no other object than to bring disgrace and shame to me.

He further says:

It was on my insistence that the House of Representatives amended Senate Joint Resolution 277, and added section "S," and in my estimate of cost I figured this phase of the investigation would cost $15,000 to $20,000 if handled by anyone other than myself, for there is no one that has gone into the subject as I have and has the mass of data I have on the subject. It cost me many thousands of dollars and a lot of time to be able to prepare the economic study of the nitrates program as submitted to the President by me.

It is very gratifying to me to see that you—

He is writing to the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], chairman of the committee.

It is very gratifying to me to see that you fully recognize the importance of the nitrates program, and I can assure you I can back you up in that respect to a greater extent than you can imagine.

He wants a job. He tells the Senator from Ohio what he can do for him. This great man, who had changed the world through his great engineering ability and his investigations all over the world, in India, South America, France, Germany, Norway, South America, and Central America, is pleading for a job. He says, "I know more about the subject than anybody else in the world. I can do it more cheaply than anybody else, and you ought to employ me." What he wants is a job.

In speeches by Senator NORRIS, prepared from misleading data prepared by the Fertilizer Trust, he stated many times that the cyanamide process was obsolete by reason of the development of the Haber or synthetic process—

And so forth.

I trust that the committee is not going to pass up the advantage they have of my 22 years of study and some 75,000 to 100,000 pages of data on the subjects involved in the investigation, and as I see it, my studies and data are of the utmost importance by reason of the small amount of funds available, and now that the time at the command of the committee has been reduced to 5 months.

Yours very truly,

JAMES E. CASSIDY,
Consulting Engineer.

Mr. Cassidy comes back in the same month, on July 28, on a letterhead which reads:

Sheffield, Ala., phone Wilmington 3-8174, Washington, D. C. James E. Cassidy, M. Am. Soc. C. E., consulting engineer, P. O. box 213, Wilmington, Del.

He makes various charges of the same kind against me being practically a repetition of those previously made. I shall not read all of them. I shall read only extracts from the letter.

He says:

Almost overnight Senator NORRIS switched from the baiting of the Fertilizer Trust to become its ardent advocate, and has since bitterly opposed any idea of operation of the nitrate plants.

With the 22 years' study I have made of the whole Tennessee Valley question, the drafting of the principal features of the bill, and the special studies relating to power and chemicals, my qualifications as an expert on every phase of the T. V. A. question cannot be challenged, and if this knowledge and studies are ignominiously shelved, it seems to me that this will be conclusive evidence that the information which has come to me about stacking the committee with people who are biased in favor of the T. V. A. project is correct. I have no bias against the T. V. A. project. If I had had, do you think I would have gone to the trouble of preparing the brochure which was Roosevelt's guide on his first trip to Muscle Shoals and on which his message to Congress was based; also would I have taken the time and trouble to draft and fight through provisions of the Tennessee Valley Authority Act itself? If the committee feels that "stacking" it with T. V. A. partisans is necessary, the public will naturally conclude that the T. V. A. could stand a real investigation.

Here he is endeavoring again to scare the Chairman. He says, in effect, "You have permitted NORRIS to 'stack' the committee, and now you have an opportunity, even though you did 'stack' it, to hire me as chief investigator, and I will put it through in such a way that all honor and glory and credit will come to you and the committee; but if you do not select me, the public will draw the conclusion you are 'stacked,' and you will go through life in derision and disgrace."

Resuming the reading:

Perhaps the statements that have come to me are just conclusions, and that is why I am writing you personally on the subject.

Yours very truly,

JAMES E. CASSIDY,
Consulting Engineer.

Mr. President, matters proceed until August 1938, when he writes again on his letterhead:

James E. Cassidy, M. Am. Soc., C. E.
Consulting Engineer
P. O. Box 213
WILMINGTON, DEL., August 31, 1938.

The letter is addressed to Senator DONAHEY, and in it he says:

* * * * * * *

The unfortunate thing about it is that when the spotlight is thrown on the "investigation" the chairman is going to be made the "goat." The men who are responsible for hamstringing the committee by allowing NORRIS to plant his keymen on the committee have kept away from the hearings so that if the question ever comes up about the failure to do things, they can point out the fact that they were not present.

That is another assertion taken out of the whole cloth, made completely out of a falsehood by this man, as he has done time after time. He is trying to convey the impression that I have disregarded my duty to my country in this Chamber and that members of the committee were only tools in my hands. The members of the committee know that that is not true. Every member of the committee, those who are here and those who are not here, knows the falsity of Cassidy's charges. It seemed to be my duty to brand them as falsehoods and place my statement in the RECORD, so that it might not be said when I pass out of the picture that I have never answered or denied these charges.

I read further:

The same thing that has happened in these other matters will happen in the power-rate matter. It is on this subject that NORRIS arranged for planting Panter on the committee.

Why any man should make such a statement I cannot understand. There is absolutely no foundation for it. He cannot show a single thing that will warrant him in making such a statement. I did not know Panter was going to be employed by the committee; I did not know Mr. Panter; I was not asked about Mr. Panter. I do not know what the committee said or did about it. I suppose, under arrangements made by the committee, that the chairman selected Mr. Panter, and everybody who knows the chairman knows he would not select a man who he thought was "planted." Everyone who knows anything about it knows that whether Panter was a good man or a bad man I was not directly interested in or directly responsible for his selection. I have learned about him since the investigation, and so far as I know he was an excellent man; so far as I know it would have been difficult, perhaps impossible, for the chairman to get a man better qualified for the work than was this man whom he did select. If the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the chairman of the committee, selected him, he selected him because he knew him; he selected him because he had confidence and faith in him. Then the charge that he was "planted" on the committee, which is the charge made by Cassidy, seems to me to deserve the condemnation of every honest man who knows anything about it.

In order to attempt to justify the charging of most of the expenditure to fake accounts, such as "flood control," somebody had to be put in to pull the strings, and that is how NORRIS got Panter in through Scattergood.

I do not know whether Mr. Scattergood was consulted. I know Mr. Scattergood, as many others know him; he is an engineer of national reputation; but I did not know Mr. Scattergood had anything to do with the investigation. I do not know now that he did. It would have been very probable that Senator DONAHEY would have consulted with such an engineer as Mr. Scattergood to get Mr. Panter; it may be that Mr. Scattergood had definite knowledge of Mr. Panter and that Senator DONAHEY did not have. But that has not anything to do with me. He says I "planted" him through Scattergood.

The thing about these lies that disgusts me, and one reason why I think this man Cassidy is crazy, is that he tells lies that almost on their face show themselves to be lies. He knows that it was very easy to reach Scattergood and ask him whether I tried to get a man on there through any influence, directly or indirectly, of mine. He knows that it can easily be proven that what he says is a lie. He knows, of his own knowledge, that it is not true. So it is malicious. He wants to get a job. He is hunting for a job—this great man hunting for a little job!

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I wish to take this opportunity to say a word or two about Mr. Panter. In the first place, Mr. Panter's name originally was not suggested to the committee by Mr. Scattergood or by anybody connected with Mr. Scattergood. Mr. Panter, in common with perhaps half a dozen engineers, was called before the committee and examined as to his qualifications.

However, what I started to say more particularly about Mr. Panter, who, as the Senate may know, has now passed away, is that when he finally made his report and submitted it to the committee, I recall that he said:

This report is complete, and I am through—

And the committee advised him that he was. He then said:

My time has terminated in this employment.

The committee said "Yes." He said:

I just wanted to be sure about that, because I desire to discuss some other matters with Mr. Scattergood, and I did not want to take up anything with Mr. Scattergood during the time I was at work for this committee.

I thought I should like to say that much, because Mr. Panter has now passed away.

Mr. NORRIS. I thank the Senator from Wyoming. This is one of the last pieces of work that Mr. Panter did. He wound up his work with the shadow of death upon him. He did not, as I understand, expect to live; and for anyone, especially such a man as Cassidy, to cast any reflection upon him is a downright outrage and deserves condemnation by everyone.

Mr. Cassidy continues:

The power estimates given the committee by Lilienthal show that the big contracts already made were made at figures which show a heavy loss on every kilowatt-hour of power even on the cost basis Lilienthal said they hoped to arrive at after the complete development of the Tennessee River. As it is on the present stage of matters, the loss with proper charges to power is better than 50 percent on the cost.

In the Chattanooga hearings he tries to make capital of the power companies opposing the rural electric service. One of the dirtiest things I know of in the T. V. A. was the coercion, threats, and fraud practiced by the T. V. A. in this very matter of rural electric service, and again I have a large file on that, with the names and statements of people subjected to the threats, coercion, and frauds.

Mr. President, the majority report—I do not know what the minority report finds about that—distinctly finds that to be untrue; that the T. V. A. never tried to coerce anybody; the companies were acting of their own free will; but here comes Cassidy trying to get the job as investigator, telling the chairman of the committee, "I am absolutely unbiased; I am frank and free," and before he gets through with his letter he discloses the fact that he is bitterly opposed to the T. V. A.; that he wanted to drive them off the face of the earth, and that he has thousands of pages of documentary evidence to prove their cruel conduct, as he says.

One of the dirtiest things I know of in the T. V. A. was the coercion, threats, and fraud practiced by the T. V. A. in this very matter of rural electric service, and again I have a large file on that.

Does that sound like an unbiased man? Does that sound like a man who has not formed an opinion in advance? Is that the kind of a man who wants to creep in under cover and get charge of the investigation?—

In stacking the committee, the majority at the same time tied the hands of the chairman, which makes that position anything but an enviable one. As early as April 28, I knew the committee was not to be permitted to have any one on the staff who knew anything about the subject, and I have data on every move which did stack the committee later.

Another great big lie in cold blood; another thing stated without any cause, without any reason. This malicious, egotistical ass is making charges against honest men that ought to bring the blush of shame to any one who has any sense of honor or honesty in his make-up.

This letter is signed:

Yours very truly,

JAMES E. CASSIDY,
Consulting Engineer.

I have not found a place where he has ever forgotten to add those words.

Mr. President, I have about concluded what I have to say. I think I have been justified in bringing this matter to the attention of the Senate. I wanted to put in the RECORD something that would remain in it at least partially to tell the tale, and to circumvent any effect that this wicked and malicious onslaught might have after, perhaps, I have passed out of the picture. I want the Senate to know, I want the country to know, as the committee—friend and foe alike—already know, that I never raised my hand to try to control the action of any member of the committee on any official act that he had to perform.

This man charges over and over again, first, that I "stacked" the committee. That is a charge against the Vice President of the United States. He knows the charge is untrue. He knows it is false. He knows I had but one object. I wanted a fair committee. There was some difficulty in getting a committee. The Vice President first appointed the honorable leader of the minority, the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCNARY], a man who was perfectly satisfactory to me. I did not think I ought to go on the committee. I was not conscious of being unfair, but I thought I might be, notwithstanding my knowledge of the matter. I did not want anybody who had taken the opposite side as actively as I had taken a position in favor of T. V. A. to be appointed on the commitee; but I never raised my hand to "stack" the committee. I made no objection to the appointment of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DAVIS]. I did not make any objection to anybody the Vice President appointed.

The charge that the committee itself could not appoint anybody except with my approval is a charge that I believe most of my comrades here in the Senate, those who know me, would reject as an absurd falsehood. They will not always be here, however, and I shall not be here; and as a matter of history I want the RECORD to show that I have protested against these falsehoods. I have learned to think of Colonel Cassidy as a monumental, egotistical ass, thinking only of himself, who has no regard for the truth, who would as soon make a lie out of whole cloth as to get the truth out of the Bible itself, who has no mercy, who would just as soon rob an honest man as a robber or a sneak thief, who makes charges against a man who has never done him an injury; a man who for a while thought Colonel Cassidy had some ability, who tolerated the man in his office many and many an hour when he would have been glad to see him go, because of a desire to be courteous to him.

That Colonel Cassidy should follow this line of abuse of me is something that I cannot understand. Certainly nothing I ever did to him would justify it. It seems to me there must be some reason for it somewhere; that he must have concealed about him some reason why he thinks I ought to be slaughtered or condemned, and at the same time why the committee ought to be condemned, as he feels. They did not give him a job, and they are as much to blame as I am; and he ridicules their work, a monumental job which I think is going to stand out as one of the fairest, most honest, unprejudiced investigations, as far as the majority is concerned, that has ever taken place in either the Senate or the House.

It was a difficult task. I think the committee did their work manfully, nobly, courageously. At some other time, Mr. President, perhaps I shall have something further to say about both the reports of the committee, but I am not now going into that subject. I have concluded what I wanted to say, and I thank the Senate for listening all this afternoon to my feeble remarks.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House insisted upon its amendments to the bill (S. 964) creating the Arkansas-Mississippi Bridge Commission; defining the authority, power, and duties of said commission; and authorizing said commission and its successors and assigns to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Mississippi River at or near Friar Point, Miss., and Helena, Ark., and for other purposes, disagreed to by the Senate; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. CHAPMAN, Mr. KELLY, and Mr. HOLMES were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

CONSTRUCTION OF NAVAL WORKS AND FACILITIES

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 4278, Calendar No. 282.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MEAD in the chair). The question is on the motion of the Senator from Massachussets.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 4278) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with the construction of certain public works, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs, with amendments.

Mr. WALSH. I ask unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, and that it be read for amendment, the amendments of the committee to be first considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE RELIEF PROBLEM

Mr. BARBOUR. Mr. President, I desire to discuss briefly today a subject which, as I see it, is tending to become involved in controversy and confusion when the solution should be in the broad sense, quite simple. I refer to the relief problem, and to the various legislative proposals which we have had presented to us recently, or which we understand we are to be asked shortly to consider.

Following a protracted study by the Senate's Special Committee to Investigate Unemployment and Relief, the committee, headed by the able Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], whom we all like and admire, submitted a preliminary report to the Senate on April 20, 1938, exactly a year ago. It came in with a second report on January 13 of the present year. Meanwhile the Sheppard committee, which last year investigated, among other things, the activity of relief personnel in the 1938 political campaigns, submitted an admirable report of its own dealing with this aspect of the subject.

We have had before us a whole series of bills representing the ideas of various Senators and committees of Congress as to the solution of the problems presented to us in connection with the administration of relief. On February 9 the Senator from South Carolina introduced his own bill to establish a Department of Public Works, and to amend certain sections of the Social Security Act, the effect of which would be to set up an entirely new system for relief administration. This bill, completely revised, was reported to the Senate on Monday of this week, without an accompanying report to explain the purpose and effect of the many amendments approved by the special committee which considered it. Now, today, we are told this bill has been divided into two parts, and that instead of a single bill we are to be asked to consider two bills, one creating a new public-works agency, into which the Federal agencies concerned with the several specific works programs would be merged, and a second bill which would deal exclusively with the relief set-up and amendments to the present Social Security Act.

It is my understanding that the second of these two bills offered or to be offered by the Senator from South Carolina will go on the Senate Calendar, under the present program of the Democratic majority of the Senate, and that we are to be permitted to consider only the new public-works bill, which, as I analyze it, would accomplish nothing except a consolidation of existing agencies under a single administrative jurisdiction, without changing their essential functions. This of itself is a step forward but does not go far enough, especially in respect to the all-important problem of relief administration, except as it is concerned with the public-works program of the Federal Government, or with public works to be constructed through joint participation of the national and local governments.

My impression is that the reason the Byrnes committee and the Democratic majority have decided to delay action on the second bill—dealing with relief and changes in the social-security system—is that they desire to await action by the House on a bill which is supposed to be in preparation by the Ways and Means Committee, following extended hearings and study. Upon inquiring as to when the Ways and Means Committee may be expected to report its own measure to the House, I was informed that no prediction could be made—that it would be "some time in the future."

So, as matters now stand, we are confronted with a condition as a result of which we are to be asked, first, to consider—probably tomorrow, or very shortly thereafter—a new public-works bill which we have not had a chance to digest and on which, thus far, we have had no report from the committee in charge; and, second, that we are not to take up the more fundamental and urgent problem of relief administration itself.

Mr. President, if we cannot do better than this after all these years of relief abuses, investigations, reports, and discussions in and out of Congress, we ought to quit and go home. I believe we can do better, and I hope that we shall, and in order to get this subject before the Senate in what I conceive to be a constructive manner, I again urge that the Senate proceed forthwith, not with a makeshift solution, or with the proposed public-works bill, but to frame legislation returning relief administration to the States on a Federal-aid basis. This principle is embodied in my own bill, S. 222, which has been before the Senate for several months, and in bills offered by certain other Senators who, like myself, have concluded long since that this is the only remedy for the evils which are all too familiar to us all.

I think that most Americans are agreed on two things: First, that American citizens out of employment, and unable, through no fault of their own, to find employment, should be afforded relief until such time as industry can and will absorb them, and that those who, by reason of physical incapability or the infirmities of age, never will be able to work, should be afforded adequate relief. Second, that the relief set-up as now constituted represents a deplorable and discouraging mess, fair neither to those receiving nor to those entitled to receive its benefits, or to those who are paying the huge and recurring bills.

It does not seem necessary at this time to draw a brief in behalf of Federal participation in the operation and financing of a general relief program. This obligation was accepted rather hesitantly but deliberately about 9 years ago, and has continued on an ever-shifting experimental basis since that time. At the end of 9 years we are face to face with a necessity for further gigantic appropriations of Federal funds to help relieve distress among the people. After all these years of relief expedients the continuing size of the problem is evidence that we are no longer warranted in assuming that any new appropriation is the last of the series, or that any substantial diminution in the demand upon the public resources for relief is in sight.

Recognizing, therefore, that we are face to face with a continuing obligation, it appears to be essential that we shall consider the method of participation in this responsibility which shall be adopted by the Federal Government for a continuing program. It is obvious that the formula heretofore in effect is defective for a number of reasons, among them being inherent instability of organization and planning, capricious administration, lack of coordination between the various levels of government, lack of adequate personnel standards and policies, concentration on short-time objectives rather than long-time planning, demonstrated inability of a centralized Federal organization to administer this program on an effective, flexible, realistic, and economical basis.

This list of defects is only partial. Many more could be advanced to show why Federal participation in the general relief program has been less than satisfactory during the last few years and why continuation of any mere modification of the current system would be certain to produce a like result.

While the emergency character of the conditions which forced Federal recognition of the relief program may serve to excuse in some degree the waste which has characterized the past, it is submitted that such reason will not serve to excuse similar waste of material and human resources in the future.

In considering ways and means of bringing about a fundamental redirection of Federal participation in the relief program we have before us the example of a well-established system of Federal, State, and local governmental partnership in a large group of joint projects which has been tested by time and tradition and has been found invariably to be practical and productive of desired results. Partnership between the Federal Government and the several States has been used from the earliest history of this country as the accepted method of promoting objectives of national interest or concern.

Satisfaction has been the outcome of the grants-in-aid device in promoting, for example, agricultural research and the dissemination through local governments of the findings of agricultural science and the promotion of improved methods. The State agricultural experiment stations have specialized in that research of primary interest to the working farmers of the respective States, and the results obtained are no doubt superior to those which might have been obtained by any more centralized program. By no other means could we have developed so vigorous and effective an organization to reach the individual farmer and the individual farm family on a level designed best to help them with their immediate problems.

Similarly the established pattern of Federal-State relationships has promoted advances in education, higher development of labor standards and policies, the rehabilitation of victims of industrial accidents, promotion of public-health work, and maternal and child welfare. Lately this pattern has met with notable success in the development of programs for old-age assistance, aid to dependent children, aid to the blind, and aid for crippled children. It has also served to develop effective unemployment-compensation plans in each of the several States.

When we are dealing with the ramified problems of a continental Nation such as this, the established pattern of Federal, State, and local government partnership promotes functional activities of an essential character, and reduces the tendency to overlapping which is inherent in a Federal system.

The sum total of experience has shown by repeated example that grants-in-aid enable the Federal Government to exercise leadership in an acceptable way and thereby quicken and strengthen the activities of States in desirable directions.

Leadership of the Federal Government functions best when limited to establishing standards and assisting in financing while delegating administration to the several States and through them to the local governments.

What the Federal Goverment may reasonably require in a program of this character is assurance that the funds advanced will be expended to promote certain broad objectives which may be reasonably defined in the enabling law; that the funds be administered honestly and efficiently, and that the Federal agency have sufficient supervisory authority to prescribe reasonable standards and to exact proper financial accounting.

It is highly significant that the Federal Government, whenever it has entered into a cooperative agreement with the States to promote the general welfare of the people, has utilized the services of existing appropriate State agencies.

The very size of the United States and its diversified character militate against the probable success of a centralized public-assistance program. The history of this country has been determined, to a large degree, by the variety of economic and social standards which has existed contemporaneously among its various areas. The needs of industrial territories differ from those of agricultural sections; the requirements of small communities are not the same as those of congested centers of population; there are differences of climate and of social habits as well as differences of employment opportunities, and all of these bear a fundamental relationship to details of administration. Therefore, any plan of administering a program of this scope which fails to recognize and allow for adjustment to these differences is bound to be unsatisfactory.

In the establishment of a general Nation-wide program of public relief and public works we are compelled to face these facts: We must realize that such a program cannot be administered successfully from Washington, no matter how many subsidiary branch offices may be established. We have found by our earlier experiences that we need the interested participation of the permanent State agencies, the contributions which can be made by permanent local agencies, and the counsel and cooperation of individual citizens. The Federal Government can lend essential financial aid and essential direction and supervision to the practical working out of the problem, but it ventures beyond this limitation only at the hazard of complete failure.

A recent estimate indicates that about $258,000,000 per month is now being spent throughout this country for all forms of relief. About 6,500,000 individual homes are affected and 21,000,000 persons are dependent in some degree upon this help. Of this sum, W. P. A. has been expending $149,000,000 every month; the categorical programs for the aged, dependent children, and the blind, about $42,000,000 a month, and $36,000,000 has been used in general relief.

In the expenditures for general relief the States of New York, Pennsylvania, and Illinois alone account for $20,000,000, with California and Michigan spending $5,000,000 additional, leaving only $11,000,000 a month in local money to be spread thinly over 43 States and the District of Columbia. The equalizing and standardizing leadership of the Federal Government is obviously required.

It is a fact that W. P. A. has never fulfilled the purpose for which it was established. It has never at any time provided work for all employables in need of public relief; nor has it continuously reviewed the need of those it purported to relieve. It has been administered capriciously and without stable objective. It has built up its rolls in seasons of ready employment, and discharged thousands of helpless persons without notice in midwinter and with little or no recourse to other available help. It has shown an inherent inability to control and adjust its program or to coordinate with other levels of government and has been erecting a self-serving bureaucracy without parallel in the history of this country. It is, therefore, essential that W. P. A. be liquidated as promptly as possible and that a more reasonable plan for meeting the area of need it supposedly serves be established without loss of time.

It is proposed, therefore, in my bill—and I should like to mention in parenthesis that there are certain changes I hope to make—that the Social Security Act be amended to include a twelfth title and that the Social Security Board be assigned the further function of administering assistance to the several States for direct relief and work relief on a partnership basis.

Given such a Federal-State framework, proper intake procedures, classification standards, and certification methods could be established. Progress toward stabilized financial policies, keeping of adequate records, opportunity for fact finding, creation of a reasonable system of determining and meeting needs could be accomplished. The whole set-up would become constructive and of incalculable benefit toward the security and stability of the whole people.

Many of the difficulties encountered in the administration of categorical assistance would be alleviated or resolved immediately upon the adoption of this plan. The experience gained in the last 2 years under the Social Security Act could be capitalized. Most States now have permanent administrative and supervisory organizations, many of them established under merit systems. Many of the problems inherent in establishing such organizations have been met and resolved or are in process of satisfactory solution. Rapid expansion of these organizations is practical and would cause no undue delay.

The Federal obligation for stabilizing and financing relief would be discharged in the recognized and tested way by adoption of my bill. Appropriation of the funds would in no event exceed the sums required to continue the less satisfactory W. P. A. program.

As a matter of fact, Mr. President, I feel that I have some little knowledge of these matters, at least in the State of New Jersey. I believe a very great and material saving would result from the suggested partnership between the Federal Government and the States.

With the broad outlines of a continuing public relief policy established by Federal law, and with the counsel and advice of the Social Security Board and its staff, the States would be enabled promptly and effectively to assume responsibility for administrative procedure and for providing their share of the funds.

By these means it would be possible to remove this issue of human welfare from the partisan political arena. Budgetary and taxation policies of greater stability would follow. This, in turn, would make it possible for business management to plan and stabilize in a field where such planning and stabilizing would be most fruitful.

This, in my judgment, is the correct formula and, in fact, the only formula by which we can expect to accomplish the dual purpose of ending the present evils of relief administration and putting it on a business basis. I urge that we approach the problem with these principles in mind, and that we act at once, without waiting longer.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARBOUR. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I understand the Senator's proposal would unify all relief operations under State control. Is that correct?

Mr. BARBOUR. Yes.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In other words, instead of having the atrocious injustice which now exists as the result of unemployables upon a dole at home and employables on work relief as the result of Federal subsidy, there would be a unified treatment of each State's problem to fit each State's necessities upon the responsibility of State decision supported by Federal grants-in-aid. Is that the Senator's proposal?

Mr. BARBOUR. That is absolutely the Senator's proposal, and he is convinced it is the only practicable way of approaching the problem.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, I should like to observe in the Senator's time that I think he puts his finger on the fundamental relief necessity if we are going to escape the basic difficulties which the country confronts under the existing formula. At the present time we face this contemplation: Here are three citizens who live on the same street in the same town. In one family there is an unemployable head of the family who under the existing system is dependent entirely upon local relief, and who averages across the country $23 a month. Next to him is a family headed by an employable who under the existing system is entitled to work relief and gets an average of $53 a month across the country. Next to him is another family headed by an employable who is entitled to work relief under our theory of things—entitled to $53 a month—but who cannot be cared for under W. P. A. because there is no job for him, so he falls back upon local relief at $23 a month.

So we have three American families each equitably entitled to precisely the same treatment from its Government, each able to be just as hungry as the other, but served in a totally inequitable fashion, one getting about 50 cents on the dollar compared to what the other does.

Meanwhile we have the local community totally unable to spread its resources over its whole relief problem because of this classification of reliefers and this division of responsibility between the State and Federal Governments. As I understand the proposal of the able Senator from New Jersey, he is proposing to unify all relief and treat it as a whole. He is proposing to let each State know once a year how much money it can have from the Federal Government to apply to relief. Thereupon he is proposing to let each State decide for itself how this money shall be used in connection with its own relief funds to meet its total relief problem—employables and unemployables—in the best fashion that the State itself may decide for itself. Thus, and thus only, will we ever make our relief resources meet our relief demands. Thus, and thus only, will we ever establish equity to all needy citizens, and get maximum relief value out of each relief dollar.

Am I correct in my analysis of the Senator's proposal?

Mr. BARBOUR. The Senator from Michigan is entirely correct. I simply wish to add that, of course, justifiably there would have to be some degree of national supervision in the general sense to warrant the Federal Government's giving grants-in-aid. Perhaps I should not say "supervision." I should say that the States would have to confine themselves within the bounds of the program, as they now do in connection with the unemployment compensation program.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator means a formula of standards?

Mr. BARBOUR. Absolutely.

Mr. GUFFEY obtained the floor.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Davis	Johnson, Calif.	Reed

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-six Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

VOLUNTARY RESETTLEMENT OF AMERICAN NEGROES IN AFRICA

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GUFFEY. I yield.

Mr. BILBO. On Monday, April 24, in response to the wishes of nearly 3,000,000 Afro-American petitioners, I propose to introduce a bill providing for the voluntary resettlement of 12,000,000 American Negroes in their fatherland; and if I can obtain the floor at that time I shall speak on the proposal.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President——

Mr. GUFFEY. I yield.

Mr. McNARY. Is the Senator from Mississippi giving notice that he intends to speak on the subject on Monday next?

Mr. BILBO. Yes. I intend to speak at that time if I can obtain the floor.

ADDITIONAL CLERICAL ASSISTANTS FOR SENATORS

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, I address myself to the bill introduced by me, known as Senate bill 1807, relating to additional clerical assistants for Senators.

When I entered the United States Senate in January, 1935, of course I was allotted the usual number of assistants to help perform the work which was to confront me. In addition, I brought with me a man trained in research work, and assigned to him the task of studying, analyzing, and advising me as to the contents and intent of the bills introduced and pressing for enactment. I paid the assistant from my own funds at the rate of $4,200 per annum. His work was most satisfactory and very valuable to me.

I had not been long in the Senate when I discovered that if I was to keep reasonably abreast of the demands made upon me by a large proportion of the 10,000,000 people in my State, it would be necessary for me to hire and pay for several additional clerks out of my own resources. I will add that 10 gallons of gasoline will bring any 5 voters from the State of Pennsylvania to the Capital City, where they all know my office is located.

I hired extra clerks in the belief that the situation I was facing at that time was temporary, and that within a reasonable time the number of visitors calling at my office and the amount of mail addressed to me would decrease, and I could then get along with the number of clerks provided by the Senate. After a number of months I found I was mistaken.

I could not afford to continue my extra clerks and the research expert, and I had to do without the latter. Since my entrance as a Member of this body extra clerk hire has cost me an average of $5,000 per year. Even with this additional help it is impossible for me to do that which I should like to do and which I owe to my constituents—namely, greet everyone from my State who calls at my office, who should be seen by me personally, and answer my mail within a reasonable period. Not only can I not do either, but I cannot even answer a considerable portion of my mail. I have received as many as 9,000 telegrams in 2 days and 56,000 letters in 8 days.

I am reliably informed that the late Bois Penrose, while a Member of this Senate from Pennsylvania, expended approximately $60,000 per year for assistants and research men, and that the late Senator Couzens, of Michigan, expended considerable sums for the assistants he needed. These men were wealthy and able to make such expenditures personally in order that they might efficiently and successfully meet the demands made upon them.

There are Members of the Senate who, I happen to know, are under great financial pressure and sacrifice because of their efforts to employ sufficient clerical help needed to meet the demands of their constituents.

Since my coming to the Senate, 12 of its Members have died and only 2 were over 70 years of age. Of that number 3 met accidental deaths, and 1 died from a gunshot wound. It is my judgment that of the other 8 at least 4 passed away because of overwork and lack of sufficient aides. Surely this should not be.

I have in mind two Senators who I think all the Members of the Senate will agree were greatly overworked and who died before their time. I refer to the late Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, and the late Senator Copeland, of New York.

Senate bill 1807 was introduced by me contrary to the advice of some of the Members of the Senate who have been here much longer than have I. Since the bill's introduction a very considerable number of Senators have come to and discussed with me the purpose and intent and need for some such legislation. They are convinced that something along this line should be done. I was really surprised to learn how many of my colleagues needed additional clerk hire properly to take care of their correspondence and the other work in their offices.

The bill about which I speak provides that each Senator representing a State of 2,000,000 or more population shall be entitled to receive an additional $1,000 for additional clerical assistance for every 1,000,000 inhabitants or fraction thereof in excess of 2,000,000, but the bill limits any Senator to an additional $5,000.

I have no particular pride of authorship in this bill and do not ask that it be passed exactly as introduced. Frankly, I think that it should be amended in one respect at least. It should contain a provision whereby the majority and minority leaders on this floor will each be enabled to have a competent expert at a salary of $4,000 or $5,000 per annum. Every Member of this body knows the tremendous task facing these two Senators. I do not see how it is physically possible for them to inform themselves adequately on the many important bills that come before the Senate for a vote.

Of course, we all know that they should be able to do this in order to fulfill the responsibility placed upon them by their respective parties. Other meritorious amendments might be suggested by men who have had many more years of experience here than have I. The leader of the majority in the House and the leader of the minority in that body are allowed a sum additional to their salary and regular clerk hire with which to pay for the assistance they need.

The people of this country, your constituents and mine, will not object to such legislation as I propose. They look to you and me for service, and they will not begrudge us the help with which to endeavor to meet their demands. They do not send us here to kill us or break us down with overwork. They would be well repaid through better service and better legislation.

The bill, as introduced, would cost the Government an additional $108,000 per year, plus an additional $10,000 for the two experts suggested for the majority and minority leaders. It would increase the allowance for assistants of 46 Senators. The allowance for other Senators would remain as now.

I sincerely urge the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate to consider this bill without delay, to hold hearings on it and report it in some form to the Senate. The Members of the Senate should be given an opportunity to vote upon it and to amend it. I feel sure that the majority of the Members are fully aware of the need for such legislation, and, if given an opportunity, will vote for it.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HATCH in the chair). Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. GUFFEY. I yield.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. President, coming as I do from the most populous State in the Union, I am beginning to realize that being a United States Senator is not a poor man's job.

I left the House of Representatives where I had seven clerks assigned to me and where I represented a district of approximately 275,000 population, to come to the Senate and to assume the gigantic task, in common with my colleague from New York, of attempting to attend to the wishes of 13,000,000 souls and to represent a State that comprises 45 congressional districts. I find that being allowed five clerks is just like an attempt to run the post office of the city of New York with the same number of letter carriers that are assigned to the post office at Kankakee or Kalamazoo. It just cannot be done, and there is not an iota of justice in it.

Like the Senator from Pennsylvania, I, too, receive a tremendous volume of mail, averaging from 500 to 3,000 letters a day. In order that the Senate may know just how big the task of handling this mail is, let me say that it took one man in my office 12 hours on 1 day merely to open the mail. Much as I dislike to yield to the temptations of the modern machine age, I was forced to insist that my office be mechanized. Therefore, I secured an electric opener, an electric typewriter, and a mechanical letter sealer.

My office force, their families, and such friends as have been willing to volunteer their services work from early morning until well-nigh midnight, Sundays and holidays included, in my office in an attempt to get out the mail. A week ago Sunday some 20 of us adjourned from my office at 7 o'clock in the evening for dinner after putting in a busy day in the office taking care of my mail.

I have no time to attend to subcommittee meetings and hardly any time to attend to the meetings of the full committees of which I am a member; I have no time to read or digest bills that come before the Senate daily; and, Mr. President, if I were to answer the telephone calls from my constituents it would take all my time. If I were to answer all the telegrams and special-delivery messages that come to me I would be at work for 12 or 15 hours a day. If I were to see every caller who comes here from the State which I in part represent I could not do anything else. I have not sufficient time to study or do any research work. What I need is not an expensive clerk to do research work but a number of minor clerks to aid in the ordinary routine handling of my mail.

Mr. President, I should not want to force an increased appropriation upon the Senate; I should not want in any way to add to the expenses of this body.

I am willing, as is the Senator from Pennsylvania, to pay as much money as I can pay out of my salary for the payment of the 13 clerks who work for me; and, in addition to that, I should be willing to make any sacrifice I could make in a study of the expenditures of the legislative body, so that, by a reapportionment of those expenditures, we might provide sufficient help where it is necessary and essential, without increasing the total cost of operation of the legislative body.

I desire to say that I appreciate the courtesy of the Senator from Pennsylvania in yielding to me, and that I agree with him when he says that my predecessor sacrificed his life in an attempt to carry out the arduous duties that befall a Representative or a Senator from a State so populous as is the State of New York. Certainly every Senator, whether he comes from a large or a small State, ought to have a deep feeling of sympathy for the great men who have served in this Chamber and whose lives were shortened because of the fact that they were called upon to do more than it was humanly possible for them to do in the discharge of their duties.

I compliment the Senator from Pennsylvania on the able effort he is making to amend a wrong which has already existed too long.

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, I have the honor to represent in part a State with a population of over 2,000,000 persons, a thousand miles away from the Capital City. Notwithstanding that fact, I have been compelled, with my limited office force, to work late into the night and even on the Sabbath in order to answer the correspondence that comes from my constituents; and most of the time I am from 2 to 3 weeks behind with that job.

Appreciating the importance of relief along this line to Senators who live close to Washington, as well as my own need and that of a majority of the Senators, I have been carrying in my pocket for several weeks a resolution signed by 12 Senators which I purposed to submit to obtain at least partial relief; but when the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY] introduced his bill on the subject, I liked the philosophy of it and the equity of it so much better than that of a straight resolution providing one additional employee for each Senator that I have withheld the resolution, signed by 12 Senators, awaiting action on the bill introduced by the Senator from Pennsylvania.

I appreciate the fact that the Senators who represent populous States and those which are close to the National Capital are absolutely helpless if they have any desire to respond to the wishes of all their constituents. I am very much impressed with the desirability of providing for each Senator a research secretary with an adequate salary, so that he may be a good research secretary. Especially is that desirable in the case of the leader on this side of the Chamber, as well as the leader on the other side, because in a sense they are held responsible for everything that goes through this body. It is their business to be informed as to all the details and implications of every bill and every resolution. How can they do it under present conditions, when thousands of bills are poured into the legislative hopper day after day. I think by all means these two Senators, at least, should be provided with this special aid; and I think it would be the best expenditure the Senate could make if they would provide every Senator with a well-equipped research secretary, paying him an adequate salary. In addition to that, Senators ought to have the necessary stenographic force to answer the letters received from their constituents.

I care not how humble a citizen may be, or whether he be black or white; we are here as their representatives. We are their servants. They are our bosses. When they call on us for information, or call on us for jobs, or call on us for anything connected with the Federal Government in Washington, we owe it to them to answer them and serve them promptly and in fact immediately. We know what the penalty will be if we do not do it.

I have made it a rule of my office to answer every letter and every telegram, even if it takes all night to do it; but it is not fair to the members of an office force with limited salaries to work them 18 hours a day, and work them on Sunday. It is violating the wage-and-hour law, with which I am very much in sympathy. Representatives of the various governmental departments frequently come before the Appropriations Committee and ask for additional clerical help, stating that it is necessary for their present clerks to do overtime and night work in order to keep current with their duties. Certainly it is just as essential for Senators to avoid working their clerks overtime and at night as it is for the departments of the Government to do so.

I sincerely trust Senators will make it a part of their business to see that the legislation proposed by the Senator from Pennsylvania is perfected, and secures immediate passage. In fact, it should have been passed long ago. It was needed long before this time, and it is very much needed now.

There may be some picayunish folks who will object to a proposal of this kind because of the expenditure involved. Day after day I have seen bills go through this body in which one million, two million, five million dollars have been voted to the departments here in Washington, which have a perfect army of employees to attend to every detail of their business. Certainly if we are willing to vote millions to the other departments of the Government in order that they may render acceptable and adequate service to the people, we ought to be willing to vote a few thousand dollars to ourselves in order that we may serve our constituents in an acceptable and an efficient way.

PUBLIC UTTERANCES OF SECRETARY ICKES

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, the hour is late, and I shall take only a few moments of the Senate's time; but I do want to say just a few words this afternoon regarding Mr. Harold Ickes, the chief smearer of the New Deal.

Mr. Ickes, the Secretary of the Interior, is the spear-head smearer of the New Deal. First, he directed his attention to business; and you know what has happened to business in this country. Mr. Ickes and one or two other gentlemen were the spear head of that attack in this country. Secondly, he has mixed into the international situation. Not only is he Secretary of the Interior but apparently he is also secretary of the exterior; and it was some of his inflammatory remarks at which the resolution was aimed which I submitted in the Senate last week. Then he has gone on to smear the press. He has attempted to smear the publishers and the reporters and the columnists.

In addition, Mr. Ickes says that the press of the country attempts to be dictators. I quote that statement from various publications, such as the Guild Reporter, the official organ of the American Newspaper Guild; from various newspapers like the New York Herald Tribune, and others, relative to the remarks of Mr. Ickes. I am very thankful that we are not to have a dictator of the press in this country, or anything of the kind—which, fortunately, is not possible under our system of government. However, Mr. Ickes would like to be the censor or the dictator. In my judgment, the whole object of his attack has been to attempt to destroy public confidence in the American press.

Various persons have answered Mr. Ickes in times past; but the most effective answer I have read or listened to is the answer made by Mrs. Patterson, who is the publisher of one of the local newspapers in this city, the Times-Herald, in a speech which she recently made, when she answered Mr. Ickes in a very clear and very well-defined manner.

I intended to quote from this address and to read it here today; but inasmuch as the hour is late, and I know a number of the other Members of the Senate are prepared to speak on various subjects, and because this address so clearly shows up how Mr. Ickes is attempting to attend to the business of others, I ask to have incorporated in the RECORD at this point, as a part of my remarks, the address by Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson, publisher of the Washington Times-Herald.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New Hampshire? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The address is as follows:

RADIO ADDRESS BY MRS. ELEANOR M. PATTERSON, APRIL 17

Thank you. Good evening. My brief remarks tonight are gathered under the general title of "The Jawbone of an Acidulous Man."

I would like to say at the outset that the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Harold Ickes, is a friend—a real friend—of mine. And I trust and believe that Mr. Ickes and I will remain friends always.

His speech on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial on Easter Day, introducing Marian Anderson, brought tears to my eyes. In sheer beauty of thought, feeling, and expression, Harold Ickes that day rose to the height of that supremely dramatic hour. I had the impulse then to write him from the heart and thank him for that occasion; but you know how it is—time slips by.

But on the night of April 11, driving out to the country after dinner, I turned on the radio and the gentle April night was rent by an unlovely but familiar voice. It was Harold Ickes on the air.

What was the subject of his discourse? Oh, he was again acting as advisor and censor in general to the press of our country. Belaboring a familiar object—his pet peeve, or, rather, his boss' pettest and pettiest peeve—the press of the United States of America.

Harold is a friend of mine, as I said in the beginning. But I am not pretending I am speaking now more in sorrow than in anger. Oh, no. I am mad clear through, and this is why:

The purpose of his speech was as evident to me as is the purpose of those many lectures on "journalism" which the President has seen fit to deliver at his press conferences. I can see that same purpose in other acts and allegations of the administration now in office.

The purpose is to discredit the press of the United States as a purveyor of the truth of what goes on in Washington. To most of us the incentive behind this attack is plain.

For some time the New Deal has been slipping. Its confusions have been multiplied; its failures have increased. These facts are now well known. How do they become well known? Because that section of the press which is on duty in Washington, and those editors away from Washington who comment on the news they send, have revealed the facts. It is this which is the animus of the administration's steady attacks on the press.

The New Dealers fear only the press as the revealer of their errors and accidents. The radio is licensed by the Government. The news-reels impart governmental good will. Only the press, under the Constitution, is wholly free of the restricting hand of politicians in power. What, then, more natural than that men who love power and want to keep it should attack the press for discovering and publishing the truths which foreshadow the loss of that power?

And it seems to me there is another evident reason for this latest administration move in its attempt to besmirch the American press. The President—already at Warm Springs—had made a most alarming and provocative inference that this country is going to join any war that happens. He was—as the events of three succeeding days disclosed—preparing to go even further in his aggressive break with our traditional foreign policy. It was perfectly clear to the White House circle, where Mr. Ickes is an intimate, that these developments would bring a storm of protest. The newspapers would be the truthful and only reporters. So what more clever than to lay down an advance barrage of poison gas against those newspapers?

This is what I suspected Mr. Ickes had been doing when I heard him on the air that night. This is what, by the time the President had finished his Pan American Speech on Friday, I knew he had been doing. And probably so did you.

Remember that in the Pan American speech a President of the United States, for the first time in history, addressed the peoples of countries with which we are at peace, urging them, by the strongest sort of inference, to overthrow their present rulers. This demonstrates why Mr Ickes was the organ chosen as the administration's vial of wrath.

Mr. Ickes has had hours on the air in which to traduce the American press. I have only 12 minutes in which to answer him. It only gives me time to say that I wish to swear Mr. Ickes off the bench to try this case.

I swear him off as judge because he suppresses views and prejudices which are deterrent to his ambition, and only reveals those he thinks will aid him.

He dislikes and violently disagrees with Harry L. Hopkins and his entire policy of administration. This fact, which he has made repeatedly clear in private, he has kept from the public, which has the right to know. He held the lowest opinion of the efforts of James A. Moffett, as Federal Housing Administrator, but at the White House, at the dictation of the President, he signed with Mr. Moffett a declaration of friendship, which neither of them felt, and blamed on the press accounts of their quarrel, which Mr. Ickes himself inspired.

He is no judge of the duty of a publisher. The proof of this is that he believed, and said as much privately on many occasions, that the setting up of W. P. A. over P. W. A. was a wanton waste of the taxpayers' money. However, he kept this essential fact from the public, which it was his duty to reveal. Why didn't he resign and tell the world what he believed? Why? Because he preferred to hold his job.

I swear him off the bench as a judge because he is inaccurate, as well as prejudiced, and his charges are always ex parte.

For example, in his first attack on the press this year, January 12, he charged the newspapers with a general suppression of the Johns Hopkins' report that tobacco is bad for us. Only to have the author of that report contradict him the very next day with complete proof to the contrary.

He recounted a horrible instance of the suppression in Boston of the news that a chauffeur decapitated two men. The next day the Boston papers looked in their files and found them bulging with the story. Mr. Ickes also assaulted the personal financial operations of Mr. Frank Gannett, his opponent on this broadcast, but if you will procure a copy of Mr. Gannett's answer you will be satisfied that Mr. Ickes was again guilty of willful injustice.

In his second address in Chicago, on February 10, Mr. Ickes made a sanctimonious confession of error. But even here his animus was so great he could not bear to reveal that the story of the Boston chauffeur incident occurred in 1912—27 years ago. If the American press practiced a policy of suppression, any of Mr. Ickes' legmen—paid for by the taxpayers' money—would have furnished him with hundreds of other examples between 1912 and 1939.

Attacking publishers, Mr. Ickes reveals himself possessed of an intent to color and suppress the facts surpassing anything he imputes to any publisher.

Attacking columnists, Mr. Ickes shows himself purveyor of more baseless gossip than any he so describes.

Attacking reporters, Mr. Ickes shows himself one who is too incompetent to hold a job on any paper with which I am familiar.

As a matter of history, Mr. Ickes was a reporter on one or two papers in Chicago, leaving hardly any trace. He claims to have been a reporter on the Chicago Tribune, but official records and the memories of the oldest employees there do not find recollection of him. Perhaps out of all this has come a feeling of frustration which makes him a willing tool of the administration in attacking a profession in which he could not make a living himself.

I venture that as an opinion. But in the realm of fact I know that he has been frustrated as a columnist. About 6 months ago I offered him a job of writing a column for the Washington Times. It is no exaggeration to say that he leaped at the idea. But after considerable consultation—and some delay—he was forbidden to do this—presumably by his boss. From his standpoint, this was indeed a pity. For if Mr. Ickes had ever conducted a column, I am sure it would have been a column that ended all columns, including those he now attacks. And instead of speaking to you here tonight—a free woman—I—because of his venoms, irresponsibilities, and inaccuracies—would probably be in jail serving out a sentence for criminal libel.

ADDITIONAL CLERICAL ASSISTANTS FOR SENATORS

Mr. DAVIS obtained the floor.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Pennsylvania yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. DAVIS. I do.

Mr. PEPPER. Since the subject of additional clerical assistance for Senators was mentioned a moment ago by several Senators, I wish to submit at this time, for appropriate reference, a Senate resolution, as follows:

That it is the sense of the Senate that the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate make a study to determine whether or not additional clerical and research assistants are needed by the Members of the Senate, and make a report to the Senate at the earliest practicable time.

I merely wish to ask that the Senate agree to the resolution, and let the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate make the study.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida asks unanimous consent that the Senate accept a proposed resolution, to be referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, directing that committee to make a study of the needs of Senators for additional clerical assistants. Is there objection to the request? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HATCH in the chair) subsequently said: Earlier today the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] made a request concerning a resolution which he offered. The Chair perhaps misunderstood the request, and referred the resolution to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate. The Senator from Florida understood that the resolution was agreed to. In order that the resolution may be properly disposed of, without objection, the order referring the resolution to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate will be rescinded.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to modify the resolution by striking out "the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate," and to insert in lieu thereof "the Committee on Appropriations," and that the resolution be immediately considered and agreed to.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the resolution would first have to go to the committee having jurisdiction. I could not grant unanimous consent for such action at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has a right to modify his resolution as requested by him.

Mr. PEPPER. I ask that the resolution be modified by inserting "the Committee on Appropriations" instead of "the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida modifies his resolution. Objection is heard to its immediate consideration. The resolution will lie over for 1 day under the rule.

Mr. PEPPER. I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be immediately referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. Res. 127) was reduced to writing and referred to the Committee on Appropriations, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Appropriations be, and it is hereby, authorized and directed to make a study to determine whether or not additional clerical and research assistants are needed by the Members of the Senate and make a report to the Senate at the earliest practicable time.

AMERICA'S HOPE OF PEACE

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, this afternoon I desire to make a few remarks on America's hope for peace, which I trust will serve the purpose of answering the thousands of letters I receive daily from my 10,000,000 constituents in Pennsylvania, which I am unable to answer personally with the small office staff I am permitted to have under the small appropriation made by Congress for this purpose.

I take this opportunity, too, of congratulating my colleague the junior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY] on the able way in which he presented this subject to the Senate this afternoon. I heartily endorse what he said, though perhaps I would go much further than appropriating an extra amount for additional assistants to the leader of the majority and the leader of the minority.

Mr. President, the American people have an increasing distrust of war. Efforts made by foreign powers to embroil us in their quarrels are meeting a chilly reception here. We do not want war or any part in it. While the probabilities of war abroad appear dark at the present time, there is sound basis for hope that the United States will remain at peace. Essentially we have the mind and will to peace.

Conditions in the United States have changed so materially during the last quarter of a century that it is not reasonable to use the old yardsticks of measurement for our possible involvement in war. Among many considerations is the fact that our people now have the advantages of increased transportation and communication that satisfy the natural human craving for adventure and change which formerly played such an important part in leading youth to follow the lures of war. The youth of America now know that they can get through peace all of the travel, change, thrill, and new outlook they can possibly require without resort to the brutalizing and degrading practices of mass destruction.

William James once wrote of the Moral Equivalent for War. We may not have found that moral equivalent as yet. However, I am persuaded that if we keep true to the security instincts of the American people we are on the way to finding a travel equivalent for war, and this might very well prove a strong safeguard for us. The young Americans who took up arms less than a quarter of a century ago are now leading in a crusade for peace. Every veterans' organization in the United States is active in this great cause. When these boys went through the gruelling experiences of warfare in 1917 they came back from Europe with the determination never to repeat them. They returned knowing the satisfactions of extensive travel, and yet those satisfactions had been tragically coupled with the unspeakable horrors of battle.

The passing years have shown that it is possible for youth to travel without going to war. This post-war generation has built up the tourist trade. The slogan has been "See America first." Over 2,000,000 C. C. C. enrollees have traveled from home to distant camps and back. America has been on wheels. America has been moving. We have brought the wonders of the world to our own people in a great series of fairs—Chicago, Dallas, San Diego, Cleveland, New York, and San Francisco. This summer Americans will be traveling as never before. It is our fervent prayer and hope that we shall be traveling on to peace and not to war.

If war ever had any glamour at any time, surely it has vanished in recent years. The world has been appalled by the revolting cruelties of war, which have been thoroughly exposed through the recently developed efficiency of modern communication. War has ever been ugly, hideous, and ghastly. But of old its tragedies were known chiefly by those who went to battle. Now everyone who reads the papers, listens to the radio, attends the movies, has intimate glimpses into the reeking horror of it all. The American public has had a daily diet of this devil's brew during the fateful years since 1931. The bombing of innocent civilians, the starvation of helpless women and children, the wars that have involved all Europe and Asia without a single declaration of murderous intent, the complete demoralization of the so-called institutions of peace—all this has stabbed open the heart of the American people. The futility of war has been thoroughly exposed.

If American materials shipped abroad are used for war purposes it is not because we desire it so, but rather because nothing short of a complete stoppage of foreign trade and exchange would effectively separate us from the war activities of other countries. However, such action would involve us in responsibility even greater than a direct act of war, for a complete embargo of our foreign trade and exchange would bring starvation and destruction to millions of innocent men, women, and children around the world. There is no halfway ground in this matter. There is no point whatsoever in cutting off the flow of materials to foreign lands if we do not at the same time cut off the credit facilities which we also extend to them. Food materials are as essential for war as munitions. A loaf of bread is absolutely as essential to a soldier as a bullet. Talk of depriving nations of one and not the other is neither sensible nor conducive to peace. No superficial decrees of embargo will bring a warring world to peace, but if we are not careful, hasty words, unneutral legislation, and economic hostilities will involve our own country despite the will of the American people for peace.

Mr. President, America now has the will to peace, and this should be kept effective by a ceaseless concentration on our own unsolved domestic problems. The more we think about foreign affairs in terms of war, taking on ourselves the unsolved problems of nations for which we are not primarily responsible, the more likely we are to become involved in foreign wars. We have enough unsolved problems in our own country at the present time without going abroad to seek out the unsolved problems of foreign powers. This does not mean that we should refuse our sympathy to the oppressed minorities of the world. It does mean that we shall resolutely place first the peace, welfare, and safety of the American people.

The strongest safeguard of peace is not to be found in ironclad and prohibitive acts of neutrality. The strongest safeguard of peace is eternal vigilance in building up the mind and will to peace among the people. A peace-minded American public will not easily be betrayed into war. However, a dozen legislative enactments could not keep us from war if the people developed the will to war rather than the will to peace. The sovereign power of government in the United States is still with the people. This will is reflected from day to day in an ever-increasing expression of public opinion, made possible through a free press. If the stream of public opinion is kept strong for peace, America will keep the peace.

Mr. President, it has ever been true that war is made by political cliques that ride roughshod over the peaceful desires of their own people in order to attain increased domination for themselves. New methods of involving innocent people in war are evident everywhere. War is no longer declared; it is started without formal declarations. Economic sanctions and embargoes are used as substitutes for cannons and machines of destruction until these are later found to be necessary and are supplied. Name-calling and branding the aggressors serve the same cruel purpose. This makes ever more clear how fortunate we are in the United States that the President and the Congress are granted concurrent responsibility under the Constitution in the formulation of effective foreign policy. Executive control of foreign policy such as is exercised by highly centralized governments has an advantage of speed and secrecy in the conduct of war, but the American people do not want to be hurried into war in any sudden or secret way. So long as the United States continues under the Constitution of 1787, Congress will directly participate in the formulation of foreign policy, reflecting directly the will of the people. And again I say the American people do not want war.

On March 27 I introduced a joint resolution in the Senate asking that the Sunday immediately preceding September 17 of each year be designated as Constitution Sunday, to be held in grateful remembrance for the privileges enjoyed under the Constitution of the United States. This is Joint Resolution 100, and it was referred to the Library Committee. Recently I was gratified to receive a letter from the chairman of that committee, the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], indicating his intention to bring the resolution before the committee for action. I hope that it will soon be reported out favorably. I know of no better way in which the attention of the Nation can be concentrated on the basic principles of our Republic. I know of no surer safeguard for the cause of peace than the observance of the principles embodied in the Constitution of the United States. I look forward to the annual observance of this day as one of our great national holy days, sacred to the memory of all of our citizens.

The men who formulated the principles of the Constitution represented a biblical tradition. They believed in the rule of God in the lives of men as transcendant over any earthly power. They had witnessed the tyranny of princes and kings in the Old World, and wanted none of it here. They believed in a government that would endure only through the consent of the governed.

Mr. President, the conditions which gave rise to the religious faith of the founding fathers were not unlike those which prevail in Europe today. The eighteenth century was the so-called Age of Reason. It was also an age of many wars. The philosophers, materially minded, were seeking to bow God out of the universe. In the Old World today we see an excessive emphasis on conflicting ideologies, the exaltation of force, and the war against God. The reactions against these lower levels of life caused pioneer Americans to turn away from the Old World in order that they might in this new land seek and find religious liberty. The Constitution of the United States embodies these New World aspirations. They were inherent in religious belief.

Our civil liberties of freedom of speech and press are directly derived from the Bill of Rights in our Constitution. Freedom of the press is not permitted in the highly centralized powers of Europe. It is basic to the democratic principles of our great Republic. If the freedom of our press be lost, all other liberties so dear to us will speedily disappear. It is well to remember that both the press and the Government in this country are mutually responsible for the maintenance of civil and religious liberty, and basic to them are a free people who still have the right to send their letters to the people's columns in the newspapers, and to vote according to their own convictions.

Mr. President, with the lessons of Europe plainly before us I can think of no group of persons more opposed to war and the positive restrictions of liberty that war inevitably brings than members of the newspaper profession. Publishers and newsmen know that the plain-spoken press of Europe has been suppressed. Hundreds of independent editors have been forced out of business. The coming of war for the United States would bring a similar peril to publishers here. This is one more reason why the press of our country, safeguarded under our Constitution, should lead in the cause of peace.

The American people are not being fooled by the war talk that is so current today. I receive thousands of letters asking for the observance of George Washington neutrality. I am not able to answer these letters personally as I should like to do. But I am glad to receive these letters direct from the people, each one in the language of the writer, and yet practically all of them calling for a revival of the teachings of the Father of his Country against the dangers of foreign entanglements.

Mr. President, the American people are thinking right on this question. We want no part in foreign quarrels. We do not expect to send our men or our money overseas to fight the battles of rival imperialisms. We are not going out again to shed blood in the vain hope of thus making the world safe for democracy. If the letters coming to me from my constituents are a fair criterion, the American people are determined to keep the peace.

Mr. President, I shall read excerpts from a few of the many letters which have come to me. I believe the portions of the letters I shall read are typical of the vast majority of all the many thousands of letters I have received:

An eminent college president says:

> I am very much concerned about the present neutrality question and feel very strongly that Congress ought not to give the President any additional discretionary power but, on the other hand, should tighten up on him and retain more power for the Congress.
>
> I have given considerable attention to the European situation and some also to the question of Japan and China. I am more than ever persuaded that these matters are not American concerns but affairs from which we should remain aloof. Any interference in the Orient on our part would involve us in Asiatic politics for many years to come, and that will be very expensive financially and in the terms of the lives it will cost. As for the European situation, it is perfectly clear that we should keep completely out of it. The issue really is not democracy against dictatorships but simply an enlarged recurrence of the old power politics which has plagued Europe for centuries. If America wishes to be a world leader it can best do it by remaining out of all warfare and exercizing its influence peacefully and diplomatically when the conflict is closed and the other powers are relatively weakened. If our culture is not to deteriorate lower than it now is, we must avoid another conflict and keep in mind the lowered moral tone which we inherited from the World War.

A businessman writes me:

> Make it impossible for press, radio, or cinema to thrust hysterical war propaganda into the minds of our American people, thus breeding hatred of European and Asiatic people who have, thus far, in no way harmed us. Let's not fling ourselves madly into another war to help countries that have been dishonorable enough to repudiate their just debts. These false friends are well able to fight their own battles.

A woman's club, after thoroughly discussing this problem, requested that I be sent the following statement:

> Should a new Neutrality Act be written, we think it wise to so word the act that it would not be possible for any one man, or group of men, to decide which is or was the aggressor nation in the event of war. The very name neutrality should mean just what the name indicates. If our act means anything it should compel us to keep hands off all warring nations. To aid or help either of them in any way may get us in foreign entanglements which George Washington warned us against. He believed it a wise policy "to mind our own business."

A county school superintendent writes:

> I desire to express my opposition to any adventuring on the part of our Government in Europe. I believe that we have plenty of our own problems to solve without meddling in Europe. I have a suspicion that the administration to cover its failures at home is seeking laurels abroad.

An advertising expert declares:

> For our officials, high or otherwise, to comment not only openly but freely, on these highly explosive questions, is not the act of wisdom or its step-child, common sense. Heaven knows, that from the President down to the least of our officials, there are few if any, whose public life entitles them to criticize others in this country or abroad. It is my humble opinion, and I know it is shared by many, that you and your colleagues can render no greater service to our country right now, than by using every means at your command, to suppress and stop these outbursts of condemnation.

A well-known Lutheran clergyman writes:

> May I state earnestly my hope that America will stay out of entangling European alliances. It seems we are already getting too much involved. Force met with force solves nothing and only increases hatred, bitterness, and sows more seeds for future strife and dissension.

A young lady writes me, saying:

I am appealing to you to urge the Congress to write a neutrality act which is really a safeguard against war. You will no doubt agree with me that the law which expires on the 1st of May will not effectively keep us out of war. We want a new law passed which will not leave any power in the hands of our Executive to declare a state of war between any foreign nation. The only war Americans are prepared to fight is one of defense and even the dullest citizen realizes that the mad race for war materials is not necessary unless we are going to police the whole world.

A young college woman writes:

The majority of the voters belong to the masses and they do not want war. War is murder, and real Americans do not care about being in the business of blood. It happened before.

A mother writes me:

As a mother of six growing children I implore you to use every bit of your influence to keep us out of war. If our country were threatened here I would be proud to have my sons fight to protect our country, but none of my boys shall fight on foreign soil.

Another mother writes:

I am addressing you, as the mother of four sons, to vote to keep us out of foreign entanglements, or anything which would eventually lead us into war. I am not a slacker, as my father was a Civil War veteran, but I have given my boys a college education at a great sacrifice, feeling that they would make better citizens, and be fitted to earn a living, and it certainly would be the height of folly to sacrifice those fine young men—what for—to assist nations to keep their ill-gotten possessions that will not pay their old war debts.

A businessman writes:

The countries of Europe still owe us entirely too much money from the last war, and good credit judgment would not warrant any new extensions in private business to any debtor who previously defaulted and still allowed to remain unpaid, a former debt. Excepting Finland, none of these countries have even gestured at restitution. Why increase the tax burdens of United States citizens to finance their territorial arguments?

WAR DEBTS AND THE WEST INDIES

Mr. LUNDEEN. Mr. President, on April 18 the Times-Herald of Washington, D. C., carried an article by George B. Roscoe, of the United Press, in which Maj. George Fielding Eliot, who wrote the book The Ramparts We Watch, is quoted as urging the acquisition of air and naval bases in Newfoundland and Bermuda, and suggesting that the war debt Great Britain owes us might be a lever toward acquiring leases to such bases.

M'NARY AND LODGE RESOLUTION

I ask unanimous consent that the article be printed in the RECORD at this point as part of my remarks, together with Senate Resolution 91, presented by the able Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] for himself and the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCNARY], the distinguished minority leader, concerning war materials and acquiring insular possessions of strategic value.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the article and Senate resolution will be printed in the RECORD.

The article from the Times-Herald, of Washington, D. C., April 18, 1939, and the Senate Resolution 91 are as follows:

RECALL OF FLEET HELD AIMED AT JAPANESE—CIVILIAN EXPERT TELLS D. A. R. THAT UNITED STATES FEARS TOKYO COUP IN PACIFIC

(By George B. Roscoe)

The Navy is concentrating the fleet in the Pacific Ocean to discourage Japan from taking advantage of European crises to seize more land in Asia, Maj. George Fielding Eliot said today.

Eliot, an Infantry officer during the World War, is recognized as a civilian authority on military matters. He addressed the national-defense symposium of the Daughters of the American Revolution in convention here and is discussing current military moves with officers of the Army and Navy Departments.

UNITED STATES LEADING NAVAL POWER

The United States, Eliot believes, has recently become the leading world naval power because of Great Britain's realization that the military plane makes it impossible to depend solely on her fleet.

Eliot said the United States Fleet's transfer to the Pacific Ocean was a prearranged plan.

"It is a well-conceived and sound plan," he said, "that in time of stress that the fleet be in one ocean and not divided. The Pacific Ocean probably has been selected not only because it is the normal base of the United States Fleet but also because it has been the practice of our Japanese friends to take advantage of any diversion in Europe to do something in the Pacific. The presence of our fleet there might lay a restraining hand on them."

FLEET READY TO LEAVE

The fleet was made ready today to leave the Atlantic under orders issued by President Roosevelt last Saturday. About 70 warships will make the return trip and will make the voyage in "waves" to avoid overloading the Panama Canal.

The Pacific squadron will include 153 ships—12 battleships, 23 cruisers, four aircraft carriers, 63 destroyers, and 51 submarines. The Atlantic squadron will include 74 ships, including four battleships, 7 cruisers, 1 aircraft carrier, 25 destroyers, and 8 submarines.

Almost overnight the Navy has been projected into our national picture as the dominant military arm, Eliot said.

"For 200 years Great Britain pursued a military policy based on economic, colonial, and insular interests," he said. "The Navy was their defense. It was successful, keeping Britain from major war for 99 years, but that day has passed due to the military airplane."

PROTECTED BY OCEANS

"In this is a lesson for us. Today we are the only great power that cannot be attacked by another great power with bombing planes from near-by bases. This condition may not exist forever, but we may feel secure behind our two great moats, the Atlantic and Pacific, for perhaps another generation. We must not be deluded into a feeling of safety and must continually improve our naval and general headquarters air force to blot out any military infiltration in the Western Hemisphere."

THE WAR DEBT—AIR AND NAVAL BASES

Eliot urged air and naval bases in Newfoundland and Bermuda and suggested that the war debt Great Britain owes us might be a lever toward acquiring leases to such bases.

MCNARY AND LODGE RESOLUTION

[S. Res. 91, 76th Cong., 1st sess.]

RESOLUTION

Whereas the Senate Military Affairs Committee recently approved a $100,000,000 authorization to purchase and store large stocks of essential war materials which are not available in this country; and

Whereas the acquisition of such reserves of strategic war materials would materially contribute to our national security and to the creation of a sound national-defense program; and

Whereas in view of recent developments in war-torn Europe it is not impossible that certain insular possessions of great strategic importance in the defense of the American hemisphere now held by certain so-called democracies may be lost to nations whose proximity to our coasts would be undesirable; and

Whereas several foreign nations have debts, incurred during the World War, still outstanding to the United States; and

Whereas the payment of these debts might be used to fund the purchase of these war materials in part or full payment of their debts to us and to make available to the United States geographical points important in the defense of the United States; and

Whereas the payment for these war materials would not compete with any American activity: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the President is hereby requested to enter into negotiations with foreign governments which are indebted to the United States with a view to arranging for such governments (1) to furnish the United States with strategic materials for national-defense purposes, and (2) to make available to the United States geographical points which are of strategic importance for national-defense purposes, in payment or part payment of the indebtedness of such governments to the United States.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I send to the desk two joint resolutions which I ask to have read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolutions will be read.

PURCHASE OF GREENLAND

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 119) providing for negotiations by the President with a view to the acquisition, by purchase, of Greenland, was read the first time by its title, the second time at length, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, as follows:

Whereas the United States would be able to make more adequate provision for its national defense if it were in possession of Greenland; and

Whereas possession of Greenland by a power hostile to the United States would constitute a distinct threat to the United States, and particularly to the populous area along the northeast seaboard of the United States; and

Whereas valuable trade could be developed between the United States and Greenland if it were a possession of the United States: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States is authorized and requested to enter into negotiations, in such manner as he may deem appropriate, with the Government of His Majesty, the King of Denmark and Iceland, for the acquisition by the United States of Greenland. Such negotiations shall be conducted with a view to the making of a treaty between the Government of the United States and the Government of His Majesty, the King of Denmark and Iceland, providing for the purchase by the United States of Greenland.

PURCHASE OF THE DUTCH WEST INDIES AND DUTCH GUIANA

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 120) providing for negotiations by the President with a view to the acquisition, by purchase, of the colony of Curaçao and Netherlands Guiana was read the first time by its title, the second time at length, and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, as follows:

Whereas adequate provision for the protection of the Panama Canal is an indispensable feature of our national-defense policy; and

Whereas possession of the colony of Curaçao and Netherlands Guiana by the United States would enable it to provide more adequately for such protection; and

Whereas the colony of Curaçao and Netherlands Guiana export products in which the United States is deficient and import products of which a surplus is produced in the United States: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That the President is authorized and requested to enter into negotiations, in such manner as he may deem appropriate, with the Government of Her Majesty the Queen of the Netherlands, for the acquisition by the United States of the colony of Curaçao and Netherlands Guiana. Such negotiations shall be conducted with a view to the making of a treaty between the Government of the United States and the Government of Her Majesty the Queen of the Netherlands, providing for the purchase by the United States of the colony of Curaçao and Netherlands Guiana.

REYNOLDS AND REED RESOLUTION

Mr. LUNDEEN. Senate Concurrent Resolution 12, introduced by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] April 13, 1939, and House Concurrent Resolution 17, introduced by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. REED], on April 20, 1939, ably state the issues of the war debts.

House Concurrent Resolution 17

Whereas a number of European nations owe the taxpayers of the United States a sum aggregating $13,000,000,000 in unpaid debts, arising out of the participation of this Republic in the World War; and

Whereas the national debt of this Republic now stands at the staggering total of $40,000,000,000, in comparison with a national debt of less than $2,000,000,000 immediately preceding its entry into that conflict; and

Whereas the people of the United States are now taxed beyond all reason; and

Whereas this Republic could make excellent use of the huge sum due it by those European nations now in default upon their indebtedness to the American people, who, in addition to the other enormous tax burden which they have to bear are compelled to make good the installments that their European debtors refuse to pay as they fall due on June 15 and December 15 of each year; and

Whereas one of the controlling causes of the present deplorable condition of international affairs is the cold-blooded refusal of many nations to observe in a faithful manner the solemn international engagements entered into by them; and

Whereas each of the European countries now in default on its war debt to the United States signed a solemn compact with this Republic to pay its debt in specified form; and

Whereas the action of the United States in allowing the countries aforesaid to break their solemn compacts in this regard has unfortunately given great encouragement to international dishonesty and other forms of lawlessness; and

Whereas the forbearance of this Republic in the face of the refusal of its European debtors to pay according to the contracts solemnly entered into by them, has not purchased for it the good will of the nations in question but on the contrary has earned for itself their contempt; and

Whereas a powerful attempt is now being made by the leaders of these defaulting nations to lure the United States into a second world war; and

Whereas a century ago President Andrew Jackson demonstrated to all concerned that this Republic would not tolerate international defaulting, when he compelled France to pay her debt to the United States by adopting fearless American diplomacy in the face of her declining to pay; and

Whereas it has long been the practice of the Government of the United States to send abroad special envoys to handle important matters at issue between it and foreign governments; and

Whereas Mr. William Griffin, editor and publisher of the New York Enquirer, has performed an outstanding national service by his long and constant advocacy of the collection of these war debts, in his newspaper, on the public platform, and in other ways; and

Whereas Mr. Griffin has visited Europe on several occasions and has discussed these war debts with leading men there, including Mr. David Lloyd George, former Prime Minister of England; Mr. Winston Churchill, former Chancelor of the Exchequer of England; M. Albert Lebrun, President of France; Lord Robert Cecil, president of the League of Nations Union and former Minister of Blockade; and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Foreign Minister of Italy; and

Whereas Mr. Griffin, by reason of his grasp of this subject; his familiarity with the workings of European statecraft; his knowledge of European feeling (gained at first hand by conferences and talks with such outstanding figures as M. Albert Lebrun, President of France; Mr. David Lloyd George, former Prime Minister of England; M. Ignace Paderewski, former Premier of Poland; Mr. Eamon de Valera, Prime Minister of Ireland; Lord Robert Cecil, president of the League of Nations Union and former Minister of Blockade; Mr. Winston Churchill, former Chancelor of the Exchequer of England; His Holiness Pope Pius XI; Count Galeazzo Ciano, Foreign Minister of Italy; Mr. Anthony Eden, formerly Foreign Minister of England; and M. Georges Bonnet, Foreign Minister of France); his service to this Republic in his long and ceaseless advocacy of the collection of these war debts; and his engaging personal qualities and varied abilities, is a man possessed of exceptional qualifications to act in the capacity of special envoy to Europe on the part of this Republic for the purpose of assuring the collection of the debts aforesaid: Therefore be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That Congress would view with the utmost satisfaction the immediate appointment of Mr. William Griffin by the President of the United States as special envoy to Italy, England, Germany (for the Czechoslovakian debt), France, and the other nations now in default to this Republic, for the purpose of carrying out the all-important diplomatic mission aforesaid.

Hon. ROBERT F. RICH, of Pennsylvania, introduced the following resolution adopted on April 18, 1939, by Garrett Cochran Post, No. 1, of the American Legion, Department of Pennsylvania:

Whereas the Government of the United States of America is contemplating large expenditures to provide an adequate national defense, the cost of which will impose an excessive burden of taxation upon the citizens thereof; and

Whereas the Allied Powers, and especially Great Britain and France, during and after the World War borrowed large sums of money from the United States, which, since 1932, they have failed to pay, and which default approximates $13,000,000,000 and represents borrowings by the United States upon its bonds sold to and held by the citizens thereof; and

Whereas it is apparent that the Government of the United States, through taxation of its citizens, will ultimately be required to pay said bonds, not only because of the failure of said allies to pay their said war debts but because it has become impracticable for them to do so through the ordinary and normal methods employed to settle international obligations, to wit, by money, goods, and/or services, and at the same time increase their own armaments as they are now doing; and

Whereas said allies, especially Great Britain and France, are the owners of a number of islands off the eastern coast of the United States of America, namely, Bermuda, the Bahamas, Windward and Leeward Islands, Barbados, Trinidad, Tobago, Jamaica, Martinique, and others, together with British Honduras in Central America; and

Whereas it would seem desirable for the United States to acquire the same as a total or partial liquidation of said war debts for the following reasons:

1. In order to salvage something on account, or in full payment, of said indebtedness due to the United States from Great Britain and France;

2. In order to extend the eastern outposts of the United States beyond its shores on the Atlantic Ocean;

3. In order to secure better control of and protection for its Atlantic coast line and to control the Gulf of Mexico and the Caribbean Sea, thereby providing additional protection for the Panama Canal, better enabling the United States to enforce the Monroe Doctrine;

4. In order to reduce thereby the number of ships necessary for such coastal protection and first line of defense for its eastern shores, which should result in a substantial saving to the taxpayers of the United States; and

Whereas believing the acquisition of said islands by the United State to be vitally necessary and essential for the reasons hereinbefore set forth, it is hereby

Resolved by Garrett Cochran Post, No. 1, the American Legion, Department of Pennsylvania, at a regular meeting of its members held Tuesday, April 18, 1939, That the substance of the foregoing preamble be, and it is hereby, recommended to the Federal Government as part of its present policy of national defense, and that said Federal Government, through its proper representatives, negotiate with said defaulting allies to the end that their said coastal islands and possessions be ceded to, and become vested in, the United States of America as full or partial payment of their said war debts; and that the Federal Government, if the same are so acquired, develop thereon the necessary naval, military, and air bases for the purpose not only of protecting our own eastern shores from foreign attack but, as well, to strengthen the ability of the United States to enforce the Monroe Doctrine; and it is further

Resolved, That in order that the foregoing preamble and resolution may be submitted to the Congress of the United States under the united sponsorship of this post, the department of Pennsylvania, and the national convention, a copy of said preamble and resolution be forwarded to the department of Pennsylvania for its approval and if by said department approved that it then be submitted to the national convention for its approval and submission to the proper authorities of the United States Government for final action in accordance therewith; and that in the meantime copies hereof be certified by the adjutant of this post and forwarded by the post solicitor to the national organization of the American Legion and the United States Senators from Pennsylvania, the Congressman from this district, and to United States Senators BORAH and PITTMAN of the United States Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Approved April 18 1939.

RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE OF GARRETT COCHRAN POST, No. 1,
THE AMERICAN LEGION, DEPARTMENT OF PENNSYLVANIA,
By CARL W. HERDIC, Chairman.

And now, April 18, 1939, the undersigned hereby certifies that the foregoing preamble and resolution were unanimously adopted by the members of Garrett Cochran Post, No. 1, at its regular monthly meeting duly called and held this day at its post home in the city of Williamsport, Lycoming County, Pa.

CHARLES E. MAHAFFIE, Adjutant.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LUNDEEN. I yield.

Mr. KING. Does the resolution with respect to Greenland make any provision for consulting the inhabitants of Greenland? The inhabitants may prefer a Danish King to our form of government.

Mr. LUNDEEN. I will ask the able Senator from Utah if he knows to what extent we consulted the inhabitants of the Virgin Islands when we bought them from Denmark, or to what extent we consulted the inhabitants of Alaska when we bought Alaska from Russia. High officials in the Government then smiled when it was proposed to pay $7,200,000 for Alaska, but we have secured billions of dollars from that great Territory since we acquired it. I wish to say that men of great military experience are pointing the way to acquiring these foreign possessions and islands, such as the West Indies—British, French, and Dutch—and such possessions as Greenland, which are strategic points, and which have great latent resources. It is time that we survey the field and that we give the subject thoughtful attention.

PURCHASE OF GREENLAND

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I will say that we have not taken billions of dollars from Alaska. We have taken several hundred million dollars of gold from the placer operations. We did not smile when Alaska was taken over, because none of us who are now in the Senate were old enough to smile when the Alaska purchase was consummated under the administration of President Lincoln.

However, I agree with the Senator from Minnesota that the acquisition of Alaska was a very proper one and has proven valuable. With respect to Greenland, however, it would not be a good winter resort, and I doubt whether it would be a good summer resort, and I think the people of Greenland are satisfied to continue to live under the benign rule of the Danish King.

Mr. LUNDEEN. May I give the Senator further information on the value of Alaskan exports? We have taken billions of dollars out of this Territory. Since we purchased this land in 1867 we have taken from Alaska more than $500,000,000 in gold; produced more than $200,000,000 of copper; it has yielded $100,000,000 worth of furs and over $1,000,000,000 in sea food. Its forest resources are capable of producing products in the value of $50,000,000 per annum, which over a 20-year period would be $1,000,000,000. The mineral resources, including platinum, tin, silver, lead, iron, and coal, amount to $23,000,000 per annum, which over a period of 20 years would amount to over $460,000,000. Its coal alone would supply this Nation for over 500 years, and most valuable of all is the 40,000,000 acres of arable lands which can produce food to supply millions of people.

ALASKA—THE TREASURE HOUSE

I hope the Senator from Utah will examine the question of the purchase of Greenland a little further, and perhaps when he does he may agree with us in respect to this matter. It will be recalled that the purchase of Alaska was called "Seward's folly," and smug and smiling officials shook their learned heads.

THEY TALKED WISELY ABOUT THE ALASKA ICE BOX—THEY DID NOT KNOW

I remember some 15 or 20 years ago when we began to talk about taking over the British and French West Indies on account of defaulted debts, that often we were waved aside with smiles. But the day will come when there will be no more smugness and smiling about it. A time will come when that will be done. The American people are not going to suffer a loss of some $25,000,000,000, which is the figure at which the debts would stand today if we had not refunded them in 1926. The American people are not going to permit that $25,000,000,000 to go overboard when we need money so badly in this country that we can spend a week in discussing the subject of appropriating $50,000,000 for hungry and destitute Americans.

TWENTY-FIVE BILLION DOLLARS—THAT'S ALL

We are not going to forget the $25,000,000,000 that is owed to us by empires, the French Empire and the British Empire—the British Empire, on which the sun never sets; the British Empire, with its estimated 600,000,000 people; the British Empire, with its untold resources and vaunted power, with its great treasury. It is up to this Empire to negotiate with the great American Republic on that point.

RAMPARTS WE WATCH

I have just called attention to the article published in the Washington Times-Herald quoting the author of the Ramparts We Watch, George Fielding Eliot, in which he urges that the United States should negotiate along that line.

DUTCH POSSESSIONS IN AMERICA

The two resolutions presented by me deal not only with Greenland but with Dutch Guiana and the Dutch islands off the coast of South America. If Senators will examine that question, they will find that in those little Dutch islands, islands off South America belonging to the Netherlands, there are untold phosphates and other resources running into millions of dollars per year. It is astounding to see the resources and essential materials there to be found.

WAR MATERIALS NEGOTIATIONS

I desire to commend highly the resolution introduced by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] and the minority leader [Mr. MCNARY] along the line of acquiring essential war materials. We hear so much talk about war. Very well; let us get some of these war materials in exchange for the money owing us, and let us get some of these strategic insular possessions. That resolution also contemplates the acquiring of strategic geographical points.

WEST INDIES AND THE PANAMA CANAL

I realize that the hour is late and that I cannot take much time this afternoon and impose on the patience of Senators, but I ask the opportunity for a short consideration of a subject which I hope to take up in greater detail at a later time. I have here a map of the Caribbean Sea area. I indicate the islands that string along in a bowstring from Florida to South America. You can stand on Trinidad and see the continent of South America. These islands run along right up to the coast of Florida. The American Navy cannot be taken through the Panama Canal from New York, Philadelphia, Boston, or Baltimore in wartime without asking the permission of a foreign government. It cannot be done. A few mines, a few submarines will block every channel, and every military man or naval man of any consequence will tell you that. I have inquired of many military experts with respect to that question. I think we should give serious attention to that most important question. Able Senators have said to me, and I do not take it lightly, that foreign powers might through conquest acquire some of these islands. Very well, now is the time to acquire them and meet them head-on if they want to come.

VITAL DEFENSES IN THE CARIBBEAN SEA

I do not believe they are coming; but if they come, let us have air and naval bases in the West Indies on the islands shown by the maps.

I have brought with me further maps for the attention of Senators if they wish to consult them. The maps were prepared by the Federal Government, and are accurate as to soundings and as to area of territory.

I should like to call attention to Trinidad, off the coast of South America, which is the best oil producer in the British Empire. Many of us do not know much about the great resources in the West Indies. I have heard some persons say, "What do the West Indies amount to? They are just a few bars of sand." Those who make such statements have not inquired into the tremendous resources of the islands. They have not studied the situation which confronts us in the Caribbean Sea.

WEST INDIES STATISTICS

For the information of the Senate, at the expenditure of some time and labor, I have had compiled lists of all the British, French, Dutch, and Danish possessions in the Western Hemisphere. In order to make the record complete for the consideration of the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that the lists be included in the RECORD. They give the area, population, imports, and exports, so that we may know the facts, so that we may not refer to the territory in question as inconsequential. The territory is not inconsequential. The territory is vitally important. It is of importance, and this great Nation is interested.

There being no objection, the lists were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:
